If negotiations are held in the spirit prevailing here, this would help overcome misunderstandings. [words indistinct]

GOVERNMENT SPOKESMAN COMMENTS ON GDR BORDER INCIDENT

LD261754 Hamburg DPA in German 1542 GMT 26 Oct 81

[Text] Hamburg, 26 Oct (DPA) — A GDR citizen evidently suffered serious injuries when he tried to escape across the GDR border near Luebeck last night.

The Federal Government today expressed its dismay at the incident. A spokesman of the Ministry of Inner-German relations said in Bonn that the incident demonstrated once again the danger and inhumanity of the GDR's closed border. Two other GDR citizens managed to escape over the weekend. The central command of the Federal Border Forces said in Kassel today that two men, aged 27 and 30, had cut through the border fence near Fulda early on Saturday.

According to the Ministry of Inner-German Relations, the incident near Luebeck occurred at 2230 GMT yesterday at a sector of the border fortified with a double metal fence and a minefield. The Federal Border Force had earlier reported that residents of Eichholz, a part of Leubeck situated directly on the border, heard an explosion, apparently a mine explosion, followed by cries for help by an obviously injured man.

The guards on a GDR watch tower had told the injured man over the loudspeaker to stay put and keep calm. GDR border guards had then approached him by means of a so-called minefield bridge. Later he was taken away in an ambulance.

TAX, HUNGER STRIKES PLANNED TO PROTEST MISSILES

LD262110 Hamburg DPA in German 1643 GMT 26 Oct 81

[Text] Munich, 26 Oct (DPA) -- The Federation of Citizens Action Groups to Protect the Environment [BBU] says there will be tax strikes, direct action outside U.S. bases in Germany, and hunger strikes to protest the presence of U.S. nuclear missiles in the Federal Republic. BBU spokesman Jo Leinen said in an interview with Muenchner ABENDZEITUNG that already 200 opponents of the arms build-up in Berlin, Essen, Marburg and Karlsruhe are refusing to pay DM572 of their taxes, the cost per head of the Pershing missiles to be deployed in the Federal Republic.

The peace movement is planning the first nonviolent demonstration at U.S. nuclear missile bases in Baden-Wuerttemberg on 5 December. Altogether, 3,000 doctors and nurses who recently signed a petition against arms, may boycott training courses on dealing with emergencies and may stage a work-to-rule. There are also plans for fasts to the point of regular hunger strikes. This campaign is to start in mid-1982 if there is no progress in the East-West disarmament talks.

An edited version of the interview was prereleased to DPA.

CARSTENS, CEAUSESCU DISCUSS TRADE EXPANSION

LD270936 Hamburg DPA in German 0825 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Excerpt] Bucharest, 27 Oct (DPA) -- Federal President Karl Carstens and Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu met for a second talk this morning. The talk centered mainly on international issues. Yesterday the two presidents discussed bilateral economic and trade relations.

It has been learned from the German delegation that Ceausescu has made a number of concrete requests such as the Federal Republic purchasing more goods from Romania. He also proposed greater cooperation between the Federal Republic and Romania in Third World countries such as the joint implementation of German development aid projects. Ceausescu said that possible countries where this can be done are Egypt, Angola and Mozambique.

The Romanians also welcome larger investments by German firms in Romania and the launching of more projects in collaboration with Romanian firms. Ceausescu mentioned possible major projects such as the Danube-Black Sea Canal which is now under construction as well as a ferry line from Romania to Turkey.

EXPLOSION AT PARIS AIRPORT CAUSES EXTENSIVE DAMAGE

NC271002 Paris AFP in English 0956 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Text] Paris, 27 Oct (AFP) -- A bomb exploded at Paris's Charles de Gaulle Airport early today causing extensive damage but no victims, authoritative sources said.

The device, placed in a waste bin near a lift (elevator), went off at about 9:45 am (0845 GMT) starting a fire, sources said.

ASSEMBLY VOTES FOR NATIONALIZATION PROGRAMS

NC262025 Paris AFP in English 2018 GMT 26 Oct 81

[Text] Paris, 26 Oct (AFP) -- The French National Assembly today voted in favor of nationalizing five major industrial groups, 36 banks and two financial companies, PARIBAS and Suez.

The vote followed two weeks of heated debate in the assembly over the controversial nationalization program of the Socialist-dominated government headed by Prime Minister Pierre Mauroy.

But the vote -- 322 in favor to 154 opposed -- is only the first stage in the nationalization battle launched by the Socialists when they came to power last spring.

The bill will now go to the senate and the final law is expected to be adopted by January at the earliest, despite the "emergency" status it was accorded by Prime Minister Mauroy.

The final tally was greeted today by a long round of applause by Socialist and Communist deputies in the assembly.

During the marathon debate of the past two weeks, they had reviewed some 1,500 amendments to the bill presented by the center-right opposition as a maneuver which could only stall the inevitable final outcome in the left-dominated assmebly.

CHEYSSON NOTES DIFFICULTIES WITH EC PEACE FORCE

LD262251 Paris Domestic Service in French 2200 GMT 26 Oct 81

[Text] The 10 members of the European Community may well send a peace force to Sinai. The decision will be made in the next few days. However, in Luxembourg this evening Claude Cheysson did not hide the fact that this possibility is still meeting with difficulties. The minister of external relations indicated that for the moment France, Great Britain, Italy and The Netherlands had simply given their agreement in principle.

AL-QADHDHAFI GIVES ENVOY MESSAGE FOR MITTERRAND

NC261242 Paris AFP in English 1232 GMT 26 Oct 81

[Text] Paris, 26 Oct (AFP) -- Libyan leader Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi today sent a message to President Francois Mitterrand via French Ambassador Charles Malo, the Libyan news agency JANA monitored here said.

No details of the message were given by JANA.

It was earlier reported that the message was sent from Mr Mitterrand.

In Paris, the presidential Elysee Palace said Mr Malo met with Col al-Qadhdhafi today at the Libyan leader's request.

The meeting followed Mr Mitterrand's call at the Cancun North-South summit last week for the speedy dispatch of an inter-African peace-keeping force to the former French colony of Chad.

It also coincided with Paris press reports that France has furnished since last week munitions and perhaps arms to the Chadian Transitional Government of Goukouni Oueddei.

Relations between France and Libya have been strained over the presence of Libyan troops in Chad.

GOVERNMENT CONFIRMS SENDING ARMS SHIPMENTS TO CHAD

NC271224 Paris AFP in English 1215 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Text] Paris, 27 Oct (AFP) -- France today confirmed reports that it was sending arms to the Transitional Chadian Government but refused to indicate when the arms deliveries began and what type of weapons were being sent.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman reiterated that France supports an Organization of African Unity (OAU) call that an inter-African peace-keeping force be sent to Chad, and that Paris supports the transitional government (GUNT) of President Goukouni Oueddei.

"It is in this double context that France's logistical support to the GUNT must be situated," the spokesman said. This support was strengthened by President Goukouni's recent visit to Paris.

REAGAN BREAKS 'TABOO' ON ENVISAGING NUCLEAR WAR

PM261619 Paris LE FIGARO in French 21 Oct 81 pp 1, 2

[Paul-Marie de la Gorce article: "The Myth of the 'Nuclear Umbrella'"]

[Text] In a press conference the day before yesterday President Reagan said that "A nuclear war limited to the European theater is possible in certain conditions without the two superpowers' exchanging their intercontinental strategic weapons."

These remarks have, of course, prompted strong reactions in the European NATO countries, particularly in Germany, where some people fear that they may be used in the pacifist and neutralist movements' propaganda against the "nuclear war" plans being made by the United States. In Washington, however, these remarks are said to be "entirely in keeping with the Atlantic flexible response strategy."

President Reagan's statements are said to have caused a scandal. This is one way of saying that they revealed, rather bluntly, that part of the truth which people sometimes hesitate to see because they do not want to honestly accept the consequences. What precisely did the U.S. President say? He merely openly revealed the ulterior motives of the American command.

Since the start of the nuclear age, the latter, like the Soviet general staff, has been seeking the means of introducing the nuclear weapon into the panoply of forces which can be used in the event of war: The objective is to "rationalize" war, to make it, as it always used to be, payable and winnable by making provision for the use of nuclear weapons without its meaning an apocalypse, without an "exchange" of strategic nuclear fire amounting to mutual suicide, in other words the unacceptable and unthinkable.

In principle the problem has been posed since "nuclear parity" was established between the two greatest powers, in other words since each of them has been able to inflict unacceptable damage on the other by the use of its strategic arms, which are capable of destroying the enemy's economic and demographic potential.

Back in the early sixties Gen Maxwell Taylor, chairman of the U.S. chiefs of staff, laid down the principle of "graduated response," which already implied first using nuclear weapons aimed at achieving the greatest possible effects on the battlefield before proceeding to the use of strategic arms. The increasing number of tactical nuclear weapons put into practice the choice of this strategy, which was adopted by NATO in 1962.

Subsequently the "Schlesinger doctrine" named after the former defense secretary in the Carter administration [as published], aimed at the destruction of the enemy's strategic forces by American nuclear forces, which increased the probability of a "nuclear war" waged in the European theater with conventional forces backed by tactical nuclear weapons.

This is also the purpose of developing the medium-range nuclear weapons carried by the American F-111 aircraft based in Britain and by the aircraft of the American Mediterranean fleet as well as, on the other side, the Soviet SS-20 missiles and Backfire bombers, while awaiting the Pershing II missiles and the cruise missiles, the latter having incomparable effectiveness against static targets such as depots, barracks, headquarters, command or telecommunications centers, air bases and so forth. [sentence as published]

So what is new in President Reagan's statements? It is this, and it is crucial: He has said aloud and in public what the experts know but was hitherto kept quiet by the taboos of NATO strategic doctrine and by the Western governments' official language.

Indeed, the latter cling to the myth of the American "nuclear umbrella," although they are fully aware that the United States cannot use its strategic weapons against the Soviet Union without being destroyed by those of its enemy. Moreover they pretend to believe that the "graduated response," which is still the Atlantic military organization's official doctrine, implies that after an exchange of tactical nuclear fire the threat of strategic reprisals will be used if the tactical weapons have no decisive effect. To say now that U.S. strategy consists in making provision for a limited nuclear war lifts these taboos and destroys these myths.

The reaction from European, especially German political circles yesterday was significant: The disarray, not to say panic, was obvious everywhere; President Reagan had said what should not be said and revealed that the American strategy in Europe envisages "a nuclear war" without the use of strategic weapons.

It is absolutely true that the two biggest powers cannot actually engage in a direct confrontation on pain of facing the danger of the use of strategic weapons, in other words mutual suicide. This is still the best way of preventing any world war. But, on the other hand, it is unlikely that things will reach that point, and there is therefore reason to wonder whether it is possible to envisage a limited war below the threshold of "nuclear parity" and hence without resorting to strategic weapons, since that would be fatal — a war in which each side would use its counterforce nuclear weapons, namely tactical weapons or medium-range missiles; in short, a nuclear war.

This is precisely the point of the deployment of the Soviet SS-20 Euromissiles or the American weapons deployed in Britain and in the Mediterranean fleet, pending those which are to be deployed on European territory. This would also justify the use of neutron bombs as antitank weapons. In short, it is the point of all the efforts to provide the conventional armed forces with complementary nuclear forces -- tactical or medium-range -- and thus restore some "rationality" to nuclear war.

The deadly dangers and, so to speak, the impossibility of a direct confrontation between the USSR and the United States remain: But that does not prevent each side from seeking to overcome the difficulties and even the improbabilities. By envisaging a limited war thanks to the use of countercity weapons [as published] this is what President Reagan said in crude terms -- and it would be wrong to try to play it down or minimize it.

Of course, this prospect of nuclear war is still difficult for the European countries to accept, since they would then serve as the battlefield and in that case would have no guarantee of victory or survival. This is the real basis of the criticism of NATO's strategic plans -- and even relations with the United States as a whole -- which is developing in Europe through movements described as pacifist or neutralist. It should also be remembered that, if France is escaping these movements, it is because it is free of the inconsistencies and servitude of a strategy which it rejected by choosing nuclear deterrence as its defense system: This implies both greater strictness in implementing it -- which presupposes the nuclear response to any attack on its vital interests -- and the greatest courage in efforts to maintain its level and credibility.

GOVERNMENT CITES 'POSITION' ON CANCUN ISSUES

AU231544 Rome ANSA in English 1506 GMT 23 Oct 81

[Text] Rome, 23 Oct (ANSA) -- North-South relations are a fundamental element of every existing problem on the international scene, according to Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo, who outlined the Italian position on the priority issues facing the leaders of 22 developing and industrialized nations meeting today in Cancun, Mexico, at a cooperation and development summit conference.

The Italian diplomatic chief made the remarks in an article published today in the authoritative Milan daily "CORRIERE DELLA SERA" in proposing the position which Italy, not invited to participate in the conference, would have delivered personally at Cancun.

"North-South relations," Colombo warned, "are the center of international life and they crisscross every other theme. They reflect the problem of imposing cohabitation among the well-off and the not well-off populations of the world based on equality, justice and mutual advantage."

"There are no well-off areas which can prosper," the minister continued, "while millions of human beings can just about manage to survive. The tensions and threats to peaceful order are becoming impossible to contain."

Commenting on the new guidelines to follow, Colombo affirmed that "the interdependence which unites all of our nations is the new dimension of our era...lets take an objective look at the petroleum crisis. This was the revealing element in the imbalances and deficiencies of a system which was developing an abnormal dependence on one energy source.

"At the same time, it was also a concomitant cause of the impoverishment of some regions, in changes without precedent in resources, of powerful deficits, and of recession and inflation.

"Realizing the adjustments which this new situation imposes," the minister continued, "is the key to North-South relationships. We are all making a great effort but the response is still unequal to the challenge."

Colombo added that "the dialogue can proceed, defeating a climate of confrontation, thanks to a responsibility-assuming process of some groups; countries industrialized to the market economy, industrialized countries from the socialist area, petroleum-producing countries, developing countries."

Colombo also warned that "industrialized countries must understand that their growth and the development of emerging countries are not antithetical, and that positive and negative adjustments, costly as they may be, must be activated."

Colombo continued in the article by stating that "petroleum producing countries must understand that the price of crude is 'independent variable' and that in fact it determines a withdrawal of resources susceptible of being oriented toward development.

"On their side, the emerging countries must understand that the saga of development cannot proceed without the necessary resources and it can only benefit by a revitalization of the world economy.

"We have held fast to the principal of global negotiations," Colombo affirmed, "because we are convinced that a common viewpoint and therefore a complex political design can be more easily developed through a global approach to the different dialogue themes.

"Given its universality, the framework of the United Nations has proposed itself as the most significant one for a confrontation of ideas and the process of mutual responsibility."

"These are the concepts which would have inspired Italy at Cancun," the minister wrote in conclusion, "and in which we have made an effort to release the problem from the analysis area and bring it toward concrete initiatives. That is in fact what we have been doing for the past two years; we therefore repudiate, as some have said, the charges that Italy has been slow, or had preconceived reservations toward Cancun. We have had only a legitimate concern, together with many underdeveloped nations, that the present exercise will resolve itself in nothing at all, and at the same time will break off that exercise entrusted to the framework of the United Nations."

Minister Colombo defined the fact that Italy was not invited to participate in the Cancun summit as a "political error" on Wednesday. Italian President Sandro Pertini also expressed his disappointment for Italy's exclusion in a letter to Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo.

PERTINI, COLOMBO END VISIT TO PORTUGAL

AU261531 Rome ANSA in English 0816 GMT 26 Oct 81

[Text] Lisbon, 26 Oct (ANSA) -- Italian head-of-state Sandro Pertini was back in Quirinale presidential residence in Rome today after a three-day visit here which all quarters agreed in describing as a "full" personal and political success.

Accompanied by Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo, he held three meetings with Portuguese President Antonio Ramalho Eanes, two with Prime Minister Pinto Balsemao, and yesterday, with the leaders of the Portuguese political parties. Sources close to Pertini's entourage said he had received the impression that the Iberian state was moving towards a solution of the problems it still has in institutional terms.

Speaking with reporters on Saturday evening, Pertini added that confirmation of the democratic roots of the Portuguese "revolution of the carnations" in 1974 needed a strengthening "without delay" of Portugal's political and economic ties with the EEC.

In his official speeches, Pertini also made it clear that he sees a European Economic Community expanded to include Spain and Portugal as a "mediator" between the two superpowers.

Other international topics raised in his and Colombo's talks covered East-West relations, the Middle East crisis, and the crisis points in southern Africa.

This last point was an important topic on Colombo's agenda with Portuguese diplomatic chief, Andre Goncalves Pereira, in that both Mozambique and Angola are former Portuguese colonies liberated as a result of the Portuguese revolution.

Authoritative sources said that Goncalves Pereira denied Washington's thesis of a direct relationship between solving the problem of Namibia and the departure of the Cuban troops stationed in Angola, even if recent South African attacks on Angolan territory were followed by the arrival of a further 3-5,000 Cuban troops.

Namibia, formerly Southwest Africa, used to be administered by South Africa under a United Nations mandate, but the Pretoria regime has maintained its control of the territory despite a U.N. decision ending the mandate and requiring an end to South African rule there.

According to Portugal, "it must be recognized that there is no solution to the problem of Namibia without South Africa, through it cannot be according to South Africa's demands."

COLOMBO URGES INCREASED EEC ROLE, UNITY

AU261548 Rome ANSA in English 0811 GMT 26 Oct 81

[Text] Paris, 26 Oct (ANSA) -- The European Ten must play a more effective role in solving the major international problems and should make a direct contribution to reducing or eliminating current tensions in East-West relations, according to Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo

The Ten cannot "remain passive before a situation of tension," he told the authoritative French newspaper, LE MONDE at the weekend, "but must be in a position to contribute as directly involved protagonists in attenuating or eliminating it." "I think that if we (the Ten) took significant decisions and thus showed a real determination to achieve European union, the Ten's voice would be stronger and the Western camp's position as a whole would be strengthened," Colombo added.

Answering a question on Italian and West German moves to beef up the European Community, the Italian diplomatic chief insisted on the need for greater cooperation among the EEC members on both the economic and political levels. In this context, he urged a battle against what he described as the "protectionist tendencies" that other things, the Italo-French wine war this summer. [sentence as received]

The European Monetary system, Colombo explained in reference to the joint float of eight EEC currencies, must not just act on interest rates. "We must also deal with what lies behind purely monetary relations," he said.

"We must pursue our efforts to bring our inflation rates more closely in step, and naturally downwards," Colombo urged. "We must also introduce regulations and principles acceptable to, and respected by, all of us to establish more binding relations as regards inflation rates, the evolution of the balance-of-payments, and the budget deficit." In this context, Colombo said that the Ten must also enlarge their economic integration, which he said had so far essentially covered nothing more than agriculture.

Noting that political cooperation among the Ten had developed "pragmatically" and "in a satisfactory way", Colombo also insisted that it should be strengthened and extended to some cultural and security sectors." "By security," he said, "we mean a vast field which goes from negotiations on disarmament to some aspects of political relations and defense which are dealt with by the Madrid conference today and, we hope, will be dealt with by a European conference on disarmament tomorrow."

Asked about eventual differences between Italy and West Germany Colombo pointed out that the Bonn government has "some preoccupations" in the economic field due to fears that an "excessive increase in the EEC budget would make its position as the community's prime contributor even heavier." On the Greek general elections which brought a socialist government led by Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou to power, Colombo voiced the hope that, if there are changes in Greek foreign policy, they would keep Greece within both the EEC and the Atlantic alliance.

PCI OFFICIALS CONSULT WITH PCE'S AZCARATE

PM230907 Rome L'UNITA in Italian 20 Oct 81 p 21

[Text] Rome -- Comrade Manuel Azcarate, PCE Executive Committee member and Foreign Policy Commission chief, has met at PCI Central Committee headquarters with Comrades Gian Carlo Pajetta of the PCI Directorate and Rodolfo Mechini, deputy chief of the foreign section. During the conversation, which took place after the Florence conference on North-South problems, an exchange of information took place on internal issues and on aspects of PCE-PCI cooperation with special reference to their involvement in the initiatives of the European left.

MELO EGIDIO INTERVIEWED ON NATO, SPAIN'S ENTRY

PM231101 Lisbon DIARIO DE NOTICIAS in Portuguese 12 Oct 81 pp 7-8

[Silva Costa interview with Portuguese armed forces chief of staff Gen Nuno Viriato Tavares Melo Egidio: "Armed Forces Must Make Top Appointments"]

[Excerpts] DIARIO DE NOTICIAS: What is happening to multilateral military cooperation within the NATO context? What is the explanation for such a long delay in connection with the frigates? Following your first attendance at top-level meetings as armed forces chief of staff, do you not believe that NATO is again in danger of confining itself to the philosophy of a defense pact in the strict sense of the term?

Melo Egidio: Multilateral military cooperation within the NATO context, as of course within the context of any other alliance, is one of the procedures designed to counterbalance and strengthen the members' military capability, thus presupposing, of course, that not all the members of an alliance have the same military capabilities.

Multilateral military cooperation today is principally characterized by "compensatory action" with respect to the discrepancies and differences of technological capability that exist among the various member countries. It is within this context that the exchange of technological information between the United States and the European partners, for instance, takes place.

At the 1978 Washington summit, attended by the president NATO approved the so-called LTDP or long term defense program, in which careful attention was devoted to multilateral military cooperation, particularly with regard to Portugal and Turkey. Because of their special situations, from both the geostrategic and the economic viewpoint, these countries received special treatment from NATO, enjoying the backing of the ad-hoc military assistance group created for that purpose.

The matter of the frigates has some rather complex aspects, since we are dealing with a project involving the multilateral assistance of the alliance countries. The kind of frigate to be constructed has been decided but the material contribution to be made by some member countries still remains to be determined. Demarches and negotiations are still going on and there are hopes that they will conclude soon.

DIARIO DE NOTICIAS: To return to my initial question, does this not imply a danger of NATO again confining itself to the philosophy of a defense pact in the strict sense of the term?

Melo Egidio: There are in fact no indications of this. On the contrary, NATO's so-called "third dimension," that is, the blueprint on the challenges of modern society, proposed and created on President Nixon's initiative in 1969, still deserves the attention of the alliance and its member countries.

Indeed, far from being merely a military organization, the alliance is above all an alliance devoted to the defense of its member countries' prosperity and stability.

In fact the Challenges of Modern Society Committee's activity involves innumerable worrying aspects, such as the world ecological crisis, environmental problems, pollution (of the atmosphere and of coastal and inland waters), road safety, disaster aid, and so forth.

Spain's NATO Entry: There Must Be No Conflict of Interests

DIARIO DE NOTICIAS: Spain's NATO entry will involve a revision of NATO commands on the Iberian Peninsula. Might this affect Portugal's relative position within the Atlantic alliance? What interests will Portugal have to protect in this context?

Melo Egidio: In my opinion Spain's NATO entry, from the strategic viewpoint, must be analyzed from the viewpoint of "strategic complementarity" and the reinforcement that this complementarity will impart to the alliance in one of the world's most important strategic areas.

Therefore, I believe that Spain's entry, if confirmed, will, from the strategic viewpoint:

--On the one hand bring about the direct strengthening of the alliance's so-called southern flank, whereby Spain will be able to resume its historical and traditional role with respect to the Mediterranean, thus strengthening one of the alliance's most crucial and worrying areas;

--On the other hand, by imparting greater depth to the European theater of operations, Spanish territory will give the European allied command greater opportunities for strategic maneuver and also greater and more diversified opportunities for receiving reinforcement from across the Atlantic.

It seems to me that to perform these two major kinds of functions Spain could be integrated into the NATO military structure as part of the European allied command, which could restore to Spain some of the characteristic "continental roles" for which Spain has a lengthy historical tradition.

By remaining within NATO's military structure as part of the allied command -- Atlantic, Portugal, for its part, will continue, in geostrategic terms, to perform its role as a "strategic link" between Europe and the North American continent.

So the "strategic link role," which is the geostrategic function attributable to the Portuguese strategic triangle on account of its real position in the Atlantic, will have the desired strategic complementarity, which I mentioned in answer to your first question, in continental strategic functions attributable to Spain.

DIARIO DE NOTICIAS: So there will not necessarily be a conflict of interests....

Melo Egidio: I do not believe so. On the one hand, the traditional good relations that exist between Portugal and Spain, specifically in the military context, and on the other hand, the alliance's shared defense interests, which demand unanimity of viewpoints, will contribute to the attainment of a solution that will safeguard both countries' interests.

Improvement of Lajes' Capability Still Being Studied

DIARIO DE NOTICIAS: Are there any military justifications for the plans to expand the Lajes base and to create a military base at Porto Santo? If so, what are they?

Melo Egidio: When new plans for infrastructures are drawn up or even when existing infrastructural plans are simply implemented within the NATO context, so-called "military justifications" are obviously always fundamental aspects of the plans. Nor could it be otherwise, when one is dealing with infrastructures of military importance, even if they normally also involve other interests, mainly of a local nature.

In the case of Lajes, the existing plans within the context of bilateral Portuguese-U.S. relations and within the NATO context have as their general aim the improvement of the base's logistical capability, especially with regard to fuels and lubricants, since the existing infrastructures were constructed several years ago.

As for Porto Santo, the existing plans are within the NATO context. However, it is not a matter of creating a new military base, as has been speculated in certain sectors of the media. There was already a national infrastructure, which was subsequently improved at NATO's expanse -- the Porto Santo Airport. In view of the absence of a harbor of refuge [Porto de Abrigo] and therefore of a field supply system, even in peacetime its effectiveness is fairly low, in view of how supplies are currently carried out.

Construction of Porto Santo's Port Benefits Region's Progress

DIARIO DE NOTICIAS: Does that mean that there are "military justifications" in the case of Porto Santo too?

Melo Egidio: Obviously, in view of its geostrategic position -- which is very important within the so-called Portuguese strategic triangle -- on the main sea routes across the Atlantic to the Mediterranean and from Africa to Europe and the Mediterranean, the island of Porto Santo embodies the military justification for whatever infrastructure project it is decided to carry out there.

Apart from the military aspects of the matter, I believe that emphasis should be placed on the benefits that the construction of the port and the improvements to the airport will bring to the progress of the autonomous region of Madeira.

But, as I said on my latest visit to Madeira, in the final analysis the decision is up to the political authorities -- in this case not only the central government but also the regional government -- having considered various kinds of factors, including military ones. And hence there is the need for the armed forces general staff to maintain a continuous examination of this subject so as to be able, as indeed it is, to provide the government with the so-called "military justifications," which are inevitably technical opinions, though obviously very influential ones.

Reequipment Plans: Thorough, Extensive, Slow

DIARIO DE NOTICIAS: Ever since 25 April [1974 revolution] there has been talk of reequipping the armed forces. What stage has been reached in the implementation of this program? What contribution to this reequipment has Portugal received from the other NATO countries?

Melo Egidio: Once the military operations in Africa were over, a start had to be made on restructuring the armed forces in accordance with our present scale, geographical position and situation within an international context.

The existing equipment, being essentially designed for anti-guerrilla operations, was largely obsolete and inappropriate for the current military requirements stemming from national interests and objectives and our NATO commitments, so that the present reequipment programs are inevitably thorough and extensive and, of course, slow.

Thus, taking into account the armed forces' basic and minimum requirements, and in view of the high cost of military equipment, which considerably exceeds the nation's capabilities regarding the economic and financial situation, and since these costs are designed partly to satisfy Atlantic alliance objectives, outside assistance was requested within the context of the alliance and of bilateral relations.

Within this framework and as a priority, programs are under way to construct three antisubmarine frigates, to complete the 1st independent mixed brigade, to complete an air transport squadron and to purchase a squadron of fighters.

DIARIO DE NOTICIAS: But what is the present situation in each of the services?

Melo Egidio: Overall I can say that the situation is as follows:

-- The navy is awaiting the completion of the negotiations to resolve the frigate problem. The kind of frigate to be constructed has been decided, as I said, and demarches and negotiations are under way to provide the necessary support for their construction to begin....

DIARIO DE NOTICIAS: ...Which will be soon....

Melo Egidio: I sure hope so. Demarches are being made in this direction.

DIARIO DE NOTICIAS: What about the army?

Melo Egidio: The army, and especially the brigade, have received material, purchased or supplied within the context of the existing mutual aid programs with the United States and the FRG and in some cases other NATO countries. However, the brigade still lacks some material before it can be considered ready. Demarches are being taken vis-a-vis the allied countries to negotiate the supply of the material lacking.

The air force has received materiel -- especially from the United States -- such as the C-130 transport planes, two of which were purchased with national funds and three supplied within the context of mutual aid agreements. Fiat G-91 aircraft have been received from the FRG under the terms of the material aid agreement. The air force will also be equipped with a squadron of A-7's from the United States, which will be completed some time in 1982.

Funds for Monitoring Exclusive Economic Zone not Obtainable Through NATO Aid

DIARIO DE NOTICIAS: When will it be possible to regard the navy and air force as equipped for the performance of their proper roles within the exclusive economic zone?

Melo Egidio: The frigates will certainly make it possible to improve the performance of national tasks within the exclusive economic zone.

However, the monitoring and surveillance tasks within the exclusive economic zone require further funds which, in view of their exclusively national character, cannot be obtained through NATO aid. On the other hand, however, since they do not demand such sophisticated materials and equipment, they are cheaper.

From this viewpoint the navy has plans for the construction, in national shipyards and using national funds, of ships devoted specifically to monitoring and surveillance within the exclusive economic zone and to search and rescue operations. While the air force also envisages the purchase of helicopters to replace the "old" allouette III's, capable of working within the exclusive economic zone as support for the navy both in monitoring and surveillance and in search and rescue.

Minimal Budgets Will Have Damaging Results

DIARIO DE NOTICIAS: The volume of military spending included in the overall state budget has been strongly opposed since 1976. Despite the knowledge that, as a percentage of GNP, our defense spending is less than in other Western countries, the public is reluctant to accept the actual amount of military spending (44 million contos in 1981, equal to, or more than, spending on education over the past 5 years). Why is spending so high when it is claimed that the budgets provide the minimum for survival? Are there or are there not plans to reduce the financial effort?

Melo Egidio: In all countries the armed forces constitute a burden that is normally challenged, perhaps because in a normal situation no direct and immediate benefits are felt. But it is undeniable that the armed forces play a very important role in the nation's life and guarantee the performance of the task laid down in the constitution. And this important aspect must not, cannot, be assessed on the basis of budgetary or financial considerations.

The apparently high level of military spending stems basically from the funds required by the structures for the performance of their tasks.

In view of the country's economic situation, and their own short-term financial requirements and without any medium or long-term package [envolvente]. The armed forces have been submitting minimal budgets which, if adopted, will inevitably have damaging consequences for themselves and the nation.

With regard to the total value of the overall state budget, the present percentage of 8.9 is the lowest since the creation of the republic in our country. It should be remembered that in 1943 and 1970 the percentage rose to over 40 percent of the overall state budget. At present 60.3 percent of the funds are spent on personnel, 17.7 percent on materials and equipment and 19.4 percent on operational and maintenance expenses.

It must not be forgotten that the armed forces are responsible for a valuable heritage, a large proportion of which is technologically advanced, and that any interruption of maintenance programs -- even temporary -- will soon mean very large increases in the cost of deferred repairs or, still worse, a move toward a situation of irreparableness.

Another very major component of military spending concerns the technical instruction and training of personnel, which includes obligatory military service in accordance with the constitution.

Our country's integration into NATO implies commitments with regard to readiness and efficiency for which we have received foreign assistance, especially in connection with supplies of materiel.

We do not believe that there can be any reduction in the armed forces budget below the present percentages and that therefore in future armed forces expenditure will depend almost exclusively on a higher rate of national economic growth and the best possible use of these funds by the armed forces. The country's progress and improved management of funds will definitely make it possible to satisfy the requirements which, because they are not now recognized, are placing the armed forces in a situation of [mere] "survival," if not regression.

PRESIDENT TO VISIT MOZAMBIQUE 24 NOVEMBER

LD221108 Lisbon in Portuguese to Timor Macao and Australia 1000 GMT 22 Oct 81

[Text] It has now been confirmed by diplomatic circles in Maputo that President Ramalho Eanes will pay a 6-day official visit to Mozambique on 24 November at President Samora Machel's invitation. General Ramalho Eanes will be accompanied by Foreign Minister Andre Goncalves Pereira and a 60-strong party of presidential aides, government officials, businessmen and industrialists.

The Portuguese diplomatic mission in the Mozambique capital is still in the process of organizing the program of the visit in consultation with the Mozambique authorities. It is anticipated that the program will include a meeting with Portuguese residents in Maputo and trips to provincial towns.

From Mozambique, the Portuguese president will pay similar visits to Zambia and Tanzania, details of which are yet to be announced.

DENMARK

IRANIAN DIPLOMAT GRANTED POLITICAL ASYLUM

NC261625 Paris AFP in English 1537 GMT 26 Oct 81

[Text] Copenhagen, 26 Oct (AFP) -- A 38-year-old former secretary at the Iranian Embassy in Copenhagen, Hossein Moini, has been granted political asylum in Denmark, the Justice Ministry announced here today. Mr Moini defected on Oct 2 claiming dissatisfaction with bloodshed by the Khomeyni regime in Iran. He had been an Iranian diplomat for ten years.

FINLAND

GOVERNMENT MEETS, CONSIDERS KEKKONEN RESIGNATION

LD270830 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 0800 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Text] The government will hold a special session in half an hour's time. The government is to discuss the health of President Urho Kekkonen and the possibility of granting his resignation. The government has also announced a special Cabinet meeting to be held at 1045.

The Cabinet is to submit a bill to the Diet concerning a change in the elections act. The government intends to propose that the number of the members in the presidential electoral college be raised to 301 from the current 300. The change in the elections act is to become valid in the elections to the presidential electoral college in January.

The government will hold a press conference on the president's possible resignation in the State Council banquet rooms at 1100. The radio news service will have an extra program from the government press conference beginning at 1100.

Kekkonen Letter

LD270932 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 0848 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Station announcement]

[Text] [in progress] ... According to the president's letter, his illness has now been found to be such that it must be considered as preventing him permanently from discharging his duties. The president asked the government to take measures for election of a new president.

President Kekkonen's resignation is accompanied by a medical certificate signed by Professors Erkki Kivalo and Pentti Halonen. The doctors say that on the basis of their medical knowledge and experience they have come to the conclusion that a resignation is necessary. According to the doctors, in the last few years the president has been afflicted with a slowly progressing deficiency of the circulatory system. In the last few months the illness has progressed to the stage that it now causes a permanent hindrance to the president from discharging his duties.

The government decided a moment ago that the elections to the electoral college will take place on 17 and 18 January 1982. The election of the president will follow on Tuesday 26 January. The new president will take his post immediately on 27 January. The term of the new president will last until the end of February 1988.

The government has also submitted to the Diet a proposal for changing the election law. According to the proposal, the number of presidential electors should be raised from the present 300 to 301 in order to avoid the election of the president by lottery if there is a tie on the third round of voting. The laws are to be brought into effect as soon as the Diet has approved them.

Physicians' Statement

LD271248 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 1040 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Medical certificate issued by the president's personal physicians]

[Text] We hereby certify that President of the Republic Urho Kaleva Kekkonen, born 3 September 1900, is permanently prevented from discharging his duties as of today because of illness. Having observed the president's state of health for several years, we have today, on the basis of medical knowledge and our experience, reached the above conclusion for the following reasons: In the last few years the president has been suffering from a slowly progressing deficiency of the circulatory system, diagnosed as arteriosclerosis (?mentalis). In the last few months the illness has reached a stage at which it permanently prevents the president from discharging his duties.

We declare that the above statement is correct, upon our honor and conscience.
[Signed] Prof Pentti Halonen, Prof Erkki Kivalo, Helsinki, 25 October 1981.

Resignation Accepted

LD271028 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 0900 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Excerpt] The resignation of President Urho Kekkonen has been granted at his own request effective today. The Council of State accepted the resignation at its meeting a moment ago. The president says in his letter that he has been afflicted with an illness which has prevented him from discharging the duties of president.

Deputy Prime Minister's Statement

LD271222 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 0900 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Statement by Deputy Prime Minister Eino Uusitalo at press conference at the Council of State -- live]

[Excerpt] I believe I am interpreting correctly the thoughts of the Council of State and the will of the majority of the Finnish people in emphasizing that the Finnish nation fully understands the significance of the political legacy of Urho Kekkonen and will continue to observe his line sincerely, unanimously and with full strength. In this situation the Finnish nation feels deep gratitude toward President Urho Kekkonen's life work and is ready to wish its leader the best possible health for his retirement years.

As a result of the current situation it is necessary, as stated in Article 25 of the constitution, to elect a new president as soon as possible to take up his post immediately after the election. The measures, in brief, will be as follows:

It is the duty of the Council of State to decide on the dates of the elections of the electoral college and the president. The Council of State cannot decide freely on the dates of the elections, but the Council of State is bound by the aforementioned rule of the constitution to elect the new president as soon as possible. The legal experts unanimously have found this to mean that the elections must be arranged as soon as technically possible, taking into account the time limits included in the election act.

On this basis the Council of State today, in accordance with a proposal made by the Ministry of Justice, has ordered that the elections to the electoral college shall take place on 17 and 18 January 1982. The election of the president cannot be unduly delayed either.

As the electors will receive their credentials on the 5th day following the 2d day of the elections, the inspection of credentials can take place at the earliest on 25 January 1982. The earliest possible date for the election of the president is thus 26 January, which the Council of State has confirmed as the election date in a decision issued today.

According to the constitution, the elected president will have to assume office immediately after the elections. His term of office will end at the end of February 1988. The decision of the Council of State on the elections also means that the future president of Finland will be elected without resorting to special legislation.

It is my sincere hope, now that we are setting out to elect a new president for the country, that both the election preparations and the elections will take place without fanaticism and with dignity. We owe this to the respected work of our current president for the happiness and success of our nation.

Justice Minister's Statement

LD271200 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 0900 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Statement by Justice Minister Christoffer Taxell at press conference at the Council of State -- live]

[Text] It is to be regretted that the State Council was compelled to announce today that the president of the republic is premanently prevented from discharging his duties, and that simultaneously it has made a decision concerning the elections to the presidential electoral college and the presidential elections.

This is the first time in Finnish history when, in the case of a permanent hindrance in the discharge of presidential duties, a decision has been made on holding presidential elections following the normal procedure. Even though the situation in many respects is difficult, even tragic, it can be noted with satisfaction that it has by no means been necessary to resort to exceptional procedures. In fact, the spirit and the letter of the constitution have been observed strictly. This is proof of the fact that Finnish democracy works, that our constitution is solidly based and that the situation in Finland is stable. President Kekkonen deserves great credit for this. Let us keep this in mind today, as his glorious career as a statesman is about to end.

In this connection I want to state that although it has been noted today that there is a permanent hindrance in the discharge of the presidential duties, the president has not actually resigned. President Kekkonen's term of office ends when the new president has been elected and has assumed his office. Until that time the prime minister will discharge the duties of president.

The elections to the presidential electoral college will be held on 17-18 January. Although the timetable is tight, the elections can be carried out by normal procedure. The Ministry of Justice will, either today or tomorrow at the latest, send instructions concerning the elections to the provincial administrations.

I hope that in the electoral campaign which is about to begin, or which actually has already begun, everyone will remember that political life will have to continue even after the presidential elections. For this reason let us show that Finnish democracy has developed in the last 25 years. A matter-of-fact and constructive election campaign would be the best proof of this.

PAPER REPORTS POSSIBLE ROLANDHIS REPLACEMENT

NC250813 Nicosia O KIRIKAS in Greek 25 Oct 81 p 1

[Text] Authoritative reports available to O KIRIKAS state that with the political change in Greece the possibility arises of replacing N. Rolandhis at the Foreign Ministry because there is a question of "his cooperation" with the new Greek Government. There were strong rumors yesterday of his imminent replacement by another personality who enjoys the confidence and favor of the new Greek Government.

As is well known, Rolandhis identified his position and policy on the Cyprus issue in a manner which was considered "impolitic and lacking personal conviction," with that of New Democracy, and specifically with the positions and views of former Greek Foreign Minister Mitsotakis. On numerous occasions Rolandhis also expressed himself, whether opportunely or inopportunely, in a critical manner on the policies of PASOK and EDEK on the Cyprus issue. He had even used language and terms which are considered embarrassing when used today. At the same time, different critics of Rolandhis yesterday underlined their reservations about the manner he used to present his views during the New York "consultations" on Waldheim's "new ideas."

Political observers stated that all this creates an unpleasant situation for Rolandhis and mades his stay at the Foreign Ministry censorious. At the same time, they also underlined that Gobbi's statement that "he had the advance consent of the interested parties on the presentation of Waldheim 'ideas' at the negotiation table," raises the question as to who ever gave Gobbi such consent.

Rumors Denied

NC270838 Nicosia O AGON in Greek 27 Oct 81 p 1

[Text] Answering a question on press reports about replacement of Foreign Minister Rolandhis, the government spokesman stated that no such question has been raised.

MINISTER OF LABOR SIGNS PROTOCOL WITH LIBYA

NC262052 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 2000 GMT 26 Oct 81

[Text] Minister of Labor Stavrinakis returned from Libya after an official visit during which a protocol was signed which, among other things, provides for the employment of Cypriot scientists and unemployed graduates in Libya. The protocol also provides for the training of Libyan students at Cyprus' Hotel and Catering Institute and for Cyprus to undertake responsibility for the construction and manning of a hotel school in Libya. In addition, the two sides agreed to immediatly study the possibility of signing an agreement on social insurance which would benefit Cypriot workers employed in Libya.

Libyan Training Program

NC270929 Nicosia CYPRUS MAIL in English 27 Oct 81 p 1

[Text] The minister of labour and social insurance, Mr Y. Stavrinakis, has returned from Libya after an invitation by the Libyan Government for discussions concerning closer cooperation between the two countries in the fields of employment and training opportunities. Among matters discussed was the possibility of setting up of a hotel training school.

Cyprus will now prepare a feasibility study and architectural designs for the school plus plans for its organisation and manning. Libya has expressed a desire to have 48 Libyans trained by the Cyprus Hotel and Catering Institute. Details are being worked out.

Other subjects discussed included social insurance benefits for Cypriots working in Libya. The question of filing Libyan requirements for trained and qualified personnel was discussed. Libya has proposed appointing a labour attache to Nicosia to help in selection of appropriate staff. Consideration was also given to the possibility of Libyan students attending the MIM (Mediterranean Institute of Management) courses at the Cyprus productivity centre.

ROLANDHIS, KITTIS DEPART ATHENS FOR LUXEMBOURG

NC252236 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 2000 GMT 25 Oct 81

[Text] Foreign Minister Rolandhis, who had accompanied President Kiprianou to Athens, this evening went to Luxembourg, where he will head the Cypriot delegation at the meeting of the council considering Cyprus' association with the EEC. During the meeting, which will convene the day after tomorrow with the foreign ministers of the Community's member states participating, the issue of further concessions to Cypriot produce for the period 1982-1983 will be discussed.

While in Luxembourg, Rolandhis will meet with Chairman of the EEC Ministerial Council Lord Carrington, Chairman of the EEC Executive Committee Thorn and foreign ministers from other countries. Minister of Commerce Kittis, who is a member of the Cypriot delegation, also departed for Luxembourg today.

KIPRIANOU INVITES WILLY BRANDT FOR VISIT

NC211106 Nicosia O AGON in Greek 21 Oct 81 pp 1, 8

[Text] Chairman of the West German Social Democratic Party and former Chancellor Willy Brandt will visit Cyprus at the end of the year as an official guest of President of the Republic Spiros Kiprianou.

Brandt, one of Western Europe's greatest political personages, will stay in Cyprus for several days (up to a week) to study on the spot the problem of Cyprus about which he has demonstrated special interest.

The West German leader will have contacts with President Kiprianou, the government, political parties and the Turkish Cypriot leadership. Unconfirmed reports mention that Brandt may possibly play an active role in the problem of Cyprus.

In a recent interview with an Athens newspaper, Brandt stated that "he always follows the problem of Cyprus with interest" and wished for "a democratic and peaceful solution, to which the United Nations has been contributing for years, that would be accepted by everyone.

The chairman of West Germany's Social Democratic Party disclosed that President Kiprianou will visit Bonn in February for talks with Chancellor Schmidt.

Brandt was the first Western leader to strongly condemn the Turkish invasion in 1974 and he maintained very close and friendly bonds with always remembered Ethnarch Makarios.

UN ANNOUNCES POSTPONEMENT OF INTERCOMMUNAL TALKS

NC231153 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1130 GMT 23 Oct 81

[Text] A UN statement issued in Nicosia today announces postponement of the meeting, within the framework of the intercommunal talks, scheduled for next Tuesday [27 October]. As mentioned in the statement, consultations are now in progress to set a new date for the meeting, which will be announced as soon as an agreement is reached.

'Evaluation' Text From UN

NC221300 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1130 GMT 22 Oct 81

[Text] Today, UN Secretary General Special Representative in Cyprus Gobbi unofficially handed to President of the Republic Kiprianou the text of the evaluation of the talks which he intends to introduce at the intercommunal talks. The president reserved the right to express his views on the whole matter.

In reply to a relevant question, the government spokesman said that before the president expresses his views on the text of the evaluation of the talks, he will, as he has thus far done with the verbal briefing, have consultations with the Ministerial Council, the members of the cabinet and the Greek Government. It is expected, the spokesman said, that after his return from Athens the president will convene the Ministerial and National Councils for this specific purpose. The spokesman also said that after the meeting with Gobbi, the president had separate meetings with the members of the National Council to whom he handed copies of the text for their study.

More On 'Evaluation Paper'

NC270830 Nicosia KHARAVYI in Greek 27 Oct 81 p 8

[Text] The UN office in Nicosia has issued the following statement on the press reports on the Waldheim "ideas":

"The UN spokesman in Cyprus says that, although he respects every reasonable comment, he hopes journalists clearly understand one point; the United Nations does not attempt to impose anything. The paper is simply 'a tool for negotiations' and it is within this context that the term 'evaluation paper' is correctly used."

Ioannidhis' Return

NC241822 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1730 GMT 24 Oct 81

[Text] Mr Ioannidhis, the Greek Cypriot side's representative to the intercommunal talks, has returned from Athens. Mr Ioannidhis participated in yesterday's talks between President Kiprianou and Mr Papandreou.

Kiprianou Cables Waldheim

NC241450 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1130 GMT 24 Oct 81

[Text] In a cable to the UN secretary general on the occasion of UN day, President Kiprianou mentions that 36 years after the establishment of the United Nations, international peace and security are once again in jeopardy. He adds: Unprecedented and continuous violations of all principles incorporated in the UN Charter are a source of concern and often the cause of hopelessness, particularly for the small and defenseless countries which have placed their hopes in the United Nations.

In his cable, Kiprianou underlines that the survival and progress of humanity can only be achieved through collective efforts, particularly on the part of the great powers, in order to make the high principles of the United Nations a viable reality.

Cyprus, Kiprianou concludes, a victim of such violations as a result of the Turkish invasion, once again reiterates its devotion to the United Nations.

PRESS DISCUSSES, CRITICIZES WALDHEIM POSITION

TA NEA 24 Oct

NC241418 Nicosia TA NEA in Greek 24 Oct 81 p 1

[From the "Positions" column by Renos Prentzas: "The New Blackmail"]

[Text] Once again Waldheim is attempting blackmail; once again he creates faits accomplis. Before the Cypriot side even answered, he already decided to present the document with his "ideas" at the next meeting of the interlocutors. This is a document which, as we have been informed, is fundamentally no different from his original "ideas" and which is aimed -- and if accepted will -- at altering the qualitative character of the Cyprus issue and, if all that has been published is correct, will turn it from a question of illegal occupation into a question of legalization of both this occupation and its results. Specifically, by accepting the "ideas" the Cypriot side automatically accepts what Denktas describes as the "new realities." In other words, it accepts that the Turkish invasion and occupation have created a new right -- the "right" of existence by two separate and equal entities which discuss their unification under some shadowy format.

This is the conclusion from Waldheim's broadest possible -- as we are informed by press reports and leaks -- adoption of the unacceptable and well-known Turkish proposals, and particularly the basic points which absolutely clash with UN principles and resolutions, such as the demand, for example, of "homogenous areas."

At the same time, acceptance of these "ideas" would also mean an illogically preferential treatment of one portion of the Cypriot population at the expense of the greatest majority. This is because these "ideas" propose an area for the Turkish province equal to approximately 30 percent [of Cyprus] and representation of the Turkish Cypriots in the federal government and its services equal to 33.3 percent.

The Cyprus Government had a duty to immediately reject these "ideas" because they are unacceptable from every aspect. It did not reject them, thus allowing them to become -- starting from verbal queries -- an official document destined for presentation at the "intercommunal" talks.

The Cyprus Government cannot argue that Waldheim, all by himself, decided to blackmail it. Waldheim would not have resorted to blackmail if he was not in possession of certain indications that his blackmail would bear fruit. Nobody else except the Cyprus Government could have supplied him with any such indications.

What are these indications which the government made available during its discussions with Waldheim in New York? What did it say to Waldheim? Was the government simply satisfied to get assurances that he would postpone his reply until after the Greek election or did it make it clear to him -- as it had a duty to do -- that it will never give up the inalienable, legal rights of the people of Cyprus?

If the second were the case, then most certainly Waldheim would not have risked his prestige, at the very moment he is seeking re-election and when any accusation against him would have an adverse effect on his ambition.

Consequently, we draw the conclusion that the government did not have the courage to tell him directly and emphatically that it rejects every "idea" which violates UN principles and resolutions. It did not have the courage to tell him -- also explaining the reasons -- that his "ideas" violate these principles and resolutions and that they create the "right to invade and occupy" and that as a result they are illegal as well as immoral.

We conclude that it limited itself to being hesitant and to primarily presenting the fear of the people and the fear of PASOK. We conclude that in this way it gave Waldheim the impression that if he prepared a carefully constructed blackmailing dilemma he would be able to "force" it to give in.

Fearing that this is exactly what would happen, we issued a warning well in advance. We underlined that it should not present things in such a way that it would turn the Cyprus issue from a dispute between Cyprus and Turkey into a dispute between Cyprus and Waldheim. Instead of preventing what we had warned about, the government allowed it to take place. Yet it must know this: The people will never allow it to take refuge behind alleged or real blackmail attempts by Waldheim to give away what it has repeatedly argued that "we will never cede." The truth is that the people will never cede anything of this sort and at the same time the people will not permit anyone else to do so either.

O ANEXARTITOS 26 Oct

NC260924 Nicosia O ANEXARTITOS in Greek 26 Oct 81 p 1

[Text] Setting off from the numerous reports which appeared in the Greek and the Turkish press in connection with the "Waldheim ideas" on the Cyprus problem and following persistent cross checking, the editors of O ANEXARTITOS are in a position today to give the following checked information on the contents of the "ideas":

In his two documents (the one is entitled "Guidelines for the Constitution of the Federal Republic of Cyprus" and the other "Territorial Guidelines"), Waldheim identifies himself with the Turkish partitionist views.

Specifically, he fully adopts the Turkish views on the powers of the central government, and he presents them, according to his view, as a "middle solution." These powers are nothing more than a technical responsibility for the coordination of the policy of the two separate ministates. He defines participation in the federal government and the federal civil service, 66.6 percent for the Greeks and 33.4 percent for the Turks.

Referring to the refugees, he refrains from citing the right of all the refugees to return voluntarily to their homes and speaks about the resettlement of refugees in the Greek Cypriot region without making any reference to the resettlement of refugees in the region under Turkish Cypriot administration. On the contrary, referring to the setting up of an organization to give loans and aid to displaced persons for permanent settlement, he avoids clarifying whether he means this applies to those who will voluntarily not return or whether he means it applied to those who will be forced to remain refugees.

Invoking lack of information in connection with the viability and productivity, he adopts the malicious Turkish challenge to official figures of the Republic of Cyprus, and, moving the Cypriot side from the 20 percent territory for the Turkish Cypriots to the 30 percent, he, at the same time, secure for the Turkish side -- which will invoke Waldheim's recognition -- the possibility to insist on a percentage beyond that of 30 percent. He also provides this possibility with his pertinent document which introduces a new criterion -- the characteristics of regions -- on the basis of which he anticipates diversification of his proposed 30 percent.

Although the Turkish invasion and occupation has mainly hit the Greek Cypriots, he defines the need for the establishment of a fund for the exclusive development of the territories which are occupied today. And what is worse, he stipulates the obligation of Greek Cypriots to contribute to this fund, an obligation which is reminiscent of servitude tax.

With his guidelines, he is in full opposition to the UN resolutions and abolishes the 19 May agreement in connection with the Famagusta issue; he shifts its priority from the stage of commencement of talks to the stage of conclusion of agreement, thus playing the game of the Turks.

Instead of accepting fundamental freedoms and human rights by advancing the discussion and solution of the so-called practical difficulties, he subjects them to practical difficulties and refers them for discussion by committees.

He presents the establishment of a "federal district" allegedly as a joint position by both sides — a position which has never been mentioned.

The "Territorial Guidelines" are -- as we have learned — a brief two-page document. The "Guidelines for the Constitution of the Republic of Cyprus" cover eight pages and include an "Introduction" with the writer's observations -- points on which, according to the author, the two sides agree and which he himself considers to be at equal distance from the positions of the two sides -- a thing that does not correspond to reality. This is about a total of 29 points.

KLIRIDHIS WANTS ACTION NOT WORDS FROM PAPANDREOU

NC231050 Nicosia I DHILINI in Greek 23 Oct 81 pp 1, 8

[Text] Democratic Rally Chairman Glavkos Kliridhis, in a short statement during yesterday's meeting of the House of Representatives on the occasion of the resolution approved and sent to the chairman of the Greek Chamber of Deputies, expressed the hope that the interest of the new Greek Government will be expressed by acts and not declarations. Kliridhis specifically stated that the Democratic Rally believes that each Greek Government, irrespective of political ideologies, is a government of Greece and he expects action from it, not words.

I believe, he said, that the Cyprus problem is not a problem for slogans but primarily a problem for political maturity and, at the same time, political wisdom. I am not going to judge or criticize anyone. I truly believe that this political wisdom and maturity will also exist within the new Greek Government. I also hope that the new Greek Government will demonstrate greater interest in the solution of the Cyprus problem and I hope this interest will be demonstrated in action and not in declarations.

The Democratic Rally is prepared to cooperate with the new Greek Government so long as the line and views to be followed on the Cyprus issue are the views discussed and approved in the light of logic.

TO VIMA CRITICIZES PAPANDREOU'S STAND ON CYPRUS

NC260850 Nicosia TO VIMA in Greek 25 Oct 81 p 3

[From the "Questions" column: "What Repercussions Will There Be on the Cyprus Issue After the Change in Greece?"]

[Excerpts] It is a universal question in the thoughts of every Greek Cypriot: On what course will the Cyprus issue be led and what will its developments be after the government change in Greece following Papandreou's victory?

The new Greek prime minister's disagreement with the dogma of "Cyprus decides and Greece supports," is very well known. Papandreou considered this dogma as an alibi and excuse of the preceding governments not to fulfill their obligations toward Cyprus. It would be an overworked supposition that with his advent to authority Papandreou would radically abolish this dogma and replace it with the dogma prevailing during previous periods: That it [Athens] is the national center which makes decisions on the Cypriot issue. Papandreou himself stated he would define his entire position on the Cyprus issue after his consultations with President of the Republic Kiprianou.

The Cyprus Government was a warm supporter of this dogma and it disagreed, if only for appearance's sake, with Papandreou's positions on the matter.

Even more burning and more difficult to answer is the question related to the position of the new Greek Government on the intercommunal talks. Papandreou's position, expressed on the very eve of the election, is that there is no meaning to the intercommunal talks so long as they are conducted under the shadow of Attila.

The new Greek prime minister has expressed a different philosophy from the one which was the basis for the conduct of the talks. He specifically argued that the Cyprus problem was not a constitutional difference between the two Cypriot communities but that it was a question of invasion and occupation. He also argued that dialogue in essence was not being conducted between the Greek and Turkish communities in Cyprus but between the Greeks of Cyprus and Ankara, which makes decisions and dictates to Denktas what to propose, what to do and what to say.

These Papandreou positions are absolutely correct and place the Cyprus problem in its proper perspective. It must not, however, escape the attention of anyone that only until a few days ago the Cypriot leadership underlined absolute agreement and identity of views with the previous Greek Government, which pursued a policy stemming from a totally different, if not contrary, evaluation of the Cyprus problem.

Logically, therefore, we once again have the question whether it is, how it is, and to what degree it is possible to reconcile the previous positions of the Cypriot leadership with the positions declared prior to the election by the new prime minister of Greece. Assurances that once again there is an absolute identity of views and agreement between Athens and Nicosia require explanation and clarification.

Now that Papandreou is in charge, it is logical that Cyprus should expect him not to forget his preelection positions and that he will push them forward and utilize them.

Cypriot Hellenism further expects Papandreou to handle the Cyprus problem as a problem of invasion and occupation. This means its separation from the narrow limits of the intercommunal dialogue and its placement on the list of unsolved international problems.

Papandreou's evaluation of the Cyprus problem remains correct. It is now expected that there will be a sequel to his evaluations expressed through correct preparation and correct handling, so that the problem may be removed from the stagnation into which it has been led.

DENKTAS RECEIVES UN SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE

TA221215 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in English to Cyprus 1115 GMT 22 Oct 81

[Text] President Denktas has said that the UN special representative in Cyprus, Mr Hugo Gobbi, had handed him views by the secretary general, Mr Waldheim, which would be put on the negotiating table at the next session of the Cyprus intercommunal talks on Tuesday. President Denktas was speaking to correspondents at the end of a meeting with Mr Gobbi this morning. The meeting which lasted about an hour was also attended by the Turkish Cypriot interlocutor, Mr Onan, and his advisers. President Denktas said that the views had been presented to him not for bargaining and that they would be put on the negotiating table as they were.

He stated that the views covered points common to both communities and possible ways of bringing the two communities together on points on which they were far apart. President Denktas reiterated that as the Turkish Cypriot side had previously said, the aim was to establish a federal republic between the two communities with each community being responsible for its own affairs and security and obtaining a result which would prevent the repetition of the past. The Turkish Cypriot community, he said, was ready to consider such an exercise at the negotiating table. He added that these views would now be put on the negotiating table on Tuesday and efforts would be made to get a positive result from them. He stressed that so far the Greek Cypriot attitude to them was known but the Greek Cypriot reaction following Mr Kiprianou's talks with Mr Papandreou would become clear later. He stated that this reaction concerned the Greek Cypriots only.

Government Reaction

NC222130 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 2000 GMT 22 Oct 81

[Text] The government spokesman has stated Turkish Cypriot leader Denktas' statement that the UN secretary general's special representative in Cyprul, Mr Gobbi, will submit at the intercommunal talks on Tuesday the document on the UN secretary general's evaluation of the talks is contrary to the understanding reached between Mr Gobbi and President Kiprianou at their meeting today. The meeting was also attended by Foreign Minister Rolandhis and the advisers to the talks, Mr Triandafillidhis and Mrs Soulioti.

The spokesman added: It has been arranged with Mr Gobbi that no meeting of the interlocutors will be held on Tuesday and that reasonable time be given for the study of the secretary general's document as well as for the formulation of views on the entire issue.

PARTY VIEWS ON GREEK POST ELECTION DEVELOPMENTS

TA221244 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in English to Cyprus 1115 GMT 22 Oct 81

[Text] A statement by the Democratic People's Party has urged Mr Papandreou not to be influenced by Greek Cypriot chauvinist leaders such as Mr Lissaridhis and Mr Kiprianou while determining the new Greek Government's Cyprus policy.

In a written statement today the party said that Mr Papandreou had a long-standing connection with Cyprus. It said that while he was the minister of coordination in his father's cabinet, Mr Papandreou had been one of the pioneers of the occupation of Cyprus by some 20,000 Greek soldiers. While opposing the Hutchison plan, which offered a base to Turkey in Cyprus, he had supported the unconditional union of Cyprus with Greece.

The party's statement stresses that if Papandreou's views on Cyprus expressed in the election manifesto were included in the new government program, this would push the intercommunal talks to a deadlock and destroy the chances of a Cyprus settlement. It added that under such circumstances the Turkish Cypriot community would have no alternative but to take the necessary steps to proclaim its own independence and freedom, seek a way to establish a separate state and fully safeguard its national existence.

I SIMERINI ON TURKISH CYPRIOT LEADER STATEMENT

NC211209 Nicosia I SIMERINI in Greek 21 Oct 81 p. 1

["For and Against" column by Al. Konstandinidhis: "The Unilateral Declaration of a Turkish Cypriot State and Waldheim's Initiative"]

[Text] The issue that an independent Turkish Cypriot state may be declared, recently reappeared in the Turkish Cypriot press after Cagatay's statement in his latest press interview in which the Turkish Cypriot leader referred to the possibility that the Turkish side may proceed unilaterally in declaring an independent state.

The next day (Taskin), secretary general of (Turk-Sen) Turkish Cypriot Trade Unions [last two words in English] supported the declaration of an independent Turkish Cypriot state.

However, in addition to this, the Turkish newspaper HURRIYET on 16 October published a report according to which "the government of the Turkish Federated State of Cyprus has begun preparations for the declaration of a Turkish republic in Cyprus, something that currently remains as the only alternative solution for the Turkish Federated State of Cyprus."

In the same report, the Turkish newspaper mentions that after Dentkas' return to Cyprus, a referendum will be proclaimed on the issue of the declaration of a independent republic which, however, will be open to a federal solution.

In an effort to explain the reason why the Turkish side is again directing itself toward the unilateral declaration of independence, HURRIYET writes:

"Kiprianou's rejection of Waldheim's compromise proposals shortly after his rejection of the Turkish proposals and his statement in New York against equal representation in the federal organs was the drop that made the cup overflow."

However, in the past, too, the Turkish side several times used the threat of unilateral declaration of an independent state without implementing it. This, however, does not mean that the Turkish side does not intend to proceed some day with the unilateral declaration of a Turkish Cypriot state after it has assessed the facts and consequences of such an act. What we should understand is that so long as our problem remains unsolved, there will always be a danger of an independent Turkish Cypriot state being declared.

In my opinion, the declaration of an independent Turkish Cypriot state should be considered inevitable if the Cyprus problem is not solved within the next 5-10 years.

In fact, in the last years the Turkish side has been exerting systematic efforts to create the appropriate prerequisites for the declaration of an independent state. In these efforts, it is unwittingly being aided by our own leadership through its errors and short-sighted policy.

If the Turkish side succeeds in securing the promise of a number of states for the diplomatic recognition of the new state, then I do not think it will at all hesitate to proceed with a unilateral declaration.

At this point, we should note that recently the Turkish Cypriot community succeeded in getting out of its isolation and currently has direct relations with several countries. At the same time, it has been accepted by the Islamic countries group, which has adopted a number of resolutions in support of the Turkish positions.

Consequently, our leadership should deal in all seriousness with the issue of a possible declaration of an independent Turkish Cypriot state and not take it as a mere bluff by the opponent. The threat is real and in case it is implemented we shall have to confront situations for which we do not seem to be ready.

In the upcoming meeting in Athens, I think Papandreou and Kiprianou should occupy themselves with the possibility of the unilateral declaration before adopting a new "rejective" policy which would help the other side to proceed with what is has set as its goal in the last years.

Within this framework, our stance to be taken toward Waldheim's initiative acquires special significance. An unprepared and thoughtless rejection of Waldheim's initiative will bring us even nearer to the unilateral declaration of the Turkish Cypriot state.

PAPANDREOU, KIPRIANOU HOLD MEETING 26 OCT

NC261130 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 1100 GMT 26 Oct 81

[Excerpt] Prime Minister Papandreou and Cypriot President Kiprianou had a fresh meeting at 1100 today and discussed Cyprus developments. Earlier, at 0930, Mr Kiprianou met with KKE-Interior Secretary General Dhrakopoulos and Eurodeputy Kirkos, a member of the KKE-Interior Executive Bureau.

Press Statements

NC261522 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1230 GMT 26 Oct 81

[Recorded reportage by Greek National Radio and Television Network correspondent Aris Xipolithidis, on the Papandreou-Kiprianou meeting in Athens on 26 October, concluding the round of talks between Greece and Cyprus]

[Text] Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou announced after today's meeting with President of the Cyprus Republic Spiros Kiprianou that Greek economic aid to Cyprus will nearly be doubled. Immediately afterwards, in expressing his thanks, President Kiprianou added that Greek support now becomes more active and will be proved more effective in the future.

The two leaders met at the political office at 1100 and remained in conference until 1230. When they ended their talks, they met with representatives of the press, who were waiting for them at the exit of the political office, making extensive statements and replying to questions.

Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou was the first to speak and said:

[Begin recording] I am in the extremely pleasant position to announce to you that we have a full concord of views not only in respect of the long-term goals of the Cypriot struggle -- which are an independent Cyprus, a demilitarized Cyprus, return of refugees to their homes -- but also on the handling which become imperative after the initiative of UN Secretary General Waldheim.

I cannot make any further statement on this nor can the president of the Cyprus Republic, I believe, in view of the fact that he will meet both the Ministerial Council and the National Council of Cyprus. I am particularly pleased to announce the proof of support of the new government to the Republic of Cyprus. We are approximately doubling the amount of economic aid to Cyprus. From now on it will be 2 billion drachma. It was 1.25 billion and we are nearly doubling it.

I also want to emphasize that the ambassadors of Greece throughout the world will brief foreign ministers and or prime ministers on the true character of the Cyprus issue. This character is that there exists a foreign occupation over a UN member state.

This is what I would like to state, adding that I am very happy that we have had this opportunity with the president of the Republic of Cyprus and that we look forward to frequent visits by him to Greece. I also accepted an invitation to visit Cyprus in early January. This is a firm commitment and the exact date will be scheduled within the next 10 days. I will go in January because in the interim the president of the Republic of Cyprus will have to visit Moscow and Washington. The time will then be suitable for a re-examination of the Cyprus issue. [end recording]

After the prime minister, President of the Republic of Cyprus Kiprianou stated: [Begin recording] First of all, I would like to express my deep satisfaction over the fact that we have agreed on all matters we discussed, as already announced by the prime minister. We agreed both on matters of essence as well as on matters of handling and tactics.

Our cooperation will be close and I have absolutely no doubt that the result of this close cooperation, the concord of views established and the strong interest of the prime minister of Greece, Papandreou, we will enter into a new phase of the Cyprus problem.

The support of Greece, which always existed and was a given fact, becomes without a doubt much active and I believe that in the end it will be effective. I want to express my gratitude to the prime minister of the Greek Government and my dear friend, Andreas Papandreou, for the understanding he demonstrated on all the problems which Cyprus faces.

Apart from the other issues, Papandreou demonstrated a particular interest in the missing persons issue. He asked me and I briefed him in detail on developments around this matter which is the most tragic aspect of the Cyprus tragedy. In cooperation with me, Papandreou and I will do whatever we can about establishing the fate of the missing persons and about the functioning in a fundamental effective manner of the committee already established under UN auspices.

In reference to the current phase of the Cyprus problem, once again there has been absolute agreement both on the handling and the tactics. As you can understand, particularly in reference to our position toward the initiatives of the UN secretary general, and I repeat: there is unanimity between the Governments of Greece and Cyprus. I cannot make any further announcement in view of the fact that I must consult both the Ministerial Council and the National Council in Nicosia before the final decisions are taken. In any event, we will be in constant contact with the prime minister of the Greek Government.

I believe that during my stay in Athens, primarily due to the strong and sincere interest of Papandreou in the Cyprus issue, there was excellent work done on repositioning the Cyprus issue on its proper foundation, on the role of the multifaceted support which Greece can offer to the fighting Cypriot people, on the handling, both short and long term, in accordance with developments. To dispell any possible erroneous impressions, I must emphasize that there must be no confusion between goals and handling. The goals are unchanged on the guarantee of an honorable solution to the Cyprus problem which will guarantee the full independence, territorial integrity and sovereignty and the nonaligned character of the state of Cyprus within a system of true federation. [end recording]

The two leaders then replied to questions from represenatives of the press with Kiprianou [as heard] answering first:

[Begin recording] [Question] Mr Prime Minister, do the Waldheim proposals refer to this point?

[Papandreou] They most certainly do refer but I cannot state anything more than what President Kiprianou has stated.

[Question] In two words how can you describe them?

[Papandreou] I reserve my right to describe them in due time in order to use the purest language.

[Question] [confused question by several voices] [words indistinct] is handling at the United Nations (defined)?

[Papandreou] The handling also incorporates the question of an appeal to the UN whenever this is considered useful. As you know, there already are certain prerequisites for a reconvening of the General Assembly even after the termination of its current session. This, naturally, is something which is incorporated in the handling referred to by the president of the Republic of Cyprus.

[Question] Before the election you had supported, you had promised to open the dossier of Cyprus. Now that you are the government, will you proceed to this opening of the dossier?

[Papandreou] Most certainly. We will remain true to all our promises to the Greek people.
[Kiprianou] And I must stress there is an agreement on this.
[Papandreou] It is very important that this is how the president of the republic also feels.

[Question] This means that you have discussed this?

[Kiprianou] A little while ago.

[Papandreou] But naturally, if we state it, this means we have discussed it.

[Question] Will this formula that Cyprus decides and Greece supports be continued?

[Papandreou] Look, this is formally correct in the sense that Cyprus is an independent state, and this is over and above the national ties which join us. At the same time, we must not forget that we are a guarantor power; we must not forget that we are one nation. This word, "support," this expression, "we support," can be interpreted in numerous ways -- in a lukewarm way or a dynamic way. What the new Greek Government will do is to add the term "dynamic" to the word "support."

[Question] Is there any question of diminishing the independence and sovereignty of the Cypriot Government?

[Papandreou] Never! Our firm position is that Cyprus is a member state of the United Nations and its rights and sovereignty will never be questioned by us. We have national ties; we are united by history -- by the present and by the future. Naturally, this means that we have a responsibility; Greece has responsibilities toward Cyprus, toward the Cypriot people. And Greece will never forget these national responsibilities which it does have.

[Question] Are you dealing with the Waldheim proposals in a positive manner in this handling which you mentioned earlier?

[Papandreou] This is something which will appear through the progress of developments. I prefer not to be specific.

[Question] You had spoken when Yeoryios Papandreou was alive about the role which representatives of Greece could play in Cyprus. Now the socialist government of Greece has declared a change. Will this change be transported to Cyprus as well with respect to its representatives in the various sectors in Cyprus?

[Papandreou] This is a question for the Cypriot people and not for me. It is most certainly not my question.

[Question] Mr Prime Minister, you at one time spoke about a package of arrangements between Greece and Turkey and you had also referred to the question of Cyprus within this package. Does this continue to apply as you see it or do you believe there is some change on the matter?

[Papanderou] Look, I do not exactly recall the phrase you attribute to me. However, for us the Cypriot issue is basically an international problem; it is a problem for the United Nations. Naturally, over and above this position there are also the specific ties which I have mentioned between Greece and Cyprus. One of these is that we are a guarantor power. The second is that fundamentally we are one nation. It is here that our own obligations arise; we will keep them.

[Question] [Words indistinct] stronger significance in what you said about Greece being a guarantor power?

[Papandreou] Since I have mentioned it, this means that stronger significance will be given.

[Question] [Words indistinct] the defensive arming of Cyprus, Mr Prime Minister?

[Papandreou] This is one of the questions we have discussed, but naturally no statement can be made on this subject.

[Question] Threats have been made, primarily from the West, that if PASOK came to authority Greece might withdraw from NATO. Would you like to comment on this?

[Papandreou] I commented on this in a lengthy interview I gave yesterday. I do not believe it is worthwhile to reiterate what I said yesterday.

[Question] What do you believe will be the repercussions on the Cyprus issue as a result of your election as the new government of Greece?

[Papandreou] I believe they will be positive, but perhaps this may be a little egotistical. [laughter]

[Kiprianou intervenes] Before you disperse I would like once again to express my gratitude to Papandreou for the understanding he demonstrated for his strong interest in Cyprus, for the struggle of Cyprus. At least I personally express the assurance that a new chapter in the history of the Cyprus problem is being opened and the conviction that sooner or later, we will reach the justification of the Cypriot people. [end recording]

SPIEGEL INTERVIEWS PAPANDREOU ON NEW POLICIES

DW261533 Hamburg DER SPIEGEL in German 26 Oct 81 pp 148-151

[Correspondent Kostas Tsatsaronis interview with Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou; place and date not given]

[Text] SPIEGEL: Mr Prime Minister, some minutes ago you took the chair in the premier's office as the first socialist. How do you feel?

Papandreou: I feel responsible and I am moved. Responsible, because the people expect very much of us. Moved, because my father already sat in this chair. But I don't forget that colonels also sat in this chair.

SPIEGEL: Your election victory was like a landslide. After its founding in 1974 the PASOK almost doubled the number of its deputies in every election. How do you explain this?

Papandreou: Our party has its finger on the people's pulse. We have realized that the people want to have a socially just and really independent Greece.

SPIEGEL: Hasn't the victory of socialist Mitterrand in France also played a role?

Papandreou: It is true, the victory of Mitterrand and the French Socialist Party has given the struggle of all other European socialist parties a strong impetus. On the other hand, it is clear that the victory of socialism in France supports the cause of socialism in other countries of this continent.

SPIEGEL: At what rate and according to what time schedule is Greece to become socialist?

Papandreou: Stepwise, but as quickly as possible. First of all, we will have to satisfy the immediate necessities of the social sections that have been treated particularly unfairly. But, at the same time and parallel with it, we will draw up the bases for the implementation of our long-term targets.

SPIEGEL: You have inherited a huge deficit in the public budgets. It is the third subsequent year now that inflation has almost reached the 24-percent threshold. How do you want to tackle this?

Papandreou: Through coordinated action and on several fronts simultaneously. To lead the economy out of the crisis, my predecessors would have had to touch structures which were also structures of their power. They would have had to touch interests they protected and served -- the interests of monopoly capitalism, commission agents and speculators. We do not have to show regard for them. By the way, inflation can be coped with successfully only by fighting its causes globally and simultaneously.

SPIEGEL: How are you going to do that?

Papandreou: We will effectively control the prices of the most important products and services as well as state expenditures and credits. We will promote productive investments, stimulate production through strengthening the purchasing power of the workers and reorganize the heavily indebted enterprises. Finally, we will make radical structural and functional changes in public enterprises and take measures to control the monopolies.

SPIEGEL: Your start undoubtedly will be complicated by the fact that Greece's state coffers are quite empty.

Papandreou: First of all, we will draw up a balance sheet and present it to the Greek people. No doubt this will delay the implementation of our economic program, but we are optimistic.

SPIEGEL: In your election campaign you talked about a host of economic reforms. What will have priority?

Papandreou: First of all, we will work on a complete energy program and establish a development-oriented energy policy. Second, we will bring the country's resources under national control by socializing the respective enterprises. In the industrial sector, we will expand the scope of national planning by way of a limited number of socializations in strategic sectors. A decisive role here will be played by medium-size enterprises which together with artisans, farmers and workers constitute the backbone of our economic system. And finally, the socialization of the credit system will allow a radical adjustment of the banks' role to our development policy.

SPIEGEL: What do you actually mean by "socialization?"

Papandreou: Our socialization policy is aimed at safeguarding social control in certain key sectors and the infrastructure. It is directed against the monopolies and dependence. Our policy will support private initiative by furthering the medium-size enterprises which today are undermined by the unlimited freedom of monopoly capital.

SPIEGEL: What sectors are to be socialized?

Papandreou: The power industry, public utilities, mass transport and the traffic system; the large shipyards, the steel, cement and fertilizer industries, the pharmaceutical industry and those enterprises which are directly related to national defense.

SPIEGEL: But some of these sectors are already run by the state.

Papandreou: The organization, operation and administration will in the future have to serve the whole of society and not private interests, as has been the case thus far.

SPIEGEL: How many enterprises will be affected by this nationalization?

Papandreou: Few. A lot of sensation has been created, but only 10 families will be affected. Our program is much more reserved than that of Mitterrand.

SPIEGEL: Will the entrepreneurs and shareholders be compensated for?

Papandreou: We will copy the procedure that the socialist French Government applies. The question of compensation which has caused all this trouble is settled by the Constitution. Article 17 binds the state to pay compensation within 18 months and on the basis of a court decision.

SPIEGEL: Will foreign enterprises be socialized as well? German pharmaceutical enterprises like Hoechst or Boehringer?

Papandreou: They will have to reckon with a national company which will conclude contracts with these firms on the procurement of raw materials.

SPIEGEL: Don't you fear that this policy will have negative effects on foreign investments?

Papandreou: No, as soon as the foreigners have closely studied our program and see what we are doing, there will be no setbacks.

SPIEGEL: Your reforms will cost much money. Greece has always depended on economic aid. Do you have other pledges?

Papandreou: We expect France, Germany and the other countries which also granted the former government credits for settling the balance of payments to help us. In addition, I expect help from the Arabs and hope for investments of mutual interest.

SPIEGEL: You expect help from Bonn, the same people you once termed the "satraps of the Americans in Europe?"

Papandreou: For us to be a new socialist party in Greece it was indispensable to find our own identity. At present, our standpoints and orientations are being revised, and this clearly also refers to the German Social Democrats.

SPIEGEL: Does it mean that your relationship with the SPD has improved?

Papandreou: It is excellent. My trip to Germany this summer was quite productive. In addition to Willy Brandt, with whom I have always had very good relations, I had detailed talks with the federal chancellor. I am absolutely satisfied. I believe the German Social Democrats have understood the Greek problems and the role the PASOK intends to play.

SPIEGEL: And yet, Greece's alliance partners are concerned about your foreign policy. As recently as 2 weeks ago you said in a SPIEGEL interview that you wanted to let the people decide on whether the country should stay within the EC; you did not rule out Greece's withdrawal from NATO and the closing of U.S. bases.

Papandreou: Being a small country we do not seek confrontation with a superpower like the United States, nor do we by any means want to send the Greek people into adventures. Therefore, we will start negotiations on all points and we will show reason in all points. But we will defend our country's national interests.

SPIEGEL: In your election campaign you always talked about "change." What is really to change now?

Papandreou: Geographically, economically and culturally, our country belongs to Europe as well as to the Balkan and the Mediterranean regions. Our government will strive to make Greece's presence felt in all three regions.

SPIEGEL: Will this reorientation be at the expense of Greece's orientation toward Europe?

Papandreou: Our Europe policy concerns all the European countries. To us, Europe is one. Our policy has the vision of a general change which will lead to the creation of a European confederation -- a Europe which will include the countries of the West and the East. Naturally, this is a vision. But many European states are already developing initiatives which deviate more or less from the course of the political-military blocs.

SPIEGEL: Do you mean states or merely movements in these states which publicly advocate neutralism? Do you back this tendency?

Papandreou: Look, for us Europe can no longer be determined by the status of Yalta and Potsdam. The division of Europe in two camps contradicts the interests of the European nations. This is also the problem of divided Germany. How long can such a status survive in Europe? We don't believe in the blocs of cold war. We believe in a Europe which is dominated neither by the Soviet Union nor by the United States.

PAPANDREOU'S SON SEES WITHDRAWAL FROM NATO

NC241818 Paris AFP in English 1805 GMT 24 Oct 81

[Text] Madrid, 24 Oct (AFP) -- Yeoryios Papandreou, son of socialist Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou, reaffirmed today his party's decision to withdraw Greece from the Atlantic alliance and submit its membership in the European Economic Community to a referendum. Mr Papandreou made the statement in an address to the (29th) congress of the Spanish Socialist Workers Party, which had invited him to speak. The congress ended hours ahead of schedule today with the re-election of most of the officers who will take the party into the next legislative elections, set for March 1983 or later.

The only substitution was a woman, deputy Carmen Carcia Bloise, [words indistinct] in the party heirarchy behind Secretary-General Felipe Gonzalez and under secretary Alfonso Guerra. Mr Mugica, who was responsible for military and defense affairs, retains his seat on the new 24-member Executive Committee.

PASOK OFFICIAL ON POLICY TOWARD NATO, U.S. BASES

PM270913 Paris AN-NAHAR AL-'ARABI WA AD-DUWALI in Arabic 26 Oct-1 Nov 81 pp 6-7

['Ali Hamadah report: "Is the Socialists' Victory Sufficient for Athens To Withdraw From Europe? Greece: The French Way... Modified; PASOK Tells AN-NAHAR AL-'ARABI WA AD-DUWALI: 'We Shall Upgrade the Liberation Organization's Diplomatic Representation'"]

[Excerpt] Athens -- The Repercussions

What will be the international repercussions of the Greek socialists' victory?

(Vasili Konstantinias), official in charge of foreign affairs in PASOK [Panhellenic Socialist Movement], told AN-NAHAR AL-'ARABI WA AD-DUWALI that Greece must withdraw from NATO's military wing but remain in its political wing, just as France has done, because the alliance has not defended Greece's eastern border and because it (particularly the Americans) played a basic role in the coup which brought the colonels to power in 1967.

Regarding the future of the U.S. bases, he said: "The U.S. forces have nothing to do with the Atlantic alliance.

We divide the subject into two parts:

"1 -- NATO bases will be closed and negotiations held on U.S. bases in order to reach agreement on a timetable for the final withdrawal and the closure of the four major bases. This depends on the international situation in the area and the U.S. preparations."

What about the Common Market?

The PASOK foreign affairs chief replied: "The situation is clear. We want to withdraw on the basis of a referendum that is to be held in this connection. However, President Karamanlis alone has the right to call such a referendum. Therefore, if we are compelled, we shall adopt a hardline stance and, if necessary, refuse to abide by decisions and refer to the market's court in Strasbourg."

Expressing his opinion on the Army's reaction to the socialists' attainment of power, he said: "There is no problem with the army so far, despite the fact that a number of officers do not share our view on withdrawal from the Atlantic alliance and the closure of the U.S. bases."

Does he expect a military coup? He replied: "No coup at the present time. The army is split, and for this reason there is no danger of a coup. Many in the army opposed the former rightist regime."

He described the relationship with the PLO as "very good; and we shall seek to upgrade the Palestinian representation from a mere information office to a diplomatic office and probably an embassy."

SECRETARIES GENERAL OF MINISTRIES ANNOUNCED

NC262134 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1930 GMT 26 Oct 81

[Text] Following relevant proposals by the responsible ministers, Prime Minister Papandreou has decided on the appointment of secretaries general for the ministries. In this connection, Minister to the Prime Minister's Office Koutsoyiorgas has announced that following the ministers' and deputy ministers' assumption of their duties, the second step will have been taken concerning the selection and appointment of secretaries general, who will be the administrative superiors of the ministries, as government functionaries.

Specifically, the following have been appointed secretaries general of ministries:

Ministry of Coordination:	Panayiotis Roumeliotis, economist
Ministry of Interior:	Athanasios Siouras, director of the Athens Mayor's Office
Ministry of Industry:	Dhionisis Polikhronopoulos, electrical engineer, chairman of the Association of DEI [Public Power Corporation] Engineers
Ministry of Education:	Dhimitris Rokos, professor at Thessaloniki University, agriculturist, surveyor, vice chairman of the Greek Technical Chamber
Ministry of Agriculture:	Khristos Papathanasiou, economist
Ministry of Commerce:	Levteris Kiosklis, lawyer, former deputy
Ministry of Public Order:	Panayiotis Anagnostopoulos, retired officer
Ministry of Justice:	Yiorgos Asimakopoulos, lawyer
Ministry of Merchant Marine:	Theodhoros Kokinos, economist
Ministry of Public Works:	Kostas Yitonas, engineer, member of the administrative committee of the Greek Technical Chamber
Ministry of Communications:	Akhilleas Rousopoulos, engineer
Ministry of Town Planning, Housing and Environment:	Yiannis Kalandidhis, architectural engineer
Ministry of Social Services:	Yiannis Ioakim, doctor
Ministry of Culture and Sciences:	Mikhalis Dhoris, architectural engineer, chairman of the Association of Architects

Ministry of Labor:	Kostas Papanayiotou, lawyer, member of the administrative council of the Athens Lawyers' Association
Ministry of Northern Greece:	Merkourios Kiratsous, lawyer, former deputy
Secretary General for Athletic Affairs:	Kimonas Koulouris, economist

PRESENTATION OF 1982 STATE BUDGET DELAYED

NC262145 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1930 GMT 26 Oct 81

[Text] Minister of Finance Dhrettakis announced today that the submission of the state budget for 1982 has been postponed until the first 3 months of next year. According to the constitution, the budget should be submitted to the Chamber before the end of November. The minister said that the postponement of the submission was decided in order to examine fiscal policy. The constitution allows the minister the right of postponement. In any case, Dhrettakis made it clear that he will not exhaust the 4-month extension envisaged by the constitution and that he will submit the budget to the Chamber before that.

TURKISH LEADERS SEND CONGRATULATORY CABLES

NC222120 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1930 GMT 22 Oct 81

[Text] Turkish Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu today sent a congratulatory telegram to Prime Minister Papandreou. Turkish Foreign Minister Turkmen also sent a congratulatory telegram to his Greek counterpart, Kharalambopoulos.

CPSU, GDR CONGRATULATE KKE ON ELECTION VICTORY

NC250717 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 0500 GMT 25 Oct 81

[Text] Soviet Ambassador to Athens Kaboshkin visited KKE Secretary General Florakis and expressed the congratulations of the CPSU Central Committee on the victory of the democratic forces in last Sunday's election.

Florakis was also visited by GDR Ambassador Kubbe who expressed the congratulations of GDR leader Honecker on the KKE successes in the parliamentary election.

AVEROF WILL NOT WITHDRAW FROM POLITICS

NC251830 Athens AKROPOLIS in Greek 25 Oct 81 p 1

[Text] Mr Evangelos Averof does not intend to withdraw from politics or to suspend his political activities.

Averof stated this yesterday following reports that by doing so he would be expressing in a way his personal disagreement over policy matters of the New Democracy. Moreover, it was said that the reports on his withdrawal were supported by Mr Averof's absence from the conference of the New Democracy parliamentary group held the day before yesterday.

In his statement, Mr Averof said: "I did not, and I do not want to make any comment on the reasons for my absence from yesterday's meeting of the New Democracy parliamentary group.

"However, some circles have spread the rumor -- without even going to the trouble of asking me -- that I did not go to the meeting because of sickness or most probably because I am withdrawing from politics. Thus, I am compelled to state that if all these rumors are what some circles have been hoping for, they neither correspond to my intentions nor to the wishes -- I think -- of the vast majority of our supporters."

TURKMEN INTERVIEWED ON FOREIGN POLICY ISSUES

NC270803 Istanbul CUMHURIYET in Turkish 24 Oct 81 pp 1, 9

[Interview with Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen by CUMHURIYET correspondent Sedat Ergin in Ankara -- date not given]

[Text] Question: You have stated that recent developments have enhanced the importance of Turkey. Will you please expand on this? What developments are you referring to?

Answer: I was referring to developments particularly in the Middle East and in Europe. I have no doubt at all that in the light of all these developments Turkey's importance is better appreciated. This is what I wanted to say.

Question: Are you expressing this as your own observation?

Answer: Yes, I am.

Question: If we were to delve deeper into these developments, what are the effects of As-Sadat's death on the region? How will As-Sadat's death affect Turkey within the same framework?

Answer: Generally speaking, developments in Egypt constitute an important element in the evaluations being made on the subject of the Middle East. All these developments include the situation in Afghanistan and the Iraqi-Iranian conflict as well as happenings in Egypt and Lebanon. All this shows how sensitive a region the Middle East is. I wished to refer to developments in a general sense.

Question: What would you say if you were to dwell specifically on As-Sadat's death?

Answer: I believe it is still too early to reach a conclusion as to what changes As-Sadat's death will bring about. Naturally from our point of view the most important thing is that we would like to see a stable state in Egypt. As a matter of fact, our relations with Egypt demand that we express such wishes. What Egypt's attitude will be in the Middle East is a question everybody asks. But there again, we should not rush into an answer to this question either. I believe countries approaching this situation wisely are waiting for this attitude to mature.

Question: In what direction are Turkish-French relations moving? The attitude of the French Government following the raid on our Paris embassy caused cautious optimism. But from French Defense Minister Hernu's statement and what French Premier Mauroy said to the Turkish ambassador, relations appear to be plunging into uncertainty again. What are your views?

Answer: It is undeniable that there are some serious problems between Turkey and France. You have pointed to certain developments. I would like to dwell on one of them. The conversation the French premier had with our ambassador in Paris has been reported erroneously in the press. The French premier did not say such a thing. However, the news in the press created the impression that he spoke to our ambassador in those words.

Question: What words?

Answer: Words that indicated that France does not accept the Turkish thesis on the Armenians. According to reports we have received, the French premier did not say such a thing. But the report given to AFP later has created this impression.

Naturally, this is a serious matter. For this reason our relations are in great distress. We have made the necessary representations to the French Government for improvement of the situation. We have urged them to take serious measures, to punish the perpetrators of these attacks on our diplomats and to denounce these incidents openly without adding anything not connected with these denunciations. As you know, the statement issued by the French Government after the attack on our Paris consulate-general was not at all satisfactory. We have thus far exerted every possible effort toward furthering our relations with France in the way that befits two allied countries and a state within the EEC. From now on France will also have to exert similar efforts.

Question: The $700 million aid the United States is to extend to Turkey during fiscal year 1982 has been reduced to $450 million as a result of restrictions imposed by the Congress during a general foreign aid debate. What are the developments in this respect?

Answer: Unfortunately this is a negative development. The Congress failed to reach a decision on the amount of aid to be extended in 1982, so it was decided that the aid should be kept at the level of previous aid. However, this is not a final decision. The Reagan administration is making efforts to have this altered. We hope these efforts will produce positive results as soon as possible.

Question: Turkey seizes every opportunity to express its anxiety over the continuation of the arms race. This fact is accented in speeches. But in some of these speeches, it is stated that the Soviet Union is superior to the United States in arms. Isn't this a contrast in Turkish foreign policy?

Answer: No. No contrast is involved. We believe in the need for disarmament. It is impossible for us to support a development which would prejudice the East-West balance because we believe substantial disarmament is essential as an assurance for world peace, as it would also enable more resources to be channeled to development. The West has announced its readiness for talks. But in doing so, it has also stressed the need to go ahead with what is needed to maintain the military balance.

Question: Isn't the arms race being incited on grounds that what is being done is necessitated by the requirements of a military balance? Doesn't this lead to mutual escalation?

Answer: There can be no unbalanced disarmament. The aim of disarmament is to reduce the present balance of power to the minimum. For this purpose talks are held. But under the present conditions, whatever is necessary for this equilibrium should be done. The minimum equilibrium can only be achieved through mutual agreement.

Question: A short time ago Syria announced that it had extended its territorial waters to 35 miles. How have we received this? Are contacts being made with Syria in this respect?

Answer: No result can be obtained from unilaterally extending territorial waters. We are in touch with Syria.

Question: How do you view Bulgarian head of state Todor Zhivkov's call that the Balkans should be turned into a nuclear-free zone?

Answer: I do not think this is a new idea. I believe this should be evaluated within the framework of the East-West equilibrium. No separate status can be thought of in a region where there are both NATO and Warsaw Pact members.

ITALY ASKED TO INCREASE SECURITY FOR DIPLOMATS

TA261721 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 26 Oct 81

[Excerpts] The Italian Foreign Ministry protocol chief, Ambassador (Guigi), telephoned the Turkish ambassador in Rome, Ambassador Hamit Batu, this morning and conveyed his ministry's regrets over the shooting of the Turkish diplomat. Ambassador (Guigi) assured Ambassador Batu that the investigation into incident would be thorough.

Ambassador Batu has made a representation to the Italian Foreign Ministry. He called on the Italian Government to capture the attackers as soon as possible and to increase security measures around Turkish diplomats and officials in Italy.

The Italian ambassador in Ankara, Bartolomeo Attolico, visited Foreign Ministry Secretary General Kamuran Gurun this afternoon and expressed the Italian Government's regrets over the attack against Gokberk Ergenekon. According to a statement by the Foreign Ministry information directorate general, Ambassador Bartolomeo expressed the Italian Government's determination to fight terrorism. He said all means were being resorted to in order to capture the person who had shot Gokberk.

COMMERCE MINISTER CONCLUDES CONTACTS IN IRAQ

TA222101 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 2000 GMT 22 Oct 81

[Text] Commerce Minister Kemal Canturk, who is on an official visit in Iraq, has concluded his contacts. Canturk today met with the ministers of communications and transport, public works and housing and irrigation. A statement issued by the Foreign Ministry information directorate general says the development of economic and commercial relations between the two countries was discussed at the meetings. Canturk and the delegation accompanying him will return to Turkey tomorrow.

Returns 23 Oct

TA231656 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1650 GMT 23 Oct 81

[Text] Ankara, 23 Oct (AA) -- Minister of Commerce Kemal Canturk returned here today from Baghdad where he conferred with Iraq's minister of trade on expanding trade relations between the two countries.

BAYULKEN RETURNS FROM GLENEAGLES NATO MEETING

TA231728 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 23 Oct 81

[Text] National Defense Minister Haluk Bayulken returned home today after participating in the NATO Nuclear Planning Group's ministerial meeting in Scotland. In a statement at Yesilkoy Airport, Bayulken said issues concerning nuclear arms and arms limitation were discussed during the meeting. He added that the nuclear power of NATO and the Warsaw Pact were taken up in this connection. NATO, Bayulken said, is continuing to pursue a policy of having a deterrent force at hand. He added: We also believe the existence of such a deterrent force and its credibility are necessary. Bayulken said that during the talks he met with the defense ministers of the United States, the FRG, Britain, Norway, Belgium and Italy for talks on Turkey's defense needs.

EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT FREEZES LOANS OVER PARTY BAN

TA240741 (Clandestine) Our Radio in Turkish to Turkey 0700 GMT 24 Oct 81

[Text] The European Parliament budget committee has frozen loans to be extended to Turkey. European economic circles have reacted against the abolishment of political parties by the military regime in Turkey. Following the decision made the European Parliament economic cooperation committee, the budget committee has also decided to freeze the loans envisaged for Turkey during the coming period.

A motion submitted by parliamentarian (Dunkirt) was adopted unanimously. The reasons expressed for freezing the loans to Turkey are the abolishment of political parties in Turkey and the fact that promises to restore true democracy have not been fulfilled. Meanwhile, the suspension of Turkey's membership in the European Parliament and the Council of Europe will be included on the agenda of the general council meetings of these establishments to be held in January.

TURKISH CYPRIOT DELEGATION ARRIVES FOR TALKS

TA222041 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 2000 GMT 22 Oct 81

[Text] A six-man delegation from the parliament of the Turkish Federated State of Cyprus has arrived in Turkey to observe the first meeting of the Consultative Assembly to be held tomorrow. In a statement at Yesilkoy Airport, the head of the delegation and president of the Turkish Cypriot Legislative Assembly, Nejat Konuk, said they will also hold talks on various problems of the federated state.

PAPER CALLS FOR PATIENCE ON CYPRUS ISSUE

NC270825 Istanbul MILLIYET in Turkish 24 Oct 81 p 1

["Today" column by Mehmet Barlas: "Patience and Cyprus"]

[Excerpts] A German adage says "patience is a bitter plant, but its fruit is very sweet." When we apply this to politics, we may say "politics is a marathon, not a speed race." Because many tests requiring patience have accumulated for Turkey, we believe we have to bend on this point once again. Every step we take, both in our internal as well as in our external policies, has to be based on patience.

For instance, we naturally have no cause to rejoice over the fact that Papandreou, who made such statements and whose election manifesto contains such anti-Turkey views, is now in power in Greece. However, we should not allow ourselves to be carried away by anger and hasty reaction. There is a Cyprus issue at stake. The United Nations as well as all the parties and institutions concerned have a duty to resolve this issue through intercommunal negotiations. This issue will be resolved by the Turkish and Greek Cypriot communities, which will have to seek ways and means of establishing "an independent state based on the principle of bicommunality."

We are prepared to be patient, as we were in the past, while this search lasts. We observed in the past that the side that lost patience in Cyprus always lost. Had brigand Sampson not carried out a coup in 1974 on orders from Athens, Cyprus would still have its old status now. But what is done is done. The lives and properties of 150,000 Turkish Cypriots are secure. Now is the time to place this security under an international legal status.

What happens if, wrongly encouraged by Papandreou's attitude, the Greek Cypriot community attempts to pull the "intercommunal talks" off their present basis?

Let us state categorically: It is impossible for the Turkish Cypriot community to accept the conversion of Cyprus into a Palestine. The solution which has to be found lies in the agreement of both communities possessing their own territory. Neither the municipal nor the general elections in Greece can alter this reality.

Effect of PASOK Victory

NC260742 Istanbul HURRIYET in Turkish 21 Oct 81 pp 1, 13

[Ziya Akcapar report]

[Text] Lefkosa [Nicosia] (HURRIYET) -- Following the announcement that Kiprianou would meet Greece's new leader, Andreas Papandreou, on Friday, the Greek Cypriot Council of Ministers met and discussed the Waldheim formula which aims at finding a peaceful solution to the Cyprus dispute. It is reported that the Greek Cypriot Council of Ministers expressed disapproval of this formula and that, despite Foreign Minister Rolandhis' opposition, it has decided to adopt Papandreou's views on Cyprus as "national policy."

Papandreou, on the other hand, has sent Greek Cypriot leaders a message telling them that he would not accept any form of settlement which would originate from the United States through Waldheim's mediation and which would envisage the division of sovereignty in Cyprus.

Following the abandonment of the official Greek policy line after Papandreou's election victory, the UN Secretariat has adopted a strange attitude. It is now trying to water down its views on such matters as a presidential system based on rotation, federal council and federal courts, which had been accepted by the Turkish Cypriot side, in order to make them acceptable to the Greek Cypriot side.

This new approach, which is based on the assumption the Turkish Cypriot side can make further concessions to please Kiprianou and Papandreou and that the Turkish side is docile, is being watched with resentment by the TFSC leaders.

On the other hand, Greek Cypriot leader Kiprianou is leaving for Athens tomorrow to attend his historic meeting with Papandreou on Friday -- a meeting which is bound to usher in a new era in Cyprus.

TCP MESSAGE TO GREEK COMMUNISTS ON ELECTIONS

TA240743 (Clandestine) Our Radio in Turkish to Turkey 0700 GMT 24 Oct 81

[Message by Turkish Communist Party Central Committee Secretary General Bilen to Central Committee of the Communist Party of Greece]

[Text] Dear comrades: On behalf of the Turkish communists and the working class, the Turkish Communist Party [TCP] Central Committee sincerely congratulates the brotherly Communist Party of Greece [KKE] on its success in the recent parliamentary elections and extends its revolutionary struggle greetings. The results of the recent parliamentary elections in Greece are the success of the struggle being waged for many years by the Greek people for national independence, democracy and a better living.

Through its determined activities and unyielding policy, the KKE has greatly contributed to this success. It has increased its influence on the masses and the respect of the masses, forever pursuing the principles of proletarian internationalism. We Turkish communists are very proud of this fact. The TCP and the KKE are linked with ever-increasing ties based on Marxism-Leninism and proletarian internationalism. We wish you many more successes in our joint struggle for peace and socialism.

With our communist greetings. [signed] TCP Central Committee Secretary General I. Bilen, 22 October 1981.

SENIOR FOREIGN MILITARY OFFICERS VISITING COUNTRY

Pakistani General

TA221657 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 22 Oct 81

[Text] The deputy commander of the Pakistani ground forces, Gen (Saud Khan), is continuing his contacts in Ankara. He visited the ground forces headquarters today. General (Saud Khan), who was received in a military ceremony there, later met with the ground forces commander, Gen Nurettin Ersin. He also called on air force commander Gen Tahsin Sahinkaya and naval forces commander Adm Nejat Tumer. The visiting general will leave Turkey on 24 October.

Malaysian Commander

TA261630 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1525 GMT 26 Oct 81

[Text] Ankara, 26 Oct (AA) -- Malaysian ground forces commander, Gen Tan Sri Dato Zain Hashem, arrived in Ankara today for a week-long official visit at the invitation of his Turkish counterpart, Gen Nurettin Ersin. During his stay in Ankara, the Malaysian commander will be received by head of state Gen Kenan Evren and attend ceremonies on 29 October (58th anniversary of the Turkish Republic).

MILITARY COMMAND BANS PUBLICATION OF TERCUMAN

TA261515 Ankara ANATOLIA in Turkish 1510 GMT 26 Oct 81

[Text] Istanbul, 26 Oct (AA) -- The 1st Army and Martial Law Command has banned the publication and distribution of the daily TERCUMAN as of tomorrow. It has been learned that the decision was made following an article which appeared in the paper.

NATIONWIDE AIR DEFENSE EXERCISES 'SUCCESSFUL'

TA261810 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 26 Oct 81

[Text] Air defense exercises were held throughout the country today, including the international waters and airspace of the Black Sea, the Aegean Sea and the Mediterranean. The annual air defense exercises were held jointly with air observation exercises this year. According to the General Staff secretariat general, the air defense exercises were codenamed "Populist Ataturk" and the air observation and warning exercises "The Country Is United" from Ataturk's slogans.

Air force aircraft, radar units, missiles and antiaircraft weapons, navy ships and units from the ground and gendarmerie forces and the Interior Ministry were used in the exercises. The exercises tested the cooperation, coordination and reactions among the air defense weapons systems as well as air observation and reporting systems. It was announced that the exercises were successful.

OZAL NOTES FAVORABLE 1981 EXPORT FIGURES

TA241705 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 24 Oct 81

[Excerpt] Deputy Prime Minister Turgut Ozal has said that exports during the first 9 months of this year are equal to the total exports of last year. In a speech at the foundation ceremony of the organized industrial zone in Ankara's Sincan quarter, Ozal noted that the exports during September increased by 70 percent compared to the same period last year. He announced that total exports for 1981 are expected to reach a figure between $4.2 billion and $4.5 billion.

Explaining that the small- and medium-sized industries play an important role in the development of the country, Ozal noted that the organized industrial zones cannot constitute places of settlement for big industry.

CONSTRUCTION OF ATATURK DAM BEGINS IN URFA

TA211134 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 21 Oct 81

[Excerpt] The construction of the Ataturk Dam, which will be the largest in Turkey, has been started by head of state Gen Kenan Evren. Speaking at a ceremony marking the beginning of the dam's construction, which will generate 8.1 billion kwh of electricity annually and irrigate a region of 7.3 million dunams, General Evren said it has become necessary to build nuclear power stations in Turkey.

General Evren, who has been touring southeastern Anatolia for the last 2 days, left Diyarbakir this morning for the construction site near Urfa's Bozova district. Speaking at a ceremony at the site, the state hydraulic affairs director, Sabahattin Sayin, gave technical information on the Ataturk Dam. According to Sayin, the dam, which will be the world's third largest and the biggest in Turkey from the viewpoint of volume, will be used for generating electricity and for irrigation. When the 180-meter-high dam becomes operational, some 7.3 million dunams in the plains of Haran, Ceylanpinar, Hilvan and Bozova will be irrigated. Some 8.1 billion kwh of electricity will be generated annually by the dam.

Also speaking at the ceremony, Energy and National Resources Minister Serbulent Bingol said the southeastern Anatolia project, of which the Ataturk Dam is a part, will change the structure of Turkey. Bingol added that with the realization of this project some 18 million dunams will be irrigated. He noted that the southeastern Anatolia project will also provide work for some 3 million people. Pointing out that with this project a total of 22 billion kwh of energy will be generated, Bingol said this amount is equal to the amount of energy generated in Turkey in 1980. He concluded by saying that known energy sources in Turkey will not be sufficient to supply Turkey's energy needs in the year 2000 and that therefore it is necessary to build nuclear power stations.

General Evren recalled that one of the world's major dams is now being constructed through the efforts of Turkish contractors, engineers and workers and added that the Turkish nation is proud of this fact. Evren requested that the dam be concluded on time as befits the name of Ataturk. Noting that it is necessary to build nuclear power stations if Turkey is not to suffer from an energy shortage in the future, Evren added that citizens should disregard those opposed to nuclear power stations. Evren said: Even if we start preparations for nuclear power stations now, we will not complete them until 2000.

General Evren expressed his thanks to those who prepared the Ataturk Dam project and to those working at the site and hoped that the dam will be valuable to the region's people. The construction of the dam was started later by Evren. Evren, the military commanders, the prime minister and some ministers later inspected the Urfa irrigation tunnel, which is under construction.

CONSULTATIVE ASSEMBLY ELECTS IRMAK SPEAKER

TA271335 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1330 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Text] Ankara, 27 Oct (AA) -- Sadi Irmak is elected as the speaker of the Consultative Assembly today, receiving 67 votes of the 158 cast in the second tour. Irmak, an old politician, one time served as the prime minister and is the oldest member of the assembly.

BRIEFS

CIGARETTES TO YUGOSLAVIA -- Turkey will export to Yugoslavia some 10,000 kg of Samsun brand cigarettes. It is planned to export cigarettes to various countries. [Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 22 Oct 81 TA]

AUSTRIA

MILITARY VEHICLE PLANT TO BE BUILT FOR NIGERIA

AU271013 Vienna VOLKSSTIMME in German 25 Oct 81 p 4

[Text] Lagos -- Nigeria has offered the Steyr-Daimler-Puch automotive company a $60 million contract for an assembling plant for Austrian armored personnel carriers in Nigeria. According to a statement released by the Nigerian Defense Ministry on Saturday, this contract is part of a large-scale "modernization plan for the Nigerian armed forces."

The contract with Steyr-Daimler-Puch envisages the building of an assembling plant in Nigeria to be completed by 1983. This plant is to turn out 200 armored personnel carriers and 500 jeeps annually.

However, it is also conceivable that the Steyr-Daimler-Puch managers are in this way seeking to transfer part of the Austrian armament production to a foreign country to facilitate arms deals with third countries.

BRIEFS

BLOC REFUGEES -- According to an Interior Ministry spokesman, 21,957 persons requested political asylum in Austria in the period 1 January to 30 September 1981, more than twice as many as during the whole of 1980. On 1 October, 19,847 asylum seekers were registered at the Interior Ministry, including 15,442 Poles. Since the refugee camps are completely overcrowded, 14,941 asylum seekers had to be accomodated in small hotels. Austria expects to spend about 500 million schillings this year for refugee care as against 175 million schillings in 1980. [Vienna WIENER ZEITUNG in German 18 Oct 81 p 2 AU]

HEROIN DEALERS -- On 14 October detectives of the narcotics department arrested at Schwechat Airport 34-year-old Egyptian engineer (Ahmed Batavy Dowes) who carried on his person 100 grams of pure heroin. A second Egyptian, 35-year-old (Goma Muhammad Ahmed Talkhan), was arrested in (Dowes') Vienna hotel room while portioning heroin. (Dowes) lives in Sofia, (Talkhan) in Bucharest. [Vienna KURIER in German 17 Oct 81 p 21 AU]

SPAIN

PSOE CONGRESS REELECTS FELIPE GONZALEZ AS LEADER.

LD242222 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 1800 GMT 24 Oct 81

[Text] The Spanish Socialist Workers' Party [PSOE] 29th congress ended just over an hour ago with the reelection of Felipe Gonzalez as secretary general. There are hardly any changes in the new executive. The most important posts are occupied by the following people: Ramon Rubial, president; Felipe Gonzalez, secretary general; Alfonso Guerra, deputy secretary general; Carmen Garcia Bloise [secretary for] organization; Emilio Alonso [secretary for] administration; Joaquin Almunia [secretary for] studies; Cirizco De Vicente, [secretary for] social policy; Jose Maria Marevall, [secretary for] culture; Guillermo Galeota, [secretary for] press and propaganda.

BRIEFS

BASQUE TERRORISTS -- Spain's anti-terrorist command announced today that it has smashed two support groups of the Basque separatist organization ETA-military following a round-up in the Basque country and Madrid last week. The command said an "information commando" and a "support group" had been broken up and eight presumed ETA-military activists were arrested in Escoriaza and Arechava Leta,two towns in the province of Guipuzcoa, bordering France. [Text] [Paris AFP in English 2015 GMT 25 Oct 81 NC]

FBIS DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 208 28 October 1981

CONTENTS

BENELUX

NETHERLANDS

PVDA Chairman Defends Government Withdrawal [DE VOLKSKRANT 23 Oct] F 1
Common Outlook of Scandilux Social Democrats Noted [DE VOLKSKRANT 20 Oct] F 1
DE VOLKSKRANT: U.S. Guarantee 'Not Worth a Cent' [22 Oct] F 2

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Apel 'Convinced' Peace Movement Helped by USSR J 1
Dialogue With Youth J 1
Genscher Interviewed on Bonn Budget Talks J 1
Schmidt, Lazar Hold Talks, Pledge Cooperation J 2
Paper Approves Extension of Army Service Time [FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE 28 Oct] J 2
Peace Demonstrations Serve Moscow's Interests [FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE 26 Oct] J 3
Press Comments on European Defense, Reagan Remark J 3
Former NATO Commander Defends [DIE WELT 21 Oct] J 3
'Limited' Nuclear War Criticized [FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE 23 Oct] J 4
DER SPIEGEL Critical of Weinberger [26 Oct] J 6

FRANCE

New Caledonian Group Claims Bomb Responsibility K 1
Cheysson Rules Out Sending Troops to Chad K 1
Assembly Closes Loophole in Nationalization Plan K 2
Jospin Meets With North Korean Delegation [KCNA] K 2

ITALY & THE VATICAN

PLO Seeks To Repair Relations With Government L 1
Papers Speculate About U.S. Envoy's Recall L 2
LA REPUBBLICA Comments on Reagan's 'Gaffe' [21 Oct] L 3
Foreign Ministry Delegation Visits Qatar [cross-reference] L 4

SPAIN

Debate Begins in Parliament on Entry Into NATO N 1
Foreign, Defense Ministers in Favor N 1
Debate Begins on Referendum N 1
Calvo-Sotelo Rejects Referendum N 1
Congress Rejects Referendum N 2
Prime Minister Advocates Joining NATO N 2
Protest Action, Incidents in Basque Region N 3
Briefs: Radio-Television Director N 3

NORDIC AFFAIRS

FINLAND

Prime Minister Views National Policy After Kekkonen P 1
Party Leaders' Thoughts P 2

SWEDEN

Soviet Submarine Runs Aground on South Coast P 3

CYPRUS

Kiprianou Returns From Athens, Issues Statement R 1
Additional Comments R 1
Foreign Ministry on Missing Persons Issue R 1
U.S. Interest Applauded R 2
Rolandhis Rome Interview on Cyprus Issue [ANSA] R 2
Papaioannou on Waldheim Proposals, Elections R 3

GREECE

Papandreou Gives Interview on Cyprus Issue S 1
Karamanlis Stresses Need for Unity, Maturity S 2
Papandreou National Anniversary Address S 3
Kiprianou Leaves Athens for Home 27 Oct S 3

TURKEY

Ulusu Gives Views on Aegean, NATO Issues T 1
Ulusu Addresses Foreign Journalists at Meeting T 1
Malaysian General Concludes Talks in Ankara T 2
TERCUMAN Criticizes Abolition of Parties [25 Oct] T 2

NETHERLANDS

PVDA CHAIRMAN DEFENDS GOVERNMENT WITHDRAWAL

PM261655 Amsterdam DE VOLKSKRANT in Dutch 23 Oct 81 p 3

[Excerpts] The Hague -- "It was right that our ministers had the political courage to say 'no' to a proposal which did insufficient justice to the policy foundations contained in the government accord." With this statement Labor Party [PVDA] Chairman Max Van der Berg set the tone for the PVDA congress which began in The Hague on Thursday [22 October] and will end on Saturday [24 October] with a speech by outgoing Social Affairs and Employment Minister den Uyl.

In his opening speech Max Van der Berg put much emphasis on the problem of nuclear arms: "The 1979 dual decision comprised on the one hand a decision for negotiations, of which we are in favor, and on the other a decision for rearmament, which we oppose. We are not only opposed to this for The Netherlands' sake. Our opposition covers 572 missiles in the whole of Europe. We will soon be demonstrating against them. I hope that [Defense Minister] Van Mierlo will get it into his head that an outgoing minister may perhaps think that he speaks for a majority in parliament... But he can never assume responsibility for the rearmament section of the NATO 1979 decision in the name of an outgoing cabinet, in which the PVDA sits, without there being even stronger opposition to the foundations of that decision and even more to its consequences -- namely the continued arms race."

The split in the cabinet did not arise over the issue of security policy, but in the field of social and economic policy. Van der Berg called for the preservation of the government accord, in the sense that policies to reduce the budget shortfall and to stabilize the tax burden should be allowed to remain, while a recognizable employment policy should come from the informateurs' cabinet patching attempt. In this context he left no doubts about his defense of Den Uyl's position. "I say this in all clarity. The attacks on Den Uyl's policy are directed against the man who is probably the clearest exponent of the policies for which the PVDA stands and are in fact directed at our desire to make the economy governable, in opposition to all the consolidated positions of power."

COMMON OUTLOOK OF SCANDILUX SOCIAL DEMOCRATS NOTED

PM271729 Amsterdam DE VOLKSKRANT in Dutch 20 Oct 81 p 9

[Text] The Hague -- The West German SPD is inclining toward a postponement of the decision to deploy the new medium-range nuclear missiles on West German soil. This became apparent yesterday at a meeting of "Scandilux," a group of social democratic parties from the smaller European NATO nations. The SPD and the British Labor Party were present as observers.

A striking feature of the 2-day meeting of social democrats from Norway, Denmark and the Benelux countries was that all the participants and observers had a positive attitude toward the demonstrations against nuclear arms modernization which will be held in the coming months in various countries. The recent peace demonstration seemed to have made an impression.

The Scandilux countries are opposed to the denunciation of the peace movement in West Europe and no longer assume that it principally only contains "pacifists and neutralists." They will no longer oppose demonstrations against the modernization and deployment of new nuclear weapons in Europe.

So far Scandilux has met five times to try to integrate national viewpoints with regard to peace and security as well as possible into a common approach by the smaller West European nations to the problems of East-West security. The social democrats from the NATO nations are agreed that efforts must be made to realize the so-called zero option in which the modernization of medium-range nuclear weapons in Europe on both sides of the Iron Curtain would be avoided.

In this connection the West German SPD plays a key role. The SPD cannot be a member of Scandilux, but as West Germany's governing party it has an influence on the policy objectives of West European socialist parties. At present the SPD not only seems to be inclining toward the zero option as far as the cruise and Pershing II missiles are concerned but is also willing to play a supporting role in the demonstrations against nuclear arms modernization in West Europe to be held soon in Belgium and the Netherlands.

In addition the SPD also seems to be taking as its point of departure that in the NATO dual decision of December 1979 (agreements on the production and deployment of cruise and Pershing II missiles and on negotiations between the Soviet Union and the United States about these "Eurostrategic" arms) too much emphasis is placed on the importance of cruise missiles. In the SPD's view too little has come of the decision about negotiations as yet.

The result of this assessment is that it may be expected that the SPD congress in April next year will decide to postpone until 1983 the decision whether the FRG will or will not agree to the deployment of modernized medium-range nuclear weapons system which could reach targets in the Soviet Union itself.

DE VOLKSKRANT: U.S. GUARANTEE 'NOT WORTH A CENT'

PM271641 Amsterdam DE VOLKSKRANT in Dutch 22 Oct 81 p 3

[Editorial: "Way of Thinking"]

[Text] It was France's President de Gaulle who once doubted whether the U.S. President would risk a Russian nuclear attack on the United States -- cost: 100 million dead -- in defense of West Europe. With his statement that in a limited nuclear war the United States and the Soviet Union could keep out of harm's way Reagan was on the verge of saying that De Gaulle was completely right. In other words -- the U.S. guarantee for West European security would not be worth a cent.

Reagan has hastened to make good his blunder by once again confirming U.S. support for West Europe. But it is questionable whether he has limited the damage by doing so. The U.S. President is the man -- and it is he alone -- who has the last word on whether in the event of war nuclear arms will be used by the West. In such a case men with as careless a way of thinking as President Reagan has demonstrated would be a catastrophe. At any rate Reagan has made De Gaulle's doubts considerably more realistic. At the same time he has posed unnecessary problems for an alliance which is already having trouble preserving its cohesion.

A small glimmer of light is that the NATO defense ministers have shown a certain moderation in their final communique at Gleneagles. The mandate from NATO with which the Americans will begin negotiations on the so-called Eurostrategic nuclear arms with the Soviet Union 30 November now has the objective of limiting this type of weapon to "the lowest possible level." Even the so-called zero option -- halting the buildup of medium-range nuclear weapons in East and West -- has been included in the NATO communique as an ideal. Certainly, one or two things have been included in the communique to take the wind out of the sails of the domestic opposition in various NATO countries. But the thought also seems to be surfacing that busily rearming away is not the right solution to giving Europe greater security and stability. At least the tone of the NATO communique is a counterbalance to Reagan's rearmament thinking.

APEL 'CONVINCED' PEACE MOVEMENT HELPED BY USSR

LD271952 Hamburg DPA in German 1822 GMT 27 Oct 81

["Text" of reply by Defense Minister Hans Apel to a question from "a general": "Is the peace movement controlled from Moscow?" Issued by the Federal Defense Ministry on 27 October]

[Text] Bonn, 27 Oct (DPA) -- "I am convinced that the political information structure, and also the organizational infrastructure, receive funds from Moscow. I am also convinced that in the Kremlin they are following this with a certain amount of satisfaction. But the success of this operation has not been made in Moscow. The fact that 250,000 people suddenly gather has nothing to do with Moscow, and the Muscovites must be told that they -- the people -- are just as much opposed to the Soviet arms buildup as to a possible deployment of Pershing and cruise missiles... [DPA ellipsis]

I have the impression that here it is a matter of a diffuse longing for peace, and also a sort of young people's urge for action... [DPA ellipsis] Moscow has a hand in it, but the problem for our society is not Moscow, but probably the inability of older and younger people to have a dialogue."

Dialogue With Youth

LD271640 Hamburg DPA in German 1450 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Excerpts] Ingolstadt, 27 Oct (DPA) -- Speaking at the 25th Bundeswehr commanding officers' meeting in Ingolstadt today, Apel called on the Bundeswehr commanding officers to display commitment and join in the peace debate of young people. The problems of young people and their concern for the future have to be taken most seriously. The current debate could determine future events in the Federal Republic. "The Muscovites are doing a great deal to contribute to the demonstrations in the various West European capitals being held simultaneously and with the same theme." Young people are showing a new awareness of life, the Bundeswehr generals must engage in a "fundamental debate" with young people which should not concentrate solely on military aspects.

Apel emphatically opposed a "verbal radicalism" toward Washington. The minister made it clear that the Bundeswehr could not be involved in further economy measures. "We have reached the end of our possibilities. An extension of military service -- there is talk of extending it from 15 to 18 months -- would not be decided in the current legislative term. [passage omitted]

GENSCHER INTERVIEWED ON BONN BUDGET TALKS

DW280957 Mainz ZDF Television Network in German 1800 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Reporter Rommerskirchen interview with Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher: date and place not given -- recorded]

[Text] [Question] The FDP seems more or less content with yesterday's budget decisions. Does that mark the change you mentioned last summer, or will even more have to happen?

[Answer] We are right in the middle of the change, that is, of adapting to an altered framework within which we must ensure our economy's ability to compete. It was, therefore, important for us that neither assuming more net credits nor a tax increase were planned.

[Question] You wanted to save more money, but of the approximately DM8 billion discussed yesterday, just DM1 billion would be the result of real savings. Will that suffice, or will other budget areas be burdened with the saving problems?

[Answer] Significant additional savings have been achieved. I believe that this further strengthened the consolidation effect.

[Question] Do you think that the entire package will be adopted by the Bundesrat? You talked this morning with Mr Kohl, and the land premiers will meet tomorrow.

[Answer] I am convinced that the Bundesrat will come up with other ideas which we will have to face. We have a common responsibility -- the government coalition has a majority in the Bundestag and the CDU/CSU in the Bundesrat.

SCHMIDT, LAZAR HOLD TALKS, PLEDGE COOPERATION

LD271642 Hamburg DPA in German 1556 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Text] Bonn, 27 Oct (DPA) -- Following a 2-hour exchange of political views, Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and Hungarian Premier Gyorgy Lazar jointly supported detente policy and confidence-building between East and West in Bonn today.

In the talk, which was held at the start of a 2-day visit to Germany by Lazar and in which Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher and Hungarian Foreign Trade Minister Peter Veress also took part, economic developments in Europe and bilateral relations between the two countries were discussed, in addition to East-West relations. A government spokesman described Lazar's visit as part of the necessary dialogue between East and West. Schmidt and Lazar welcomed the intensification of contacts between the great powers and also Leonid Brezhnev's forthcoming visit to Bonn. They approved the stabilization of the military balance at the lowest possible level. In this connection, the chancellor explained the German idea of a zero option, in which the deployment of new missiles would be superfluous. They both emphasized economic cooperation as an important factor in detente. Lazar and Schmidt stressed their belief that the satisfactory development of German-Hungarian relations would continue.

The Chancellor has invited his Hungarian guest to a festive dinner in a Bad Godesberg hotel this evening. After talks between Lazar and German industrialists and politicians in the Ruhr and in Bonn tomorrow, the visit will end on Thursday with a joint press conference in the federal chancellor's office.

PAPER APPROVES EXTENSION OF ARMY SERVICE TIME

DW281017 Frankfurt FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE in German 28 Oct 81 p 12

[Commentary signed Ein.: "Longer Service Time"]

[Text] The defense minister repeated what the inspector general had discussed the day before: extension of service time will be necessary. There will be problems in the middle of this decade when the generation from the time of low birth rates reaches draft age. Almost 50 percent of our 500,000 soldiers is made up of conscripts. Beginning in 1985 only an extension of military service time will make it possible to keep the brigades ready for action and at combat strength. Since the possible extension of service time calls for organizational and psychological preparations, it is a good thing that the minister has raised the issue now. His suggestion is a rejection regarding the so-called creation of Bundeswehr cadres. Some politicians have been peddling this idea, thus irritating the allies. Apel probably also approached the parties protectively. The danger exists that the possible extension of service time could become a subject of future elections campaigns. The matter should therefore be handled resolutely.

PEACE DEMONSTRATIONS SERVE MOSCOW'S INTERESTS

DW261327 Frankfurt FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE in German 26 Oct 81 p 1

[Text] Let us look at the so-called peace movement in West Europe from the angle of Soviet interests for a change. So far the wave could not have taken a more favorable course as far as Moscow is concerned. It is bound to be important to the Politburo for these actions to become a permanent movement. This seems to be coming true: After the Bonn rally on 10 October, there were similar rallies in London, Paris, Brussels and Rome over the weekend.

As far as the Soviet leaders are concerned, any capital in West Europe is welcome as a site for a peace rally, but they like some of them particularly. What is probably least important to them at the moment is the demonstration in Paris because there are no plans to deploy U.S. missiles in France. More can be gained in London because Great Britain plans to allow the stationing of cruise missiles. Belgium and The Netherlands, in turn, might seem to the Soviet Union as though they have been removed from the counterarmament front already. But this is not yet definite. Besides, from these two countries it is quite possible to exert some influence on the Federal Republic where the struggle over balance and security in Europe will be decided. Yet Bonn has tied acceptance of U.S. medium-range missiles to the condition that the FRG is not the only country on the cotinent where they will be deployed. Rome intends to join Bonn. If Moscow succeeds in foiling this, Western counterarming is finished. This is why the "peace manifestations" in Rome carries special weight for the Soviet Union.

The respective communist parties insure that the "peace movement" remains properly oriented. In Paris, communists were the organizers -- in Moscow's eyes perhaps a bit too conspicuously. In Rome it was the PCI which played the decisive role. The PCI is more distant from Moscow than the PCF, but in the East-West conflict it still often helps the Soviet Union. Thus, seen from the Soviet viewpoint, everything went well over this demonstration weekend. Many people around here are millified by the fact that the demonstrations in Paris and Rome were directed against Soviet missiles as well. But this does not cost Moscow a single political kopeck. This does not impress the Soviet leaders, and even suits them because this conveys the impression of impartiality toward East and West to naive people, whom the "peace movement" is attracting like a magnet.

PRESS COMMENTS ON EUROPEAN DEFENSE, REAGAN REMARK

Former NATO Commander Defends

DW211427 Bonn DIE WELT in German 21 Oct 81 p 2

[Article by retired Gen Gerd Schmueckle, former deputy NATO commander in chief of Europe: "America's Risk for Europe"]

[Text] Henry Kissinger told me once in Brussels that some Europeans believe that if there were a war, the Americans and the Russians should fight each other with nuclear weapons over the heads of the Europeans so as not to disturb the Europeans in their daily business. Those fostering such illusions will be certainly disappointed by the statements by President Reagan. The geostrategic location of Europe is not as good as that of America. In this respect it was helpful that President Reagan reminded the Europeans that peace cannot be produced or preserved without risk and defense preparedness.

Asked whether there could be a limited exchange of nuclear strikes between America and the Soviet Union, or whether escalation would set in automatically, Reagan honestly said that he did not know. The President is right: No person in the world can know that. In a war almost everything is uncertain. The unpredictability of response, therefore, is an essential element of NATO strategy. Which NATO arms will be used and when depends on the attacker, his aims, his successes or setbacks and on other things.

Should the Soviets attack the West -- I do not reckon with this though -- West Europe would initially be more endangered than America for geostrategic reasons. Yet the Americans have accepted a high risk for West Europe since the end of World War II, naturally not out of magnanimity, but due to national interests, a whole army was stationed in Europe.

But nevertheless the Europeans were always worried whether the Americans would be prepared to really take this high risk in an emergency -- thus the development of the French and the continuation of the British nuclear forces; thus also the creation of a NATO nuclear planning group where the Europeans work out nuclear policy together with the Americans.

Regarding the statement by President Reagan that he could visualize the use of tactical weapons against troops in the field without either of the two superpowers having to push the button for a great exchange of strikes, he just described the commonly agreed strategy. NATO has an "adequate response" strategy, with which every attack is to be stopped with as little territory gain as possible and on as low an arms level as possible. The attacker is supposed to realize that the further he advances, the higher a risk he will run regarding the use of Western arms.

Seen that way, an attack can be stopped locally, regionally or on a European level. That is all the President said. It is naturally possible for tactical arms to be used only in the battlefield area. But the main aim of such action is to make the attacker see political reason. Anyone who considers this to be American detachment from Europe, misunderstands the aim and purpose of NATO strategy, and does not know about NATO mechanisms.

Today the Soviets have torn a hole in our Western deterrence system with their Euro-strategic arms. What Reagan said about this is also established NATO policy. With the help of the West Europeans, some sort of stalemate situation is to be created as in the global field -- not to wage war, but to prevent war. Even if a potential adversary considered a first strike against West Europe, he cannot afford doing it, according to Reagan, because he feels threatened by U.S. intercontinental arms.

Anyone insinuating evil intentions to the Americans -- and there are lots of such people in the Federal Republic -- has a different argument. He says that the purpose of counter-armament weapons being brought to West Europe would not be to complete Western deterrence or even to limit a possible conflict, but to intentionally wage war only in Europe. That is an insinuation which has nothing to do with NATO considerations.

Eurostrategic nuclear programs rather remain linked to parts of American global nuclear programs, this is demonstrated by the fact that Western counterarmament will remain quantitatively below the number of Soviet Euro-strategic arms. NATO planners never intended to set up an independent Euro-strategic nuclear potential which could really create the impression of detachment.

Finally, President Reagan said that Soviet handbooks indicate that the Soviets believe they could win a nuclear war. That is correct. It is also correct that the Warsaw Pact generals and admirals think like that and include it in their instructions.

Personally I am under the impression, however, that Soviet politicians are thinking increasingly less in such a way. They understand the strategy of NATO. It cannot be ruled out, therefore, that there will be some rapprochement between the strategies of both alliances, first in the heads of Soviet politicians and then in those of the Soviet military. If that opinion is valid, an important prerequisite would have been met between both alliances.

'Limited' Nuclear War Criticized

DW231105 Frankfurt FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE in German 23 Oct 81 p 1

[Adelbert Weinstein editorial: "The Myth of Limited War"]

[Text] It is difficult to interpret nuclear strategy. The American President commented off the cuff on basic problems of nuclear warfare. His formulations indicated his being a layman. They led to misinterpretations. One may be unhappy about Reagan's loud thinking. But in order to be fair, one must say that he is in good company. He is in a similar position as millions of his fellow American citizens and many Europeans and Asians. He does not know much about the military use of the atom.

It could not be different because the thing called nuclear strategy has been a secret science for generations. It is being pursued by a few dozen analysts, military experts, philosophers and journalists. They have developed formulas, discussed theories and established terms which do not mean much to a layman. The nuclear discussion was publicly conducted in the West. It brought spiritual weight to bear on the strategic thinking of Soviet experts. But it did not involve the masses. Neither our politicians -- with a few exceptions -- nor the wide group of intellectuals, let alone the workers, can imagine how complicated the pattern is with which the experts want to prevent nuclear war.

Nuclear strategy is the sum of many political, diplomatic, technical, psychological and material elements which are, intellectually condensed, supposed to preserve a non-war situation. If there is talk of nuclear strategy, however, most compatriots visualize an apocalypse. They do not realize that all armament efforts are aimed only at the goal of offsetting man's ability of total destruction. Ignorance of strategic matters in a nuclear age is one of the negative forces making hundreds of thousands join so-called peace demonstrations.

Whether Reagan has been intentionally misunderstood or whether his unclear considerations had to lead to misunderstandings -- it does not change the fact that many Europeans now believe that America does not want to share the nuclear risk with us. The old suspicion has come up again that both atomic giants want to spare their territories in a coming war. The key word is: limited war.

The discussion about a limited war was begun in 1956. Henry Kissinger is the inventor of the strategic idea. In an exciting political game of thoughts he was looking at that time for a way out from the strategic concept of "everything or nothing." He considered the following: The extraordinary destructive strength of the atom has marked the end of classic warfare. One needs the nuclear explosive strength in the military arsenal. These arms were in existence. But they were mainly to be used as a means of threat. Since the other nuclear giant was also in possession of the destructive weapon covering a whole area, the mutual possibility to use these weapons was small. Only if national existence was called in question, an American president would use the nuclear weapon. It is, therefore, a question what "significance" Europe has from an American point of view. Kissinger considered it as difficult to say at that time whether an American chief of state would give Europe a similar rating as America.

As regards the problem of whether deterrence was divisible, he found that in view of the many American nuclear arms deployed in Europe, a great war should be limited regionally with regard to the effect of nuclear arms. Kissinger had the daring idea that nuclear war in Europe would not be as destructive as was generally assumed. He developed an idea which has been long ago susperseded technologically and tactically: According to this idea, concentrations of enemy troops could be destroyed with a few nuclear arms. He believed that an enemy would spare cities and settlements. The aim of all wars was always the destruction of enemy troops.

These technical-tactical ideas were strange. But they led Kissinger to the conclusion that the threat of a limited nuclear war in Europe would be a completion of the "everything or nothing" strategy. If regional nuclear war would be planned to take place in military practice prior to total destruction, it ought to increase deterrence.

Kissinger has not said that for a long time. But the myth of a limited nuclear war has not died. Some of his considerations have entered the Atlantic concept of so-called flexible response. But official NATO doctrine does not contain the term of a nuclear war limited to Europe. The basic Atlantic idea is that World War III would be indivisible. The nuclear risk exists for America as well as for Europe. The Soviets think along similar lines. And that maintains the balance of horror.

The balance of horror calls for particular firmness. Every side must be convinced that the other side would use nuclear arms if it came to a test. Thus psychostrategy has become the main element of nuclear strategy. The Russians exploit this fact masterfully.

DER SPIEGEL Critical of Weinberger

DW261507 Hamburg DER SPIEGEL in German 26 Oct 81 p 22

[Rudolf Augstein article: "Reagan, Weinberger, Haig"]

[Text] President Reagan said 18 weeks ago that he could hardly imagine that nuclear war could be limited. This is and remains a sensible assumption.

Just 10 days ago, the same President said in an offhand way that he could imagine war with conventional weapons which would be ended with a nuclear weapon strike. This is approximately what he said because he did not express himself precisely.

Reagan was officially accused of making "misleading statements" by the FRG chancellor and of having "little knowledge" by military expert Adelbert Weinstein in the FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE.

The military knowledge of Ronald Reagan and Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger may indeed be small. Secretary of State Alexander Haig, formerly NATO supreme commander, is the real expert. At one time he loudly declared that NATO's so-called "dual decision" was nothing more than a "political gesture." All very professional. This much is evident: A "political gesture" does not spell protection in our case but rather jeopardy, at least potentially.

It could well be that the layman's commonsense of the President will protect us better than all the Pershing-II and cruise missiles together. After all, in both instances he did not say anything foolish, even if the two views are incompatible.

What he said first was what any reasonable person -- knowledgeable or not -- also thinks and what an expert like Christoph Bertram in London strictly contends. What he subsequently did, albeit in highly expurgated form, was recite the official doctrine of NATO and thus unintentionally uncover a vital lie of NATO.

After all, since the invention of the hydrogen bomb, deterrence can be effective only if both sides necessarily risk annihilation.

This is ugly, to be sure, but it is true.

And just because the idea is so ugly, since 1956 the Americans and the French have been trying to avoid by mental games the fact which is unbearable to them. Kissinger and De Gaulle, not exactly the least intelligent people, took it for granted that in the event of hostilities the Americans would put their own country in a different category than, say, Europe.

Consequently we should not be surprised that Socialist Mitterrand urges the West Germans to go through with "counterarmament." This follows De Gaulle's line. All French presidents wish to keep France "at best neutral" through nuclear strength (writes DIE WELT).

Neutral? Why neutral if there is at least one NATO country which could never stay neutral no matter if the Americans consult us or not? We are Mitterrand's buffer zone, that's all.

Why do we get so excited when these wise gentlemen have indeed not thought the unthinkable?

The answer may be personified -- in Caspar Weinberger. This nonexpert has succeeded in making the Europeans mad at his country. What he has demanded is the following: conventional war, including in Europe, over an extended period, exchangeability of the war theaters depending on strength, between central Europe and non-European areas; and winnable, survivable war.

Now, this is bound to make even the Russians wild, about whom Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, not exactly a fellow traveler, said in Boston in 1976: they remain "far behind us and our allies in any comprehensive evaluation of military, economic and technological power." However, some people in the conservative camp have failed to comprehend so far that the Soviet Union is nevertheless a world power, he said.

This was true then just as it is true now. There is no use arguing that the Soviets have encircled themselves. They are surrounded. This is the reason why they cannot come to terms with contemporary Americans.

Probably, definitely, it is true, that the United States does not intend to wage war. But Ronald Reagan has already declared Saudi Arabia an American protectorate. These acts tend toward war. Consequently, the most peaceable and the last endangered spot on this globe, our central Europe, needs to be polished up as the most extremely threatened war theater so that the Soviets can be threatened at other confrontation points.

However, wars nobody wants emerge from threats, and threats are often not thoroughly considered. We must very strongly oppose the mean insinuation that we are hostile toward the United States simply because we disapprove of its King Kong behavior. It needs us just as we need it. Judging by the experiences in Poland, the very country which is bound to offer the greatest resistance to German reunification is the Soviet Union. When the Americans threaten to take action without us, this is nothing new. They have always done this in all crises we know of.

It is certainly true that the two superpowers both know that neither can win a nuclear war. But they don't talk that way. And the stronger of the two, the Americans, is talking worse than the Russians.

Pretending that one could nevertheless win nuclear war and deploying the corresponding systems, is now dangerous beyond all measure, and there is no comparison with 1914 anymore.

No mortal -- even Mr Christoph Bertram of the "International Institute for Strategic Studies" -- knows what the superpowers would really do in case of hostilities. They do not even know themselves. There is no substitute for the absolute, all-out deterrence to which the good Germans have clutched as they would a prayer book.

The GUARDIAN of London, a newspaper which is kind to Helmut Schmidt, tactfully connects the chancellor's pacemaker illness with "counterarmament" as follows: "Above all in the international field, Schmidt most likely must have the feeling that his efforts were to no avail. The simplified military and political judgments and explanations released by the White House and the State Department this year concerning detente, East-West relations and disarmament are bound to have had an impact on such a smart and experienced politician."

The Pentagon is not even mentioned here. We do not want to forget the military-political complex in West and East -- even though we prefer to be and remain a protectorate of the Americans than of the Russians.

NEW CALEDONIAN GROUP CLAIMS BOMB RESPONSIBILITY

NC271720 Paris AFP in English 1707 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Text] Paris, 27 Oct (AFP) -- A New Caledonian pro-independence group today claimed responsibility for a bombing at Charles de Gaulle International Airport this morning and a blast at an elegant Paris restaurant on Sunday evening.

In a telephone call to AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE, the hitherto unknown Kanaka Liberation Army from the French Pacific Ocean territory described the actions as the start of "a wave aiming to carry to French soil our fight for the indepencence of our country: New Caledonia."

Observers here speculated that the group could be the military wing of Palika, the Kanaka (Native New Caledonian) Liberation Party which has been working for independence of the mineral rich territory for several years.

Its claim broke the silence which followed the Sunday night blast at the smart Fouquet's restaurant on the Champs-Elysees, in which two employees and a client sustained minor injuries. But there was still no word on a nearly simultaneous explosion on Sunday outside Le Drugstore, a nearby shop-and-snack complex.

In today's blast at the airport at Roissy, just north of Paris, a device placed in a waste bin near a parking lot elevator exploded, sparking a fire and causing damages but no injuries.

It was the second blast in less than 24 hours at the airport. Late yesterday, a bomb destroyed a car in the same parking lot, but the Kanaka Liberation Army did not indicate responsibility for that action.

CHEYSSON RULES OUT SENDING TROOPS TO CHAD

LD271942 Paris Domestic Service in French 1800 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Text] As I told you at the beginning of this newscast, France has decided to grant logistic assistance to the Chadian Government of President Goukouni. It is reported that arms and munitions have already been delivered to N'Djamena. There is talk of 25 tons of Bren guns having been recovered in Central Africa or Chad from Libyan troops. France's assistance is aimed at helping with the establishment of the OAU inter-African force. Anyway, it is a consequence of President Goukouni's visit to Paris in September. Speaking to [name indistinct], the minister of external relations, Claude Cheysson, gave his explanations. As you will hear, Mr Cheysson stresses one point: It is not military assistance.

[Begin recording] [Cheysson] We have quite simply decided to grant assistance. Well, this aid includes some credits for Chad and initially it consisted in the dispatch of doctors, engineers and so forth. Within the framework of this assistance there are so-called logistic elements, that is, trucks, ambulances, in short whatever is needed when [words indistinct due to interviewer's interruption] a government.

[Interviewer] Munitions as well?

[Cheysson] There are probably munitions but I still do not know exactly what is being sent there, but it is whatever a government needs.

[Interviewer] Have you thus totally ruled out the dispatch of soldiers to Chad?

[Cheysson] Totally and categorically.

[Interviewer] So France is again going to play a more important role in Chad. Is this to prevent Libya from playing an even more important role there?

[Cheysson] It is not just a question of France. We have heard that the Senegalese, the Nigerians, the inhabitants of Nigeria, and the United Nations may all contribute in their own way, and that would suit us very well. [end recording]

ASSEMBLY CLOSES LOOPHOLE IN NATIONALIZATION PLAN

NC280950 Paris AFP in English 0936 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Text] Paris, 28 Oct (AFP) -- France's Socialist government today decreed that French groups being nationalised must seek government consent if they want to hive off their foreign subsidiaries.

The Finance Ministry said the ruling applied to "the ceding or exchange" of assets in the foreign subsidiaries held by private persons or companies.

Also requiring prior consent were "all operations that would reduce direct or indirect control of private persons or French companies in these subsidiaries."

The decree was designed to plug a loophole used last week by PARIBAS to rescue its powerful Swiss subsidiary from the nationalisation net.

The nationalisation bill was voted after a first reading by parliament on Monday. It goes to the Senate and then requires a second reading in the National Assembly. The takeovers are expected to come into force around new year.

JOSPIN MEETS WITH NORTH KOREAN DELEGATION

SK280903 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0814 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Text] Pyongyang October 28 (KCNA) -- Lionel Jospin, first secretary of the Socialist Party [PS] of France, on 24 October met the delegation of the Workers Party of Korea headed by comrade Kim Yong-nam, member of the political bureau, and secretary, of the central committee of the Workers Party of Korea, on a visit to France to attend the sixth congress of the Socialist Party of France, according to a report.

The head of the delegation conveyed cordial regards of the great leader comrade Kim Il-song to First Secretary Lionel Jospin and a message of greetings of the central committee of the Workers Party of Korea to the sixth congress of the Socialist Party of France.

First Secretary Lionel Jospin expressed deep thanks for the cordial regards of the great leader and the message of greetings of the central committee of the Workers Party of Korea.

He asked the head of the delegation to convey his warm greetings to the great leader comrade Kim Il-song and wholeheartedly wished good health and a long life to the great leader.

The first secretary said that he would make every possible effort for the development of relations between the Socialist Party of France and the Workers Party of Korea and for wide exchange between them in various domains.

The talk proceeded in a cordial atmosphere.

PLO SEEKS TO REPAIR RELATIONS WITH GOVERNMENT

AU262016 Rome ANSA in English 1941 GMT 26 Oct 81

[Text] Beirut 26 Oct (ANSA) -- The crisis in relations between Italy and the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) after the slaying of PLO leader Majid Abu Sharar in a Roman hotel on October 9 is now something of the past, Palestinian sources told ANSA here today. According to PLO representative in Rome, Nimr Haddad, who is currently in Beirut, a "very friendly" letter from the head of the organization's political department Faruq Qaddumi will be delivered to Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo in the next few days.

Haddad reported that the letter repeats the PLO's willingness to maintain good relations with Italy and also clarifies the organization's version of the bomb attack in which Abu Sharar was assassinated. Haddad was called back to Beirut after the slaying and the PLO said he would not return to Italy until full light had been thrown on the crime.

Disclosing that he should be back in Rome on Wednesday, Haddad said a distinction must be made between "the political aspect" and the judicial investigations into a homicide which occurred on Italian soil. "At the political level, I think eventual misunderstandings have been clarified", he told ANSA, voicing hope that the assassins would be "discovered and punished".

Haddad added that some toughly worded statements issued by leading PLO figures against the Italian Government immediately after the slaying do not necessarily represent the PLO's official position. Making the same point about "some polemical articles published by the press", he noted that there had been a "very clear statement" from PLO leader Yasir Arafat, who made it clear that calling Haddad back to Beirut "did not mean a break in relations with Italy".

On Quaddumi's letter, Haddad said he was "convinced" that the assassination of Abu Sharar was "an offense for the Italian authorities as much as it is for the Palestinian people". "To throw full light on it is therefore in the interests of both, and I have confidence that this light will be thrown on the affair", he said.

To let oneself be dragged into a polemic between Italy and the PLO, he said, "would mean accepting the game of those who killed Abu Sharar, also so as to sabotage our relations with Italy". Asked if he thought the Italian police had done everything possible to guard Abu Sharar, the PLO representative said that, for security reasons, he had in fact signed into a hotel under a false name which had not been communicated to the Roman police.

Haddad's full reconstruction of the facts was as follows: "Abu Sharar had himself booked in under his true name at the hotel where the conference for solidarity with the Palestinian intellectuals was being held. Since this hotel was too crowded, both he and the head of the PLO's information department Yasir 'Abd Rabbuh asked me to find them somewhere else to stay.

"My secretary telephoned to various hotels and finally found two free rooms at the Hotel Flora in Via Veneto. Here, Abu Sharar presented an Algerian passport in the name of (Abbas Zituni). He did not ask me to inform the Italian police or to take supplementary security measures.

"He felt safe in Rome, a city which he loved and which he visited whenever he could. Perhaps it was this feeling of being safe that cost him his life.

"The bomb placed by the terrorists under his bed went off on the morning of Friday, October 9. We are convinced that the assassination was the work of Israeli agents".

PAPERS SPECULATE ABOUT U.S. ENVOY'S RECALL

AU271601 Rome ANSA in English 1535 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Text] Rome, 27 Oct (ANSA) -- Reports that American Ambassador in Rome Maxwell Rabb was precipitously called home to avoid a Libyan plot to kill or kidnap him continued to exercise the imagination of some Italian newspapers this morning despite denials from all sides declaring that the reports were baseless and that the diplomat was in Washington for normal consultations.

Rabb himself gave the stories a cold douche in a telephone interview with the Milan daily, CORRIERE DELLA SERA, which reported him as saying he had "full confidence" in the Italian secret services and "looks with pleasure" on returning to Italy in the next few days.

A high-ranking but unidentified Libyan Government official also pooh-poohed the reports to the same newspaper. "We would have to be crazy or would-be suicides to think up plots of that kind," he pointed out. "What advantage would we gain from a gesture of this kind? We want to live in peace in order to win the battle against under-development."

But, despite these two denials, the CORRIERE still published a third service in which the hypothesis of Libyan plot against Rabb surfaced again. Without explaining what sort of logic might lie behind the plan, the CORRIERE said "confidential information" reaching the Western secret services indicated that the diplomat would be "kidnapped or slain" by Libyan hitmen to coincide with an interview with Libyan leader Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi broadcast by RAI, Italy's state radio-television network, on Friday.

According to the newspaper, the American Embassy in Rome was alerted to the information and Rabb was recalled to Washington "for consultations" as a precautionary measures.

The CORRIERE's reconstruction of the incident claimed that the diplomat was embarked on the first plane for the United States after the warning. "This reconstruction," it claimed, "was carried out with the cooperation of Italian Government experts who asked not to be identified. It confirms the article in the New York TIMES which was the origin of the mystery."

The conservative Milan daily, IL GIORNALE NUOVO, placed the stress on the "further deterioration" of Italy's international image created by the incident and the "embarrassment" suffered by the Italian Government.

The leftwing Roman daily, PAESE SERA, looked with scepticism on the stores of a Libyan plot and suggested that Rabb had more likely returned home in connection with CIA plotting in Italy and Libya. According to PAESE SERA, in an article from its correspondent in New York, it now seems to be an established fact that two former CIA agents apparently involved in dirty tricks projects in Libya still have relations with some high-ranking CIA officials.

In this connection, PAESE SERA cited New York observers as saying that, before his appointment to the embassy in Rome, Rabb carried out very high-level espionage tasks for the American Government and was therefore the "key man for re-knitting plots in Italy and the eastern Mediterranean." On this basis, PAESE SERA argued that Rabb may well be back in Washington for some form of "internal enquiry" in the American espionage services, presumably related to the presence of the two former agents in the North African state.

In an apparently unrelated point, PAESE SERA said too that "one cannot stay silent over assertions on Rabb's links with figures and companies connected with the underworld." According to the newspaper, the ambassador had made efforts to block organised crime in these companies, but his "praiseworthy" efforts had not been sufficient.

LA REPUBBLICA COMMENTS ON REAGAN'S 'GAFFE'

PM271555 Rome LA REPUBBLICA in Italian 21 Oct 81 pp 1, 12

[Barbara Spinelli commentary: "Dangerous Gaffe"]

[Text] Ronald Reagan's remark about the hypothetical possibility of a "limited nuclear war" in Europe does not in itself constitute either a novelty or a particularly disconcerting doctrinal heresy. From the theoretical viewpoint it merely translates into simple and therefore stark words the central postulate which forms the basis for the flexible nuclear response strategy that NATO adopted in the late sixties and that envisages a "graduated" employment of the various means of deterrence available to the West, according to the level -- conventional or nuclear -- imposed by the conflict with the USSR.

From the political viewpoint -- which is the one that exerts the most pressure on the U.S. administration -- the reference to a possible "detachment" of the European theater from the central strategic system of the two major powers is tantamount to an umpteenth warning against the temptation for the old continent to depend entirely and exclusively on the effectiveness of the U.S. nuclear umbrella and to abandon the plan to deploy in Western Europe the 572 medium-range missiles designed to offset the regional advantages gained by the USSR by means of the SS-20 missiles.

It was no accident that immediately after hypothesizing a "Europeanization" of the East-West nuclear conflict Reagan pointed to the way to make this impossible and thus to avoid dangerous breaks in the continuity of the Atlantic alliance's defense system: "One can imagine the use of tactical nuclear weapons against troops on the European battlefield, on both sides, without this leading either of the two superpowers to push the nuclear button. But if we manage to convince the Soviets that our response capability after their first strike will be so destructive that they could no longer afford it (a first strike -- LA REPUBBLICA editor's note), they will refrain from attacking.

French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson has very cooly summed up the significance of the President's remarks: The USSR's introduction of SS-20 medium-range missiles "has altered the very nature of the qualitative nuclear balance on the old continent" owing to Moscow's new ability to "neutralize at a strike the entire European capability with weapons that cannot reach the United States." Clearly, Cheysson adds, "this poses the problem of the credibility of the higher-level response; can the Americans risk this at a time when the USSR is resorting to an instrument of war that cannot penetrate U.S. territory?" This is the French minister's conclusion: "It is therefore indispensable to obtain the withdrawal of the SS-20's or to negotiate a lower level of armaments, particularly by means of the deployment of Pershing and cruise missiles in Europe."

Having said that, not the whole of Europe can identify with the French stance. The FRG in particular cannot, for reasons to do not only with the recent pacifist tides rising across it but also with its nature as a divided nation and as a special target in an East-West conflict. Dependent for its defense entirely on the U.S. "umbrella," the FRG cannot permit itself, as post-Gaullist France has, to take for granted the limited credibility of the nuclear protection guaranteed by Washington. For psychological -- even more than strategic -- reasons, it must be able to depend continuously on U.S. support, without which there is no justification for the twofold and painful role assigned to it since the fifties, which has transformed it into the West's nuclear powder keg and, at the same time, imposes on it the status of West Europe's nonnuclear nation.

From this viewpoint, Reagan's sally constitutes a very dangerous political and psychological gaffe that could envenom the already fragile relations between Bonn and Washington and render extremely precarious both Chancellor Schmidt's position and the parallel battle that he is waging in favor of negotiations with the USSR and the deployment of the missiles.

But more fundamentally, it is the "European Continent" which the U.S. President shows that he does not understand and that he disregards in its fundamental cultural motivations. There is no other explanation for Reagan's decision to baldly lay his cards on the table, only a week after the massive peace demonstration in the FRG's capital. Several representatives of the U.S. administration, in parallel with the expansion of antinuclear movements in Europe, have used much more conciliatory language and have taken the opportunity to stress the "indivisibility of the Atlantic defense system."

In an interview published by SUEDDEUTSCHE ZEITUNG 16 October, Eagleburger, the State Department's assistant secretary for European affairs, admitted that the German demonstrations are an "unmistakable system of democracy" and conceal a message which "neither the United States nor Germany must underestimate." Secretary of Defense Weinberger spoke in similar terms in the FRG.

The fear of war is a deep-rooted feeling in the European's psychology, and the Americans, who have waged it twice far from their own national territory, cannot suffer it in the same way as the Germans, Italians or French. In Germany's case, moreover, this fear is combined with the desire of the new generations and of the left to become for a change protagonists in a "German peace adventure" rather than a war. These are two phenomena which the U.S. ruling class persist in ignoring, while paradoxically, the Soviet Union understands them better since it has decided to exploit them to its own advantage.

It is not the first time that prominent U.S. leaders have declared the U.S. "umbrella" potentially collapsed, thus destabilizing the Germans' certainties and creating difficulties for Chancellor Schmidt. In the fall of 1979 at a conference in Brussels, Henry Kissinger announced that the old continent's detachment from the U.S. strategic system constituted a de facto reality, adding that only a European shouldering of responsibility would counteract that disadvantage. On that occasion too the statement had the merit of lucidity, but the effect on Germany was harmful.

The fact is that NATO's December 1979 decision following Kissinger's speech obscured rather than elucidated the new European-U.S. relations as they had taken shape as a result of the advantages -- first conventional, then nuclear -- gained by Moscow. Once again, as at the time of the FRG's postwar rearmament, the European defense issue was handled entirely by Washington and interpreted essentially in its German dimension. This is why Reagan's statement should make the EEC governments reflect and hasten Europe's shouldering of its own future defense, embracing Germany and lessening its fear of becoming the West's cannon fodder. But for this to happen, Mitterrand's France must take the first step and not limit itself -- as Cheysson does -- to justifying the U.S. stances, taking refuge in the comfortable position of a neutral spectator.

FOREIGN MINISTRY DELEGATION VISITS QATAR

For Doha radio coverage of Italian Foreign Ministry Under Secretary Roberto (Valixi)'s 2-day visit to Qatar, see the 28 October Middle East and Africa DAILY REPORT, p C 4.

DEBATE BEGINS IN PARLIAMENT ON ENTRY INTO NATO

Foreign, Defense Ministers in Favor

LD271406 Madrid in Spanish to Europe 1230 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Text] The foreign and defense ministers have both made statements today in connection with the opening of the parliamentary debate on joining NATO.

Foreign Minister Perez-Llorca says that Spain must define itself politically on the question of membership. As regards such a definition we have a clear and coherent option to offer. Now is thus the moment to tackle the issue, when the bilateral relationship with the United States is expiring. Quite some time ago this moment, autumn 1981, was singled out as the time when the decision would have to be made.

Mr Perez-Llorca also says the government is convinced that we will be better placed inside the Atlantic alliance than outside it to ensure the defense of our territory's integrity without exception. As far as the Common Market is concerned, clearly membership in the alliance would be a positive decision for our interests there. As for Gibraltar, Mr Perez-Llorca stresses that Spain inside the alliance has much greater possibilities for influencing the issue than it would have from outside.

For his part, Defense Minister Oliart stresses that Europe without Spain would be lame. Spanish entry strengthens the alliance's southwest flank and makes for the possibility of NATO forces being deployed in depth in Europe. The defense minister stresses an aspect which is of enormous importance for the people of Spain: the defense, under Spanish command, of the region of the strait, with flanking support in the Balearics and Canaries areas. The Cantabrian area and that of the northwest of the peninsula must also be under Spanish command. Finally, the defense minister says that the most important thing is the decision not to base nuclear missiles on our territory without prior authorization from parliament.

Debate Begins on Referendum

LD271948 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 1600 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Excerpt] The plenary session of the Congress of Deputies began at 1648 with just one item on its agenda: the question of authorizing the government to apply for membership to the North Atlantic Treaty. The session began with a preliminary matter: a debate on a motion from the Socialist group that the house should ask the constitutional court to rule on whether there are any contradictions between the constitution and the treaty. That motion is being defended at this momeny by Mr Peces Barba.

Calvo-Sotelo Rejects Referendum

LD272124 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 2000 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Excerpts] The second matter in today's debate on Spain's entry into NATO has now been decided. Will there or will there not be a referendum on entry? This is the reply from the prime minister:

[Begin Calvo-Sotelo recording] As prime minister, with the utmost respect for the deputies and after having listened to the speeches during this second part of the debate referring strictly to a referendum, as prime minister I should like to say that I do not propose to give way to pressure, that I do not propose to call a referendum on a matter which is undoubtedly important, but which has not been subjected to popular consultation in any of the 15 countries which are now members of the alliance.

In maintaining this line, which I now announce, I believe I am being faithful to the spirit of the constitution. I believe that I am preventing a confrontation between the will of the representatives and the will of those represented, a confrontation which would add nothing at the moment to the prestige of our institutions. [end recording]

Felipe Gonzalez, the congress Socialist group spokesman, replied to the prime minister saying: If there is no other subject of greater political importance and, therefore, if article 92 of the constitution is not used, then it should be abolished. He added: The most tactful part of what the prime minister has said was that confrontation between representatives and those represented had to be avoided, that if this confrontation were to happen we would be making a mistake, a mistake on joining NATO or not joining, but whose mistake would it be. He concluded by asking the prime minister whether or not he thought that NATO entry was especially important for the reasons which he had given previously: national security, territorial integrity and sovereignty. The prime minister took the floor again and said: I do not dispute that it is highly important, but the constitution does not oblige the prime minister to propose to his majesty the king that a referendum be called, and I have said that I do not propose to request it.

There have, I believe, been fewer occasions when there has been a clearer reply from the rostrum.

Congress Rejects Referendum

LD272140 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 210 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Excerpts] The plenum of the Congress of Deputies has decided by 172 notes to 144 with 15 absentions that the prime minister should not propose to his majesty the king a referendum on Spain's accession to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. Those in favor of the referendum were the Socialists, Communists, the Basque Nationalist Party, the Andalusians and five deputies from the mixed group: Tamames, Fernandez, Sagaseta, Bandres and Pi-Sunyer. Those against a referendum were the Union of the Democratic Center, the Democratic Coalition, and deputy Aizpun. The Catalan minority and Deputies Clavero and Gomez de Las Roces abstained.

This session of the plenum of the Congress of Deputies will continue tomorrow morning.

Prime Minister Advocated Joining NATO

LD281216 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 1100 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Text] Prime Minister Calvo-Sotelo yesterday spent 35 minutes explaining his refusal of the opposition's call for the question of our joining NATO to be referred to the constitutional court and to a referendum. Now he has just spent another 35 minutes setting out the government's reasons for believing that Spain should be a member of that military club.

Leopoldo Calvo-Sotelo said that we must restore Spain's international position, which was denied to it for a long time while there was dictatorship in Spain. He also said that the Soviet threat continues to hang over countries living in democracy and freedom and that as long as there is a Berlin the government knows which side of the wall Spain is on.

Spain, he said, must play a part in the defense of the West. The government does not believe in neutrality and it is therefore necessary to decide what is best for our country: bilateral pacts with the United States or a military alliance with another group of countries.

He went on to stress that only inside the alliance would we find ways of improving our defenses, and that joining the alliance would not increase the risk Spain already runs, given that under the bilateral pacts with the United States we have U.S. bases on our territory and there are Soviet SS-20 missiles with nuclear warheads targeted on these U.S. bases in Spain. In the event of conflict the Soviets would make no distinction between our being merely a country having a bilateral pact with the United States or being a full NATO member.

He went on to say that joining NATO would entail an increase of merely 2 percent in our annual military budget; that the Spanish territories in Morocco -- Ceuta and Melilla -- would be better defended; and that more favorable possibilities of recovering Gibraltar would exist.

Finally, he stressed that the treaty would not oblige us to have nuclear weapons in the country. The government's feeling favors going on as we are, that is, without nuclear weapons. Nevertheless, he said, we should like to leave this possibility open in case the Cortes should like at some time to have the opportunity to decide the matter.

The various parliamentary groups are now replying to the prime minister's speech, some of them expressing their opposition to Spain joining NATO. The man speaking at the moment is Alejandro Rojas Marcos, representing the Andalusians. He started by saying that NATO has had no new members for 25 years, and it is highly symptomatic that now, when the Reagan administration is going on to a warmongering footing, as he put it, or at least driving back to cold war instead of toward detente, the Americans are showing enormous interest in getting Spain to become a member of this military pact, which would unbalance the current situation.

He also made a specific reference to something perhaps little known, namely that there is no validity to the case that Ceuta and Melilla will be better defended because, according to Mr Rojas Marcos, there exists a pact between Morocco and the United States to the effect that the Americans would not go to war against Morocco in the event of armed action by Morocco against these Spanish cities.

PROTEST ACTION, INCIDENTS IN BASQUE REGION

NC231617 Paris AFP in English 1611 GMT 23 Oct 81

[Text] San Sebastian, northern Spain, 23 Oct (AFP) -- Several incidents, some violent, were reported in Spain's Basque region today where strikes were being held to protest the death Wednesday of two alleged Basque separatist military leaders in a shootout with civil guards.

The most serious incidents occurred in San Sebastian, capital of Guipuzcoa province.

Reports said barricades were erected at several points in the city where demonstrators overturned and set fire to vehicles, particularly buses.

Informed sources said a general strike order drew 90 percent support in nearby Hernani and Tolosa. Stores and merchants closed down in several other locations, reports said.

The two killed Wednesday in the shootout near Renteria, in Guipuzcoa, were: Jose Maria Izaguirre Gogorza, known as "Gogor" and believed to be the leader of the military wing of the Basque separatist movement ETA, and Jose Jauregui Altube Josetto.

The latter victim was buried today without incident in the cemetery of his native village, Ibarra, which was surrounded by police.

BRIEFS

RADIO-TELEVISION DIRECTOR -- The former director-general of Radio-Television Espanola [RTVE], Fernando Castedo, informed the RTVE Board of Administration that his successor will be Carlos Robles Piquer. He made the announcement during the course of the meeting which the RTVE Board of Administration was holding since 1400 under the chairmanship of (Jose Ignacio Vert). [Text] [Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 1400 GMT 23 Oct 81 LD]

FINLAND

PRIME MINISTER VIEWS NATIONAL POLICY AFTER KEKKONEN

LD272332 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 1700 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Speech by Prime Minister Mauno Koivisto -- live or recorded]

[Excerpts] We received today the announcement that our respected president, Urho Kekkonen, who has been steering our ship of state for the past 25 years, will give up his duties as head of state. A political career unequaled in Finnish history and exceptionally great and multifaceted worldwide is nearing its end. After a long day's work the president is retiring to rest on a well-earned pension. We may note without doubt that the positive and balanced development of our society and the increase of democracy and equality during the past decades have taken place largely thanks to Urho Kekkonen. He has aimed at this goal with all his strength and gave his support and prestige to all efforts that work toward it. We must carefully nurture his legacy.

When he promised, despite his great age, to be available in the 1978 presidential elections, Urho Kekkonen referred in his explanation to foreign and trade policy, especially Finnish-Soviet relations. He said he believed he would still be able to serve for country in this field. The decisive contribution of the president of the republic, who is now resigning from his duties, in developing our foreign political line and stabilizing our international position is undeniable. As a close associate and trusted colleague of Paasikivi, he had a central role in the negotiations on the Finnish-Soviet treaty of friendship, cooperation and mutual assistance. On the lasting foundation of this treaty, he has been able to build successfully an atmosphere of mutual trust and cooperation with our eastern big-power neighbor, the Soviet Union. The results speak for themselves.

As a legacy of Urho Kekkonen's long term as president, the nation supports unhesitatingly our foreign policy, the Paasikivi-Kekkonen line. As a result of this policy we have good relations with all countries and close and multifaceted contacts with our neighbor, the Soviet Union and the Nordic countries. When Urho Kekkonen became president in 1956, Finland had been a member of the United Nations for only 4 months and had only recently joined the Nordic Council. Thus we had just taken the first steps out of our postwar isolation toward a more active participation in international cooperation. Finland's striving to pursue a peaceful policy of neutrality began to take its present form. The quarter-century's foreign political progress through the SALT talks and the CSCE to the present day is enormous. This is due largely to the position and prestige President Kekkonen achieved through his personal activity as a European statesman.

Despite the growing international tension, Finland's position is good and atable. Before the challenges of the new decade, Finland can and should make use of the international recognition it has achieved for actions for peace. We must keep in mind President Kekkonen's words that in matters of war and peace Finland is not neutral; it is for peace and against war. This way we honor best his great life's work.

Dear listeners, one era in the history of our country is coming to an end. It can with justification be called the era of Urho Kekkonen, so important has his influence been on the development of our society, so central has his position been as the leader of our foreign policy. As President Kekkonen is now leaving his post, we hope that he can still spend many years among us, feeling the undivided gratitude and appreciation of the entire nation.

Party Leaders' Thoughts

LD271542 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 1307 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Text] We have conducted interviews with party leaders and asked the party representatives what the departure of President Urho Kekkonen from the country's political life means for Finland. First the chairman of Finland's biggest party, the Social Democratic Party, Kalevi Sorsa:

[Begin recording] I presume everyone is somewhat confused now that President Kekkonen's exceptionally long and exceptionally (?eventful) rule has come to an end. It is natural that, despite this, we must direct or thoughts forward. It seems (?to me) the government will now turn into a caretaker ministry and will probably continue as such. This seems best to me, at least until the elections. Second, we must hope that the election campaign, which is now beginning, will be such that it will not crumble the foundation of the internal mutual political understanding which has been the basis for the success of the Raasikivi-Kekkonen foreign policy. [end recording]

The deputy chairman of the National Coalition Party, Elsi Hetemaki-Olander, assesses the significance of President Kekkonen's resignation as follows:

[Begin recording] It seems that there is the rustle of the wings of history in the air now. An era, which has lasted for 25 years, is over and we are living through a very important stage in Finnish history today. And today, we must stop to consider the importance of President Kekkonen for Finland's policy. And, in fact, today we also have cause to give thanks for the policy conducted in this country during Urho Kekkonen's term of office, especially in the field of (?foreign relations). [end recording]

Chairman of the Center Party, Foreign Minister Paavo Vayrynen, what does President Kekkonen's retirement now mean for Finland?

[Begin recording] President Kekkonen's era has been the happiest time for Finland, for our people, with regard to achievements in foreign and internal policy. Now we are faced with an election, that will decide how we shall continue. I would say the question of a successor will be very significant with regard to the development of the entire 1980's and even later political developments in Finland. [end recording]

Chairman of the Finnish Communist Party Aarne Saarinen, what does the resignation of President Urho Kekkonen mean for Finland?

[Begin recording] It is a loss for Finland and for the Finnish people. But this is due to human factors, and naturally we are already prepared for the fact that we have to face a change of president before the normal date. It is a loss. [end recording]

Chairman of the Finnish Christian League Raino Westerholm, what does the resignation of President Urho Kekkonen mean for Finland?

[Begin recording] As we have had the same president in office for 25 years, it is natural that his resignation may seem to some a catastrophe. I do not, however, regard it as such because in other times we have had to go on living even though a president stepped down. [end recording]

Chairman of the Swedish People's Party Par Stenback, what does this departure of Urho Kekkonen from Finnish politics mean?

[Begin recording] Although this had been expected for quite some time, it is a considerable loss to Finnish society. And it means chiefly that the stability and continuity, to which the nation has become accustomed, is shaken. We must go forward from here, and I think that during this autumn we have had time to get used to the idea and that it will not cause such great upheavals as had (?been thought) during these past 25 years. [end recording]

Honorary Chairman of the Finnish Rural Party Veikko Vennamo, what does President Urho Kekkonen's retirement mean for Finland, in your view?

[Begin recording] It means the end of a very important era. The country's position is stable and international relations are good. It is to be hoped the new era will mean an elimination of malpractices, for instance irregularities, abuses, the nomination of officials on the basis of their party membership cards, and so on. [end recording]

And now it is the turn of the chairman of the Liberal People's Party, Jaakko Itala. What does President Urho Kekkonen's resignation mean for Finland?

[Begin recording] It means an end of the great era when Finland, under the leadership of Paasikivi and Kekkonen, fully stabilized its position in the world and when it also became a modern industrial state. We may say that this long and sometimes difficult transition period has come to an end. The situation at the end of Urho Kekkonen's term of office is normal in this respect, and Finland will now set out to examine the decisions of the 1980's. [end recording]

The party leaders' statements emphasize the importance of President Kekkonen in managing Finland's foreign policy. From the right to the left, the party chairmen stress that the president strengthened and stabilized Finland's foreign political line. Deputy Chairman of the National Coalition Party Elsi Hetemaki-Olander:

[Begin recording] I should think that during these past 25 years the Finnish nation has learned, sometimes a little obstinately, but nonetheless learned, what I think is President Kekkonen's most important lesson to the Finnish nation: that a small country cannot afford anything except one kind of foreign policy. And I hope and believe that [words indistinct]. [end recording]

[Begin Saarinen recording] I cannot see anything that would cause any foreign political problems or difficulties. It is clear the election campaign will be fought very fiercely perhaps, but fortunately it will be of very short duration. What happens after the elections depends largely on the Finnish people and the political power relations that will be formed in the elections to the electoral college. It is the duty of the electors to make as wise a decision as possible. I believe the decision will be one that will safeguard the continuity of the foreign political line that is known as the Paasikivi-Kekkonen line. [end recording]

SWEDEN

SOVIET SUBMARINE RUNS AGROUND ON SOUTH COAST

LD281210 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 1130 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Text] We have just received a report that a Soviet submarine has gone aground in Gasfjarden Bay in the Karlskrona Archipelago. According to the Swedish defense staff, the submarine is damaged and leaking oil, and ships of the south coast naval base are on the scene. The commander of the submarine has pleaded distress. The defense staff says it does not yet know why the Soviet submarine was in Swedish territorial waters when it went aground.

We will have more details in later broadcasts about the Soviet submarine aground in the Karlskrona Archipelago.

KIPRIANOU RETURNS FROM ATHENS, ISSUES STATEMENT

NC271159 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1130 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Text] President Kiprianou has returned from his visit in Athens where he held talks with new Greek Prime Minister Papandreou on the Cyprus issue. President Kiprianou has expressed absolute satisfaction with his talks and reiterated that there is complete unanimity on all subjects discussed, both on matters of substance and goals and on the matter of handling the Cyprus issue. Mr Kiprianou added that it has been agreed to have close contact between the governments of Cyprus and Greece and expressed the certainty that the inaugurated cooperation will be fruitful.

President Kiprianou stressed: I am absolutely certain that Mr Papandreou will not stop supporting Cyprus in various ways. A proof of this, in addition to all the other decisions adopted, is the increase in financial aid. President Kiprianou expressed gratitude for this aid and for the fact that he established that the Papandreou government is determined to contribute to and resolutely support the Cyprus struggle.

Additional Comments

NC271455 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1400 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Excerpt] President Kiprianou stressed: Hellenism is the true support of Cyprus. Greece headed by its government is determined to do everything possible to support the Cyprus people's struggle for vindication and freedom. Mr Kiprianou said that the identity of views and unanimity of what was discussed is not a figure of speech, stressing that there truly was absolute unanimity.

Regarding the present phase of the Cyprus issue after submission of the evaluation of the UN secretary general's ideas, Mr Kiprianou said that an exchange of views was held and that there was also unanimity on the way of handling this subject. He reiterated that he could not disclose anything on this subject as it will be discussed at the National Council and the Council of Ministers where the government's final stand toward Waldheim's initiative will be determined. Mr Kiprianou stated that the agreement to open the Cyprus dossier was an important outcome of the talks in Athens.

Regarding Mr Papandreou's visit to Cyprus, Mr Kiprianou said that it will definitely take place at the beginning of January.

Mr Kiprianou also referred to his meeting with President Karamanlis and to the vigorous interest he showed in Cyprus. He also said that Mr Karamanlis had expressed the intention to visit Cyprus in the coming spring. President Kiprianou referred also to the meeting that he had with leader of the official opposition party Mr Rallis, secretary general of the Greek Communist Party Mr Florakis, and with other political figures.

FOREIGN MINISTRY ON MISSING PERSONS ISSUE

NC271219 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1130 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Text] A statement issued by the Foreign Ministry says that, despite the intensive efforts recently exerted and still continuing through the Cypriot delegation at the United Nations, it has not yet been possible to overcome the procedural problems which prevent the investigatory committee for the tracing of missing persons from beginning its substantive task.

The statement adds that Foreign Minister Rolandhis is in constant contact with the Committee of Relatives of Missing Persons and that, in cooperation with the committee, the developments are being confronted and appropriate actions are being examined toward promoting the issue.

The statement also recalls that Mr Rolandhis has had repeated consultations at the UN headquarters building with UN Secretary General Waldheim and Assistant Secretary General Urquhart in an attempt to overcome the procedural difficulties. Consultations had also been held between the permanent Cypriot delegation and officials of the UN Secretariat with the participation of the group of the Committee of Relatives of Missing Persons who went to New York for this purpose.

U.S. Interest Applauded

NC281010 Nicosia ELEVTHEROTIPIA in Greek 28 Oct 81 pp 1, 8

[Exclusive report by A. Mikhailidhis]

[Excerpt] According to authoritative (and exclusive) reports, the United States recently has shown great interest in the missing persons issue. This display of interest took place about a fortnight ago in New York when consultations were held between the Greek Cypriot side -- with the presence of a team from the Pan-Cypriot Committee on Missing Persons -- and the UN Secretariat on the operation of the investigatory committee.

Further reports disclose that this interest was practically demonstrated the other day in Nicosia when Mr Ewing, the new U.S. ambassador, instructed embassy political officer Nix to seek a meeting with the secretary of the Pan-Cypriot Committee on Missing Persons. The pertinent contacts took place through a Greek Cypriot employee of the U.S. Embassy.

The meeting took place at the office of the Pan-Cypriot Committee on Missing Persons at 1130 yesterday and lasted for 1 and 1/2 hours.

During the meeting, the U.S. Embassy political officer was briefed by Reverend Khristoforos and the other members of the committee's secretariat on the negative developments in connection with the issue. He stated that he will convey all information given to him to the U.S. Department of State, as he has orders to do. "The State Department," he said "will do everything it can so that the investigatory committee will not fail." The U.S. diplomat also stressed the new ambassador's special interest in the missing persons issue. He said that Mr Ewing wishes to meet with the committee himself as soon as he presents his credentials to President Kiprianou.

According to our reports, the secretariat of the committee on missing persons was impressed by the fact that the U.S. Embassy political officer was sufficiently aware of the developments that have taken place recently in connection with the efforts for the operation of the investigatory committee.

ROLANDHIS ROME INTERVIEW ON CYPRUS ISSUE

AU272014 Rome ANSA in English 1949 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Text] Rome, 27 Oct (ANSA) -- The Cyprus problem is a dangerous hotspot which could threaten the stability of the southeast Mediterranean, according to Cypriot Foreign Minister Nikolaos Rolandhis today. In an interview appearing in the "CORRIERE DELLA SERA" of of Milan, Rolandhis said that the island's crisis is linked to numerous other problems that already exist in the Mediterranean area. He also stressed that a continuance of the crisis could have a negative effect on Athens-Ankara ties. Rolandhis is President Spiros Kiprianou's chief collaborator and has held the post of foreign minister since 1978.

He recalled the Turkish invasion of the island in 1974. (Turkey still occupies 40 percent of Cypriot territory) and the problem of refugees who had to abandon their homes and goods as a result. All this has had a profound effect on the island's life, he said. The minister said there is also the problem of some 2,000 missing persons and that the United Nations has been asked to shed light on this fact.

At present there are plans to create a special commission to probe this missing persons mystery, he said.

Asked to explain the plan U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim has drafted for Cyprus, Rolandhis said that it was not exactly a plan but an evaluation which he could not disclose at present given the ongoing talks with the Greek Government. With regard to future relations with Greece in the light of the recent elections there, the minister said that Cyprus would continue to work in close cooperation with the new Papandreou government and that no stone would be left unturned to settle the Cyprus question.

Rolandhis then turned to the good relations the island has with the European Economic Community and announced that he will soon be meeting with EEC ministers in Luxembourg.

In speaking of friends of Cyprus, he put Greece in first place and added that there are also nations of the Third World and Western countries that have assured aid to the island nation. He said that Cyprus was counting on all of these nations so as to guarantee its very existence as a state. All nations with the exception of Turkey recognize Cyprus as an independent state, he pointed out.

As to the United States, the minister said that Washington could help loosen the Cyprus knot given the fact that it, like Turkey, is a member of the Atlantic alliance.

As to relations with Italy, Rolandhis said that they were particularly good and that Cyprus has permanent contacts and sturdy trade ties with this country even though the exchanges show a deficit for the island. He also said he had excellent personal relations with Italy's Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo. Rolandhis would up the interview saying that relations between the two nations were steadily broadening and that he hopes to have Italy at Cyprus' side in the defense of the island nation's rights.

PAPANIOANNOU ON WALDHEIM PROPOSALS, ELECTIONS

NC272255 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1730 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Text] The address by AKEL Secretary General Papaioannou to the plenum of the Central Committee and to the Central Control Committee held yesterday, was released today for publication.

Referring to the latest Cyprus developments, Papaioannou said the most responsible handling of the ideas of the UN secretary general by the party would be to express its opinion responsibly at the National Council after carefully studying these ideas. If, he added, this study proves there are positive elements which promote the intercommunal talks, then we should accept them, while we should reject the negative elements and submit our own counter proposals.

The AKEL secretary general added that any other ideas or evaluation by Waldheim must, unfailingly, be based upon the UN resolutions on Cyprus and upon the summit agreements.

In his address, Papaioannou also referred to various domestic issues and underlined that the strongest weapon available to the Cypriot people in their struggle for survival and independence is their entity as a state. He also said AKEL made and continues to make great efforts toward the unity of the patriotic, democratic forces on the basis of a minimum program.

In conclusion, he said the question of municipal and communal elections to be held soon, as well as the question of the presidential election in 1983, will be examined by AKEL on the basis of the minimum program, together with any parties which might want to cooperate with AKEL on measures for the program's implementation.

PAPANDREOU GIVES INTERVIEW ON CYPRUS ISSUE

NC271840 Nicosia Domestic Television Service in Greek 1725 GMT 27 Oct 81

[From the "Panorama" program: exclusive interview granted by Greece's Prime Minister Papandreou to the Cyprus Radio and Television team which accompanied Cypriot President Kiprianou to Athens; date not given -- recorded]

[Text] [Question] Mr Prime Minister, things are being said at this time about increased dynamic support from Greece to Cyprus. How do you view this support and is it related to Greece's role as a guarantor power?

[Answer] It is most certainly related to the role of Greece as a guarantor power. However, there is a simultaneous national tie which the Government of Greece must never forget. I will give you two examples of what I mean by strengthened or dynamic support: 1) We are doubling, approximately, the economic aid given by Greece to the Republic of Cyprus. As of now, it will be 2 billion drachma. 2) We have issued instructions to all ambassadors of Greece overseas to request an audience with foreign ministers or with prime ministers to fully present to them the problem of Cyprus which, unfortunately, is being wrongly presented by the international press. It is being reported and stated that it is a problem of relations between two communities. This is not the essence of the problem. The problem consists of the fact that there is an invasion, that Attila is in Cyprus, while Cyprus is an independent state and a member of the United Nations. This is the essence of the problem. Naturally, there can never be a just solution of the Cypriot problem so long as foreign troops remain in Cyprus. These are the two examples of what we mean. Along the way, we will find others.

[Question] Mr Prime Minister, a question which is much discussed is the process of decisionmaking with regard to the Cypriot issue. How do you view this matter?

[Answer] We place the question as it was placed in the past; that is, that the decisions are decisions of the Republic of Cyprus, of the Cypriot government, of the Cypriot president. We are in a position to advise as well as to support. However, the term support constitutes an entire spectrum; how much do you support and how do you support. I believe that this will be the main difference between what happened to date and what will happen from now on.

[Question] Without entering into confidential matters, can you tell us how you are dealing with the question of the defensive arming of Cyprus?

[Answer] I can say that it was an issue with which we dealt. Beyond this, as you know, one cannot make public statements on such a delicate matter.

[Question] Mr Prime Minister, another weapon available to Cyprus is the question of internationalization, so that a correct solution may be found. How do you interpret the context you give to internationalization?

[Answer] Internationalization can take many forms. One of them is the active presence of the issue before the United Nations. Another is the creation of a committee of states, member states of the United Nations, in accordance with an earlier decision. A third one is the existing Soviet proposal, with which we immediately agreed, for an international conference on the Cyprus issue. I believe that since the West has already proposed a conference on Afghanistan, it is clear that it must also proceed to such a conference on the Cyprus issue. These things, however, affect the immediate future and not the present.

[Question] A last request: What message would you like to send to Cyprus and its people?

[Answer] The assurance that I feel all the responsibility borne by the prime minister of Greece toward the suffering island of Cyprus. The message I send is a message of support with all the strength available to Greece.

I must state that after the meeting with the president of the republic, I have the impression that we are entering a new period, that the Cypriot issue is truly entering a new phase. I would like to be optimistic. I would like to send a message of optimism and fighting spirit to the people of Cyprus.

KARAMANLIS STRESSES NEED FOR UNITY, MATURITY

NC272111 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1930 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Address by President of the Republic Konstandinos Karamanlis at a dinner in his honor on the occasion of the 28 October anniversary given by the commander of the 3d Army Corps at the Thessaloniki officers club on the evening of 27 October -- recorded]

[Excerpts] General, I thank you for your kind words. I beg you to be certain I feel particular happiness every time I have the opportunity to communicate with the country's armed forces. This is because I deeply appreciate the decisive role they play in the nation's fate. This truth is also confirmed by historic events, the anniversary of which we are observing today.

General, I have govened this country for a long time and I know better than anyone else the great significance of its defensive protection to the security and progress of a country. I cannot but feel satisfaction over the fact that the country's armed forces which are at a high level -- I would say the highest they have ever been -- offer us this valuable protection.

Free from the political factionalism of the past and dedicated to their national mission, the country's armed forces are a guarantee not only for the country's security but also for our people's freedom. It is for this very reason that all of us have the duty to protect them from any possible undermining actions which could disturb their unity of spirit and shake their own faith in their mission.

This becomes primarily imperative today [murmuring in the background] when the international situation is so confused that it allows no nation to feel secure. This truth applies much more to our country which, as you know, has critical national issues still unresolved.

Naturally, the security of a nation does not solely rely on its armed forces. It also relies upon the bahavior of the people themselves and their leaders. They are called upon to develop and strengthen the domestic front of the country. Experience has taught us that when we speak of the strengthening of the domestic front we must create the suitable psychological, political and economic prerequisites which will allow the armed forces to fulfill their mission. Experience, I have said, has taught us that if there is to be progress and security in a country, it is essential to have a steady and calm political life. In order to have political calm, however, it is necessary to have social calm and national unity.

All nations which ignore these truths, or rather all nations which have ignored these truths, entered into lengthy and painful adventures. Our troubled times offer us numerous examples -- some to emulate and others to avoid. Our political maturity and consequently the country's future will depend upon the options we make. I believe that if we avoid extremes and if all of us, and I mean the leaders and the people, demonstrate a high sense of responsibility, then we can look to the future with confidence.

I now call upon you to drink to the health of the conscripted sons of Greece, to the happiness of General and Mrs Panagopoulos, and to the progress of the Greek nation.

PAPANDREOU NATIONAL ANNIVERSARY ADDRESS

NC272136 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1930 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou's address on the occasion of Greece's 28 October anniversary marking the struggle against the German-Italian axis in 1940 -- read by announcer]

[Text] Greeks: On a day like this 41 years ago, all the Greek people rose to defend the fatherland to say no to the blusterous invader, and then the army, along with all our people, wrote the most heroic pages of our nation's contemporary history since 1821.

If at the time it was possible to repel the numerically superior enemy and subsequently chase him, it was due not only to the self-sacrifice of the drafted people and to the worthy military leadership, but also to the unanimous support of all Greeks who, as one man, rose to give a hand to the great cause of the fatherland's defense. This national army, this excellent brotherhood between the people and the army, this mobilization of every national potential, was at the time, still is and will forever be the indispensable condition for the defense of our national independence and national integrity.

At the time our country fought alone, with the exception of Great Britain which was mortally wounded, against the fascist hordes, while all Europe had been subjugated, when the greatest European armies had been disbanded. Our country offered an inestimable contribution to the total allied struggle by forcing the iron protected armies of Hitler to intervene at great cost and loss of time, something that was fatal for the final outcome of the war.

However, even after the unequal battle and the enemy occupation, these people remained unenslaved, continued the struggle against the brutal conquerors, and thus wrote the best pages of national resistance in our country's cities and mountains, a shining and eternal example for all the peoples of the world who want to be free.

Currently, clouds are again amassing, threatening international peace. Specifically in our area, the crisis is acquiring serious dimensions while various claims are being expressed from the East against us. At the same time, part of our national area continues to be occupied by foreign troops. We have made it clear that we desire a peaceful coexistence and cooperation with all peoples. We are determined to contribute with all our forces to the consolidation of peace and detente. Our country has nothing to claim against anyone. However, we have made it clear that we do not intend to cede even one inch of national territory, whether on land, sea or air. The declaration toward all directions that we are determined to follow our ancestral national tradition for the defense of our fatherland is the strongest factor for the consolidation of peace.

At this critical bend in our nation's history, the example of the [word indistinct] heroes of 28 October 1940 and of our national resistance constitute the brilliant lighthouse that shows us the road of national pride and struggle for our national independence and territorial integrity.

KIPRIANOU LEAVES ATHENS FOR HOME 27 OCT

NC271121 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1100 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Excerpt] The president of the Republic of Cyprus, Mr Kiprianou, has concluded his talks in Athens and left for Nicosia at 1030 today. In a statement before his departure, Mr Kiprianou said he is returning to Cyprus fully satisfied, and stressed that during his talks with Prime Minister Papandreou in Athens, absolute unanimity was established on all subjects. The Cypriot president added that he established there is strong interest by Mr Papandreou in the Cyprus issue as well as in his decision for Greece to play a more active role in the handling of the problem.

ULUSU GIVES VIEWS ON AEGEAN, NATO ISSUES

TA271549 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1538 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Text] Ankara, 27 Oct (AA) -- Mr Papandreou should very well know that Turkey is respectful of territorial integrity of all its neighbours and has no ambition to gain land from its neighbours, Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu stated today. Replying to an interview given by Mr Papandreou to an American television network, the prime minister said Mr Papandreou's statement was based on unfounded allegations. "Peace is the main principal of Turkey's policy not only towards Greece but to all," he added.

Answering a question by an ANATOLIA AGENCY reporter, Prime Minister Ulusu said he did not want to assess Greece's foreign policy on the basis of a statement given during the election campaign, but would rather wait until the government program. But Mr Papandreou's interview, based on unfounded allegations, compelled him to talk. He reminded that Head of State General Evren on September 9 speaking in Izmir said Turkey has no enmity to any nation, has no ambition to gain land from its neighbours. "We want to make the Aegean in the midst of us a waterway bringing us closer together in peace not separating us in emnity." It is not unknown to Mr Papandreou that Turkey wants to solve its problems through peaceful negotiations. While Mr Karamanlis was in power Turkey and Greece have signed an agreement for solving their problems through negotiations. It has continued up to this date.

It is true that there are substantial differences of view concerning the Aegean. It is also apparent that the question cannot be solved unilaterally and without taking international laws into consideration. Since both sides, in spite of differing views, have agreed to search for a peaceful solution to these problems, it is not logical to interpret Turkey's stand as a threat. If his reasoning is acceptable, any other country with a diverse opinion to Greece, should be considered an enemy of that country.

NATO agreements envisage the defensive cooperation of the member countries against a possible outside threat. An attack on one member is considered an attack on all the members. Under the light of NATO agreements, by asking protection against Turkey, Greece undermines the collective threat to NATO and contradicts NATO's common objective. It is up to the Greek Government to analyse the situation," [quote mark as received] the prime minister concluded.

ULUSU ADDRESSES FOREIGN JOURNALISTS AT MEETING

TA271749 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1635 GMT 27 Oct 81

["Text" of statement by Prime Minister Ulusu on 27 October to foreign journalists who attended the first meeting of the "Constituent" Assembly on 27 October]

[Text] Ankara, 27 Oct (AA) -- We all appreciate the valuable services rendered by you, the distinguished members of the press, in enabling a closer affinity between those living in various parts of our world, as well as providing them with the means for a better grasp of each others' problems. However, the prime requisite of your profession is to evaluate and reflect events and developments accurately. These words emanate from the fact that, unfortunately, Turkey is neither properly known nor its problems properly understood and reflected in the world. We welcome the close interest shown by our friends in the West. Yet, we expect them to spend more effort to understand those problems that are peculiar to us. Their constructive criticism is always taken into consideration. But I regret to say that some of the criticisms directed to Turkey, are totally unrealistic, let alone being constructive.

To be able to understand the realities of Turkey, one has to dwell on the significance of Ataturk and what he means for the Turks. I would like to emphasize that Kemalism, for us, is a philosophy both living and contemporary.

Within this philosophy special missions for the Turkish youth and Turkish Armed Forces are inherent. Ataturk has entrusted the protection of the republic and his reforms to the Turkish Armed Forces. This duty imposed on the armed forces is not only the (?current) will of the Turkish nation but also its guarantee. This responsibility compelled the Turkish Armed Forces to take the important decision on 12 September 1980. The Turkish Armed Forces, in the face of the conditions existing prior to 12 September when the unity and harmony of the country had been disrupted, with civil war imminent and mindful of the fact that no measures to rectify this situation could be effected, carried out the will of the nation by undertaking its duty of protecting and preserving the republic.

The head of state has summarized the aims of this action as follows:

1. To preserve national unity;
2. To establish security of life and prosperity by preventing anarchy and terror;
3. To establish and preserve the prevalence of the authority of the state;
4. To restore social peace, national understanding and unity;
5. To enable the functioning of the secular republic, based on social justice, individual rights and freedoms and human rights to function;
6. To restore civil government after passing the necessary legislation within a reasonable period.

The light that will illuminate our path to these goals will, as always, be the principles of Ataturk. As can be understood, the goals of 12 September are to remove all obstructions preventing the sound functioning of the democratic system in such a way that the necessity for such an intervention will never rise again, to preserve the national unity and integrity of Turkey, to ensure the welfare and happiness of the Turkish people. There will be no deviations whatsoever from these goals and the administration will be handed over to an elected government as soon as conditions in which the democratic regime can survive are established.

As I have just emphasized, the inauguration of the Constituent [as received] Assembly, which you have also attended is an important step in this direction. Turkey will move into a democratic parliamentarian system, because this system is the most appropriate and most suitable system of government for the Turkish nation. There should be no doubts that Turkey will move in this direction. I hope that you have made a useful visit to our country and will leave with fond memories. It will be a pleasure to see you among us on other occasions as well. May I express my best wishes for your success and happiness.

MALAYSIAN GENERAL CONCLUDES TALKS IN ANKARA

TA271819 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Text] Malaysian Ground Forces Commander Tan Sri Dato Zain Hashem has concluded his contacts in Ankara. The visiting commander was received today by Turkish Ground Forces' Chief of Staff Gen Mehmet Buyruk with a military ceremony. The Malaysia general then met with Ground Forces Commander Gen Nurettin Ersin as well as Air Force Commander Gen Tahsin Sahinkaya. After he visited Head of State General Evren at the office of the chief of staff, the Malaysian commander was received by the Naval Forces Commander Adm Nejat Tumer.

General Hashem will depart for Istanbul on 31 October after attending the Turkish National Day ceremonies in Ankara on 29 October. He will leave Turkey on 2 November.

TERCUMAN CRITICIZES ABOLITION OF PARTIES

NC271548 Istanbul TERCUMAN in Turkish 25 Oct 81 pp 1, 14

[Editorial by Nazli Ilicak: "The Hardening Atmosphere and the Press"]

[Text] When one is away from home, one's illusions about one's country are decorated with all kinds of colors. One tends to think of only the beautiful and the good.

One imagines that in a harmonious atmosphere where the pink, the blue and the green embrace each other, the dark days are left behind. Alas! This fascinating aura does not last. When the fascination of coming home is dispersed, the realities of Turkey assert themselves more vividly.

"The political parties have been abolished..."

Why... How can this deviation be explained at a time when we were rejoicing over the fact that we were returning to democracy step by step? The reasons given for this abolition are that the leaders were behaving in this or that manner. As far as we know, the leaders are banned from taking part in politics. Apparently, this ban is not enough so it was the turn of the political parties. What have these parties done? These parties were nourished and developed by millions of voters. They captivated the hearts of millions of voters. On the election nights they waited until morning to hear the election results.

If a political party is proved to have committed an offense, it is naturally liable to be abolished. But if this action is taken to give the creation of new parties a chance, then a wrong and useless path is chosen. The chosen path is wrong because a punishment is meted out without any offense in sight. It is useless because the electorate will spot these "contrived institutions" from the very first day and will refuse to use its votes in that direction.

We have been hearing unpalatable news even before the excitement over returning home died down. We have been advised "the atmosphere has hardened, be careful...." Though the Consultative Assembly has opened and the first step leading to democracy has been taken, our colleagues are discontented. Probably they are misinterpreting General Evren's speeches and are jumping to the conclusion that the atmosphere has hardened. But if we consent to bend our pens like reeds in the fact of these tough winds, we will not have the right to criticize any politician when democracy returns.

A few friendly professors are reported to have been disillusioned. We wanted to know why. General Evren is reported to have remarked: "These people would almost ask to be paid simply for holding only the edge of the flag." Members of the university belong to an intellectual society. We must not break away from them. In the same way, refraining from acts that hurt the feelings of the public and showing understanding toward the press which reflects and influences public opinion are attitudes which in the long run render the administration successful.

The abolition of the political parties and certain statements have created a general atmosphere of restlessness and many of our journalist colleagues have begun to feel the need to act more cautiously in face of the hardening atmosphere. So much so that feeling the need for caution, we had to scrap many passages from our article yesterday. This resulted in our article being published differently in various parts of the country.

When the country goes through an extraordinary period, the press representatives appreciate the need to help the military government. They discuss and weigh and consider every banner headline and they write every line after giving it deep thought. They scatter some balanced sentences in their articles so as to soften the style. And then one sees that, as a result of this "auto-censorship (!)," the criticisms have been left out and only the balancing sentences have remained, which means that the character of the article has changed although criticizing and pointing out mistakes is the greatest of services both to the government and to the country.

We hope that the rough winds will die down in the soonest time possible and that, in advancing toward common targets, acts which damage our unity and togetherness and which disillusion the intellectual, the public and the press will be carefully avoided.

DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 209 29 October 1981

AUSTRIA

Foreign Minister Pahr Comments on Talks With Haig [DIE PRESSE 28 Oct] E 1
Kreisky Meets With Saudi Crown Prince Fahd [KURIER 29 Oct] E 1

BENELUX

NETHERLANDS

Paper Voices Skepticism on Choice of Informateurs [DE VOLKSKRANT 19 Oct] F 1

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Schmidt, Fahd Discuss Arms, Prospects for Peace J 1
Israeli Envoy Warns FRG Over Arms to Saudi Arabia J 1
Schmidt Addresses DGB on Economic Problems J 2
Apel Modifies Comment on Soviet Influence J 2
Official Reports on Spy Exchange Progress J 2
Kohl Urges Intra-German Problems Be Raised in Nov J 3
CDU/CSU Official Arrives in Moscow for Talks J 3
Delegation Objects to Romanian Security Measures J 4
Hungarian Trade Minister Meets With Lambsdorff J 4

FRANCE

Paratroopers in CAR 'Ready To Intervene' in Chad K 1
Envoy Meets With Goukouni K 1
Leadership Changes Reported in Socialist Party K 1

ITALY & THE VATICAN

Defense Minister Remarks on Relations With Libya L 1
Ministers Discuss Civil Aviation Ties With USSR [AVANTI 16 Oct] L 1
Premier Spadolini To Visit UK 9-10 November L 1
Gabonese President To Visit 5-7 November L 2
India's Gandhi Plans Official Visit 9-12 Nov L 2
L'UNITA Reports Mexican CP-PCI Joint Communique [21 Oct] L 2

PORTUGAL

Envoy to U.S. Foresees Closer Defense Ties [DIARIO DE NOTICIAS 9 Oct] M 1

SPAIN

NATO: Calvo-Sotelo Replies to Felipe Gonzalez N 1
PCE Secretariat Dissolves EPK Central Committee N 1
EPK Rejects Dissolution N 1

NORDIC AFFAIRS

FINLAND

Virolainen Would Represent Center as Candidate P 1
Support for Virolainen [HUFVUDSTADSBLADET 27 Oct] P 1

NORWAY

Paper Understands Reagan Limited War Remark [AFTENPOSTEN 22 Oct] P 1

SWEDEN

'Sharp Protest' to USSR Over Submarine Episode P 2
Ministry Official Comments P 3
Admiral: Serious Violation P 3
Ljung USSR Visit Canceled P 4
Soviet Salvage Ships Barred From Incident Site P 4
Other Ships Off Coast P 4
Naval Readiness Condition P 5
Second Submarine Spotted P 5
Salvage Decision P 5

CYPRUS

Party Leaders To Meet With Papandreou in Athens R 1
Papaioannou Scheduled 30 Oct R 1
Kliridhis Visit Announced [I DHILINI 28 Oct] R 1
Papaioannou Speaks at AKEL Plenum 26 Oct [KHARAVYI 28 Oct] R 1

GREECE

KKE's Florakis Seeks Collaboration With PASOK [L'HUMANITE 20 Oct] S 1
Papandreou Receives Message From Hungary's Kadar S 2
Papandreou To Send Note on Cyprus to UK, Turkey [I DHILINI 27 Oct] S 2
Rallis, Averof Comment on Papandreou Interview [NEWS 28 Oct] S 3
Briefs: New Maruitian Ambassador; New Appointments Announced S 4

TURKEY

Prime Minister Ulusu Marks National Day T 1
Saddam Husayn Message T 1
More on Ulusu's Remarks to Foreign Journalists T 1
Turk-Is Praises Forming of Consultative Assembly T 2
Press Coverage of Papandreou Statements Reviewed T 2
Iraq Border Demarcation Agreement Ratified T 3
Talks With FRG on Visa Requirements End in Bonn T 3
OECD Official Comments on Aid Requirements T 3
Court Rejects NAP Trial Judges' Appeal T 4
Prosecutors Seek Death Sentence for 38 Militants T 4
Our Radio: NATO Plans New Pressures on Greece T 4
Our Radio on Nuclear Bomb Experiments in Area T 5
TCP Wants Freedom for Paraguayan Communist [Our Radio] T 6

FOREIGN MINISTER PAHR COMMENTS ON TALKS WITH HAIG

AU281312 Vienna DIE PRESSE in German 28 Oct 81 p 2

[Georg Possanner report on 26 October talks between Foreign Minister Willibald Pahr and U.S. Secretary of State Haig in Washington]

[Summary] Washington -- Foreign Minister Pahr, who is paying an official visit to the United States -- it is 15 years since an Austrian foreign minister visited Washington -- on 26 October had a talk with U.S. Secretary of State Haig. In his Washington talks, which were marked by an absence of any controversial issues, Pahr especially stressed the need to ease Austria's burden as a country of asylum for East European refugees.

"The American side expressed satisfaction about Chancellor Kreisky's having dissociated himself from PLO chief 'Arafat after his comments on As-Sadat's assassination. At the same time, the hope was expressed that Austria would now allow several months to pass before letting another PLO representative come to Austria. As Pahr stressed at a press conference after his talk with Secretary of State Haig, it is extraordinarily important for a neutral country in Central Europe such as Austria to be noticed not only by one but by both superpowers.

Here the foreign minister was obviously refering to the far more intensive program of visits with the Soviet Union. Pahr himself visited Moscow in 1978, and Chancellor Kreisky paid an official visit to Washington in 1974. Pahr, who had met with Haig only recently at the Cancun North-South summit conference, declared that he discussed with the Secretary of State three main problems: utilization of the elan of Cancun for a follow-up meeting, East-West relations, and the Middle East situation.

Commenting on the situation in Poland, Pahr said the government's use of the army to regain control of the country's development was in line with his expectations and made a direct foreign intervention unlikely at this stage. Should this attempt fail, however, the danger of Soviet intervention would become more imminent. Pahr mentioned the fact that there are 10,000 Polish seekers of asylum and another 10,000 persons from East European countries who came to Austria as "tourists" whom the country now has to take care of. In the field of bilateral issues, Pahr said, the question of the F-16 interceptors was also broached in his talks with Haig, but in this context he had drawn attention to the favorable French offer -- the fixed price and the more specific compensation deals regarding the Mirage 50 -- which had not been matched by a comparable offer from the American side.

KREISKY MEETS WITH SAUDI CROWN PRINCE FAHD

AU290911 Vienna KURIER in German 29 Oct 81 p 1

[Text] In the private Jumbo plane of the Sa'ud dynasty, Crown Prince Fahd arrived at Schwechat Airport on Wednesday evening for a very short visit with Chancellor Kreisky. Fahd was thus making up for a meeting with Kreisky that had been planned for the North-South summit meeting in Cancun but had to be postponed because of Kreisky's illness.

As Kreisky told KURIER, his talks with Fahd -- who to a large extent determines Saudi Arabia's government policy -- centered on the Saudi Arabian peace plan for the Middle East. Directly before coming to Vienna, Fahd had advocated this plan in the FRG when meeting Chancellor Schmidt. According to Kreisky, in his talks with Fahd neither the question of Austrian arms exports to Saudi Arabia nor that of Austrian participation in an international Sinai peace force were discussed. Crown Prince Fahd left Vienna on Wednesday evening.

NETHERLANDS

PAPER VOICES SKEPTICISM ON CHOICE OF INFORMATEURS

PM271721 Amsterdam DE VOLKSKRANT in Dutch 19 Oct 81 p 3

[Editorial: "Informateurs"]

[Text] The appointment of Labor Party [PVDA] economists De Galan and Halberstadt as informateurs is a logical consequence of the advice given to the head of state by the leaders of the parliamentary parties of the Christian Democratic Appeal [CDA], Democrats '66 [D'66] and PVDA after the cabinet crises. Any doubts surrounding the beginning of this attempt to repair the split are to do with the scope of the intentions behind this advice. It is to be feared that the parliamentary group leaders concerned themselves -- and will continue to concern themselves -- more with the immediate cause of the crisis than with the root causes and the chances of dynamic government policy after possible success in repairing the split.

CDA parliamentary group leader Lubbers wants to make the PVDA informateurs into a sort of hellfire-and-damnation preacher for his own party colleagues. The rule that "you pay for what you break" has always been something of a somber doctrine, but in the present situation it is nothing more than a pointless and misleading attempt to place all the blame on one party. Hopefully the informateurs will soon make it clear that they will not be party to this little CDA game.

They will have to reach greater clarity over the nature and the extent of the financial problems and the manner in which they have been handled in the Catshuis [official prime ministerial residence in The Hague] in recent weeks. What has been the role of the top civil servants? Has, as D'66 parliamentary leader Brinkhorst has said, CDA finance minister Van der Stee inundated his colleagues with new sets of figures and thus complicated decisionmaking? Has the financial situation deteriorated to such an extent that the government accord no longer helps as a compromise between the conflicting policy objectives of the parties involved?

Perhaps it will be possible for the informateurs to return the quarreling ministers to the point where the decisionmaking process really left the rails, after which with their help a draft budget for 1982 might still be found which would give the PVDA some reason for participating in the cabinet. But even if this were the happy outcome, nothing more would have been achieved than making it possible for the creaking railroad car to move forward again for a few months, so that those riding in it would not have to be at each other's throats immediately.

A patched-up vase is not necessarily a more beautiful vase. A cabinet which will have to tackle a large number of problems over a longer period should meet the requirements for a considerably higher level of mutual confidence and social motivation than can be achieved through a policy solution to a short-term disagreement. A new start would also have to have society's confidence, otherwise even the cleverest budget figures would only be so much paper.

It is therefore better that more ambitious action be taken not only in the policy sphere but also with regard to the cabinet's composition. And in such a way that the most important posts are filled by people who are less hampered by their political pasts, their figurehead functions and their hankerings after other coalitions and different policies. This is an extremely difficult and sensitive political operation, for which two economists -- no matter how competent they are -- from one of the parties are not the most obvious originators or attendants. There is bound to be useful work for them to do in the preparatory stage, but after that the government parties will hopefully muster the courage to tackle the bigger issues.

SCHMIDT, FAHD DISCUSS ARMS, PROSPECTS FOR PEACE

LD281730 Hamburg DPA in German 1624 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Excerpt] Bonn, 28 Oct (DPA) -- Saudi Arabia is still interested in German arms deliveries but has understanding for the situation confronting the Federal government, which has not yet finally formulated its future arms export policy. This assurance was given by the Saudi Crown Prince and deputy prime minister, Fahd ibn 'Abd al-'Aziz, to Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt in Bonn today. According to Government Spokesman Kurt Becker, the crown prince said that he wants his relationship with the chancellor to remain untroubled even if Bonn makes a negative decision.

The crown prince is on his way home from the North-South summit in Mexico. He stopped over in Bonn today to discuss current political and economic problems at lunch with the federal chancellor. The 2 and 1/2 hour meeting was said to have been "extremely friendly and cordial," and was attended by the foreign ministers, Hans-Dietrich Genscher and Prince Sa'ud al-Faysal, and the finance ministers, Hans Matthoefer and Shaykh Muhammad Aba al-Khayl.

Assessing the Middle East situation after the assassination of President Anwar as-Sadat, Schmidt and Fahd agreed that the new Egyptian president, Husni Mubarak deserves confidence, and both men called for support for Mubarak's political line. In this connection it is important to complete the evacuation of the Sinai peninsula as provided for in the Israeli-Egyptian peace treaty. Schmidt praised the peace plan put forward by Saudi Arabia in the summer as a "very constructive step" toward an overall solution for the Middle East.

Much attention was devoted to the North-South summit meeting of the 22 industrial and developing nations in Cancun at the talks. Both sides described its results as a "major success" and regretted the absence of the Soviet Union. The chancellor said that, together with France and Britain, he would work for the implementation of the common purpose achieved in Cancun. He highlighted Saudi Arabia's aid to the Third World, which, at $4 billion per annum accounts for 40 percent of the total aid of the oil exporting countries. Fahd thanked the federal foreign minister for his efforts in Cancun to secure agreement for the start of global negotiations designed to improve the world economic order.

The two government leaders said that their countries saw many international problems in similar terms. They laid great store by Bonn and Riyadh remaining "predictable friends." Schmidt praised Saudi Arabia's responsible international policy, including its oil and finance policy.

Government Spokesman Becker said that Schmidt and Fahd had agreed to keep in close touch. The chancellor renewed his invitation to Fahd to pay an official visit to the Federal Republic.

When Schmidt paid an official visit to Riyadh in April he had left open Bonn's response to Saudi Arabia's wish to buy German arms. Meanwhile, Bonn has given its consent to the delivery of 18 British-made FH 155-1 heavy field Howitzers to Saudi Arabia. This, NATO's most modern artillery, is produced jointly by German, British and Italian firms and all three governments must agree to its export.

ISRAELI ENVOY WARNS FRG OVER ARMS TO SAUDI ARABIA

LD281342 Hamburg DPA in German 1307 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Text] Munich, 28 Oct (DPA) -- The new Israeli ambassador in the FRG, Yitzhaq Ben-Ari, has warned the federal government about exporting Leopard tanks to Saudi Arabia. It is horrifying to imagine German tanks being turned against Israel, the diplomat said in an interview with the CSU organ BAYERNKURIER.

Jews saw German tanks the last time in the Warsaw ghetto. Such images stir up the past and open old wounds," Ben-Ari said.

"The Saudis are at war with us," the ambassador emphasized, "and in Germany there is a law which forbids selling arms to areas of tension." If the United States delivered arms to Saudi Arabia, then Israel would also disapprove of that. The United States, however, has "strategic influences which further the peace process." In contrast, "with German weapons many would remember a terrible and dark period."

SCHMIDT ADDRESSES DGB ON ECONOMIC PROBLEMS

LD290106 Hamburg DPA in German 1970 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Text] Dortmund, 28 Oct (DPA) -- Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt believes that major efforts are needed worldwide to stop the general recession from turning into a world slump. He told the 10th congress of salaried workers at the DGB in Dortmund today that not only West Europe but also communist states such as Romania and Yugoslavia are experiencing great economic difficulties.

He said that in the Federal Republic everything must be done to lower interest rates and stimulate investment. Lowering interest rates by two percentage points would do more for the economy and employment than any employment program, no matter how large, or a surcharge. For the first time in decades interest rates continued at a record level in spite of recession and unemployment. "We rely on our exports continuing to develop well and on a distinct improvement in our net current balance next year," he told the over 400 delegates present. He was convinced that the federal government had properly covered all risks in the coming year to the extent that they could be foreseen. "I can assure you that the present skipper will not leave the ship of the Federal Republic," he said.

APEL MODIFIES COMMENT ON SOVIET INFLUENCE

LD290130 Hamburg DPA in German 1723 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Text] Bonn, 28 Oct (DPA) -- Federal Defense Minister Hans Apel today modified and interpreted remarks on the peace movement in the Federal Republic which he had made to senior Bundeswehr officers at a conference in Ingolstadt yesterday. In a statement released in Bonn, Apel said:

"I expressly did not mean the peace movement when in the discussion I spoke of financial and organizational support from Moscow. I expressly meant the DKP groups or other k-groups [communist groups not subservient to or controlled by Moscow] whose sources of support have long been known. Regarding the 250,000 people who took part in the peace demonstration in bonn [on 10 October] I said: that has nothing to do with Moscow. The Muscovites must be told that they are as much opposed to the Soviet arms lead as to the possible deployment of Pershing and cruise missiles."

Apel spoke of ambiguous reporting of his remark yesterday. In the discussion he had replied to a general who had asked whether the peace movement was controlled by Moscow.

OFFICIAL REPORTS ON SPY EXCHANGE PROGRESS

LD290148 Hamburg DPA in German 1421 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Text] Bonn, 28 Oct (DPA) -- Except for the reuniting of families, the exchange program with the GDR in connection with the release of Guenter Guillaume, the spy in the chancellor's office, has been completed. This was announced by Heinz Kreutzmann, the parliamentary state secretary in the ministry of intra-German relations, at question time in the Bundestag today in reply to the opposition. He did not disclose the number of prisoners released by the GDR in exchange but referred to the detailed briefing on the operation given to the parliamentary control commission on 20 October.

He said that the reuniting of families would extend over a longer period. The GDR had strictly adhered to the agreement, he said. In view of the experience so far, one could rely on the completion of the family reunion scheme as agreed.

At the time of the release of Guillaume and his departure for the GDR it was believed that East Berlin would release 34 prisoners to the Federal Republic. The family reunion scheme is to cover about 3,000 persons.

KOHL URGES INTRA-GERMAN PROBLEMS BE RAISED IN NOV

LD291016 Hamburg DPA in German 0007 GMT 29 Oct 81

[Text] Osnabrueck, 29 Oct (DPA) -- CDU Chairman Helmut Kohl has urged the federal chancellor to raise intra-German problems at his meeting with Leonid Brezhnev at the end of November in Bonn. In an interview in today's NEUE OSNABRUECKER ZEITUNG, Kohl said that this is urgently necessary in view of the "considerable setbacks" in relations with East Berlin and the serious frontier incidents this week in which several escapees were injured. Brezhnev must be clearly told that detente and cooperation in Europe must also include an improvement in human contacts between the two parts of Germany. Brezhnev, if he wanted to, could considerably increase the GDR's scope for action with regard to the Federal Republic.

Kohl, who pointed to the close link between the chancellor's talks with Brezhnev and with SED chief Erich Honecker, said: "Mr Honecker must also be emphatically made aware of the fact that a substantial improvement in intra-German relations is also in the interests of the GDR." This would contribute much more to detente and peace in Europe than "many other things" would. Kohl was particularly critical that the federal government has repeatedly declared that it will not accept the drastic increase in the compulsory exchange figures although so far nothing has been done.

Kohl also said that he expects Brezhnev to be given a strong reminder of the joint declaration of 6 May 1978 in which both sides acknowledged the indivisibility of peace and security in all parts of the world and stated that it is important that nobody strives for military superiority. In contrast to this statement, the Soviet Union with its SS-20 medium-range nuclear missiles, calmly went ahead with its arms buildup and invaded a Afghanistan.

An edited version of the interview was prereleased to DPA.

CDU/CSU OFFICIAL ARRIVES IN MOSCOW FOR TALKS

LD281020 Hamburg DPA in German 0940 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Text] Moscow, 28 Oct (DPA) -- The deputy chairman of the CDU/CSU parliamentary party, Walther Leisler Kiep, arrived in Moscow on Wednesday on a 3-day visit to the Soviet Union. Kiep is there at the invitation of the USSR chamber of trade and industry, 3 weeks before the visit of state and party leader Leonid Brezhnev to Bonn. Kiep is the first politician from the union parties to visit the Soviet Union for quite some time. According to a union spokesman his journey is taking place in close consultation with the leader of the opposition, Helmut Kohl, and the CSU chairman, Franz Josef Strauss.

Kiep was welcomed at the airport by the first deputy chairman of the chamber of trade and industry, Pitovranov.

The CDU politician, leading candidate of his party for the coming elections in Hamburg, is accompanied by representatives of German firms, and wants to discuss prospects of economic cooperation during his visit. After a talk in the chamber of trade and industry, Kiep is expected in the Moscow Foreign Ministry in the afternoon. On Thursday, further talks in the Soviet Ministry of Foreign Trade and the state committee for science and technology are planned.

Kiep will spend his last day in Leningrad. There he will visit the "Hamburg days" which were opened last Thursday by the mayor of the Hanseatic city, Klaus von Dohnanyi. Prior to his journey Kiep also contacted Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher and Economics Minister Otto Graf Lambsdorff.

DELEGATION OBJECTS TO ROMANIAN SECURITY MEASURES

LD281928 Hamburg DPA in German 1747 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Text] Craiova/Sibiu, 28 Oct (DPA) -- A discord marred the third day of Federal President Karl Carstens's visit to Romania. In Craiova, a provincial city 200 km west of Bucharest, the Romanians departed in one point from the agreed program. They hermetically sealed off the center of the city so that the federal president had no chance to meet the population.

The German delegation expressed its displeasure to its hosts. Carstens told the Romanian minister for electrical engineering [title as received], Gheorghe Petrescu, who is accompanying him, that if the security precautions practiced in Craiova continued there would be an appropriate reaction in the German press. It was learned that the Romanian side spoke of "arbitrary actions by the local authorities".

The federal president was scheduled to speak to 200 students and professors in the hall of Craiova University on Wednesday. The Romanians prevented this by conducting Carstens and his party to the senior common room in which only some 40 people were seated. The federal president gave his lecture to this small circle. He suggested that more use should be made of German academic grants.

The next point on the program was a walk through the 200 meter pedestrian zone, which is usually very busy, to a hotel where they had lunch. The pedestrian zone and side streets were completely empty. All shops and restaurants were closed. A comment from the German delegation was: "How eerie."

It is hard to understand the behavior of the Romanian authorities since there are virtually no ethnic Germans among the 250,000 inhabitants of Craiova. Tonight Carstens arrived in Sibiu where 20,000 ethnic Germans live. Earlier he had visited a German-Romanian gearwheel factory in Resita.

On Thursday the president will visit a German school, the Evangelical church and Evangelical theological institute in Sibiu. He will make a trip to some nearby villages where ethnic Germans live.

HUNGARIAN TRADE MINISTER MEETS WITH LAMBSDORFF

LD291018 Hamburg DPA in German 1732 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Text] Bonn, 28 Oct (DPA) -- The Hungarian foreign trade minister, Peter Veress, who is accompanying Premier Gyorgy Lazar on his visit to Bonn, held talks today with the federal minister of economics, Otto Lambsdorff, and the Federal Food minister, Josef Ertl.

The Economics Ministry said that during the 1-hour talks with Lambsdorff they discussed the state of Hungarian-FRG economic relations and prospects for the future. Both sides are satisfied with the development of trade, which last year exceeded DM4 billion for the first time. According to the Federal Food Ministry, German agricultural imports from Hungary rose by over DM370 million in 1980, an increase of 11.1 percent.

PARATROOPERS IN CAR 'READY TO INTERVENE' IN CHAD

LD282136 Paris Domestic Service in French 2100 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Excerpts] The Quai d'Orsay denied just now that French forces stationed in the north of the Central African Republic had been put on alert. However, the paratroops of the 11th Division, equipped with armored vehicles and Puma helicopters, are ready to intervene at any time on order of the president. This preventive measure was announced late this afternoon due to the sudden heating up of the situation in Chad.

It is reported that a Libyan column has entered Ndjamena and that Colonel al-Qadhdhafi's armored vehicles are surrounding the airport and controlling the main routes in the capital.

Envoy Meets With Goukouni

NC291239 Paris AFP in English 1229 GMT 29 Oct 81

[Text] Paris, 29 Oct (AFP) -- President of Chad Goukouni Oueddei met the French charge d'affaires in Ndjamena today, the Foreign Ministry announced here today, adding that the situation in the Chadian capital was calm.

The ministry also denied that a column of pro-Libyan forces led by Foreign Minister Acyl Ahmat had entered Ndjamena.

The spokesman added that Mr Goukouni was scheduled to attend the Franco-African heads of state meeting which opens in Paris next Tuesday.

LEADERSHIP CHANGES REPORTED IN SOCIALIST PARTY

LD282132 Paris Domestic Service in French 1800 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Text] The Socialist Party committee has met. After the congress in Valence, we expected if not a redistribution of places within the Socialist Party leadership, then at least a new percentage for the various trends. This has now been accomplished. Here is Arlette Chabot:

Indeed, this has now been accomplished. From now on, everyone is represented within the party leadership for the next 2 years. The steering committee, which will be chaired from now on by Claude Estier, has just confirmed that Pierre Mauroy's and Michel Rochard's friends have joined the Executive Bureau and the National Secretariat -- the governing bodies of the Socialist Party. The places are almost equally distributed between Rocardians, Mauroyists and Ceresists [leftist trend represented by Chevenement], and the Mitterrandists have a majority everywhere. One can note, for instance, that the Rocardian Michel de La Fourniere becomes National Secretary for Human Rights and Freedoms. Another point: The holders of key positions remain the same. Behind Lionel Jospin we can find Jean Poperen in charge of elections and also ad interim first secretary. Then, Paul Quiles is still in charge of coordination and organization. No government member takes part in the party's leading bodies; but Pierre Joxe, leader of the Socialist group in the National Assembly and assembly chairman Louis Mermaz remain as members of the Executive Bureau.

Also worth noting is the setting up of a national secretariat in charge of information for the benefit of the rank and file, a necessity stemming from the "obligations of power."

We can draw the conclusion as regards these nominations pertaining to the Socialist Party's internal affairs that it is an overture to all trends that the big names of the "old Socialist Party members" are still there but that a few representatives of the latest generation of Socialists are emerging on the scene.

DEFENSE MINISTER REMARKS ON RELATIONS WITH LIBYA

AU271941 Rome ANSA in English 1934 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Text] Florence, 27 Oct (ANSA) -- Libya, an extremely wealthy nation, is far too strong militarily with respect to its real needs, according to Italian Defense Minister Lelio Lagorio. He made this remark in Florence Monday where he was taking part in a debate on world peace and international issues.

In giving a run-down of Italian foreign policy he said that if the Soviets withdrew their missiles pointed at Europe, the West would not install missiles in their own bases. As to the neutron bomb, Lagorio insisted that this was an American problem and that Italy had no need of such a weapon.

Speaking specifically on Libya, he noted the good economic relations that exist between Italy and Libya but added that Tripoli posed a complex problem. He said that Italy would have to deal with this problem with humility, while not forgetting the positive aspects of the Italian presence in that land in the past. An effort must be made, he said, to establish a good neighbor relationship between the two countries.

It was at this point that he commented on Libya's military might. He stressed that the installation of NATO missiles in Sicily was not meant as a warning to anyone but served exclusively to re-establish the balance of forces between East and West.

Lagorio some weeks ago was the target of a personal attack by Libyan leader Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi who called him a fascist in the pay of the CIA. After this incident, an American agency claimed that Libyan sources had sought to put pressure on Italian Premier Giovanni Spadolini to replace Lagorio in the defense post.

Asked about this allegation, Lagorio said that when he questioned Spadolini on this the premier laughed.

MINISTERS DISCUSS CIVIL AVIATION TIES WITH USSR

PM261119 Rome AVANTI in Italian 16 Oct 81 p 2

[Text] Yesterday Transport Minister Vincenzo Balzamo met the Soviet civil aviation minister, Marshal Boris Bugayev. The Soviet minister's visit, which follows one by former transport minister Senator Rino Formica to the USSR last year, took place within the framework of the system of exchanges that exists between Italy and the USSR between the countries' transport ministries and respective aviation companies.

Minister Balzamo's talks with Marshal Bugayev examined among other things ties between Italy and the USSR in the aeronautics sphere, especially concerning the possibility of increasing charter flights to facilitate tourism and cultural relations between the countries.

PREMIER SPADOLINI TO VISIT UK 9-10 NOVEMBER

AU221544 Rome ANSA in English 1510 GMT 22 Oct 81

[Text] Rome, 22 Oct (ANSA) -- Premier Giovanni Spadolini will make a work visit to London on November 9 and 10 at the invitation of British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, it was learned here today. The visit is to be seen in the context of regular consultations between the heads of government of the two countries, a Foreign Ministry communique said.

Spadolini will be accompanied by Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo and the visit was said to offer a chance for the two sides to discuss important topics of mutual interest.

GABONESE PRESIDENT TO VISIT 5-7 NOVEMBER

AU261543 Rome ANSA in English 1539 GMT 26 Oct 81

[Text] Rome, 26 Oct (ANSA) -- Gabonese head of state Omar Bongo will conduct a two-day state visit to Italy in November on the invitation of Italian President Sandro Pertini. An official communique released here today reported that the president of the west-central African country will be in Italy from November 5 to 7.

INDIA'S GANDHI PLANS OFFICIAL VISIT 9-12 NOV

AU281518 Rome ANSA in English 1511 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Text] Rome, 28 Oct (ANSA) -- Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi will make an official visit to Italy on November 9-12 at the invitation of Italian Premier Giovanni Spadolini, the prime minister's office announced here today.

L'UNITA REPORTS MEXICAN CP-PCI JOINT COMMUNIQUE

PM291133 Rome L'UNITA in Italian 21 Oct 81 p 17

[Text] Mexico City -- The joint communique signed by the PCI and the Mexican Communist Party [PCM] was released on Comrade Enrico Berlinguer's departure. Here is the text of the communique:

PCI Secretary General Comrade Enrico Berlinguer visited Mexico 15 through 19 October 1981 at the invitation of the PCM Central Committee. During his stay in Mexico, Comrade Berlinguer had conversations with PCM leaders and was briefed on the conditions under which the Mexican Communists are struggling for democratic regeneration and socialism in their country. PCI Secretary General Enrico Berlinguer had a cordial conversation with President of the Republic Lopez Portillo; he met with the top leaders of the six leftwing parties, with trade unionists and parliamentarians and with Mexican intellectuals. Comrade Berlinguer spoke at the closing ceremony of the 20th PCM Congress.

The open and friendly talks among the leaders of the two parties were attended by the following: For the PCI, together with Comrade Berlinguer, Antonio Rubbi, Central Committee member and foreign section chief; Renato Sandri of the foreign section; and Giorgio Oldrini, L'UNITA correspondent in Latin America. The PCM was represented by Secretary General Arnoldo Martinez Verdugo; and Marcos Leonel Posadas, Eduardo Montes and Ivan Garcia, members of the PCM Central Committee's Political Commission.

The two parties' representives exchanged information about the situation in their respective countries and on the two parties' policies. They expressed their profound concern at the exacerbation of the international situation, the threats to mankind posed by the arms race, and the extension in several parts of the world of military and political conflicts and tensions. They spoke out clearly against the production of the neutron bomb decided on by the United States.

The two parties agree on the need to develop in every country a major and united movement against the dangers of a nuclear disaster, for the resumption of negotiation, detente and cooperation among the states and peoples. They hope that negotiations between the United States and the USSR can lead to a real limitation and reduction of all kinds of medium-range nuclear weapons in Europe, and create favorable conditions for the resumption of negotiations for more general measures of balanced and controlled reduction of both strategic nuclear weapons and conventional forces, within mutual security.

To guarantee peace and justice in the world, it is necessary to halt the arms race and divert the vast sums of money currently being invested in this absurd race toward areas of the world suffering subhuman and backward conditions, poverty and famine. A real start must be made to the battle against the vast inequality that now exists between the industrialized countries and the vast majority of countries condemned to underdevelopment by colonialism and imperialism. Work must be done to build a new world economic order and international relations based on equitable trading and equality. In this direction, a useful role can be played by initiatives such as the international conference on economic cooperation due to take place in Cancun, Mexico, in the next few days. But the essential thing is that the North-South dialogue and a real start to rapid and fruitful global negotiations take place in their natural forum, which is and must remain the United Nations. Though the states are the direct protagonists in these negotiations, a major role awaits the peoples and particularly the working classes and the democratic and progressive forces of the capitalist and industrialized countries, who will be better able to tackle this pressing task set by the modern era the more they manage to carry forward within their own society a process of democratic regeneration and through transformation of economic, social and political life.

The Central American region is overrun by worrying tensions and is bristling with dangers. The development of revolutionary processes and the establishment of the peoples' independence, which has led to the downfall of some old and discredited dictatorial and repressive regimes, is being countered by the policy of U.S. imperialism, by its recourse to an economic and commercial blockade, by direct intervention, as in El Salvador, and by threatened acts of force.

The PCM and PCI express their solidarity with the Democratic Revolutionary Front-Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front [FDR-FMLN] and all Salvadoran patriotic forces against the junta's despotic and genocidal policy and for the country's freedom and independence. They express their approval of the French-Mexican communique, which recognizes the FDR-FMLN and urges a start to negotiations for a political solution to the conflict, which was also proposed by the Nicaraguan Government to the United Nations.

The two parties believe that it is necessary to facilitate every initiative aimed at surmounting the absurd U.S. economic blockade on Cuba and Nicaragua, whose peoples are committed to consolidating and developing the gains of their revolutions.

The Mexican and Italian communists expressed their solidarity with all democratic and revolutionary forces in Latin America and the Caribbean fighting against dictatorial regimes and for human rights, freedoms, national independence and democratic development in their countries. They stress the importance to this end of the trend toward the convergence and unitary cooperation of political and social forces and varied ideological and religious currents in this battle.

The two parties conducted a broad exchange of opinions on the struggle that the working class, the working and peoples masses are waging in the capitalist countries for democratic regeneration and for transformations in a socialist direction. They believe that, though working under different conditions in Mexico and Italy, the advance to socialism in their countries must pursue an original and specific path, the most prominent aspect of which is the acceptance of democracy as the fundamental strategic value. Furthermore, they believe that action for social change can constitute the area for fruitful cooperation among all leftwing and progressive forces, with the active involvement of broad Catholic masses.

The PCM and PCI confirm their desire to develop relations between their parties on the basis of the broadest autonomy and noninterference, internationalist solidarity and cooperation.

They announce their commitment to facilitate the intensification and development in all fields of relations between Mexico and Italy in the interests of both peoples. [dated] Mexico City, 19 October 1981.

ENVOY TO U.S. FORESEES CLOSER DEFENSE TIES

PM261141 Lisbon DIARIO DE NOTICIAS in Portuguese 9 Oct 81 pp 15-16

["Rhode Island correspondent" Eurico Mendes interview with Portuguese Ambassador to the United States Vasco Futscher Pereira: "Increasing Cooperation Between Portugal and the United States in the Defense Sphere" -- date not given]

[Excerpts] Vasco Futscher Pereira: Happily, in the political plane our relations with the U.S. are once more those of allies and friends conscious of common interests and of the convergence of positions which brings them together, both willing, in a spirit of candor and mutual respect, to collaborate wholeheartedly and unreservedly. But whereas this can be said today of the dialogue between our two governments, the same, unfortunately, cannot be said of our relations in many other spheres. Our economic relations with the United States fall far short of what they should be.

DIARIO DE NOTICIAS: Are you afraid that the Reagan administration has changed in the meantime? Are you afraid that the Reagan administration might be less open and amenable than the previous one in its dialogue with Portugal?

VFP: Not at all. On the contrary, in fact. I haven't been in Washington for long. I only arrived in May. But at all levels I have been aware of a very clear feeling of friendship for Portugal and its rulers and a sincere desire for closer ties. Note that the rhythm which our political contacts have developed in recent years has not altered these last 6 months: Prof Andre Goncalves Pereira came to Washington in March, less than 3 months after President Reagan took office. He was one of the first European foreign ministers to have talks with Secretary of State Haig. U.S. Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger visited Lisbon in May and, a few weeks later, welcomed Portuguese Defense Minister Azevedo Coutinho to the United States. The fact that in a mere 6 months our dialogue has been marked by three official visits of that level and significance is evidence of the importance which both Portugal and the United States now attach to their relations.

DIARIO: What was the purpose of the visits and what issues were discussed?

VFP: That is a natural question for a journalist to ask. It might be indiscreet for an ambassador to reply. But I will say this: Despite the differences -- and there are some -- between our viewpoints on or approaches to certain international problems, there exists today between Portugal and the United States a very broad convergence of interests and considerably agreement on the basic values which form the foundation of our societies, on the dangers which threaten them and the methods we will have to use to confront these dangers.

Awareness of this affinity has already made it possible to stimulate dialogue and to pursue it confidently. But the eighties began with international tension at an extremely grave level, which prompts all who share common ideas to try to make a concerted effort in the areas of defense and security. I will mention the Kampuchean crisis, the crisis in Southeast Asia, Soviet intervention in Afghanistan and the threat it poses to the Persian Gulf -- a region of vital importance to the West -- the progressive deterioration of the domestic situation in Iran, the war between Iran and Iraq and, finally, the Israeli-Arab conflict which is a long way from a comprehensive and lasting solution despite the great step forward accomplished by the Camp David agreement and the peace between Israel and Egypt.

Aside from all these reasons, the United States, conscious of the imbalance between, on the one hand, Soviet military power and, on the other hand, the Atlantic alliance's defense potential, is not putting at the top of its list of priorities the strengthening of its military arsenal, the consolidation of the alliances of which it is a member and the broadening of collaboration which, in the framework of the alliance or on a bilateral plane, it can get from its allies and friends. And Portugal is one of them. We are not strong militarily but we have geostrategic positions of vital importance in terms of the potential defense of Europe, positions which constitute almost obligatory access points if a crisis breaks out in one of the aforesaid areas and U.S. intervention, if only of a preventive nature, becomes necessary.

Military Cooperation

In this context it is no secret that for the past year our two governments have been exchanging impressions regarding the possibility of stepping up our cooperation in the defense field. For our part, by granting the United States certain facilities or extending the ones we are already granting it. On the U.S. side, by helping us reequip and modernize the Portuguese armed forces so that they can, first and foremost, perform their task as guarantors of our sovereignty and, at the same time, within the framework of the Atlantic alliance, perform the role that everyone recognizes as Portugal's but which we have never fully shouldered. With regard to our multilateral or bilateral cooperation, I hope that there will be no insurmountable divergences and no problems that cannot be satisfactory resolved, as long as the atmosphere of mutual frankness and good will in which our dialogue has been proceeding is preserved -- as I fully trust that it will. Because what is at stake in this dialogue are not just Portuguese interests or just U.S. interests, but interests to a large extent shared by both countries. It is not the price of any particular facility that is at stake but the preconditions for Portugal to be able actively and effectively to play the role unmistakably assigned to it by its strategic position.

But though centering on these aspects, our present dialogue is not confined solely to them. It has also broached some of the major political and economic problems of concern to the world today, with regard to which it is desirable for us to be well acquainted with our relative positions -- both those on which we agree and those on which we differ -- with a view to their possible coordination: the North-South dialogue; relations between the Western and Socialist blocs; cooperation within the major international bodies; the quest for peaceful solutions to the serious tensions that exist in the Middle East, Latin America and above all in southern Africa, where the tragedy of Namibia still involves the People's Republic of Angola, with which we have ties.

DIARIO: Do you therefore view with optimism the future of Portuguese-U.S. relations in a field of political cooperation? What about in other fields?

VFP: My outlook is no less optimistic in other fields. But they involve our interests much more than the interests that we share. Because, being realistic, it must be borne in mind that our cooperation, whether financial, industrial, agricultural, scientific, cultural, technological or in any other field, will always inevitably be much more in our interest than in the U.S. interest. In my opinion it is essential that we intensify our relations in these fields too, and I have no doubt that we can fully depend on U.S. goodwill and desire to cooperate with us. There is no lack of signs of this. But obviously the initiatives will have to proceed from us, and we must devote ourselves fully to them, boldly placing at their service resources -- which do not yet even exist -- for promoting them.

NATO: CALVO-SOTELO REPLIES TO FELIPE GONZALEZ

LD282302 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 2100 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Text] In the hour since our last report during the 2100 news bulletin, Prime Minister Calvo-Sotelo has replied to the speech by Felipe Gonzalez, and he has replied in that style which characterizes Mr Calvo-Sotelo: replying promptly to the questions put to him.

Among these replies Calvo-Sotelo has said, for example, that there was no consultation with the Spanish Army on the subject of entry into NATO, but rather a briefing. To Felipe Gonzalez's question of whether the government is thinking of maintaining the agreements with the United States if we join NATO, he said: Yes, the government is thinking of maintaining the bilateral relationship with the United States, but after entry into NATO this would be different.

Felipe Gonzalez also asked why the negotiations on the bilateral agreement with the United States were interrupted. Were they interrupted because the United States was aiming to put pressure on us in another way? Calvo-Sotelo said it was Spain who interrupted the negotiations with the United States because it had the negotiations for entry into NATO in view and this would naturally condition the bilateral treaty.

Felipe Gonzalez also asked how the matter was affected by the approval yesterday in the British House of Commons of British citizenship for the Gibraltarians. According to Calvo-Sotelo, from now on the situation will be better because the Gibraltarians, being British citizens, could return to Britain once the Rock had been decolonized.

Calvo-Sotelo also said it is best not to put ourselves under obligation with a treaty refusing nuclear arms because this would also be to give up sovereignty. Finally, he said the risk to Spain does not increase with entry into the Atlantic alliance, but rather that risk exists because of our geographic situation and entry into the Atlantic alliance will in any case be an element of deterrence which would reduce the risk.

At the moment Felipe Gonzalez, secretary general of the PSOE, is speaking and the session will probably go on for a while yet.

PCE SECRETARIAT DISSOLVES EPK CENTRAL COMMITTEE

LD261532 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 1500 GMT 26 Oct 81

[Text] The PCE Secretariat decided at a meeting today to dissolve the present Central Committee of the Communist Party of Euskadi [EPK] and form a new provisional central committee which will conduct the merger process with EIA Euzkadiko Ezkerra [Basque left] along different channels.

EPK Rejects Dissolution

LD250712 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 0700 GMT 24 Oct 81

[Excerpt] Early this morning at a meeting in Bilbao the Central Committee of the Communist Party of Euskadi [EPK] agreed to reject the resolutions adopted on Thursday by the Central Committee of the PCE in connection with the merger process with the Basque Revolutionary Party, the main party in the Euzkadiko Ezkerra coalition. The decision was taken with 32 votes in favor, 9 against and 1 abstention and means an effective rupture between the EPK and the PCE.

FINLAND

VIROLAINEN WOULD REPRESENT CENTER AS CANDIDATE

LD271386 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 1300 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Text] Diet Speaker Johannes Virolainen announced today that he will join the presidential election campaign. Virolainen said this afternoon that owing to requests from various parts of the country, he will be at the disposal of his party [Center Party] when it elects its presidential candidate. At the same time, Virolainen hoped the matter would be dealt with inside the Center Party with matter-of-factness, sincerity and discretion. Virolainen also noted that he is ready to cooperate with party activists and with the party leadership.

Support for Virolainen

PM281313 Helsinki HUFVUDSTADSBLADET in Swedish 27 Oct 81 p 7

[Text] The Finnish People's Unity Party would support Diet Speaker Johannes Virolainen in the coming presidential election. Party Chairman Anssi Keski-Vahala announced in Kouvola yesterday that the party's future representatives in the electoral college would cast their votes for Virolainen, of the Center Party.

If the Center Party does not nominate Virolainen, the Unity Party is considering whether to ask him to run as candidate for a popular front supported by all the nonsocialist parties, Keski-Vahala said.

NORWAY

PAPER UNDERSTANDS REAGAN LIMITED WAR REMARK

PM261045 Oslo AFTENPOSTEN in Norwegian 22 Oct 81 p 2

[Editorial: "Reagan Drops a Brick"]

[Excerpts] President Ronald Reagan's remarks about the possibility of the limited use of nuclear weapons in a future conflict in Europe are hardly indicative of a new U.S. nuclear strategy. The fact that they nevertheless have caused a storm in Europe, and in West Germany in particular, is primarily explained by the agitation against NATO's nuclear defenses which is being pursued in certain quarters on this side of the Atlantic.

Even though Reagan spoke in general terms and was answering a rather imprecise question, there is little reason to interpret the President's words as plans to limit a nuclear war to Europe. On the contrary, they seem to be in full agreement with the strategy the NATO nations have long been agreed on, and a great deal of anti-American suspicion is needed to interpret them as proof that the United States is now contemplating "Europeanizing" a nuclear conflict so as to avoid a devastating intercontinental missile war with the Soviet Union.

Such a notion is all the more unthinkable when we remember that the U.S. forces in Europe and their families total around 500,000 people. No U.S. Government would consider sacrificing them as cannon fodder.

Ever since the so-called "big bang" strategy was abandoned 20 years ago, NATO strategy has been that, attacks are to be met with the smallest possible deployment of arms in the hope of bringing the attacker to his senses and avoiding a full-scale nuclear war. The tactical nuclear weapons could play a role in this connection, as President Reagan pointed out.

Reagan should have chosen his words better. At the present time nuclear strategy is the object of criticism from the left in European politics -- especially in West Germany, where it has resulted in a split in the ruling SPD. The U.S. NATO partners in Europe are therefore best served by unambiguous and reassuring language from the U.S. President on this literally life-and-death issue. Seen in this context, Reagan's remarks did drop a brick.

SWEDEN

'SHARP PROTEST' TO USSR OVER SUBMARINE EPISODE

LD281830 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 1700 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Text] Foreign Minister Ola Ullsten today summoned Mikhail Yakovlev, Soviet ambassador in Stockholm, and delivered a sharp protest [concerning the Soviet submarine that ran aground] saying, among other things, that the submarine had no permission to enter Swedish waters and that there had been no contact with Swedish authorities. The Swedish Government views this gross violation of Swedish entry regulations very seriously, the protest note says. Our reporter (Thorbjoern Wrang) met Ullsten a moment ago after his meeting with the Soviet ambassador:

[Begin recording] [Question] Foreign minister, what comment did the Soviet ambassador make after this note of protest?

[Answer] We received no comment from the Soviet authorities; only an explanation from the submarine captain, which we have not found acceptable, but we expect of course that the Soviet Government will come back fairly soon with an explanation as to why they have a submarine far inside Swedish territorial waters.

[Question] What explanation did the captain give?

[Answer] Well, that it was an accident. But we cannot accept this, since the submarine is in a position so far inside the archipelago that our experts regard it as almost totally unlikely that it reached there without first having deliberately sought Swedish waters.

[Question] What will the Swedish stance be if the Soviet Union demands that it be allowed to salvage the vessel from Swedish waters?

[Answer] We will reject it if it is a question of salvaging it where it now lies, since it now lies not only in Swedish waters but also in a restricted military area. For that reason we cannot permit foreigners, whether they come by ship or any other means, to visit the site.

[Question] Is it to be expected that the Soviet Union will put forward such a request?

[Answer] I shouldn't think so. The regulations we have and they have must be clear to them.

[Question] What will happen to the vessel?

[Answer] We shall of course have to maintain contact with both the vessel and the Russian authorities. We must of course see that the vessel is salvaged and that nothing happens to the crew.

[Question] How does all this affect relations between Sweden and the Soviet Union?

[Answer] Well, it isn't exactly to (?anyone's) advantage that a big power should violate Swedish territory in this way, displaying the kind of inquisitiveness we have seen here, and for that reason we have protested in very sharp terms.

[Question] Do you think this incident is in any way connected with the crisis in Poland?

[Answer] No, I can't believe that. It is serious enough as it is. [end recording]

Ministry Official Comments

LD282322 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 2100 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Interview with Permanent Under Secretary of State Leif Leifland at the Foreign Ministry 28 October -- recorded]

[Text] [Leifland] When the Soviet ambassador called on me this evening at 1800 he asked that three Soviet tugs and a hydrographic vessel be permitted to go to the accident site tomorrow, Thursday, to refloat the submarine.

[Question] What did you reply?

[Answer] The reply was no.

[Question] And the reason?

[Answer] The reason is simply that this submarine ran aground not only in Swedish territorial waters but in a restricted military [words indistinct] ships of the Swedish Navy will enter the area [word indistinct]. It is the duty of the Swedish Government to see that the submarine is refloated.

[Question] If the Soviet captain is not cooperative, can constraint be resorted to?

[Answer] When I met the Soviet ambassador this evening I said that we take it for granted that the Soviet captain will receive instructions to be cooperative. We assume he will be.

[Question] Did the ambassador have any (?very important) [words indistinct] explanation for the accident?

[Answer] He said this submarine, with registration number 137, with a (?range) of [words indistinct] and for that reason got off course and ran aground.

[Question] Did he say whether one could prove through log books or other documents, for example, that it really happened that way?

[Answer] No, he did not. He had just received his information from Moscow.

Admiral: Serious Viclation

LD281848 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 1700 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Text] We have a comment from the chief of the Defense Staff, Vice Admiral Bengt Schuback, who views the grounding of a Soviet submarine in Swedish waters as a serious violation:

[Begin recording] [Schuback] I view this very seriously. To start with we have a serious violation of Swedish territory. This submarine is deep inside our territory, in the archipelago, the Karlskrona Archipelago, and that is rather unique.

[Question] The submarine is lying in a Swedish prohibited area. Does that mean that you would be able to permit a Soviet salvage effort?

[Answer] In my opinion, no, for the reason that you hint at. In my opinion, this must be done with Swedish resources.

[Question] Does this violation affect relations between Sweden and the Soviet Union?

[Answer] It is not up to me to say anything about that. I can only say it is a remarkable, unique, demonstrated violation of Swedish territory as viewed in accordance with prevailing international rules. These are facts. You cannot get away from that. [end recording]

Ljung USSR Visit Canceled

LD291050 Stockholm International Service in Swedish 100 GMT 29 Oct 81

[Text] Gen Lennart Ljung, commander of the armed forces, will cancel his planned visit to the Soviet Union 19-21 November. Naturally the reason is to be found in the incident involving the Soviet submarine which is grounded in the Karlskrona Archipelago. This has been discribed by the government as the most serious violation of Swedish territory in a very long time. General Ljung will inform Marshal Ogarkov, chief of the General Staff of the USSR Armed Forces, that he thinks the time is unsuitable for an official visit to the Soviet Union. The commander in chief had talks this morning with the government on further action in the submarine affair.

Meanwhile, Swedish territorial waters have been subjected to another Soviet violation. Swedish naval vessels received (?warning) that a Soviet salvage vessel had entered the national limits, but it had to retreat quickly to international waters again. The Soviet ship belongs to the Soviet flotilla now lying outside Swedish territory awaiting further developments. The Swedish Government, however, has rejected the request to allow Soviet ships into Swedish waters to salvage the submarine, which, moreover, is in a Swedish military area.

Swedish tugs and salvage ships are now ready to go to Gasfjarden to pull the submarine off the rocks. The Soviet submarine is not thought to be badly damaged and able to move under its own power after refloating. What will happen next is still unclear.

SOVIET SALVAGE SHIPS BARRED FROM INCIDENT SITE

LD282306 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 2100 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Summary] A Soviet submarine is aground deep inside Swedish territorial waters off Karlskrona. "This evening, four Soviet military vessels -- two destroyers and two salvage vessels -- are lying just outside Swedish territorial waters. The Soviet ambassador has asked if they may go in to salvage the submarine, but Sweden refuses to let the Soviet vessels in. (Tore Rundgren) reports from Karlskrona:

[Begin recording] "According to Capt Gunnar Rasmusson at the Karlskrona naval base, it has now been established that the submarine was submerged when it passed the radar control point in the outer archipelago. Nobody in the navy gives any credence to the Russian captain's claim that the cause of his running aground was a fault in the submarine's radar. The submarine can remain in one place for about 2, perhaps even 3, weeks before any problems arise onboard. Its batteries are charged by its (?diesel) engines and no doubt there are provisions onboard for a considerably longer period. The submarine's home base is Kaliningrad. According to unconfirmed reports, the Karlskrona (?acting) provincial prosecutor, Bengt [name indistinct], is considering charging the captain of the Russian submarine with espionage." [end recording]

Other Ships Off Coast

LD282332 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 2100 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Excerpt] Sweden's chief of the general staff, Vice Admiral Bengt Schuback, said this evening that 10 Warsaw Pact warships had arrived off Sweden's 12-nautical-mile territorial sea limit south of Karlskrona.

Naval Readiness Condition

LD291148 Stockholm International Service in English 1100 GMT 29 Oct 81

[Excerpt] Despite the Swedish refusal, units of the Warsaw Pact Baltic Fleet are now offshore just outside Swedish territorial waters. Late last night 10 Warsaw Pact vessels were said to be assembled, including two destroyers. The Swedish Defense Department has increased its state of readiness. Several naval vessels left the Stockholm base destined for the area and two salvage ships left Gothenburg on the west coast.

The chief of the Defense Staff, Vice Adm Bengt Schuback, commenting on the incident Wednesday night, said it is hardly likely that the Soviets will make any attempt to enter the area, but should this occur, the Swedish armed forces would foil such an attempt.

Apparently this morning a Soviet salvage vessel did try to enter Swedish waters to get to the submarine, but was prevented from doing so by units of the Swedish Navy.

Second Submarine Spotted

LD291142 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 1130 GMT 29 Oct 81

[Text] Another foreign submarine was discovered today in Swedish waters off the Bleking Archipelago. The periscope of the submarine was seen at about 0830 by a navy helicopter. It was then about 5 nautical miles south of Utklippan and thus clearly within Swedish territorial waters. An hour ago the helicopter made radar contact with the submarine.

Salvage Decision

LD291428 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 1400 GMT 29 Oct 81

[Text] The government has now decided that the Soviet submarine grounded in the Karlskrona Archipelago is to be salvaged by Swedish personnel. The government has also requested the commander in chief to investigate the circumstances surrounding the submarine's violation of Swedish territory. Depending on the results of the investigation, a decision will then be taken on when and how the submarine is to be returned to the Soviet Union.

In Karlskrona preparations have already been made for taking care of the crew of the grounded submarine.

This morning Swedish territory was violated by another foreign submarine. Helicopters equipped with depth charges and hydrophones went out to drive the foreign submarine away.

PARTY LEADERS TO MEET WITH PAPANDREOU IN ATHENS

Papaioannou Scheduled 30 Oct

NC272228 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1730 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Text] An AKEL statement says that after the necessary consultations, AKEL Secretary General Papaioannou will go to Athens to meet Greek Prime Minister Papandreou next Friday. The statement adds that during the meeting there will be a discussion of the Cypriot issue in relation to the policy of change in Greece, as well as of developments in our area. Papaioannou will also meet other political leaders in Greece.

Kliridhis Visit Announced

NC281140 Nicosia I DHILINI in Greek 28 Oct 81 p 1

[Excerpt] As already announced, Democratic Rally Chairman Glavkos Kliridhis will visit Athens next week within the framework of new Greek Prime Minister Papandreou's desire to have the views of all Cypriot political parties on the Cyprus issue. The Kliridhis-Papandreou meeting will review all developments of the Cyprus issue, particularly after the submittion of the Waldheim ideas.

PAPAIOANNOU SPEAKS AT AKEL PLENUM 26 OCT

NC281212 Nicosia KHARAVYI in Greek 28 Oct 81 pp 1, 3

[Excerpts] Last Monday AKEL Secretary General E. Papaioannou addressed the fifth plenum of the party's Central Committee and Central Control Committee. He said that the AKEL Political Bureau has unanimously decided that the most responsible way of handling the UN secretary general's "ideas" is to study them carefully and responsibly at the National Council. He added that if this study proves there are positive elements promoting the intercommunal talks, we should accept them while we should reject the negative ones and submit our counterproposals.

The AKEL secretary general's reference in his report to the international and domestic developments reads as follows:

We are meeting at a time which is exceptionally critical for the fate of mankind.

The aggressive cold war policy that has been inaugurated by U.S. President Reagan and is supported by British Prime Minister Thatcher and some other NATO quarters includes fatal dangers for all of mankind.

The nuclear arms race, to which the hawks of U.S. imperialism are leading mankind today through their policy, can have only one result, which is nothing else but thermonuclear extermination. This extermination will also envelop the United States in its flames as well as other countries.

Our hard suffering people, who are waging a struggle for survival and liberation, have every reason to be concerned more than anyone else over world tension and the nuclear arms race. At the same time, it is very well known that the "British sovereign bases" on Cypriot territory have recently started becoming more active and also are being used by the U.S. imperialists as a bridgehead for their aggressive policy in the eastern Mediterranean and the Middle East. This represents a mortal danger for Cyprus because, in the event of war, the Cypriot people will be threatened with extermination. This is the reason the battle for the abolition of the British bases and the complete demilitarization of Cyprus is directly linked with the very existence of the Cypriot people.

Tension is growing in the eastern Mediterranean and Middle East region, and the war clouds are becoming darker. The recent assassination of President as-Sadat, which is the result of the Camp David treason, has been used by the U.S. imperialists as an opportunity for their further interference in Egyptian domestic affairs.

The recent victory of the democratic forces of change in Greece is an event of great significance, not only for the Greek people, but also for the people of the eastern Mediterranean and Balkans and the other people of the world. The implementation of the PASOK leader's preelection declarations about Greece's withdrawal from NATO and the EC would be of particularly great significance.

However, while in Greece the democratic forces of change have won a brilliant victory, oppressive and dictatorial measures against the people and their democratic organizations are continuing in Turkey by the dictatorial military regime. It is within this general background of international developments that the Cyprus issue has entered a new, critical phase following an entire year of fruitless intercommunal talks.

What should be stressed is that any "ideas" or "evaluations" of the UN secretary general must essentially be based on the relevant UN resolutions on Cyprus and the summit agreements.

And something else: The UN secretary general's ideas are not binding. We are only bound by the UN resolutions and the summit agreements, and we will not accept anything that dictates merely the good offices of the UN secretary general. We unquestionably reject the faits accomplis created by the invasion and occupation. We firmly and unwaveringly insist on a truly independent, sovereign, territorially integral, federal, nonaligned and demilitarized Cyprus.

This is AKEL's position on handling the Waldheim ideas and the consistent line toward a Cyprus solution which AKEL is implementing.

Some political circles, both in Cyprus and Greece, hastened to reject the "Waldheim ideas," describing them as partitionist even before they became aware of them. This way of handling the matter can bring about only a loss to the Cyprus cause.

At the same time, some quarters maintain that the Turkish occupation troops should withdraw from Cyprus before we enter into talks with the Turkish Cypriots. I do not believe there is anyone who would not want such a thing. As Turkey declares, however, the Turkish occupation troops will not leave before an agreement is reached between the Greek and Turkish Cypriots. And since they will not withdraw, the question arises: Should we sit and wait until they withdraw in order to enter into talks with the Turkish Cypriots? Should we drive them out by force? If we could do so, why not? They are aggressive occupation troops and we have every moral prop. However, who can seriously maintain that it is possible to drive them out by force? But, even if it was ever possible to drive them out with a sudden attack -- something improbable -- would Turkey accept a defeat from Cyprus? These are some questions that should drive into serious thinking those who support solutions by the use of force.

Along with the other patriotic, democratic forces of the Cypriot people, AKEL has also welcomed the brilliant victory of the democratic forces of change in Greece and has expressed the hope that there will be more active support of the Cypriot people's just struggle. We will wait and judge accordingly.

We are prepared to applaud Mr Papandreou and praise him to the utmost if, responding to his preelection declarations, he pulls Greece out of NATO. Such a gesture will most greatly help the Cypriot people's liberation struggle.

KKE'S FLORAKIS SEEKS COLLABORATION WITH PASOK

PM280951 Paris L'HUMANITE in French 20 Oct 81 p 8

[Serge Leyrac interview with Communist Party of Greece-Exterior Secretary General Kharilaos Florakis in Athens 19 October: "A Great Desire for Change"]

[Excerpts] So Greece opened a new chapter in its history Sunday. What is behind this very clear victory by the forces advocating change? Why, although gaining ground, did the Communist Party of Greece [KKE] benefit less from the people's desire for change than the Panhellenic Socialist Movement [PASOK]? Why were the issues of NATO, the U.S. bases in Greece and the Common Market central to the debate? What are the priorities now for attaining the expected change?

These are all questions which KKE Secretary General Kharilaos Florakis tried to answer during an interview granted to L'HUMANITE.

[Florakis] "After the dictatorship's collapse, the people expected new solutions. Their hopes were dashed. This time, therefore, they sought a way out by turning to the forces which have advocated change."

Greece's problems are primarily those of national independence, democracy and economic development.

"The aspiration of broad sections of society was so strong," he explained, "that despite domestic and foreign obstacles, the people expressed their will in the way we have seen." This does not mean, he explained, that PASOK, which won the vast majority of the votes cast by these sections of the population, fully expresses those aspirations.

"PASOK expresses the interests of the underprivileged. This category," he said, "can include many people -- including Yeoryios Mavros, big capital's representative."

To whatever extent PASOK really expresses the people's aspirations, the election has shown how much the people want change, Florakis also noted. So why has the KKE not benefitted from the trend toward change to the same extent? This is because, Kharilaos Florakis explained, "it must be admitted that the Communist Party's real strength and influence are never faithfully reflected in election results.... In addition to the factors which work against them in the capitalist countries, there are factors which are specific to Greece. The people still do not see that the KKE can become a government party. This state of mind still prevails among broad sections of the masses. But the essential thing is still this very strong aspiration for change which, in the voters' view, should be introduced by PASOK."

The main thing, he added, was to eliminate the right, and people identified that with a majority for PASOK. "The KKE considers that it is a great success to have emerged stronger from this test at a time when there was such a strong trend in PASOK's favor."

One of the reasons for the right's defeat is to be found in its pro-American policy and its adherence to the Common Market. "This is a crucial problem which must be solved urgently for the Greek people. The nature of NATO is the same for all the member countries. But the repercussions vary from one country to another. There are the big NATO countries which decide, and there is Greece which only receives orders." It is national sovereignty which is at stake.

In practical terms, he recalled, Greece is part of the same alliance as Turkey in defending itself against a possible aggressor. Nonetheless, NATO did not flinch and even encouraged the Ankara leaders' chauvinistic designs when they invaded a part of Cyprus. Similarly, the Greeks have not forgotten NATO's support for the colonels' dictatorship.

As regards the military bases in Greece, "there is a great risk of seeing Greece involved in U.S. imperialism's adventures in the Mediterranean basin." The Americans have a vital interest in preserving their bases in Greece, which explains the "interest" they have in the country's internal development and why they combat the forces hostile to them.

As for the Common Market, people have been able to assess its real value in a few months. "The farmers see that sowings and production prices are decided in Brussels. People said that the Common Market constituted a market of 240 million consumers for them; thousands of hundredweight of fruit had to be dug into the ground this year."

Nonetheless, there is no hierarchical order in the problems to be solved. National independence, democracy and economic development form an interdependent whole. Thus, "to achieve economic development, we say that it is necessary to end the control exercised by the national and multinational, especially U.S., monopolies; if the government tries to do that, the monopolies and the United States will immediately react to prevent it. National independence and economic development are, therefore, very closely linked. Moreover, the scope and depth of the solutions used depend on the balance of forces."

During the election campaign, PASOK made frequent reference to the situation in France after 10 May. However, PASOK has hitherto rejected the proposals for cooperation made by the KKE to bring about change. "Of course, there are serious difficulties with PASOK because it does not express the interests of a single social force. The proof is that it is supported by the Lambrakis press group which is one of big capital's most important representatives. We think," Kharilaos Florakis said, "that a real change is impossible without cooperation with the Communists."

PAPANDREOU RECEIVES MESSAGE FROM HUNGARY'S KADAR

NC282222 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1930 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Text] Papandreou received Hungarian Ambassador Dobos who handed him a message from the first secretary of the Central Committee of his country's socialist party, Janos Kadar. The message is as follows: Please accept my most cordial congratulations on your party's election victory and your appointment as prime minister. I sincerely wish that you may complete your term of office successfully, serving your country's interests and the Greek people's prosperity. The opportunity I had of meeting you personally has convinced me of your dedication to peace and your frank position for the development of relations between countries with differing social systems. I am steadfastly convinced that at the head of your government you will work for the same purpose and will promote the mutually beneficial cooperation of our two countries and the strengthening of friendship between our two peoples. I wish you success in your responsible activity and good health to you personally.

Papandreou thanked the Hungarian ambassador for his visit and the message from Kadar, which he described as a great honor, and stressed that during his recent visit to Hungary he had ascertained the great progress of the country's people. He also stressed that he will exert every effort to strengthen Greek-Hungarian relations.

PAPANDREOU TO SEND NOTE ON CYPRUS TO UK, TURKEY

NC271311 Nicosia I DHILINI in Greek 27 Oct 81 p 1

[From the I DHILINI office]

[Text] Athens, 27 Oct -- Greece intends to send military forces to Cyprus unless Turkey withdraws its occupation troops soon.

According to autoritative information, Prime Minister and Minister of National Defense Mr Papandreou is determined to send a military force and arms to Cyprus proportional to that of the Turkish occupation troops. The same source says that the Greek Government will send a pertinent note to Turkey and to Britain, which is the third guarantor power. The note will stress that the presence of the Turkish occupation troops in Cyprus is contrary to the Zurich and London agreements and that Turkey's refusal to comply gives the right to Greece -- as a guarantor power -- to send an equal number of troops because the Turkish troops are a threat to the independence of the Republic of Cyprus.

The note will also stress that the occupation troops are in Cyprus despite pertinent resolutions by the United Nations and other international organizations. It is recalled that in the past, Mr Papandreou has called on the New Democracy government to assume its responsibilities of a guarantor power toward Cyprus.

The issue of sending Greek military forces to Cyprus was discussed during the talks of President Kiprianou with Mr Papandreou without, however, adopting final decisions.

According to authoritative information, this issue, coupled with the whole defense shielding issue of Cyprus, will constitute the object of a large meeting to be held soon at the Pentagon. This meeting will be attended by the military leaders of Greece and Cyprus and the Cypriot Defense Minister Mr Veniamin, who -- as it was officially confirmed yesterday -- will soon go to the Greek capital "for reasons of getting acquainted" with the Greek Government.

RALLIS, AVEROF COMMENT ON PAPANDREOU INTERVIEW

NC281548 Athens NEWS in English 28 Oct 81 p 12

[Text] Leader of the main opposition party, Yeoryios Rallis, referring Monday to Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou's interview on ABC television, stated that the New Democracy leadership did not consider it expedient to comment on the prime minister's interview for two reasons; one, because the matters discussed in the interview concerned the content of the forthcoming new Greek-U.S. negotiations and any comment of substance was likely to weaken the Greek position; two, because the policy of the new Greek Government was to be completed and announced during the debate in Parliament on its policy statement, and the New Democracy party would then elaborate its points of agreement and disagreement with Mr Papandreou's policy.

Sunday's appearance by the prime minister on U.S. television, "apart from its excellence in terms of dexterous speaking and dexterous siding away, also had many dangerous weaknesses," former Deputy Premier National Defense Minister Evangelos Averof said Monday. In a statement to the press, Averof said the New Democracy governments had conceded to Turkey not even a letter of Greece's rights as defined by international law.

Averof wondered what the Papandreou government would do if it should be unable -- "as we [the New Democracy] were unable" -- to solve matters such as the Aegean air space and the continental shelf through dialogue or arbitration, or if Turkey intervened with acts of commission or commissions in these matters.

"Greece has never been afraid of using arms and will not fear them if its honour or integrity are offended," Averof stressed.

The prime minister, Averof added, described very well the somewhat peculiar position of Greece within NATO, and consistently demanded U.S. guarantees for the integrity of Greek borders against a possible threat from an alliance member.

He was right to do so, Averof went on, for such a guarantee would have a moral value. However, in case of a successful sudden act at Greece's expense, "I do not see the U.S. forces fighting on our side against a NATO member to restore our country's integrity. As a result, the most important thing is that we should be capable of full and immediate defense of our borders. If the guarantee is given together with the observation of this prerequisit, then it adds something. Otherwise, it is useless."

Averof said that the prime minister's beautiful appearance on television Sunday had some serious weaknesses, concerning complex and delicate matters. These were: the nuclear imbalance, stressed not only by the U.S. but also by the French president; the establishment in Athens of a Palestinian Embassy, which has both positive and negative aspects, and others "I would rather not mention because of their sensitivity."

In any case, Averof stressed, "We, the members of the New Democracy party, do not want to exercise opposition for the sake of opposition. We wish the government success. We wish it to achieve, if possible, as much as we have achieved. To this end we shall exercise constructive opposition. This is exactly what I am trying to do with these statements since the prime minister has commented on matters of basic importance for Greece's future before an international audience."

BRIEFS

NEW MARUITIAN AMBASSADOR -- The Foreign Ministry announced that the government gave its consent for the accreditation of (Louis Josef Raymond Sassle) as the new Maruitian ambassador to Greece. [Text] [Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1230 GMT 23 Oct 81 NC]

NEW APPOINTMENTS ANNOUNCED -- It has been announced that journalist Yeoryios Romeos has been appointed Director General for ERT [Hellenic Radio Television]. It has also been announced that Grigorios Kasimatis has been appointed director general of the prime minister's office and that university professor Yeoryios Kasimatis has been appointed adviser to the prime minister. [Text] [Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1930 GMT 21 Oct 81 NC] The writer Iakovos Kambanellis has been appointed director of the ERT broadcasting service. [Text] [Athens Domestic Service in Greek 2200 GMT 24 Oct 81 NC]

PRIME MINISTER ULUSU MARKS NATIONAL DAY

TA281139 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1130 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Text] Ankara, 28 Oct (AA) -- Turkey started a one and a half day national holiday at noon marking the 58th anniversary of the republic. In a message to the nation, Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu said: "The Turkish nation succeeded in the past to overcome the difficulties she has been confronted with in a way that has given to other oppressed nations inspiration to become independent."

Ulusu went on to say: "The latest crisis was prevented by the armed forces of the country on Sep 12, 1980. I want to express my thanks, speaking in my capacity as the prime minister of the republic, to the Turkish Army, which has liberated the homeland from the atmosphere of anarchy.

A new era is being opened in the history of the country by the convening of the Consultative Assembly. I do not doubt that the constitution to be drafted by this assembly will permit realization of a new state system which guarantees the rights and liberties in line with the aspirations of the citizens.

"I want to affirm that peace and stability have been reinstalled in the country since the Sep 12 intervention. We owe this to the support furnished by the nation."

Saddam Husayn Message

TA281200 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1148 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Text] Ankara, 28 Oct (AA) -- President Saddam Husayn of Iraq sent a message to Turkish Head of State Gen Kena Evren today on the 58th anniversary of the republic expressing his desire for further development of friendly relations between the two countries. "I send my best wishes to the friendly and fraternal Turkish people on the occasion of the 58th anniversary of the republic," he added.

MORE ON ULUSU'S REMARKS TO FOREIGN JOURNALISTS

TA281401 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1300 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Text] Ankara, 28 Oct (AA) -- Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu, interviewed Tuesday by a group of foreign journalists assembled in Ankara to observe the initial session of the newly-established Consultative Assembly, made the following remarks in reply to various questions:

--"Turkey is not in a position to knock on every door asking for aid. Turkey, especially within NATO, cooperates with her allies on a certain basis and the aid is being given upon this basis. In case this aid will be cut down or suspended on grounds we do not find justified, this would naturally affect bilateral relations.

--"Turkey is determined to become a full member of EEC.

--"We do not know closely why the West does not understand our problems. We would deal with the problems and eliminate them if we knew. We are trying to establish a dialogue to explain better our problems.

--"There are certain circles trying to break Turkey away from Europe. That also was the aim of the [word indistinct] plotted in Turkey before the 12 September coup. Their strategy remains the same, to break Turkey away from Europe, from the West. The circles trying to divide Turkey into separate parts are misrepresenting the restoration activity in Turkey," Ulusu said, in reply to questions concerning reports that restrictions on aid to Turkey were being contemplated.

--"Turkey does not give any directive to the Turkish Federated State of Cyprus. The Turkish Cypriot community is self-governing. What we have been proposing in Cyprus is a bicommunal, bizonal federal administration. Turkey merely transfers her knowledge and experience to the TFSC.

--"There is no large-scale torture in Turkey, with highly isolated, few cases being investigated and those responsible punished.

--"We meet with more understanding for our problems from the United States than we do from Europe. But that does not mean that Europe does not show understanding at all. Only in certain European circles there is an insistent lack of understanding towards us. Turkey is an inalienable part of Europe.

--"Turkey (?did not try) to obtain anything from NATO saying she would quit the alliance in case certain conditions were not met. The Turkish nation is too honest for such games and bluffs.

--"Inflation which had been as high as 100 percent in recent years was brought under 40 percent this year. We intend to keep it below 20 percent next year."

TURK-IS PRAISES FORMING OF CONSULTATIVE ASSEMBLY

TA281615 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1545 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Text] Ankara, 28 Oct (AA) -- Turk-Is (Turkish Labor Confederation) Executive Board issued a statement today following its extraordinary meeting praising the newly established Consultative Assembly as an important step towards restoration of democracy in Turkey.

Turk-Is decided to make the necessary efforts with the officials involved concerning certain complaints about the activities of the high arbitration council concluding the new collective contracts, and about the proposed amendments to the law on collective contracts, strikes and lock-outs.

PRESS COVERAGE OF PAPANDREOU STATEMENTS REVIEWED

TA281703 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1600 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Text] Ankara, 28 Oct (AA) -- Is he a simple demagogue, or does he believe what he says?

This is the starting sentence of an article in MILLIYET by Mehmet Barlas on Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou. He makes these remarks while thinking about a statement Papandreou has given to an American television station on Turco-Greek relations.

"Then suddenly you pity the Greek people" Barlas says: "Under the Papandreou regime, even democracy may be jeopardized in Greece. Papandreou, who came to power on the slogans of social peace, a fair and a just order, is seeking [passage indistinct] telling Athens that the real danger comes from the Warsaw Pact. Then Papandreou is asked whether he foresees the possibility of a war between Turkey and Greece. He says, no, and adds that a guarantee by the United States would be sufficient. There is a logic behind this request. As soon as Greece obtains the guarantee of the United States for its territorial integrity, Papandreou will deal his coup de grace, extending the limits of Greek territorial waters to 12 miles. He will deal with the Aegean continental shelf issue with a fait accompli. He will arm the islands. He will suspend the intercommunal talks on Cyprus and will refer the matter to international forums.

"Is it possible for the United States to extend fool-proof guarantees to Turkey and the Turkish Cypriot community against the plans of adventurers who may ascend to power in Greece? Could the United States prevent the assassination of As-Sadat or the Sampson coup in Cyprus, or the overthrow of the shah in Iran?

"The Greek people may come to their senses when scarcity and instability start to hit them. In the meantime, what should we do? First of all, we should sternly warn Greece that we expect massive security precautions for our diplomats in Athens and in other Greek cities. Armenian terrorists, who may have been encouraged by the senseless remarks of Papandreou may turn Greece into an haven for international terrorism.

Oktary Eksi of HURRIYET comments on the same subject -- the utterings of Greek Prime Minister Papandreou. He asks the question whether there can be any link between this statement of Papandreou and the Armenian attack in Rome against the life of a Turkish diplomat.

"It is the rerun of an old movie. Both the Greeks and the Armenians are banking on the support of outside powers to exert pressure on Turkey. The Armenian organization ASALA is the puppet of Soviet imperialism, and other Armenian networks derive their support from France. The history may be full of case stories showing scores of victories won on the support of others. But there is no known case that the advocates of such causes have ceased to be the puppets, and the servants of others, Eksi says.

Turkish Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu's response to the Greek prime minister, saying that Turkey has no territorial claims on other countries is the top news item in major dailies Wednesday. Furthermore, the election of Sadi Irmak as the speaker of the Consultative Assembly is also treated extensively.

IRAQ BORDER DEMARCATION AGREEMENT RATIFIED

TA281612 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1530 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Text] Ankara, 28 Oct (AA) -- The National Security Council ratified today the border demarcation agreement with Iraq (dated Sep 22, 1981) under which the two sides will form a joint committee which will direct demarcation of the 331-km long common border in 3 years. The work is expected to begin in January.

TALKS WITH FRG ON VISA REQUIREMENTS END IN BONN

TA282029 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 2000 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Text] The Turkish-FRG visa talks have ended in Bonn. According to a report by Turkish Radio and Television correspondent Hakki Akduman, the visa requirement the FRG imposes on Turkish citizens was discussed during the 3-day talks between the Turkish and FRG delegations. A statement issued after the talks said that a change in the visa requirement was out of the question for the time being. The director general of the consular section at the Foreign Ministry, Zeki Onen, headed the Turkish delegation at the talks.

OECD OFFICIAL COMMENTS ON AID REQUIREMENTS

TA281613 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1540 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Text] Izmir, 28 Oct (AA) -- Head of OECD's aid-to-Turkey consortium Rolf Geberth said they wanted to provide Turkey with support in her efforts to achieve stability. OECD has been elaborating a 5-year aid-to-Turkey plan, he said stressing that Turkey should give priority to propaganda efforts in foreign countries to be better known in the world.

The OECD official has met with Turkish businessmen during his stay in this Aegean port.

COURT REJECTS NAP TRIAL JUDGES' APPEAL

TA281154 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Text] The Military Supreme Court of Appeals has rejected the request by military senior judges Maj Vural Ozenirler and Capt Fahir Kayacan to withdraw from the trial of NAP leader Alpaslan Turkes and other members of the party and the Idealist Club organization.

The judges announced their decision to withdraw from the trials being held at the Ankara 1st Military Court on 15 October in a bid to ensure the impartiality of the trial and prevent any doubts to the objectivity of the court.

PROSECUTORS SEEK DEATH SENTENCE FOR 38 MILITANTS

TA271825 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 27 Oct 81

[Summary] The Kayseri Military Court prosecutor has asked the death sentence for 18 out of 154 suspects belonging to the Kayseri branch of the right-wing Idealist Hearts, Idealist Path and Idealist Culture associations. The suspects are accused of killing 23 persons, of wounding others, of kidnapping, of planting explosives, of robberies and other criminal acts.

The 1st Military Court in Izmir has begun trying 33 suspects belonging to an illegal organization involved in incidents of terror. The military prosecutor asked the death sentence for 20 of the suspects for subversive activities.

OUR RADIO: NATO PLANS NEW PRESSURES ON GREECE

TA280835 (Clandestine) Our Radio in Turkish to Turkey 0500 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Station commentary: "Who Is Straining Turkist-Greek Relations?"]

[Text] The Turkish reactionary press has engaged in an intesive effort to strain Turkish-Greek relations following the general elections in Greece. In its publications, the reactionary pro-American press is using the statements made by the new Greek prime minister, Papandreou, to confront the two nations. However, the election made by the Greek people and the viewpoint they voted for is being concealed from our people.

Dear listeners, the Greek people are opposed to NATO, the EEC and the U.S. bases. The great majority of the Greek people is in favor of friendship with the socialist countries. The Greek people want the Balkans to be purged of nuclear weapons. They voted for friendly coexistence with neighboring countries and the solution of the problems through negotiations. The Turkish people and democratic forces also share the same views.

The basic charcteristic of the reactionaries in Turkey, however, consists of pro-Americanism and NATOism. The reactionaries exerted great efforts to ensure the return of Greece to NATO's military wing. For years, they have been trying to obstruct the genuine amelioration of Turkish-Greek relations. Those who were talking about good relations and negotiations with Greece are now suddenly arguing that Turkish-Greek relations are strained. What were their points of agreement in the past? These points consisted of NATOism, pro-Americanism and anti-Sovietism. The Greek people toppled the New Democracy Party, which subscribed to these views. The plans of NATO and the NATOites were foiled. The imperialists are now discussing another plan in the Mediterranean.

Dear listeners, the secret NATO plan, which was revealed a few days ago, intends to cause a confrontation among Turkey, Greece and Italy and drag these three countries into a dubious adventure.

The peoples of these countries should actively oppose this dangerous game, because this plan is designed to blackmail Greece and prevent it from abandoning NATO and dismantling the U.S. bases in this country.

This plan is intended to pamper Turkey with so-called increased military aid, influence the developing anti-imperialist processes in both countries during periods of tensed relations, and silence the democratic forces.

The solution of the problems between the two countries through negotiations on the basis of good relations is beneficial to the people. Those who provoke strained relations are the enemies of the people. The real threat both for Turkey and Greece consists of imperialism, NATO and U.S. imperialism. A lasting friendship in the Mediterranean can be secured through opposition to NATO and not within NATO.

OUR RADIO ON NUCLEAR BOMB EXPERIMENTS IN AREA

TA240858 (Clandestine) Our Radio in Turkish to Turkey 0700 GMT 24 Oct 81

[Commentary: "Will Nuclear Bomb Experiments Be Held in Turkey?"]

[Text] A secret NATO report has leaked to the Italian press, this report discusses the possibility of Italy, Greece and Turkey, which are in the southeastern flank of NATO, being drawn into a limited armed confrontation. While this secret NATO report appeared in the Italian press, U.S. President Reagan pointed out the possibility of a limited nuclear war in Europe. Does this secret NATO report mean that Italy, Greece and Turkey will be sacrificed in a limited nuclear war?

Dear listeners, recently the British weekly NEW STATESMAN reported that nuclear bombs belonging to Pakistan are being hidden in an experimental tunnel [tunel] in southern Turkey. This article signed by (Claudia Reiss) also stated that the United States is involved in nuclear cooperation with Turkey and Pakistan. It was reported that Turkish firms are purchasing nuclear equipment from the United States on behalf of Pakistan and that these are being transferred to an installation in Adana. The article also disclosed that Pakistan will hold its first nuclear experiment at the end of this year or the beginning of the next at an experimental tunnel in southern Turkey.

Dear listeners, if we take into consideration the visit of last month of a Pakistani professor, (Abul Samet), who is engaged in the construction of an atomic bomb in Pakistan, in Turkey and his meeting with Evren, this report draws our attention. Some time ago there had been reports to the effect that Pakistan would carry out nuclear experiments in Turkey but these reports had been denied by junta officials. However, the secret NATO report that leaked to the press and the article in NEW STATESMAN have once again caused the issue to surface.

As is known, the United States abolished some time ago basic legal measures preventing the diffusion of technology and raw material necessary for the production of nuclear arms and their availability to other countries. The United States thus showed that it disregards the struggle waged by humanity against the proliferation of nuclear arms.

Meanwhile, there is talk about cooperation among South Africa, Israel, Pakistan and Turkey and about their production of nuclear arms. Dear listeners, a four-man delegation composed of nuclear arms experts is currently visiting South Africa. Talks have been held with South African administrators, but no statement has been issued on the subject. Various news agencies reported that a secret agreement has been reached concerning the construction by the United States in South Africa of an installation for the enrichment of uranium, which is employed in the production of nuclear arms.

Dear listeners, all these reports and developments are linked. The puppet regimes of U.S. imperialism are in power in South Africa, Israel and Pakistan and they are playing a very dangerous role in their region under the guidance of U.S. imperialism. Now, U.S. imperialists are advancing their plans to spread nuclear arms through these countries. Press reports show that Turkey is also being drawn into these dangerous plans.

If the report on a nuclear experiment in southern Anatolia is true, this means that the door is being opened to death experiments which will transform our country into a nuclear cemetery for our people. It means that our country is being a tool to U.S. imperialist plans for the spread of nuclear arms.

Why is the junta, which pretends to be a hero by [word indistinct] 17 and 18-year-old youths, silent? The military junta in Turkey has not adopted a stand on nuclear arms. On the contrary, officials from the Ulusu government have let the press know that the administration is not against nuclear arms. At a recent news conference in London, Defense Minister Haluk Bayulken expressed the view that NATO should preserve its armament power and that it does not differentiate between nuclear arms and (?conventional) arms. This shows that the junta is not opposed to NATO plans to increase nuclear armament.

Dear listeners, the world is faced with the threat of a nuclear war, a threat directed by U.S. imperialism and NATO. This is no joke. This is a problem of death and life. The peoples of all over the world, being well aware of this danger, have opposed the insane decisions made by U.S. imperialism, have called for a ban on nuclear arms and have supported the Soviet peace proposals. The Soviet Union has announced that it will not use nuclear arms against those countries which do not have nuclear arms deployed on their soil.

Dear listeners, the fact that the junta is taking steps toward joint nuclear experiments with Pakistan instead of dismantling the nuclear arms depots of U.S. imperialism and NATO on our soil can only serve the aggressive plans of U.S. imperialism and NATO. These nuclear arms experiments will also sabotage our efforts for peaceful cooperation with Islamic countries. Our people expect an explanation on the issue from the military junta and the junta government. Are nuclear experiments, which constitute a death threat for our people on our soil, being carried out? Our people expect a clear answer to this question.

TCP WANTS FREEDOM FOR PARAGUAYAN COMMUNIST

TA280951 (Clandestine) Our Radio in Turkish to Turkey 0500 GMT 23 Oct 81

[Turkish Communist Party Central Committee statement -- dated 25 October 1981]

[Text] Freedom to Comrade Antonio Maidana! The first secretary of the Paraguayan Communist Party, Maidana, marked his 65th birthday in the dungeon under conditions of inconceivable torture and pressure. We celebrate the 65th birthday of this distinguished soldier of the Paraguayan proletariat and the world communist movement. Maidana, who is imprisoned in the underground cell of the concentration camp in Emboscada, continues to be the symbol of courage, resistance, awareness and faith of all world communists and peoples as well as the Paraguayan communists and people.

Maidana was also previously imprisoned for 20 years by the Stroessner regime -- the puppet of imperialism. He did not bow down to any torture. He always valued communist honor above everything and earned the love and respect of everyone through his resistance, determination to live and belief in the future and socialism during his 20-year imprisonment. He served as an example to all political prisoners. The name of Maidana today constitutes the strong bridge between present and future of the Paraguayan people and the symbol of national and social liberation. This is why the Stroessner regime collaborated with imperialist secret services and the reactionary regimes in the area and arrested Maidana. A strong, determined and just rebellion is currently emerging from all parts of the world.

Freedom to Comrade Maidana and all the Paraguayan patriots! Turkish communists, who are struggling under the harsh conditions of the reactionary military dictatorship and under torture, are supporting the realization of this wish with all their might. The Turkish Communist Party [TCP] calls on all anti-imperialist and progressive forces to join this campaign. Freedom to Comrade Maidana. [Signed] TCP Central Committee, 25 October 1981.

DAILY REPORT

CONTENTS

Western Europe

Vol VII No 210 30 October 1981

AUSTRIA

Kreisky: East-West Talks Must Restore 'Balance' E 1
Pahr Ends Washington Visit, Reviews Talks [WIENER ZEITUNG 29 Oct] E 2
Briefs: Ambassador to Yugoslavia; Palestinian Terrorist E 2

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Schmidt: Months Ahead Very Difficult Economically J 1
Schmidt, Lazar: 'No Rapid Success' in Arms Talks J 1
Kiep: U.S.-USSR Talks Will Be 'Very Difficult' J 2
Carsten Continues Tour, Visits With Ethnic Germans J 2
Talks With Ceausescu J 3
AWACS Decision Not To Influence Arms Exports J 3
Paper Notes U.S. Advantages in AWACS Deal [FRANKFURTER RUNDSCHAU 30 Oct] J 3
Paper: Stranded Soviet Sub a Potent Reminder [FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE 30 Oct] J 4

FRANCE

Cheysson: Inter-African Force Needed in Chad K 1
Cheysson Comments on Disarmament, Madrid Talks [LE MONDE 29 Oct] K 1
New Caledonian Front Claims Responsibility for Bomb [Melbourne] K 1
Mitterrand Receives President of Togo [Lome] K 2
Mitterrand Meets Kim Yong-nam, KWP Delegation [KCNA] K 2
Mitterrand, Brazilian Planning Official Hold Talks K 2
LE MONDE Comments on Success of Peace Marches [27 Oct] K 3
LE MONDE Sees Little Result From Cancun Summit [25-26 Oct] K 3
Briefs: Libyan Withdrawal K 4

ITALY & THE VATICAN

Suspected Red Brigades Leader Arrested Near Turin L 1
PSI's Craxi Meets With Arab League's Klibi L 1
PCI's Berlinguer Comments on Latin American Trip [L'UNITA 24 Oct] L 1
Cabinet Decides To Participate in Sinai Force L 4

NORDIC AFFAIRS

DENMARK

Government's 'Regrets' Over Kekkonen Resignation [DAGENS NYHETER 28 Oct] P 1
Defense Minister on Gleneagles Conference [AKTUELT 22 Oct] P 1
Paper Hits 'Exaggerated' Reactions to Reagan [BERLINGSKE TIDENDE 25 Oct] P 1

FINLAND

Paper Discusses Fears for Swedish Neutrality [HUFVUDSTADSBLADET 20 Oct] P 2

NORWAY

Premier Willoch Pays Tribute to Kekkonen [DAGENS NYHETER 28 Oct] P 3

SWEDEN

Premier Interviewed on Soviet Sub Affair P 4
Further Falldin Comments P 5
Defense Chief Remarks P 5
Premier Sets Inquiry P 6
Communique on Salvage of Soviet Submarine P 7
USSR Acquiescence P 7
Sub Commander Refuses Cooperation P 8
Sub Captain's Protest P 8
Falldin Praises Outgoing Finnish President P 8

UNITED KINGDOM

Trade Agreements Signed With Brazilian Official [Brasilia] Q 1
DAILY TELEGRAPH Comments on Antinuclear Marches [26 Oct] Q 1

CYPRUS

Rolandhis Returns From Luxembourg 28 Oct R 1
Kiprianou Receives FRG Envoy, Speaks on UN Role R 1
Kiprianou Interview [O AGON 29 Oct] R 1
Denktas Remarks on Intercommunal Situation [Bayrak Radio] R 4
Support for Palestinians R 4

TURKEY

Evren Delivers Speech Marking Republic Day T 1
Press on Papandreou, Assembly's Work T 1
F-104 Believed Down in Bursa Mountains T 1

OTHER COUNTRIES

NETHERLANDS

Laborites Back PSOE Opposition to NATO [NRC HANDELSBLAD 22 Oct] U 1

PORTUGAL

Briefs: PRC Military Mission U 1

SPAIN

Parliament Approves Entry Into NATO, 186-146 U 1
Briefs: Ambassadors Appointed U 1

KREISKY: EAST-WEST TALKS MUST RESTORE 'BALANCE'

AU291424 [Editorial Report] Austrian media -- Vienna Domestic Radio and Television Service on 28 October, and the Vienna press on 29 October -- carry extensive reports on the opening in Vienna on 28 October of a symposium on the "role and functions of information media in East-West relations," sponsored jointly by the Austrian Radio and Television Service (ORF) and by the Vienna International Press Institute.

Most media reports give prominence to a long discussion and speech given at the symposium by Chancellor Bruno Kreisky in which -- according to DIE PRESSE (p 5) -- he reviewed political developments from the conclusion of the Austrian state treaty to the summit meeting in Cancun. He said that what had begun with the state treaty was completed in Helsinki, namely, that after the Cold War the East and West sat down again at the conference table to come to terms on the status quo in Europe. Kreisky described it as not astonishing that the "three baskets" introduced in Helsinki had remained "almost empty" -- "who could have seriously assumed, for example, that the Soviet Union would liberalize its press policy? No, drastic changes in the system were not to be expected, but a long-winded process of detente, last but not least on the basis of growing economic cooperation," Kreisky said. Commenting on Cancun, Kreisky said that a "breakthrough on the basis of personal contacts was achieved which the Americans, too, would come to appreciate some day." The actual work on a conciliation of interests between industrialized and developing countries is still ahead, Kreisky added, but "the success of Cancun was of a psychological nature, and it is precisely that aspect which was wrongly assessed by Moscow."

WIENER ZEITUNG quotes Kreisky as saying that since Helsinki, "There has been an intensification of West-East economic relations on an unprecedented scale," as was reflected in the mounting number of loans granted to Eastern countries. Such loans, he said, are "not gifts, not acts of charity, but there are actually billions of dollars behind the rich industrialized states' wish to get rid of their goods." WIENER ZEITUNG reports: "Our American friends, Kreisky went on to say, did not name any alternatives to the Russian gas which Austria wants to pay for by pipe deliveries, no more than alternatives to Polish coal for which Austria granted large loans, or to the Arab oil. Kreisky stressed that the military action of the Soviet Union in Afghanistan had a very negative effect on the policy of detente, and that a potential intervention in Poland after the Hungarian or CSSR pattern would mean the end to detente for a long time to come."

Vienna Domestic Television Service at 2050 GMT on 28 Oct carries recorded excerpts from Chancellor Kreisky's statements at the symposium. Speaking on pacifism, Kreisky said: "Pacifism is a moral attitude — one cannot make a policy of peace with it. And nevertheless, we commit a sin against our spirit [of pacifism] if we do not at the same time have the courage to tell the young people that peace cannot be saved that way. Certainly that is of political significance. It is certain that what a peace propaganda inspired by the Soviet Union has not succeeded in achieving over decades -- namely, to mobilize a latent [peace] movement, which of course does exist -- has been accomplished in a few weeks by Mr Caspar Weinberger.

"I am the last person to underrate such a movement. We -- not only the socialists -- are affected by it. The Protestants are affected, the Catholics are affected. Pacifism is today more than a leftist variety, an aberration, a passing fancy of the young generation -- it is today something far more profound. And nevertheless, notwithstanding all sympathy for these ideas, one must warn against illusions, if only because no matter how important it is to bring one side to the conference table, the other must also be ready for substantial negotiations.

"It just does not work that way. I am not an expert in this field, but in my opinion it cannot merely be the neutron bomb that is involved here, but the SS-20 missile as well. And the quarrel of who started the thing is as old as history.

"I do not want to go into the question of what a balance of forces is in this respect. Politically, there has been a state of balance in Helsinki, it manifested itself there. This balance has been upset by a number of political events, and we must endeavor to restore this balance in the political field."

After commenting on the role of the conservative governments in the United States and Great Britain, and that of the Social-Democratic governments in France and the FRG, Kreisky predicted the development of a dialogue between these two Western camps that, while never being free of friction, will nevertheless be rather useful. Actually, he said, this dialogue has already begun: "Indeed we have already come to a point where Reagan realized that he has to negotiate -- whether he likes it or not, he will sit down at a conference table with Brezhnev -- that is no question for me, unless there is some mishap."

Commenting on the Middle East, Kreisky said he was sceptical regarding any solution, because at present there were no forces willing to contribute toward a solution in the region. He added, regarding his relationship with PLO chief 'Arafat: "Mr 'Araft -- I know him well -- says in every country more or less what this country's press wants to hear. I am not indulging in any illusions about him, but nevertheless I like him quite well. It is not my business to teach leaders of such movements good manners. All I can say is I do not approve of something. But this does not alter the fact that it is a reality that without the PLO no solution can be found. It just is not possible. This opinion is today even shared by Carter and Jerry Ford, and something to that effect was even indicated by Reagan yesterday. It just cannot be done."

PAHR ENDS WASHINGTON VISIT, REVIEWS TALKS

AU291429 Vienna WIENER ZEITUNG in German 29 Oct 81 p 3

[Text] Washington (APA) -- Foreign Minister Willibald Pahr's official visit to Washington ended yesterday morning (local time) with a talk lasting over 30 minutes with U.S. Vice President George Bush.

In light of the U.S. Senate's decision on the sale of American AWACS planes to Saudi Arabia, which completely dominates political discussion in the United States these days, Bush and Pahr dealt particularly extensively with the situation in the Middle East.

The second key subject of their talk was the North-South summit meeting held a week ago in Cancun. Vice President Bush declared that the positive assessment of this meeting by Austria was especially welcome in view of the fact that Chancellor Kreisky had been one of the fathers of this conference. As far as further discussions of North-South problems are concerned, Foreign Minister Pahr called for early and specific steps so as not to lose the political impetus of the Cancun summit.

In this talk, too, Pahr stressed Austria's interest in the continued participation of the United States in the Laxenburg International Institute for Applied Systems Analysis. In conclusion, George Bush expressed great respect for the work Austria is doing in refugee care.

BRIEFS

AMBASSADOR TO YUGOSLAVIA -- Dr Norbert Linhart, a career diplomat who had been deputy chief of the Foreign Ministry's political division since 1975, has been appointed new Austrian ambassador to the SFRY. The appointment has been approved by President of the SFRY Presidency Sergej Kraigher. [Vienna WIENER ZEITUNG in German 24 Oct 81 p 2 AU]

PALESTINIAN TERRORIST -- Salzburg authorities have succeeded in dealing a heavy blow against Palestinian terrorism in Austria: According to an Interior Ministry spokesman, police in Salzburg last night arrested 28-year-old Jordanian citizen (Bahi Yuniz). The man, in whose possession submachine guns, other small firearms and several hand grenades as well as several passports were found, is strongly suspected of having been the wirepuller behind the assassination of Vienna City Councilman Heinz Nittel [on 1 May 1981]. [Text] [Vienna Domestic Service in German 1158 GMT 29 Oct 81 AU]

SCHMIDT: MONTHS AHEAD VERY DIFFICULT ECONOMICALLY

LD291434 Hamburg DPA in German 1108 GMT 29 Oct 81

[Text] Bonn, 29 Oct (DPA) -- Speaking in the Bundestag budget debate this morning, and notwithstanding the positive assessments of Germany's economic future that are being made abroad, Chancellor Helmut Schmidt again expressed concern that "the coming winter and the first half of 1982 will be very, very difficult economically for the world economy and for the Federal Republic. He said that this is a case of not taking steps that will tear apart the operating framework of the world economy under the pressure of rising unemployment in the world.

However, he also warned against painting too black a picture of the economic future, as the opposition spokesman had done. He appealed to the people, to the employers, to the trade unions and politicians: "We must not let scaremongering obscure our clear vision and cause good judgement to be replaced by a blind urge for action." Pointing several times to foreign confidence in the efficiency of the Federal Republic, he said: "We have every reason for self-confidence."

The chancellor said he is concerned about increasing tendencies in many of the world's countries to protect their own economy through trade restrictions. The temptation is very great, because of their own unemployment, to close the frontiers and protect their own economy, to some extent at the expense of their neighbors. Therefore, he appealed to all states that conduct trade with the Federal Republic: "Don't allow yourselves to drift into protectionism." No one can abandon the common ship of the world's economy.

SCHMIDT, LAZAR: 'NO RAPID SUCCESS' IN ARMS TALKS

LD291558 Hamburg DPA in German 1417 GMT 29 Oct 81

[Text] Bonn, 29 Oct (DPA) -- The Federal Republic and the People's Republic of Hungary are determined to contribute to the success of the disarmament dialogue between the two superpowers which begins in Geneva on 30 November. At the end of Hungarian Premier Gyorgy Lazar's visit, Chancellor Helmut Schmidt stressed to newsmen in Bonn today that both governments wanted to try to contribute to a better understanding between the negotiating partners -- the United States and the Soviet Union. "In this point I have a particularly high assessment of Prime Minister Lazar's visit to Bonn," Schmidt said.

The chancellor said that the talks planned by the superpowers on reduction in Euro-strategic weapons had been a central topic in his talks with Lazar, but that neither side believed in the negotiations' rapid success. Schmidt and Lazar both agreed that their states had an "existential" interest in the success of the negotiations. They stressed that a military balance at the lowest possible level must be maintained.

Schmidt said that Lazar's visit was of an "exemplary nature," because a "detailed, frank and understanding exchange of views" had taken place between the partners in the talks. Schmidt said that the talks with Lazar were also part of the efforts to assist the dialogue between the great powers. Federal President Karl Carstens' visit to Romania and Schmidt's meeting with Leonid Brezhnev in Bonn at the end of November are also part of this.

Lazar said he was "completely satisfied" with the results of his Bonn visit, at the center of which had been the "very interesting and full" talks with Schmidt. However, the far-reaching agreement and the good mutual relations ought not to be equated with "idyllic conditions" in relations between Budapest and Bonn.

Lazar announced further measures for improving relations and stressed that possibilities for this existed.

He welcomed the Geneva negotiations between the two great powers on 30 November, and said that common responsibility for peace constituted an important link between the Federal Republic and the People's Republic of Hungary.

Since his arrival on Tuesday, Lazar has had numerous talks with industrialists. Hungarian Foreign Trade Minister Peter Veress met Federal Economics Minister Count Otto Lambsdorff and Food Minister Joseph Ertl.

Chancellor Helmut Schmidt stressed in conclusion that the Hungarian economy was in good condition by international standards, and pointed to the existing 358 joint projects. He said that he saw forthcoming partial convertibility of the forint as a further step toward improving the economic situation in Hungary.

Schmidt said that he had repeated the existing invitation to Hungarian party leader Janos Kadar and had accepted an invitation from Lazar to visit Budapest. The date would be set at a later time.

KIEP: U.S.-USSR TALKS WILL BE 'VERY DIFFICULT'

LD291956 Hamburg DPA in German 1751 GMT 29 Oct 81

[Text] Moscow, 29 Oct (DPA) -- Deputy Chairman of the CDU/CSU parliamentary party, Walter Leisler Kiep, has warned the high Soviet partners in his talks against a wrong assessment of the peace movement in the Federal Republic. Kiep, who met with Valentin Falin, deputy head of the department of international information of the Central Committee, for a talk lasting several hours today, said later to journalists that it would be "fatal" if the Soviet side drew the conclusion that the movement was anti-American and aimed toward a neutral Federal Republic.

Kiep admitted his party had been "too technocractic" in its discussion of securing peace and had to return to a political foundation. He had not been able to see any interest on the Soviet side in removing the Federal Republic from the Western alliance. But he gained the impression in Moscow that the Soviet partners in the talks had difficulty in assessing the process of opinion-forming in the West.

Kiep said he pointed out strongly to Falin that the political framework conditions had to be in order if trade with the Federal Republic was to continue to develop satisfactorily. As on Wednesday, in his talk in the Soviet Foreign Ministry with the head of the department responsible for the Federal Republic, Aleksander Bondarenko, the CDU politician recalled Poland and Afghanistan. The Soviet reaction had been "strong", which Kiep considered to be "somewhat unrealistic." In the case of Afghanistan, it was pointed out that Moscow had not, after all, demanded that the country should joint the Warsaw Pact, whereas in the West Spain was being pressured into becoming a member of NATO.

In his opinion, the Soviet Union does not think much of the zero-option being striven for in the West, the nonstationing of the Western arms in return for the total dismantling of Soviet SS-20 missiles. Kiep said: "There is no love lost here." In his view, the Soviet-American negotiations in Geneva will be "very difficult." The Soviet partners in his talks had let it be known that they expected "an enormous influence" to be placed on the United States by the FRG.

CARSTEN CONTINUES TOUR, VISITS WITH ETHNIC GERMANS

LD291452 Hamburg DPA in German 1247 GMT 29 Oct 81

[Excerpts] Sibiu, 29 Oct (DPA) -- Following the unpleasant events in Craiova, Federal President Karl Carstens was accorded a more friendly welcome during his visit to Sibiu today, where 20,000 ethnic Germans live. Wherever the federal president went he was awaited by hundreds of people, who applauded him.

Carstens went several times to the crowd, shaking many hands. In Sibiu an 18-year-old Romanian who wants to leave the country managed to reach Carstens and give him a letter. In the village of Michelsberg a young girl slipped Carstens an envelope as he was talking with villagers.

With regard to events in Craiova, where the Romanians had prevented any contact with the people by setting up strict cordons, Carstens told newsmen that this had disappointed him. However, the matter ought not to be dramatized. "I was only there for 20 minutes." In the main he was satisfied with his visit to Romania.

Carstens was scheduled to fly back to Bucharest this afternoon, and this evening a third meeting with Nicolae Ceausescu is planned, in which they are to discuss the questions of the Germans [in Romania]. Carstens has a list of some 300 hardship cases with him, which is to be given to the Romanian side.

Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher also arrived in Bucharest today, where he is to hold talks with Ceausescu and his counterpart Stefan Andrei. He will return to Bonn by air with Carstens tomorrow.

Talks With Ceausescu

LD301002 Hamburg DPA in German 0106 GMT 30 Oct 81

[Excerpt] Bucharest, 30 Oct (DPA) -- During Thursday evening's third round of talks with the Romanian head of state and party, Nicolae Ceausescu, Federal President Karl Carstens raised questions concerning incidents during his 2-day region tour.

Ceausescu tried to justify the cordoning off in Craiova as being security measures by the local authorities. It was said that the atmosphere was cool when discussing this point, but that it had improved later. However, Carstens emphasized that his visit in the Transylvanian Sibiu had been very satisfactory, in contrast to Craiova. Apart from the restrictions in Craiova the trip had been a satisfying experience for both sides.

The federal president and Ceausescu also discussed the situation concerning Romanian-Germans and the question of family reunification. No details were available on Ceausescu's reaction. The German delegation gave the Romanian side a list with approximately 300 names of those wanting to emigrate. International questions were again discussed during the third meeting, in which Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher also took part. The meeting had consisted of "substantial talks" and a "very valuable exchange of ideas," it was said in German delegation circles.

Carstens invited Ceausescu to a reciprocal visit to the FRG. It was agreed that Genscher will make an official visit to Romania in 1982. Carstens and Genscher will hold a final meeting with Ceausescu this [Friday] morning and will then fly back to Bonn.

AWACS DECISION NOT TO INFLUENCE ARMS EXPORTS

LD301210 Hamburg DPA in German 1109 GMT 30 Oct 81

[Excerpt] Bonn, 30 Oct (DPA) -- The U.S. decision to deliver five AWACS to Saudi Arabia will not influence the still open question of German arms exports to that country. Government Spokesman Kurt Becker told this to journalists in Bonn on Friday. Becker said that the government had "noted with interest" Washington's decision.

PAPER NOTES U.S. ADVANTAGES IN AWACS DEAL

DW301047 Frankfurt FRANKFURTER RUNDSCHAU in German 30 Oct 81 p 3

[Horst Schreitter-Schwarzenfeld article: "New Success for Reagan"]

[Excerpt] In domestic policy terms the AWACS decision signals a certain loss of power by the pro-Israeli lobby. People used to say that nothing could be done against the power of this lobby in the U.S. Congress.

Obviously this is not quite the case any more. At the same time, the decision indicates the growing influence of Saudi Arabia as an oil supplier of the United States and as the strategic military pillar in the Persian Gulf. In the future will people in Washington only talk about the "Arab lobby?"

The government's position is now consolidated not only internally but also externally. As one of the senators who had been undecided up to the last minute reported, Reagan asked the following question in the end: "How can I convince a foreign politician that I am in control here if I can't even succeed in selling five aircraft?" It was not only Ronald Reagan's prestige but the prestige of the U.S. Presidency which was said to be at stake.

The White House now expects to gain a number of very concrete advantages for its Middle East policy. King Husayn of Jordan is expected in Washington over the weekend for a visit considered as being extremely important. Inspired by the AWACS victory, Washington now wants to make a new and serious attempt to persuade Husayn to take part in the Camp David peace process.

Whether in the final analysis it is right to give the Saudis the most sophisticated weapons is another question. It certainly can also be assessed without reference to the Arab-Israeli conflict situation. The U.S. proponents of the deal point to "its strategic value" in protecting the oil fields. Skeptics mention the fate of the shah of Iran whose arsenals were filled with the most expensive arms without stabilizing the country. But in one area the deal will undoubtedly be of advantage, namely, in the U.S. balance of payments.

PAPER: STRANDED SOVIET SUB A POTENT REMINDER

DW300949 Frankfurt FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE in German 30 Oct 81 p 1

[Commentary signed ME.: "Peace Reality"]

[Text] When Soviet navy chief Gorshkov frankly admits in a book, also published in German by a Hamburg publishing house, the desire to possess massive naval power even in peacetime, almost nobody reads it. But when one of his submarines penetrates the sensitive area on the coastal defense zone of a neutral Baltic Sea state and becomes trapped for a change, people note this. The matter must be viewed from a security policy as well as security-psychological aspect.

The immediate proximity of the Soviet superpower calls for constant vigilance and preparedness by every European state which wants to preserve its freedom and sovereignty. It is nothing for the Swedes to brag about that the stranded submarine was found by a fisherman instead of having been skillfully spotted in time by the Swedish armed forces and kept from carrying out its reconnaissance task in Swedish waters. Creating the necessary military machine for that purpose and keeping it permanently working is expensive. But not doing so is much more expensive. Many Swedes who up to now listened to the constant call to disarm by their former prime minister Palme will now change their thinking.

That leads us to the security-psychological side of the incident. Not only in neutral Sweden but also in some member states of the North Atlantic pact -- unfortunately also including the Federal Republic -- it is beginning to be considered a sign of poor political education to believe in the existence of a Soviet threat or even talk about it, let alone countering it by acquiring the necessary military means. Soviet policy has exploited this mood skillfully, doing everything to condemn every hint at this threat, which stems not from its potential but mainly from its aims, as "a lie about a threat." The pictures of the stranded Soviet submarine No 137 on the Swedish coast correspond to such condemnation as little as the pictures once taken of Soviet missile positions in Cuba. But they also do not correspond the disarmament illusions currently fostered by so many people in West Europe. It is of no use to only speak of peace, peace must be and remain ensured.

CHEYSSON: INTER-AFRICAN FORCE NEEDED IN CHAD

LD292222 Paris Domestic Service in French 2200 GMT 29 Oct 81

[Text] Claude Cheysson, minister of external relations, has said that he believes the dispatch of an inter-African force to Chad is needed more than ever. The minister was addressing the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee a short while ago. He confirmed that there was no major change yesterday in Ndjamena, and he also confirmed the presence of ever-growing numbers of Libyans.

CHEYSSON COMMENTS ON DISARMAMENT, MADRID TALKS

PM291515 Paris LE MONDE in French 29 Oct 81 p 6

["A.G." report: "Mr Cheysson: Madrid Conference Must Reach a Specific Agreement"]

[Text] On Tuesday 27 October the senators discussed a question on disarmament asked by Mr Boucheny (PCF, Paris). This speaker strongly protested the manufacture of the neutron bomb and stressed the scale of the pacifist demonstrations in Europe. He mentioned the condemnation of the arms race by the Lourdes Episcopal conference and suggested that France should propose a "universal renunciation of the neutron bomb."

External Relations Minister Cheysson announced that the French Government is prepared to encourage the conclusion of regional agreements on disarmament. "The aim of 'disarmament week' is to mobilize public opinion in all countries," he explained. "The French Government is trying to do that, it is having a meeting in Paris this week with the Palme disarmament commission, whose report is to be submitted to the second UN session on disarmament which is already scheduled for next spring: a preparatory committee has been formed and the agenda is being drafted. The French delegation will be prepared with great care; we would be happy to include deputies and trade unionists in our consideration of the question."

With regard to the Madrid conference, which resumed its work 28 October, Mr Cheysson stated in particular: "It must reach a specific and concrete agreement on the 'first basket': This agreement would make it possible to convene a European conference on disarmament -- a prospect which is welcomed by Mr Brezhnev in particular. The discussion will relate primarily to conventional armaments. But we must go much further. The increase in armaments over the past 10 years has been staggering. One of the superpowers has gone so far as to devote 15 percent of its gross national product to its defense effort over the past 10 years and this has enabled it to gain a real superiority in conventional armaments and to achieve the technical progress -- if it can be so described -- which led to the SS-20 medium-range missiles. The other side has responded with the Pershing missiles backed up by a great deal of oratory. Negotiations must start immediately: The president said that clearly to our American friends, and that is why he offered Paris as a venue. The balance of forces, which alone can guarantee peace, must be global and be established at the lowest possible level. Opinion throughout the world has been mobilized for this."

NEW CALEDONIAN FRONT CLAIMS RESPONSIBILITY FOR BOMB

BK290627 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0500 GMT 29 Oct 81

[Text] A New Caledonian independence movement, the Kanaka Liberation Front, has claimed responsibility for a third bomb blast in Paris since Sunday [25 October]. Police said the latest bomb exploded in a cinema in central Paris, slightly injuring three people, including a pregnant woman.

Yesterday, the Kanaka Liberation Front said it had planted a bomb that injured several people on Sunday in a fashionable restaurant in the Avenue de Champs Elysee and for another bomb on Tuesday [27 October] that caused minor damage at Orly Airport north of Paris. At the time, the group warned there would be more bomb blasts as its members carried to French soil their fight to make New Caledonia independent.

MITTERRAND RECEIVES PRESIDENT OF TOGO

AB291220 Lome Domestic Service in French 0615 GMT 29 Oct 81

[Excerpts] The founding chairman of the Togolese People's Rally [PRT] and President of the republic, Gen Gnassingbe Eyadema, today begins the third day of his visit to France. He will receive the press today. The head of state was received yesterday by President Francois Mitterrand. Here is a report by our special envoy, Kodjovi Gbadyi, in Paris:

The visit to France by the founding chairman of the RPT and president of the republic, Gen Gnassingbe Eyadema, continued yesterday afternoon with an audience granted him by his French counterpart, Francois Mitterrand. The discussions between the two men lasted a little over 1 hour and centered on bilateral and international issues. On leaving the French head of state, Eyadema kindly answered questions posed by journalists.

[Begin recording]

[Question] Did you discuss the Chadian situation with President Mitterrand?

[Answer] I think that I met you here a little over 1 year ago and I was questioned about this problem. [passage indistinct] Of course, we discussed the Chadian problem. It is an African problem and we think that an African solution should be found for it.

[Question] What do you think about this French-African summit conference?

[Answer] President Francois Mitterrand is already working in favor of the developeing countries. We believe that this summit will be successful because we are all looking in the same direction. [end recording]

MITTERRAND MEETS KIM YONG-NAM, KWP DELEGATION

SK300427 Pyongyang KCNA in English 0401 GMT 30 Oct 81

[Excerpt] Pyongyang October 30 (KCNA) -- President Francois Mitterrand on October 27 met the delegation of the Workers Party of Korea headed by Comrade Kim Yong-nam, member of the political bureau, and secretary, of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea, on a visit to France, according to a report.

MITTERRAND, BRAZILIAN PLANNING OFFICIAL HOLD TALKS

PY291814 Paris AFP in Spanish 1603 GMT 29 Oct 81

[Text] Paris, 29 Oct (AFP) -- Brazilian Planning Minister Antonio Delfim Neto today met with President Francois Mitterrand in a friendly atmosphere, according to the former's statement upon leaving the Elysee palace.

Delfim Neto spoke with Mitterrand for more than half an hour and in his opinion the latter is well aware of Brazil's problems.

Asked about the fate of branches of French companies which will be nationalized in France, the Brazilian minister said that this was something which did not worry him because, as he explained, "We are used to working with French nationalized enterprises, especially banks."

Delfim Neto is also scheduled to meet with Michel Jobert and Jacques Delors, ministers of foreign trade and of economy and finance respectively.

One of the main objectives of Minister Delfim Neto's visit is to sign a contract with a consortium of French banks to finance the Corumba I hydroelectric dam.

LE MONDE COMMENTS ON SUCCESS OF PEACE MARCHES

PM291439 Paris LE MONDE in French 27 Oct 81 p 1

[Editorial: "A Success for European Pacifism"]

[Text] The main common factor in the pacifist demonstrations which have taken place in several big European capitals in the past 48 hours is their success, reflected in the number participants. With the one exception of Sweden, where a scheduled demonstration on Sunday drew only a relatively modest attendance, the big rallies held in Paris, London, Brussels and Rome generally exceeded the hopes of their organizers. There is great surprise, especially in Belgium and even more so in Italy, where the PCI, hitherto not very combative in this sphere, clearly was not expecting to see 300,000 people marching in response to its call.

The Paris demonstration was bound to fall a little short of that since antinuclear pacifism is strongly reduced by the consensus established among all the major French parties on the deterrent force and since the ruling PS clearly opposes -- Mr Mauroy recalled this again in Valence -- both unilateral disarmament and neutralism. In addition, the strong influence which the PCF has on the French peace movement - the demonstration's main organizer -- the pro-Soviet tone of several of its slogans and the excessive zeal of the official stewards, who were rather too tough, reduced the political scope of the rally.

It was nonetheless a success to rally several tens of thousands of people at the Porte de Pantin in these conditions, even if these figures pale into insignificance compared with the hundreds of thousands who marched elsewhere. The inevitable conclusion is that the subject of peace and disarmament is again becoming as mobilizing a force as in the fifties, when the campaign against the atomic bomb, galvanized by the Cold War and powerful Soviet orchestration, rallied millions of people in support of the Stockholm appeal.

Things are less simple today in that the ranks of the peace movement have been swelled by the ecologists and the heirs of the sixties' opposition. It is no longer a "peace camp" against a "war camp". But the deep-seated motivation is not very different: Over and above the problem of the SS-20 and Pershing missiles, the two superpowers' excessive armament has reached such proportions that it is bound to spark opposition and anxiety.

The whole question is whether the problem will be settled by unilateral measures, as the Western governments and a large proportion of the pacifists demand, or by negotiated and monitored reciprocal measures as common sense demands and as most of these governments wish for the time being. Otherwise it would be necessary for another pacifist and unilateralist campaign to develop in the East too, over the SS-20 missiles for a start. We are a long way from that....

LE MONDE SEES LITTLE RESULT FROM CANCUN SUMMIT

PM291553 Paris LE MONDE in French 25-26 Oct 81 p 1

[Editorial: "Progress by the Millimeter"]

[Text] Officially, the very concept of the Cancun summit ruled out the taking of specific decisions. The 22 participants, it was explained, simply intended to review the main development issues and North-South relations and to give a "political boost" to those they were willing to regard as priorities.

It was a good thing they did, because the hopes aroused by any other approach would certainly have been dashed. If there has been progress since the other similar meetings and since the exchange of views between the main Western leaders in Ottawa, it is only a matter of millimeters. The final declaration may bind the participants to "support a consensus for launching global negotiations at the United Nations" and even to stress their "urgency," and the Americans may have had to abandon some of the reservations they expressed previously. But this very abandonment is superficial: Although it is not so much a question of preparatory deliberations, the negotiations must still be opened "on a mutually agreed basis" and "in circumstances offering the prospect of significant progress."

Similarly the possible creation of a World Bank energy subsidiary scarcely made any progress. The idea, launched by the bank itself 2 years ago and energetically supported by Mr Mitterrand, was based on the need to devote more than $50 billion every year to improving the energy conditions in the poorest countries. Prince Fahd of Saudi Arabia, who has hitherto been rather unwilling to finance a body controlled by the industrialized countries, did say he was "100-percent" in favor of such a project. But, as during the UN Conference on New and Renewable Energies in Nairobi last August and during the recent Ottawa summit, the Americans reiterated their reservations about the formation of new institutions.

The meeting will at least have enabled the French delegation to confirm in a spectacular way Paris' ambition to be in the forefront of the movement, compared not only with the United States but also with the other European partners, for taking account of the Third World's demands and for a new approach to development. Throughout the meeting its spokesmen tried to shift Mr Reagan from his rigid positions. Although they also succeeded in avoiding direct confrontation with the great ally, they also acquired a new store of sympathy which should facilitate their future relations with the Third World, even with its most militant elements.

BRIEFS

LIBYAN WITHDRAWAL -- The French government had no immediate comment today on the Chadian Government's demand last night for the withdrawal of all Libyan forces from the country. External Relations Ministry sources said that Paris, which had been in contact with Tripoli earlier this week, had taken note of the official communique from Ndjamana. [Text] [Paris AFP in English 1222 GMT 30 Oct 81 NC]

SUSPECTED RED BRIGADES LEADER ARRESTED NEAR TURIN

AU291947 Rome ANSA in English 1933 GMT 29 Oct 81

[Text] Turin, 29 Oct (ANSA) -- A suspected leader of Italy's feared Red Brigades terrorist organization, 25-year-old Vittorio Alfieri, was arrested near Turin today. Police said he was believed to be on his way to a strategic meeting of the "BR" (Brigatte Rossa) when he was nabbed.

Alfieri is believed to be the head of the organization's "Alster Alassia" column which operates in the country's north. At the time of his arrest, Alfieri had a loaded gun in his possession and a number of incriminating documents.

Among the latter was a note on the logistical organization of the BR's column in Milan and Turin, a study of the work plan of the Turin Fiat plant, and demands made for the release of various kidnap victims. Of special interest to investigators was a complete file of the communiques issued during the kidnapping of Alfa Romeo manager Renzo Sandrucci. Sandrucci was seized by the "Walter Alasia" column on June 3 and released in Milan on July 23.

Alfieri, in fact, is thought to be the chief organizer of this kidnapping. In the past, Alfieri worked at Alfa Romeo's "Arese" plant and was even involved in union activities there. He went underground in November of 1980.

He was slapped with an arrest warrant for subversive activities at the end of last year and later was on the wanted list for terrorist acts and robberies. Police also believe that he took part in the last strategic leadership meeting of the "BR" held on the outskirts of Rome in August 1981.

PSI'S CRAXI MEETS WITH ARAB LEAGUE'S KLIBI

AU300931 Rome ANSA in English 0820 GMT 30 Oct 81

[Text] Rome, 30 Oct (ANSA) -- Italy's central role in the Mediterranian region for the development of European-Arab relations and a strengthening of friendship and cooperation aimed at reducing tensions and finding the solution to a stable peace were the major themes during a meeting here between the secretary general of the Arab League, Chadli Klibi and Italian Socialist Party chairman, Bettino Craxi.

According to a communique released at the conclusion of their talks on Thursday evening, Craxi and Klibi exchanged ideas and information on the situation in the Mediterranian region and in particular on the situation of crisis which provides a [word indistinct] for serious concern over peace in the area. The communique also revealed that Craxi confirmed the full support which his party intends extending to the Arab League in all of the organizations which exercise political influence, and in favor of all initiatives aimed at laying the ground for negotiations and peaceful solutions, based on respect for the right of the Arab people to independence and self-determination.

PCI'S BERLINGUER COMMENTS ON LATIN AMERICAN TRIP

PM291109 Rome L'UNITA in Italian 24 Oct 81 pp 1, 20

[Paolo Soldini report: "Berlinguer Gives Account of Visit to Cuba, Mexico, Nicaragua"]

[Text] Rome -- This was a visit that ended with a very extensive net result. It consisted of 2 busy weeks of meetings, talks and exchanges of ideas and experiences with representatives of various Latin American leftwing and progressive forces on the joint battle for peace and development and for building a new and more just international order.

Comrade Enrico Berlinguer returned to Rome yesterday morning -- together with the PCI Central Committee foreign section chief, Comrade Antonio Rubbi, and Comrade Renato Sandri of the foreign section -- from Managua, the last leg of a trip that took him to Cuba, Mexico and Nicaragua. The delegation was met at the airport by PCI Secretariat members Comrades Alessandro Natta and Alfredo Reichlin, Cuban Ambassador Mulet de Valle and Nicaraguan Charge d'Affaires Oreste Papi.

A few minutes after his arrival, Berlinguer met with the many journalists attending the press conference in a room at the airport. Before answering the long series of questions, the PCI secretary general said that he was fully satisfied with the visit and with the contacts he had had; he explained that he had met not only with Fidel Castro, Mexican President Lopez Portillo, representatives of the Nicaraguan Sandinist National Liberation Front and representatives of other major political forces such as the Mexican Communist Party; but also with representatives of democratic forces of countries other than the ones visited. I can now reveal, he said, that while in Mexico I met with Guillermo Ungo, chairman of the Revolutionary Democratic Front, and other Salvadoran political and military leaders, who explained to me their country's situation, the military victories and also the prospects for political solutions to the conflict.

Next, Berlinguer said that the visit enabled him to observe how rapidly conditions of underdevelopment and economic dependence are increasing, forcing millions of people into poverty and deprivation. The gap is widening and this, together with the surge in the arms race, is creating dangerous tensions. Moreover, the Reagan administration's policy has introduced new elements exacerbating the situation, through the decision to entrust the solution of the problems of underdevelopment to the initiative of the major capitalist enterprises, the hostility, pressures and threats against Cuba and Nicaragua, the backing for reactionary forces and the most narrow-minded regimes, such as those in El Salvador and Guatemala, and the struggle against liberation forces, absurdly considered manifestations of "international terrorism."

Here, Berlinguer continued, one notes a clear difference from the stance of the Carter administration which, with its human rights campaign (though partly contradictory), distanced itself from the most oppressive Latin American regimes. But now, just as in Western Europe the movement against the arms race is growing, in Latin America the pressure for liberation from U.S. dependence is getting stronger. There is an important trend emerging toward an independent foreign policy which, particularly in Mexico, has a tradition, and which is now very apparent in other major countries on the continent such as Brazil.

Next, Berlinguer said that he found it interesting to gain direct acquaintance with a process of rapprochement, unification and in some cases merger among long-divided forces with the most varied ideological and political inspirations -- Marxists, Social Democrats, Christians, other leftwing forces and in some cases even liberal and nationalist forces. It is a process, Berlinguer said, that I would like to see happen -- with characteristics corresponding to the different situations -- in other areas of the world too, such as Africa and even West Europe.

From our exchange of experiences with our interlocutors, Berlinguer added, we drew the conviction that Latin America has great expectations of West Europe and Italy, and that the European workers' movement has a major role to play both in resolving the problem of North-South relations and in creating a new international order, as well as the contribution that it can make to the evolution of the Latin American situation in a democratic direction.

There is here, the PCI secretary general said, the sign of a new internationalism.

Then the questions began. The first concerned the Cancun summit, on the eve of which the PCI secretary general's trip took place. A shadow was cast over the opening of the summit by Reagan's statement that the policy of North-South relations must be based on the principles of a free capitalist market, which is nothing but a way of perpetuating imperialism in relations among the nations and class injustice within the "aided" countries themselves, Berlinguer said. This line adopted by the U.S. President certainly does not help the conference. However, it is encountering strong opposition not only from the Third World countries but also from China and a significant number of Western countries. Berlinguer issued a negative verdict on the USSR's absence, pointing out that though it is true that no responsibility for the origins and continuation of underdevelopment in the world can be attributed to the Soviet Union, this is no good reason for it to alienate itself from the North-South dialogue -- indeed the opposite is true. As for Italy, its absence is certainly regrettable, but it must be said that if our country had in the past been more active and taken its own initiatives in the dialogue that has been underway for some time, it would have been very difficult not to invite it to attend. With regard to future prospects for a dialogue, the PCI secretary general said that it must aim at the establishment of global negotiations in the natural forum, namely the United Nations, on the basis of suggestions from all the developing countries.

Another subject that dominated the press conference was the significance of the new relations that the visit and the very numerous meetings with the most varied forces made it possible to establish or develop. First and foremost, Comrade Berlinguer said in this connection, we had the chance to intensify realtions with democratic Latin American forces that need the European democratic forces' more active support and which can at the same time teach us a great deal, because of the original and unprecedented nature of their experiences.

Moreover, Berlinguer added, these new relations permit closer cooperation in the battle for peace and against underdevelopment, the elimination of which is not only a matter of justice for such a large proportion of the world but also a decisive issue with regard to the actual prospects for a solution to the crisis and for development in Italy and the entire West.

Next, Berlinguer discussed more directly the situation in the countries that he visited and in the Central America area. Here, he said, international tension weighs heavily because it makes the influence of direct or indirect U.S. influence felt much more. An alleviation of tension would greatly aid the quest for solutions to the problems assailing the area. For El Salvador, for instance, it is very important that other European countries, rejecting U.S. pressures, adopt a position similar to the one adopted by France and Mexico for the recognition of the front and the start to political negotiations. It is very important, too, that Italy adopt a positive stance. In this connection, a precise stance has been adopted by the PCI and other political forces, including the PSI. The government's stance is hindered by the backing that the DC -- with the exception of some individuals -- still gives to the Christian Democratic Duarte regime, but it is unacceptable that one party's decision should influence the government.

Next, Berlinguer was asked whether in his opinion there are dangers of an authoritarian "slide" in the situation in Nicaragua, partly in the light of the recent arrests in the country. One must remember, the PCI secretary general replied, the terrible conditions from which Nicaragua proceeded following the victory of the Sandinist revolution. The country was exhausted by decades of bloodthirsty dictatorship, forced into very heavy economic dependence on the United States and subjected to continuous threats and armed attacks by counterrevolutionaries with the backing of certain neighboring countries. Under such conditions, we realize that it is not at all easy to guarantee pluralism, but it has happened in Nicaragua. As for the recent arrests, Berlinguer recalled the position already expressed in his statement released in Managua; while lacking all the imformation needed to form a value judgement, we are in principle opposed to the recourse to administrative measures if they affect expressions of opinion, whatever they may be. We believe, Berlinguer added, that it is possible and desirable that the pluralist experience continue in Nicaragua, partly because it is an example for other countries and is winning support for its cause.

CABINET DECIDES TO PARTICIPATE IN SINAI FORCE

NC301146 Paris AFP in English 1124 GMT 30 Oct 81

[Text] Rome, 30 Oct (AFP) -- The Italian Government has agreed to participate in a multinational peacekeeping force in the Sinai after Israel's scheduled withdrawal from the territory next April, informed sources said today.

The decision -- which the sources said was reached during a cabinet meeting this morning -- came four days after French External Relations Minister Claude Cheysson spoke out strongly in favor of the participation of Britain, France, Italy and the Netherlands in the force.

Mr Cheysson was speaking at last Monday's European Economic Community (EEC) foreign ministers' meeting in Luxembourg.

Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo said at the time, however, that potential European participants in the force should get unanimous EEC backing before they committed themselves.

DENMARK

GOVERNMENT'S 'REGRETS' OVER KEKKONEN RESIGNATION

PM291307 Stockholm DAGENS NYHETER in Swedish 28 Oct 81 p 13

[Ritzaus Bureau Report: "Denmark's Regrets"]

[Text] Copenhagen, 27 Oct -- In Copenhagen, Foreign Minister and acting Prime Minister Kjeld Olesen said that "for decades President Kekkonen has been an important historical and political figure in the Nordic community. He discharged the office of president in difficult times, but his great vision has preserved Finland's independence.

He has been the major power behind the reconstruction of his country and the consolidation of its international position. "It was with deep regret that I heard the news of Urho Kekkonen's resignation," Olesen said.

DEFENSE MINISTER ON CLENEAGLES CONFERENCE

PM291609 Copenhagen AKTUELT in Danish 22 Oct 81 p 9

[Axel Busch dispatch: "Sogaard: Nothing New in Reagan Statement"]

[Text] London -- The 2-day meeting of the NATO Nuclear Planning Group which ended yesterday in Scotland made "important progress with regard to the decision to deploy 572 new nuclear missiles in Europe," the communique issued after the meeting stated. The second part of the missile decision -- which calls for negotiations on disarmament on both sides in the field of the missiles in Europe -- was also discussed in Scotland.

From a hangar at Leucharb Air Base in Scotland, Danish Defense Minister Poul Sugaard told AKTUELT after the defense ministers' meeting at the luxury Gleneagles hotel that the talks had first and foremost dealt with the disarmament and arms control negotiations which are expected to start on 30 November. Before that date, the defense ministers from indidivual countries will give close study to two NATO reports, which deal in detail with the threat from the Warsaw Pact and with the real need for tactical nuclear arms to meet the Eastern bloc's rearmament. In this connection, the defense minister said, he had made it clear that Denmark attaches the greatest importance not only to these negotiations but also to the consideration that in the first phase they should aim at the lowest possible level of nuclear arms in Europe, and in the long term hopefully be able to lead to the so-called zero option.

He also said that U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger told his colleagues that President Reagan was misquoted in the West German newspaper which first published the President's supposed statement that a nuclear war limited to Europe was not unthinkable. "What is more, there was nothing new in this," Poul Sogaard said. "It has always been NATO's strategy to meet a threat at the lowest possible level, partly to avoid overreaction."

PAPER HITS 'EXAGGERATED' REACTIONS TO REAGAN

PM291533 Copenhagen BERLINGSKE TIDENDE in Danish 25 Oct 81 p 12

[Editorial: "Nuclear War for Breakfast"]

[Text] There are always problems when the United States takes its President from outside Washington and places him directly in the White House. Things go a little better when they are brought in through the Senate and pass through its hard and highly qualified political school. We saw this with Jimmy Carter, and we are now seeing the same with Ronald Reagan.

The nuances in the higher reaches of foreign policy are not his strong point yet, and when he talks idly about them he is in the habit of saying the wrong thing, so that the State Department has to clarify the administration view.

This can be somewhat distracting, but one can get used to it. The hysterical European press reaction to Reagan's off-the-cuff remarks about the possibility of limited nuclear war between the United States and the Soviet Union certainly has no reasonable justification in what he said. It has been based on an indefensible twisting of his remarks, and it has been used for an exaggerated interpretation of their political content.

At a breakfast meeting, he was asked if he thought that a conflict involving nuclear weapons could be limited, or whether escalation was unavoidable. He should have made do with his first spontaneous reaction: "I don't honestly know." But it is seldom possible for a politician to express himself so tersely, and in a few disjointed sentences he made a stab at saying that in a given situation he could possibly envisage an exchange involving tactical weapons against troops in the field without this making either of the two major powers push the button.

This has now been turned into the statement that U.S. strategy is to limit a nuclear war with the Soviet Union to Europe in order to keep the U.S. homeland unharmed. Only ill will and a lack of consideration can put such a construction on the remarks. There is nothing new in what he said. Not since the days of Eisenhower and Foster Dulles has the doctrine been that every Soviet attack on Western Europe would be met by massive retaliatory strikes against the Soviet Union. Since 1960, strategy has been based on the doctrine of flexible response, which allows the West to choose its response as the need arises. No one predicts that a Soviet attack in Europe would inevitably be answered by the intercontinental strategic nuclear arms from the United States, but no one in Moscow can be sure that it would not be. This certainty about an uncertainty is actually the essence of the preventive effect of the flexible strategy, because an attacker would never know what he might have to face.

If the United States were considering settling its differences with the Soviet Union in a limited war in Europe there would be no sense in the decision to strengthen the West's missile defenses with new long-range [as published] weapons which could hit targets in the Soviet homeland. They would automatically be able to trigger counterattacks against targets in the United States, and so you would have immediate escalation.

FINLAND

PAPER DISCUSSES FEARS FOR SWEDISH NEUTRALITY

PM291513 Helsinki HUFVUDSTADSBLADET in Swedish 20 Oct 81 p 2

[Jan-Magnus Jansson editorial: "An Unnecessary Philosophy"]

[Text] The outgrowth of statements surrounding U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger's visit to Sweden is becoming increasingly wild. On Saturday, HUFVUDSTADSBLADET's editorial columns dealt with Weinberger's remarks, according to which Sweden is not neutral. This remark was then toned down by the Americans with an assurance that Weinberger had not intended to indicate any change in the U.S. attitude to Sweden and that the Americans still "understand and respect the Swedish policy, which involves nonalignment in peacetime aiming at neutrality in war." The U.S. statement instead stressed that Sweden is "a strong supporter of freedom and democracy." With that, the incident might have been closed and the slight wound to Swedish neutrality healed. In our own comments, we underlined the U.S. clarification as "a positive, if small signal" and a recognition of the fact that the Nordic countries can best define their own position themselves.

The outcry surrounding Weinberger's remark hardly had a chance to settle before Sweden itself -- to general surprise -- made its contribution to the series of statements by officials which should never have been made. This time it was Swedish Defense Minister Torsten Gustafsson (Center Party), who has already gained a reputation for ill-considered answers. In a statement to TIDNINGARNAS TELEGRAMBYRAA, in which Gustafsson was describing Swedish defense policy, he called Sweden "the final frontier" for democracy in Europe, but added "but luckily we have the Finns." In a later statement, Gustafsson stressed that what he was trying to say was that Sweden and Finland "form the boundary between East and West in northern Europe."

Neither of these two formulations seems to have been born under particularly auspicious stars. If we look closely at the first, we conclude that Sweden is the easternmost democracy in the Nordic countries and that Finland is something indefinable, which is nevertheless a source of comfort. The second statement probably means to say that Sweden and Finland are two neutral states lying between East and West in Europe, but this not terribly well phrased either.

What Finns could react to is less the fact that a defense minister has tripped over his own tongue than the more general frontier and outpost thinking which is apparent in the Swedish minister's statement. The mistake lies in a far from successful attempt to project Sweden's iedological membership of the Western democratic camp -- a fact which speaks for itself -- onto Swedish security policy. In this connection, this seems even more unnecessary, since in the earlier U.S. statements on Weinberger's remark, Sweden's neutrality and nonalignment had been accepted. Thus there seems to have been no real political reason for painting a picture of Sweden which might be thought to please the U.S. guest.

Finland has traditionally learned to see Swedish neutrality as something fundamental which cannot be questioned by anyone. Naturally, we know that things are as Gustafsson says they are, that Sweden's officers principally take account of the Eastern dimension in their "Threat scenarios." But this specific thinking on the part of the military is not something which disturbs the basic notion of serious neutrality on which all of Sweden's neighbors rely. Most recently, the third [Finnish] parliamentary defense committee described Sweden's policy as "valuable for Finland and all the Nordic countries" and stressed its importance for stablization.

Anyway, this basic model is not upset by incautious statements by some minister of other. It happens in all countries that politicians facing questions jump before the diplomats have had a chance to stretch the safety net. However, in international politics, Sweden and Finland behave like communicating vessels -- a change in one of the vessels would have an immediate effect on the other. Therefore, it is the duty of both to behave in such a way as to preserve international confidence in the declared policy pursued by both countries. Front-line and outpost philosophy, like other statements which cross what existing guidelines and commitments stipulate, do not make any contribution to the feeling of security in the Nordic countries.

NORWAY

PREMIER WILLOCH PAYS TRIBUTE TO KEKKONEN

PM291305 Stockholm DAGENS NYHETER in Swedish 28 Oct 81 p 13

[Bjorn Lindahl dispatch: "Norway Says 'Thank you'"]

[Text] Oslo, 27 Oct -- "Now that Urho Kekkonen is leaving the important office of Finland's president, we would like to thank him for the great contribution he has made in so many areas of life," Norwegian prime minister Kaare Willoch said after the news of the Finnish president's resignation. "In the 25 years that Kekkonen has been Finland's president, the international situation has called for great wisdom and a sense of reality.

"Urho Kekkonen has shown to the full that he possesses these qualities. Throughout his presidency he also worked for close Nordic cooperation, which has been one of the fundamental elements in Finnish foreign policy."

SWEDEN

PREMIER INTERVIEWED ON SOVIET SUB AFFAIR

LD291536 Stockholm International Service in Swedish 1000 GMT 29 Oct 81

[Excerpts] Reports of details concerning the Russian submarine are flooding in; we have to try to choose between them. That the situation is serious was underlined by Prime Minister Thorbjorn Falldin, who said the following about the resolute Swedish refusal to the Russian request to be allowed to salvage the vessel themselves.

[Begin recording] [Falldin] Well, this is completely natural. We must not forget that Soviet or other diplomatic personnel in Sweden are not allowed to enter these restricted areas around certain parts of our military installations. This submarine is in a restricted area and so there can be no question of more Russian warships coming there to pull it off. We shall handle this from the Swedish side. The commander in chief telephoned me immediately after he was informed of this, and I have since had discussions with him and made sure that all the authorities that may be concerned in this case have received the necessary instructions.

[Question] What does international law say in such a case; what can we do?

[Answer] Well, I cannot go through all the regulations concerning international law. Here we have quite special circumstances because the vessel has gone right into a restricted area, and therefore we on the Swedish side will observe all the regulations concerning a restricted area.

[Question] Have we then the right to go on board the vessel and see in the log, for example, what they have been up to?

[Answer] Here there are quite special regulations. We shall naturally contact the commander on board and already some activity has started on the Russian side, and in one way or another the matter will be cleared up.

[Question] Have we the right to commandee the vessel, to disarm it?

[Answer] We have a duty to defend our territory, and we shall do this in a way which is in keeping with the international system of rules and in keeping with the demands which we ourselves must place on the restricted areas we ourselves have created. There is no hesitation here.

[Question] Is this increased activity from the Russian side a result of the American defence secretary's visit and the Swedish defense minister's statements to the effect that we know where we belong?

[Answer] First of all, it is not a question of connecting this with something or other. Quite regardless of what connection it might have, it is extremely remarkable that a near neighbor, with which we maintain close and friendly relations, should behave in such a way with its navy units, and it is on this basis that we have strongly protested.

[Question] You have also demanded a strengthening of the Swedish defense after this?

[Answer] We have a constant coastal patrol, and we had proof of the fact that it functions a few months ago when submerged foreign submarines were discovered and measures led to the departure of the submarines from Swedish waters. [end recording]

Further Falldin Comments

LD291820 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 1700 GMT 29 Oct 81

[Summary] [Announcer] The commander-in-chief has been given the task of refloating the submarine and of carrying out an inquiry into how the submarine got into Swedish waters. A government communique says that what happens next depends on the outcome of the inquiry. What information do we want from the Soviet Union? Prime Minister Falldin spoke at a press conference today:

[Begin recording] [Falldin] "First of all, it is important that we find out what happened and the circumstances (?as it says here), and then I should think it reasonable to assume that the Russians will react to the protest that we have handed them.

[Journalist] "The Soviet side has already given an explanation. Do you not accept that explanation?

[Falldin] "No, we have not received any explanation that is acceptable yet." [end recording]

[Announcer] "Later, Foreign Minister Ola Ullsten said: The explanation that the submarine developed a fault on its gyrocompass is an explanation that the Swedish Government does not accept.

"One may assume that the government now wants some form of regret from the Soviet Union over this affair and a more detailed explanation on how the submarine got so deep into the Swedish archipelago, and on top of that, into a military restricted area. This is Sweden's demand before it hands over the submarine. The fact that the Soviet Union has given up the demand to salvage the submarine itself is seen by the government as a success for the firm Swedish stand in the affair. The government now assumes that the Russians are willing to cooperate in the inquiry to be made by the defense forces. Representatives of the Soviet Embassy in Stockholm will be allowed to meet the personnel of the submarine if they request, but the meeting must not take place within a restricted military area. What happens if the crew is not willing to cooperate? Is the Swedish Government prepared to use force, for example, to disarm the crew, should this be necessary? The prime minister [as heard] replied:

[Begin recording] "We are prepared to use, in the first place, the naval units we have and other units too to uphold our territory, but there is no reason now to start talking in terms of our starting to use force, least of all after the admission received from the Russian side."

Defense Chief Remarks

LD291846 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 1700 GMT 29 Oct 81

[Interview by Vice Adm Bengt Schuback, chief of the defense staff, with Stockholm radio reporter (Arvid Lagercrantz); date and place not given — recorded]

[Excerpts] [Question] May I put a few questions to you and start with this: Admiral Bengt Schuback, does the defense staff now think this matter [of the Soviet submarine] is solved?

[Answer] No, by no means!

[Question] What is the [word indistinct] procedure? Are there any problems with this at all?

[Answer] Well, it depends. There may be many unexpected problems, depending on how they act onboard.

If they follow our instructions obediently matters will, of course, proceed more smoothly [words indistinct] friction arises and one has to stop and use diplomatic channels and sort out a number of questions, then it will take a long time.

[Question] How will you proceed next? What will the next step be?

[Answer] I will not reveal that, of course, since this goes out in the mass media. I am sorry.

[Question] Can you say anything about the Russian attitude? Have we been able to note what the Russians want here and how they see a solution?

[Answer] It seems they are prepared to let us carry out the salvage without friction, and it also seems clear they want the submarine out of Swedish (?territorial waters) as quickly as possible, to look after it and tow it home or let it make its way home (?depending on) its condition. [Words indistinct] very clear that is the wish.

[Question] If you were told somebody is alarmed at what is happening in Sweden, thinking it is fantastically odd that a submarine can get in so close to Swedish waters or Swedish land, what would you say?

[Answer] Well, first of all, it is extremely remarkable and odd that something like this can happen at all in peace time, that such insulting and brazen behavior can be displayed.

Premier Sets Inquiry

LD301202 Stockholm International Service in Swedish 1000 GMT 30 Oct 81

[Summary] Submarine commander (Petr Guzhin) still claims that the cause of the grounding was a fault in the navigation equipment and he has refused to leave the submarine for questioning or to hand over any documents. The area has been closed to the public, armed Swedish troops are guarding the site.

"What will happen now? This is the brief answer to that question by Capt Sven Carlsson [Karlskrona Defense Staff official]:

[Begin recording] [Carlsson] Nothing.

[Question] "Are you just going to sit here with your arms folded and sit it out?

[Answer] "Yes, that is what we are going to do, for the directives issued from various higher authorities mean that if the vessel is to be salvaged, in other words pulled off the rocks, this must happen after the inquiry, in other words after the talks to clarify why this Russian submarine is here at all.

[Question] "As part of the inquiry, the vessel has been examined by divers. Have you found out anything?

[Answer] "Yes, as far as I know the vessel has only suffered slight damage, so there should, and I stress should, be no risk from the point of view of seaworthiness.

[Question] "This means that as soon as the ship is afloat it could leave.

[Answer] "Well, it could leave, but many steps remain to be taken before we are in that situation. [end recording]

"What will happen to the Soviet crew? The Swedish Government has ordered the commander in chief to investigate the whole matter and this is what Prime Minister Thorbjorn Falldin has to say:

[Begin recording] [Falldin] "The inquiry that we have assigned to the commander in chief includes of course the question of trying to get the captain and the crew, other members of the crew, to clarify what we have said; how could this happen and what was the intention?

[Question] "Will the commander be charged?

[Answer] "There is no reason to discuss that right now. First, the inquiry will have to be carried out and, depending on its results, we shall decide when and how the submarine is to be returned. One thing is quite certain, and that is that this vessel will continue to be Russian property. But quite when it is to be returned and how it is to be returned depends on the findings of the inquiry.

[Question] "But why cannot it be stated with certainty that the commander will be charged?

[Answer] "Well, we must not speak in those terms before results of the inquiry are available.

[Question] "But what would happen if a Danish fishing vessel had entered these waters, had entered a restricted military area; would charges then have been brought?

[Answer] "It is one thing if a private individual or a civilian vessel enters, but this is a state-owned ship, and if one wants to simplify it somewhat one might say that they enjoy prima facie immunity which is comparable to the immunity existing in an embassy here in this country. The difference is that they have broken rules which should have been observed by the Russian ship. Equally according to normal Swedish law, Swedish police cannot enter an embassy and start investigations. We have now arranged for a special inquiry to be carried out through the agency of the commander in chief where he can of course use the expertise he wants. Only after that inquiry is completed shall we decide on such questions as you raise here." [end recording]

COMMUNIQUE ON SALVAGE OF SOVIET SUBMARINE

LD291702 Stockholm International Service in Swedish 1430 GMT 29 Oct 81

[Excerpts] The communique which was presented goes on to say: The government has also entrusted the commander in chief with the task of carrying out an investigation into the cause of, and the circumstances surrounding the submarine's violation of Swedish territorial waters and its trepassing into a restricted military area. Depending on the results of the investigation, a decision will be made on when and how the submarine will be handed back.

Nothing has been said about when the salvage is to take place nor when the investigation is to be started, nor is it clear to where the submarine is to be taken. It depends on the damage, Falldin said.

We might stress once again that both Prime Minister Falldin and Foreign Minister Ullsten reiterated that the Swedish protest to the Soviet Union is very, very sharply worded, and they thought, and they stressed this, that this is a gross violation.

USSR Acquiescence

LD291508 Stockholm International Service in Swedish 1430 GMT 29 Oct 81

[Summary] A government press conference has just ended. Prime Minister Falldin said that the Swedish commander in chief has been given the task of salvaging the Soviet submarine. A communique was issued.

At the press conference, which was attended by both Prime Minister Falldin and Foreign Minister Ullsten, it was stressed that the Soviet Union will not help to salvage the submarine, but the captain and the crew should give assistance.

Foreign Minister Ullsten was also able to state that he had spoken to the Soviet ambassador and told him as much. The Soviet ambassador said that he had been informed by his foreign minister that the USSR has now agreed that the salvage is to be carried out by Sweden. Thus the USSR has given up its previous demand that the USSR should salvage the submarine.

Sub Commander Refuses Cooperation

LD301048 Stockholm International Service in Swedish 1000 GMT 30 Oct 81

[Text] The commander of the grounded Soviet submarine in the Karlskrona Archipelago still refuses to leave his ship for questioning on board the Swedish minesweeper Aspoe, nor does he want to hand over any documents from the submarine which would provide an explanation why the vessel ran aground within a military restricted area deep inside Swedish territorial waters. Attempts to persuade him began last night. The chief of staff at the naval base south, Capt Karl Andersson, and one interpreter have been on board the Soviet submarine several times without any results. The Soviet authorities have agreed to Swedish personnel salvaging the submarine but the Swedish side has made it clear that there is no question of any salvaging before the questioning is completed.

If the negotiations with the commander of the submarine reach a deadlock, it is likely that the matter will again be raised on a political level. In other words, the Foreign Ministry in Stockholm will again have to contact the Soviet authorities.

Sub Captain's Protest

LD301246 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 1130 GMT 30 Oct 81

[Text] The commander of the grounded Soviet submarine in the Blekinge Archipelago this morning protested the actions of the Swedish Navy. He also protested the demands by the Swedish authorities to be allowed to question him. The defense authorities in Karlskrona say in a statement that the submarine will have to stay grounded until the commander has changed his attitude. This morning, the army closed off the whole area around the grounded submarine, which means that no civilians are allowed to approach the disabled ship for security reasons.

FALLDIN PRAISES OUTGOING FINNISH PRESIDENT

PM291431 Stockholm DAGENS NYHETER in Swedish 28 Oct 81 p 13

[Text] Prime Minister Thorbjorn Falldin praised President Kekkonen for his work as Finland's president in a statement after the announcement of Kekkonen's resignation on Tuesday. "For 25 years, President Kekkonen has stood as a guarantee of Finland's independent and active peace and neutrality policy," Falldin said. "As one of Europe's and the world's leading statesmen, he has in these years combined experience and wisdom with constructive creativity; single-minded firmness with an openness toward new impulses and proposals," Falldin said.

"President Kekkonen has seen securing and strengthening Finland's independence and integrity as his foremost task. He has carried out this task in a way which has not only benefitted Finland, but which has also made an important contribution to peace and security throughout Europe."

TRADE AGREEMENTS SIGNED WITH BRAZILIAN OFFICIAL

PY270114 Brasilia Domestic Service in Portuguese 2200 GMT 26 Oct 81

[Text] Planning Minister Delfim Neto together with British Secretary of State for Trade John Biffen signed an agreement which amounts to 61.8 billion cruzeiros which provides for the Brazilian purchase of four ships and two containers. The order was placed in England with the support of nine British banks headed by the Lloyds International.

The agreement also provides for the conversion of the Santa Cruz power plant to coal power as well as the development of a coal mine. The British firm Ferranti will provide electronic equipment for five corvettes and one training frigate made in Brazil and the GEC will build the railway in Recife.

DAILY TELEGRAPH COMMENTS ON ANTINUCLEAR MARCHES

PM261559 London THE DAILY TELEGRAPH in English 26 Oct 81 p 16

[Editorial: "The Inside Threat"]

[Text] Anti-American nuclear protest achieved its greatest and most disturbing success so far over the weekend. Mammoth rallies in London and other European capitals matched, on a wider scale, the pattern established in Bonn a fortnight ago. The highly co-ordinated Europe-wide campaign is gaining momentum at a speed and on a scale that exceed the worse fears of NATO governments. It is also becoming more ambitious in its immediate objectives and more outspokenly, woundingly and provocatively anti-American. Hitherto the main targets have been the neutron bomb (retired hurt) and the cruise and Pershing II missiles due to be deployed in two years' time in token response to Russia's massive existing array of longer-range and much heavier weapons. Now the main thrust is openly towards complete unilateral nuclear disarmament without any stages, frilles or slight of hand.

The end result would in any case be the same, although the time-scale might be a little different. The cruise Pershing II deployment is now the acid test of what is both an absolute minimum of flexible-response deterrent capability and of Europe's political and defensive will. If this minimum cannot be achieved the result will not only be that a prudent America will have no incentive to continue exposing its 350,000 men in Europe and accepting escalating nuclear risks in its homeland for a militarily lost cause in Europe. A cruise-Pershing rejection by Europe would mean that pro-NATO governments had been replaced by leftwing regimes of one kind or another -- one needs to look no further than at Mr Foot's performance yesterday, and he is only the cat's-paw of the calculating hard-liners. A panic-stricken Europe, which had thus suicidally deprived itself of American protection, would be as much at the mercy of the Kremlin as Poland would be now but for the courage of its people. Mr Brezhnev would long since have sent in the Red Army to crush Solidarity had he not feared that the gruesome spectacle would stop the now for him, almost unbelievable promising European "peace" movement in its tracks.

The foot-soldiers of "peace" protest are over-whelmingly young people whose idealism, inexperience and "alienations" are exploited, pandered to, often no doubt well-meaningly canalised by leaders of various kinds. The three main streams are those generated and mobilised by political class warfare, by religious elements and by other activists using moral arguments. The class warfare element is most influential behind the scenes and most widespread in day-to-day activities owing to the whole range of party political and trade union organisations at its disposal. The more socialist policies are seen to fail, both at home and in Russia, the more radical do their exponents become. When called upon to choose between policies which either accord generally with the interests of Russia, the "socialist fatherland," or which accept the standards and the military protection of capitalist America they instinctively prefer the former.

Those who dismiss this warning as alarmist do so at their own personal peril and that of Britain and Europe. At times of great common danger morale has always been crucially important and is increasingly so as war becomes more all-embracing. Last time Britain, thanks to inspiring leadership and superb moral and physical courage was, alone in Europe, just able, by the skin of her teeth, to hold on and turn the tide. Now, in the nuclear age, it is in time of ostensible peace that freedom is irrevocably preserved or lost and that war is either triumphantly deterred or disastrously slithered into through weakness, division and ambiguous signals to the enemy.

It is obvious that Russia has played a large part in inspiring and orchestrating the various manifestations of the "peace" movement. Opinions differ as to how much is spontaneous and how much is the result of the machinations of the long-established network of communist parties, cover organisations, trade union activists, infiltrators and so on. Chancellor Schmidt, a good witness at least as far as Germany is concerned, attributes much more to communist and extreme-left manipulation than does Mr Critchley on this page. Of course, an integral part of Russian policy is to spread panic through military intimidation. Yet despite this it is difficult to believe that the climate of European opinion which Russia is exploiting, although in many ways vulnerable to her offensive, could alone have produced anything like the present dangerous growth.

Clergy, academics and others who base their anti-nuclear case on self-defined moral absolutes must be reminded that the essence of morality is the thinking-through of the consequences of actions. Too often, one suspects, the real motive, sub-conscious or unconscious, is to establish rapport with youth in the age of the "generation gap" -- doubtless from the highest pastoral and academic motives. Nor can it be assumed that those who achieve prominence in "peace" campaigns are immune to personal or intellectual vanity. As for populist politicians, now that the stratagem of spending their way to popularity with public money has been rendered somewhat suspect by the ravages of inflation, anti-nuclearism has become an irresistible bandwagon. Herr Brandt refused to condemn the Bonn anti-nuclear demonstration on the grounds that the party must at all costs keep the support of German youth.

Surely the lesson of all civilisation is that the greater the danger the greater is the need for rational action. Yet the anti-nuclear campaign is based almost entirely on the exploitation of emotion, to the practical exclusion of rational argument. This applies as much to the crude slogans emblazoned or shouted at demonstrations as to the advocacy exercised in cultured accents by distinguished intellectuals. A typical example was the Bronowski lecture at peak-time on BBC-2 last Friday by Dr Nicholas Humphrey. For 50 minutes he dwelt in word and picture, on the well-known and undisputed horrors of nuclear war and held up eight Americans who smashed a nuclear war-head mechanism with hammers as models of the kind of thing we should all try to do. His aim, the BBC says, is an "independent Britain with a home-grown nonnuclear defence policy." Little good that would do in a Russian-dominated Europe. Russia might even drop a bomb on us to bring us to our senses without losing the life of a single Russian if we tried to remain "independent."

ROLANDHIS RETURNS FROM LUXEMBOURG 28 OCT

NC282102 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 2000 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Text] This evening, Foreign Minister Rolandhis returned from Luxembourg where he led the Cypriot delegation to the meeting of the EEC-Cyprus attachment council. During the meeting, the council resolved to refer the matter of the attachment agreement to the community's ministerial council for further discussion.

Earlier today, Commerce Minister Kittis and the director general of the planning bureau, Arestiou, also returned from Luxembourg after attending the council's work.

KIPRIANOU RECEIVES FRG ENVOY, SPEAKS ON UN ROLE

NC292026 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1750 GMT 29 Oct 81

[Text] President Kiprianou has stated that the intercommunal dialogue is passing today through a delicate period. Referring to the Cyprus issue during the presentation today of credentials by the new FRG ambassador, Friedrich Landau, President Kiprianou said that, despite the efforts and good will of the Greek Cypriot side, it has not been possible to make progress in the dialogue because of Turkey's continuing intransigence.

Mr Kiprianou further said that the Cyprus Government is not at the stage of studying the evaluation of the dialogue submitted by UN Secretary General Waldheim, but that very soon it will be in a position to express its justified views on this evaluation. The president stressed: What I should make absolutely clear is that in no case will we accept a Cyprus solution that will be tantamount to confederation or division. He added: The solution should be one that safeguards the unity of the country and people and, at the same time, the Cypriot people's inalienable rights, including the right of refugees to return to their homes under conditions of safety. President Kiprianou asked Mr Landau to convey to the president and people of FRG his best wishes and the assurance that he will do all he can toward the utmost development of the close cooperation already existing between the two countries.

Presenting his credentials, the new FRG ambassador gave the assurance that his government will continue to support the goals and interests of Cyprus in its progressive economic approach with the EEC. Mr Landau added: We are following with attention and interest the negotiations between the two communities which will determine the future fate of Cyprus. We hope that during this decisive phase of negotiations progress is achieved and the foundations are laid for the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of the Republic of Cyprus. He also said that his country will continue to support, through every appropriate manner, the UN secretary general's efforts toward a Cyprus solution within the framework of the intercommunal talks. The credentials presentation ceremony was attended by Foreign Minister Rolandhis and other officials.

Kiprianou Interview

NC291230 Nicosia O AGON in Greek 29 Oct 81 p 3

[By M. Konstandinidhis]

[Text] Mr Spiros Kiprianou, president of the Republic of Cyprus, received me at the Grande Bretagne Hotel prior to his departure for Cyprus last Tuesday and willingly answered questions that I put to him.

Mr Kiprianou disclosed that the question of the Cyprus dossier will be the subject of consultations between the governments of Cyprus and Greece, but added that the main say in this question is with the Greek Government.

The interview follows: Question: Have you accepted the Waldheim ideas or not?

Answer: I cannot make a specific statement, given the fact that this will be the object of consultations in Nicosia with the ministerial and national councils. Most certainly, after the consultations, I shall make a detailed statement on the issue.

Question: After your recent meeting with Papandreou you stated that you discussed also the missing persons issue. What actions will be taken on this humane issue?

Answer: Efforts will be made on the missing persons issue to guarantee the necessary prerequisites and procedures for the harmonious and effective operation of the committee on missing persons already established under UN auspices. There is currently an agreement for the formation of a committee which has not gone into effect because of various obstacles -- principally from the Turkish Cypriot side -- and other obstacles of a procedural nature. An effort is currently being made in New York and Nicosia to overcome these difficulties.

Question: Mr President, the Turks allege that everything the Cyprus Government says about the missing persons issue is for propaganda purposes and they also claim that they have persons missing since 1963. What is your comment on these statements?

Answer: We have said and have repeatedly stressed that the issue of all missing persons -- Greek Cypriot and Turkish Cypriot -- should be investigated. We have absolutely no objection to this but the allegation that this is being done for propaganda reasons is, at least, unacceptable, given the fact that one cannot use such a clearly humane issue for propaganda purposes.

Question: During my recent visit to Turkey, where I had contacts with Turkish Cypriot journalists and officials, I was told that they do want a solution but are afraid of revengful acts by the Greek Cypriots. What have you to state?

Answer: I believe that the majority of the Turkish Cypriots desire a solution of the Cyprus problem, but I do not think they are afraid they will suffer anything bad from the Greeks. I would say that this is propaganda by those who do not want and do not seek a solution -- to some extent by the Turkish Cypriot leadership, and to some extent by various factors in Ankara. I want to take this opportunity to state that I sincerely believe that a correct and just solution of the Cyprus problem, which would guarantee the unity of the state and the people, certainly will create such prerequisites and an atmosphere that will prevent a repetition of the adventures of the past.

Question: Currently the dialogue is almost suspended. The Turkish Cypriots say they want to bring the Waldheim ideas to the intercommunal dialogue? What do you say?

Answer: I repeat that I do not want to comment on the issue of the Waldheim ideas now. It is not up to the Greek or the Turkish side to decide whether the ideas will be brought to the talks, it is up to the secretary general himself. We shall determine our stance in accordance with what is correct, but at this moment there should not be any talk about acceptance or rejection of the ideas. At present, the secretary general's ideas are being studied. We shall determine our course in the light of consultations that will be held.

Question: In the wake of the long and successful talks you had with the Greek prime minister, there is a pervasive question as to whether the Cyprus Government will change its course in handling the problem.

Answer: Once again I want to state that the course for handling the Cyprus problem will not change and I want to stress that the goals remain unchanged. We remain steadfast in our course. Our dealings will always be those that are dictated by the national interest, at every specific moment and in accordance with developments.

The new significant element in this affair at this moment is Greece's role in the effort for the pursuit of a just solution to the Cyprus problem. I want to stress that Greece has many options which -- as Papandreou has clearly and categorically stated -- it intends to pursue in order to support and strengthen the Cyprus struggle.

Question: Do you believe that this is the appropriate time to open the Cyprus dossier, something you stated you would accept? Will unpleasant situations be created at this time?

Answer: The matter of the time and the procedure will be the object of new consultations between the two countries, but most certainly the principal decision on this issue will be made by the Greek Government. The purpose for the opening of the dossier, of course, is not to create anomalies. The purpose is to learn the entire truth about the Cypriot people's drama which was caused by the coup. I do not believe that any problems will result from opening the dossier. On the contrary, I believe that when the truth surfaces, and is used to brief the people in essential as well as historical ways, that this helps to defuse the situation.

Question: As is well known, [Minister of Interior and Defense] Veniamin is going to Athens for talks with the Greek Government on the defense of Cyprus. What have you to say?

Answer: First, the Greek prime minister, who is also the national defense minister, will be briefed in connection with everything that has so far been done relative to the defense shield of Cyprus -- and much has been done indeed -- and, of course, views will be exchanged on further strengthening Cyprus defenses.

Question: Will there be changes in the National Guard?

Answer: This is something that will be discussed in Nicosia before Veniamin leaves for Athens.

Question: Do you believe the PASOK government is more determined and has more possibilities for the promotion of the Cyprus problem?

Answer: I believe that Papandreou's government has more possibilities for the promotion of the Cyprus problem because of its more general positon vis-a-vis Greece's allies. This clearly emerges from the recent interview the prime minister gave in connection with the framework of his goals. The conclusion emerges clearly from the interview that Papandreou is determined to obtain correct solutions, including Cyprus' right to be rid of foreign troops and live peacefully in an absolutely independent state. I believe that without the withdrawal of the Turkish troops there can be no solution of the Cyprus problem. This is a necessary prerequisite, and an even more necessary one is the demilitarization of Cyprus. The issue of troop withdrawal is included in UN resolutions. Viewing the issue from a practical point, how can it be possible to have a solution that will not be partitionist -- and a partitionist solution is impossible -- when occupation troops are present in Cyprus.

Question: Then, how can we accept a continuation of the dialogue under the eyes of the Turkish troops?

Answer: As you know, the dialogue is being conducted on the basis of UN resolutions.

Question: Resolutions which stipulate that the Turkish troops must withdraw.

Answer: Yes. The withdrawal of the troops is one of our basic aims, that is, no agreement will be concluded on the constitutional structure of the state of Cyprus, nor will it be implemented before the withdrawal of the Turkish occupation troops has been guaranteed.

DENKTAS REMARKS ON INTERCOMMUNAL SITUATION

TA291636 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in Turkish to Cyprus 1530 GMT 29 Oct 81

[Excerpt] President Rauf Denktas has said that those who believe that the Turkish Cypriot community, which has defended its existence, honor, freedom and equality in Cyprus since 1571, would be lax about the defense of their country are mistaken.

The cornerstone of the Guzelyurt [Morphou] water derivation project was laid today by Denktas and Turkish ambassador to Lefkosa [Nicosia] Inal Batu. In a speech at a ceremony on the occasion, Denktas noted that recently there are certain [word indistinct] rumors that Greece will send troops and weapons to Cyprus. He said: Whether the new prime minister of Greece would do this, I do not know. Let us assume he does. We are not here in order to make war. We are here protecting our rights, our country and our soil and we are determined to do so.

Recalling that even at periods when the Turkish Cypriot community was spread throughout the island, it continued its national resistance, Denktas said: Let them not try us. Let them try us at the negotiating table. We have adopted a positive stand at the negotiating table during the peace negotiations and we will continue our positive attitude. We have displayed all the flexibility we can to ensure that the two partner and equal communities can coexist and we will continue to do so. However, the Greek Cypriots deceive themselves through statements such as the Greek Cypriot community is the ruling community in Cyprus and Papandreou's statement that a part of Greece is under occupation. If they drag themselves into a new adventure, they will find us united. This consists of Turks resisting in the defense of their country on the path shown by Ataturk. Cyprus is our country. We have not bowed to the Greek Cypriots and we do not intend to do so for centuries to come. We are ready to negotiate and make agreement as equals and partners. There are certain formulas for a solution. Conducting negotiations involving these formulas is the best solution. This is the sensible way and the way to peace. This is also the way to establish a bicommunal and bizonal republic in Cyprus.

Support for Palestinians

TA281141 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1120 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Text] Lefkosa, 28 Oct (AA) -- President Rauf Denktas of the Turkish Federated State of Cyprus sent a message today to World Islamic Union Secretary General Sheikh (Mohammad Ali al-Harakan) and thanked him for his recent statement in support of the legitimate cause of the Turkish Cypriot community.

"As you have stated bravely, Cyprus cannot be permitted, at the cost of the existence of the Turkish Cypriot community, to turn into another Palestine. The Greek premier's statement that there is a similarity between Cyprus and the Arab lands under Zionist occupation is nothing but demagogy aimed at winning sympathy from PLO and the Arab world. The Muslim Turkish community will continue to support the just cause of the Palestinian people," Denktas stressed.

EVREN DELIVERS SPEECH MARKING REPUBLIC DAY

TA291525 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1510 GMT 29 Oct 81

[Text] Ankara, 29 Oct (AA) -- Head of state Gen Kenan Evren said, in republic day speech: "The Turkish Republic built on the foundation of Ataturk's principles has always existed and will always do so thanks to adherence by the whole nation to the principle of 'one nation-one state.' No force can divide and dismember it." Gen Evren was speaking at a parade staged at Ankara hippodrome today.

Gen Evren went on to say that the courageous Turkish armed forces would continue to defend Ataturk and his reforms loyally. The armed forces, deriving their force from the nation, would definitely crush any attempt "against these sacred values by treacherous and dirty hands."

The head of state stressed that he was announcing his resolute conviction that such attempts would be crushed once more, trusting fully the youth and the armed forces, adding: "Thus the Turkish Republic will exist eternally, rise higher and higher on your shoulders inspired by Ataturk's principles and become more prosperous and developed."

PRESS ON PAPANDREOU, ASSEMBLY'S WORK

TA291613 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1530 GMT 29 Oct 81

[Text] Ankara, 29 Oct (AA) -- MILLIYET's front-page columnist Mehmet Barlas again comments on the initial performance of Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou. He notes that most Greeks appear to be pleased with their new leader. "He has learned much from the past. He doesn't look like his father. And he doesn't act as he did," the columnist says in reference to Papandreou. "But in my opinion they are grossly (?misled)."

Toeman Erel of MILLEYET writes about the elections for the presiding officers of the Consultative Assembly. He says that the speaker Sadi Irmak, was elected without any pressure at all. It was a totally free election. Mustafa Aysan, a member elected by the National Security Council directly to the assembly, was a candidate and so was Sadi Irmak. Both fought a gentlemen's battle and Irmak won, he says. Turkey's ruling generals do not see any election as a simple formality. The assembly has been off to a good start, he says, based on his initial observations.

The decision of the military court of appeals to reject the application by the judges to withdraw from the case of Alpaslan Turkes is one of the top news stories of the day. The decision is expected to clear the way for the resumption of the trial. Celebrations for the 29 October Republic Day is naturally the top news item of Thursday as all major dailies have front-paged the occasion.

F-104 BELIEVED DOWN IN BURSA MOUNTAINS

TA291522 Ankara ANATOLIA in French 1515 GMT 29 Oct 81

[Text] Bursa, 29 Oct (AA) -- Following reports that an F-104 Turkish aircraft had crashed in the southern region of Uludag (a 2,500-meter-high mountain in the Province of Bursa), the gendarmes launched a big search operation in the region on Thursday. A helicopter from the airbase in Bandirma, on the southern coast of the Marmara Sea, is participating in the search operations, which are being carried out under unfavorable weather conditions.

NETHERLANDS

LABORITES BACK PSOE OPPOSITION TO NATO

PM290957 Rotterdam NRC HANDELSBLAD in Dutch 22 Oct 81 p 3

[Eppo Jansen Dispatch: "Labor Party Does Not Want Spain in NATO Yet"]

[Excerpt] Madrid, 22 Oct -- The Netherlands Labor Party [PVDA] is ready to propose that Spanish accession to NATO be postponed, thus responding to the opposition among Spanish socialists to joining NATO.

PVDA International Secretary van Traa stated as much this morning. Van Traa is in Madrid in connection with the Spanish Socialist Workers Party Congress.

He said that there are already contacts on this issue between the PVDA and social democratic parties in Denmark, Belgium, Norway and West Germany (of which only the Danish and West German parties are in power). In general these parties have not yet shown much enthusiasm, but Van Traa said that there was a chance that they could be persuaded to take part in a joint initiative.

PORTUGAL

BRIEFS

PRC MILITARY MISSION -- After a 2-day visit to the Azorean islands of Terceira and Sao Miguel, the top-level Chinese military mission which last week arrived on a visit to Portugal this morning left the Azores for Funchal. The mission, led by the commander of the Beijing military region and including the chiefs of staff of China's navy and air force, visited the Lajes air base, the high command of the Azores armed forces in Ponta Delgada and held meetings with the major military and civilian authorities in the archipelago. [Text] [Lisbon in Portuguese to Europe 1900 GMT 29 Oct 81 LD]

SPAIN

PARLIAMENT APPROVES ENTRY INTO NATO, 186-146

LD292034 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 2000 GMT 29 Oct 81

[Report from Congress of Deputies]

[Text] [Unidentified correspondent] The voting procedure is coming to an end. Quite frankly the 10 minutes spent by the eight parliamentary groups to explain their vote was not necessary.

[Unidentified speaker] 332 votes cast: 186 in favor, 146 against.

Therefore, the committee's report has been approved, thus giving the government the authorization of congress for Spanish entry into NATO. The house will now rise.

BRIEFS

AMBASSADORS APPOINTED -- The following appointments and promotions were decided on at the 16 October 1981 cabinet meeting: ambassador to Ethiopia, Mariano Berdejo Rivera; ambassador to Tanzania, Fernando Castillo Moreno; ambassador to Madagascar, Jose Garcia Banon, resident in Nairobi; ambassador to Togo, Jose Maria Sierra y Nava, resident in Accra. [Excerpts] [Madrid YA in Spanish 17 Oct 81 p 10 PM]

FBIS DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 211 2 November 1981

CONTENTS

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Schmidt Stands by NATO Dual Decision J 1
Genscher Addresses FDP on CSCE, Arms Negotiations J 1
Apel: Budget Cuts Will Not Endanger Bundeswehr J 1
DGB To Help Expand Solidarity Radio Station J 2
Neo-Nazi Arms Depot Discovered Near Eimke J 2
Official Discusses Brezhnev Visit With Korniyenko J 2
Paper Surveys Attitudes Toward U.S., USSR [FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE 30 Oct] J 3
AWACS Deal Ignores Internal Dangers in Saudi Arabia [FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE 30 Oct] J 4
Briefs: Brezhnev Visit; Malawian President J 4

FRANCE

Bomb Explodes in Car Outside Senator's Office K 1
New Caledonians Deny Role K 1
Mitterrand Pledges Consistent Third World Policy [LE MONDE 24 Oct] K 1
French-African Summit To Focus on Political Issues K 2
Mitterrand, Marchais Receive Angolan President K 3

ITALY & THE VATICAN

Government Decides To Participate in Sinai Force L 1
Colombo Comments L 1
Colombo Receives Arab League Secretary Klibi L 2
Cultural Affairs Official Leaves for PRC L 3
Briefs: New CAR Ambassador L 3

NORDIC AFFAIRS

FINLAND

Potential Finnish Election Field Examined [DAGENS NYHETER 28 Oct] P 1

NORWAY

Norway, Iceland Agree on Oil Exploitation [AFTENPOSTEN 23 Oct] P 2

SWEDEN

USSR Officially Apologizes for Grounded Sub P 3
Soviet Envoy Confers With Ullsten P 3
USSR Agrees To Interrogation P 3
Paper Ponders Future of Post-Kekkonen Finland [DAGENS NYHETER 28 Oct] P 4

CYPRUS

Kiprianou Receives New U.S. Ambassador R 1
Press Comments on Ceremony R 1
Soviet Technical Cooperation Delegation Arrives R 2
Meeting With Rolandhis R 2
Solidarity Meeting Opens in Nicosia 31 Oct [CYPRUS MAIL 1 Nov] R 3
Declaration Issued R 3
Government Denies Ioannidhis Resignation Report R 4
Lissaridhis Urges Rejection of Waldheim Ideas R 4
Daily: Waldheim Ideas Accepted for Discussion [I DHILINI 31 Oct] R 4
Committee Criticizes Missing Persons Deadlock R 5
North's Paper on Greek Plan To Send Troops [BOZKURT 29 Oct] R 5

GREECE

Air Force Repels Attempted Turkish Violation [AVRIANI 30 Oct] S 1
Government Confirms Violation [ELEVTHEROS KOSMOS 31 Oct] S 1
MESIMVRINI Reaction [31 Oct] S 1
Papandreou Confers With Turkish Ambassador S 2
Government Reply on U.S. Planes Spying on Libya [I KATHIMERINI 30 Oct] S 2
Papandreou Receives Visiting Cypriot AKEL Leader S 2
Papandreou, Papaioannou Comments S 2
Papandreou Says Cyprus Still 'Priority' Issue [LE MONDE 29 Oct] S 3
KKE Issues Statement on Election Outcome [RIZOSPASTIS 31 Oct] S 6
Soviet Official Reiterates Oil-Supply Offer [NEWS 30 Oct] S 6

TURKEY

Foreign Ministry Views on Papandreou Statement T 1
Media Responses to Papandreou Foreign Policy T 1
GUNAYDIN Commentary [29 Oct] T 1
MILLIYET Editorial [29 Oct] T 2
GUNAYDIN Report [29 Oct] T 2
ANATOLIA Comments T 2
More Press Reactions T 3

OTHER COUNTRIES

EUROPEAN COMMUNITY

New Statement on Middle East Situation Likely [LE SOIR 29 Oct] U 1

PORTUGAL

Communique Issued by PCP, GDR Party Delegation [cross-reference] U 1

SPAIN

Basque Parties Issue Statement on Merger U 1

SCHMIDT STANDS BY NATO DUAL DECISION

LD011616 Hamburg DPA in German 1521 GMT 1 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 1 Nov (DPA) -- Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, in a statement published by the Federal Press Office, has made it plain that he continues to stand by the NATO dual decision. In this statement, Government Spokesman Kurt Becker today countered a report in the weekend edition of DIE WELT , according to which Schmidt, in a talk with American journalists, is claimed to have said he had never advocated the deployment of American medium-range missiles in the Federal Republic. The report contained "false claims and misleading conclusions," Becker stated.

Becker's statement notes that Schmidt had pointed out in his London speech of October that the unilateral deployment of new medium-range missiles by the Soviet Union, which were not covered by the SALT II agreement, gave rise to an ominous security imbalance in Europe. Subsequently, the chancellor had asked the American President several times to solve this problem of a threat to West Europe. In 1979, at a Western summit meeting, the then U.S. President, Jimmy Carter, had proposed the deployment of American medium-range missiles in West Europe. In agreement with Great Britain and France, the chancellor had concurred in this counterarming on condition that at the same time arms control negotiations would be proposed to the Soviet Union. In this way the mutual limitation of medium-range missiles in Europe at as low a level as possible was to have been achieved.

The federal chancellor regarded the American-Soviet negotiations on medium-range missiles in Europe, starting 30 November, and to be conducted by the United States also with the objective of bringing about a mutual zero solution, "as a success for his continuous efforts at a policy of equilibrium and of arms control through negotiations."

GENSCHER ADDRESSES FDP ON CSCE, ARMS NEGOTIATIONS

LD021200 Hamburg DPA in German 1107 GMT 2 Nov 81

[Text] According to Hans-Dietrich Genscher, Foreign Minister and FDP chairman, the intiation of a European disarmament conference which would agree on confidence-building measures for the whole of Europe is a central aim of the FDP's arms control policy. According to party spokesman Herbert Schmoelling, Genscher said this on Monday to the FDP Presidium to which he was reporting on the stage reached by the Madrid CSCE followup conference and on the preparation of the American-Soviet negotiations.

Genscher said that in these negotiations it is now solely up to the Soviet Union whether there will be a bilateral zero solution. There is no doubt that the Soviet missile threat is a severe burden to West Europe. To remove this threat by bilateral renunciation is not only a strategic but above all a great moral goal, the attainment of which every effort is worthwhile.

According to Genscher the Soviet state and party chief Leonid Brezhnev, in his visit to Bonn in 3 weeks, will be able to count on a thorough and serious evaluation of all his ideas and views. In the interest of successful disarmament and arms control negotiations no effort should be spared nor a single opportunity missed.

APEL: BUDGET CUTS WILL NOT ENDANGER BUNDESWEHR

LD011832 Hamburg DPA in German 1737 GMT 1 Nov 81

[Text] Oldenburg, 1 Nov (DPA) — Federal Defense Minister Hans Apel does not believe that the DM200 million cut in the defense budget, decided by the Federal Cabinet, will endanger the Bundeswehr's fighting power. In an interview with NORDWEST-ZEITUNG (Monday edition) in Oldenburg, he hinted that the recent cuts might affect the program to rennovate the barracks.

He pointed out that further cuts could have serious consequences. "Whoever believes that he can cut the defense budget at will, will soon endanger the Bundeswehr's preparedness," he said.

Regarding the American-Soviet talks beginning in November on Eurostrategic weapons, he said that a zero solution was the ideal solution to the current conflict. Moscow holds the key. The minister said: "If Moscow is able to make a counter offer which will remove the threat from West Europe, we will have a zero solution. If Moscow believes it can succeed by dragging out the negotiations it is mistaken. NATO's dual track decision is quite clear in this respect."

An edited version of the interview was prereleased to DPA.

DGB TO HELP EXPAND SOLIDARITY RADIO STATION

LD302136 Hamburg DPA in German 1524 GMT 30 Oct 81

[Text] Frankfurt, 30 Oct (DPA) -- The German Trade Union Federation (DGB] is to help the independent Polish trade union Solidarity with the expansion of its radio station. This agreement between both organizations was made known on Friday in Frankfurt by the trade union's National Commission member Zbigniew Bujak, at the close of a week-long information trip through the FRG. In Bujak's words, the trip, which took place at the DGB's invitation, also served to prepare a visit by trade union leader Lech Walesa, which is planned for January or February 1982.

According to Bujak, the five members of the delegation had gathered information in particular on codetermination [mitbestimmung] in the FRG. However, neither the German nor the Yugoslav model of codetermination can be transferred to Poland, since the social and economic prerequisites are too different. The delegation also met for a conversation on Friday with the chairman of Ig Metall, Eugen Loderer. On Monday the head of the DGB, Heinz Oskar Vetter, received the Polish trade unionists.

Bujak said that the formation of a "Social Council for National Economy" is Solidarity's most important task in Poland. In the view of the trade union this body, made up of independent experts, is to bring the Polish economy back to health jointly with the government. Only after reforms would the local strikes stop and the food supply be secured. Bujak stressed expressly that reforms would only be possible under the government of Wojciech Jaruzelski. Even if the tone of the government toward Solidarity has become more strict under Jaruzelski, government policy has gained in credibility since he took over the offices of head of party and government and united them in one person.

NEO-NAZI ARMS DEPOT DISCOVERED NEAR EIMKE

LD302208 Hamburg DPA in German 1807 GMT 30 Oct 81

[Excerpt] Bonn, 30 Oct (DPA) -- In reply to an inquiry, the Federal Interior Ministry confirmed tonight that the authorities have discovered a rightwing extremists' arms depot near Eimke, in the Uelzen rural district. Without mentioning the exact place, Federal Interior Minister Gerhart Baum had said earlier in an interview with the Ulm paper SUEDWEST-PRESSE that the depot had been "full to the brim with explosives." Security authorities drew from this the conclusion that neo-Nazis are still able to commit acts of violence.

According to the minister there are at present about 150 rightwing extremists in the FRG who are prepared to use arms and carry out attacks in order to achieve their end. These people are supported financially by at least 400 other people. France and Lebanon serve as bases in order to prepare the attacks by the rightwing extremists.

OFFICIAL DISCUSSES BREZHNEV VISIT WITH KORNIYENKO

LD301106 Hamburg DPA in German 1013 GMT 30 Oct 81

[Text] Moscow, 30 Oct (DPA) -- Berndt von Staden, state secretary in the Bonn Foreign Ministry, was received in Moscow on Friday by Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Georgy

Korniyenko in order to prepare for Brezhnev's visit to Bonn. Von Staden intends to return to the Federal Republic this evening. According to current plans, state and party leader Leonid Brezhnev will visit the FRG on 23 and 24 November.

PAPER SURVEYS ATTITUDES TOWARD U.S., USSR

DW301303 [Editorial Report] Frankfurt FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE in German on 30 October carries on page 11 a 3,500-word report with statistics by Elisabeth Noelle-Neumann of the Allensbach Opinion Poll Institute on the course of anti-Americansim in the FRG, the Germans' approach to deterrence, their opinion on reaching an understanding with the Russians and their approach to pacifism.

Regarding the Germans' approach to a possible withdrawal of U.S. troops from Europe, the report says the following: "The following question has been asked 11 times since 1956: "If you read in the paper tomorrow that the Americans were going to withdraw their troops from Europe, would you welcome or regret it?" In the fall of this year, 17 percent of those questioned said they would "welcome" it, while 59 percent said they would regret it."

The report carries the following statistics in percentages based on response of an unidentified number of questioned persons:

1. On Relations With America:

Question: "Do you like Americans or don't you particularly like them?"

	Jan 1957	Apr 61	Jul 62	May 65	Jan 67	May 73	Mar 75	Aug 79	Sep 80	Jul 81	Sep 81
Like Them	37	51	54	58	47	48	42	50	51	45	56
Not Particularly	24	16	18	19	24	24	21	23	22	22	18
Undecided	18	17	17	13	16	17	21	17	17	20	17
No Opinion	21	16	11	10	13	11	16	10	10	13	9

2. On Deterrence:

Question: "If somebody says that an attack from the East can be prevented best through deterrence if the West itself is sufficiently armed, would you agree or disagree?

	Feb 1976	Jan 1978	Sep 1979	Mar 1981	Jul 1981
Agree	58	58	55	50	53
Disagree	23	22	21	25	22
Undecided, No Opinion	19	20	24	25	25

3. On Soviet Preparedness for an Understanding:

Question: "Do you believe that the Russians basically have good will with regard to reaching an understanding or not?

	May 1959	Apr 65	Apr 66	Apr 70	Jun 71	Jul 74	Feb 77	Jan 80	Jul 81
Believe So	17	23	26	33	35	29	27	16	36
Don't Believe	57	56	54	46	51	55	60	70	48
No Opinion, Undecided	26	21	20	21	14	16	13	14	16

4. On Pacifism:

Question: "Nobody knows what would happen, but what do you think -- if we had to face the decision some day to either let Europe become Soviet or defend ourselves with all means against it -- what would then be more important: defending democratic freedom, even if this would lead to nuclear war, or mainly avoiding war, even if we had to live under a communist government?"

	May 1955	Jul 1960	Mar/Apr 1976	Feb/Mar 1979	May 1981	Jul 1981
Mainly Avoid Nuclear War	36	38	52	52	48	45
Defend Democracy	33	30	28	23	27	30
Impossible To Say	31	32	20	25	25	25

AWACS DEAL IGNORES INTERNAL DANGERS IN SAUDI ARABIA

DW301023 Frankfurt FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE in German 30 Oct 81 p 12

[Commentary signed K.A.O.: "AWACS for Riyadh"]

[Text] America's decision to supply five AWACS aircraft and numerous modern weapons to Saudi Arabia strengthens the pro-Western Arab countries. Saudi Arabian officers were unhappy over not getting the most modern planes. The fulfillment of their wishes will tie them closer to the royal family. That relieves the country of the danger of a putsch by the air force, at least for the time being. It will certainly have an effect on the surrounding shaykhdoms. Maybe it will also facilitate understanding with Egypt. The AWACS system rules out a military attack on the Arabian peninsula, but it can do nothing against internal dangers -- against the Palestinians scattered throughout almost all Arab countries, against the pro-An-Nasir followers and against conspiratorial religious fanatics. Even if Moscow's clumsiness is taken into consideration, there are chances to fan a revolt -- for al-Qadhdhafi from the West, for Syria from the North and for Khomeyni from the East. The stabilization of Saudi Arabia helps Israel. But As-Sadat's death teaches how suddenly and murderously tables can be turned in the Middle East. Therefore it is not without reason Israel fears that the AWACS planes will make its existence in the Middle East not more secure but rather more insecure.

BRIEFS

BREZHNEV VISIT -- According to information supplied by the SPD weekly VORWAERTS, the Soviet state and party chief Leonid Brezhnev is to lengthen his visit to Bonn at the end of November from the 2 days originally planned by another 2 days. Referring to diplomatic circles, the VORWAERTS editorial office said on Monday that Brezhnev would stay in Bonn from 22 to 25 November. [Excerpt] [Hamburg DPA in German 0930 GMT 2 Nov 81 LD]

MALAWIAN PRESIDENT -- The state president of Malawi, Dr Hastings Banda, arrived in Bonn on Monday for an official visit. Banda, one of the longest-serving African politicians, went after his arrival to the Federal Government's guest residence, Gymnich Castle near Bonn. Federal President Karl Carstens will receive Banda at midday with full military honors at Villa Hammerschmidt. A ceremonial banquet is planned this evening at the baroque castle of Bruehl near Cologne. Before this a meeting is scheduled with Federal Minister for Economic Cooperation Rainer Offergeld. Banda will hold political talks with Federal Chancellor Helmut Schimdt on Tuesday. [Text] [Hamburg DPA in German 0845 GMT 2 Nov 81 LD]

BOMB EXPLODES IN CAR OUTSIDE SENATOR'S OFFICE

NC301745 Paris AFP in English 1733 GMT 30 Oct 81

[Text] Versailles, France 30 Oct (AFP) -- A Molotov cocktail was hurled into a car parked outside the office of a French senator, starting a fire overnight that destroyed the vehicle.

The automobile was parked outside the office of Edouard Bonnefous, a senator from the Democratic Left Party -- a center-right group -- from Yvelines, southwest of Paris.

Police were uncertain whether Mr Bonnefous was the target of the attack. The car belonged to a neighbor who has no apparent political activities.

Witnesses told police they saw an unidentified man break the car's window then throw in the Molotov cocktail.

The incident followed seven apparently motiveless explosions in the Paris area over the past 10 days, which police are investigating.

Police say they see no link in the location of the bombings: A Paris telephone booth on October 19, the rest room of the smart Champs Elysees restaurant Fouquets, a woman's car near the Champs Elysees and the rear of the shop in a Paris suburb all on Sunday night, a garbage container in the parking lot of Charles de Gaulle International Airport Tuesday, and a movie theater near the Paris Opera Wednesday.

Yesterday, Jean Fonteneau, a 64-year-old centrist mayor of a southern Paris suburb, escaped injured yesterday when a parcel rigged with a grenade exploded. Police saw no possible political motivation, however.

New Caledonians Deny Role

BK301058 Hong Kong AFP in English 0931 GMT 30 Oct 81

[Text] Noumea, 30 Oct (AFP) -- Two New Caledonian independence organisations today dissociated themselves from recent bomb attacks in Paris and rejected French Government proposals for land reform.

The Palika independence group said the attacks claimed by the so-called armed group for Kanaka liberation were a "provocation." Bombs went off in a Paris restaurant, a booby trapped car and at Charles de Gaulle Airport earlier this week.

"Any organised violence can only come from the reactionary elements of the extreme right. Our battle for Kanaka independence is only in the New Caledonia," the Palika organisation said.

Palika also rejected reforms aimed at redistributing land on the French island to the Melanesian population. The group said its aim was for "the total recuperation of New Caledonian land without conditions."

Eloi Machoro, speaking on the behalf of the Caledonian union, said the reforms originally called for by the union had been watered down by former Overseas Territory Minister Paul Dijoud.

"We accept the land, but we reject the conditions linked to the redistribution," he said.

MITTERRAND PLEDGES CONSISTENT THIRD WORLD POLICY

PM301653 Paris LE MONDE in French 24 Oct 81 p 3

[Text] In an interview published by the INTERPRESS SERVICE AGENCY Mr Mitterrand stated: "The characteristic of France's new foreign policy toward the southern countries is to treat them as full subjects and no longer as objects.

This is not new but I would like to ask a question: which of the big industrialized countries, in the East or the West, has hitherto followed this logic through to the end? We must put an end to bad habits but also to having a guilty conscience which is paralyzing. We want to be freer and show greater solidarity in our behavior toward the Third World.

"I also think, and this is the second idea, that since development is in keeping with our fundamental interests because we would not survive the Third World's collapse and because the North needs the South to overcome the crisis, it is in the North's interest for the South to be developed. This idea is gaining support but still too slowly.

"The Third idea is that there cannot be any development without and organizational effort. The free play of the market, or what passes for it, is not enough to meet this task. I am well aware that we differ greatly from the United States on this point. But the free market only allows the growth of the multinationals which create tiny islands of wealth in the oceans of poverty in the Third World."

Turning to France's relations with Africa, Mr Mitterrand stated: "We want to have an open policy toward Africa, the whole of Africa without exception, but respecting each country's individuality. Some of them want to maintain pledges in the security sphere. We do not particularly want to develop this type of agreement but each country is its own judge. For our part we will honor promises made and respond to a legitimate request which is felt in the country to be a necessity.

"To this legacy we must add a better sense of exchange, and a more authentic respect for the individuality of each of our African partners. It is time to realize that the postcolonial era is now over. To do this we want to have a great policy for all the southern countries and we want to put an end to some inconsistencies, as is demonstrated by the creation of the Cooperation and Development ministry, our promises regarding the least developed countries and our approaches to English-speaking and Portuguese-speaking Africa."

FRENCH-AFRICAN SUMMIT TO FOCUS ON POLITICAL ISSUES

NC302040 Paris AFP in English 1957 GMT 30 Oct 81

[Text] Paris, 30 Oct (AFP) -- Twenty-nine states are to be represented at the seventh Franco-African summit which opens here Tuesday under the chairmanship of President Francois Mitterrand, 20 of them by their heads of state.

The two-day meeting will provide a chance for France to reflect in its foreign policy the leftwing political victories of this summer and the formation of a Socialist-led government.

Mr Mitterrand's spokesman today said the gathering should permit the elaboration of "a new style of relations".

In his opening speech the president intended at the same time to mark French determination to maintain its presence on the African scene and its concern to respect the independence of African countries, the spokesman said.

There is no fixed agenda for the meeting. Unlike last year's Franco-African summit in Nice, the conference is not to be devoted solely to economic issues, and major African political issues such as Chad are thought likely to figure.

Conceived as an "informal meeting, the summit should give rise to spontaneous discussion on an unlimited range of themes, a Foreign Ministry spokesman said.

"It's a matter of including the African heads of state in the world dialogue and of broaching different aspects of international, and not solely African, current affairs," the spokesman added.

Mr Mitterrand also wished to know the views of his African counterparts on the future of this regular gathering and any modifications they would wish to see made to it, the Foreign Affairs spokesman said.

The Elysee Palace spokesman said Mr Mitterrand would raise the question of African states' political and military independence and "East-West balance," notably over the presence of forces from outside Africa.

In the economic sphere, the spokesman said, France would affirm its wish to make Franco-African cooperation "exemplary" and to strengthen all forms of aid to African states.

The president was expected in this regard to speak not only of France's bilateral cooperation, but also to emphasize the "actively rely it could play within the European Economic Community (EEC) institutions.

Mr Mitterrand has already several times stressed the importance he attaches to French policy in Africa and his desire to "see its geographical field widened," the spokesman said.

Policy toward Africa stems from the same inspiration and "the same ethic" as domestic policy implemented since May 10, when the French electorate voted to replace Valery Giscard d'Estaing with Mr Mitterrand, the Elysee says.

The 20 countries to be represented at head of state level are: Benin, Burundi, the Central African Republic, Chad, the Comoros, Congo, Djibouti, France, Gabon, Ivory Coast, Mali, Mauritius, Mauritania, Niger, Rwanda, Senegal, the Seychelles, Togo, Upper Volta and Zaire.

Nine are to be present as observers: Cape Verde, Egypt, Equatorial Guinea, Guinea-Bissau, Morocco, Sao Tome and Principe, Sierra Leone, Somalia and Tunisia.

Tunisia and Egypt will be attending for the first time. The Seychelles did not attend last year because of a dispute with Paris.

The conference will be preceded by a preparatory session of foreign ministers on Monday.

MITTERRAND, MARCHAIS RECEIVE ANGOLAN PRESIDENT

PM301517 Paris L'HUMANITE in French 16 Oct 81 p 8

[Text] Jose Eduardo dos Santos, president of the People's Republic of Angola, was President Francois Mitterrand's guest for lunch at the Elysee yesterday. Lunch was followed by talks which lasted until 1500 hours. Dos Santos made no statement when he left the Elysee.

During the afternoon the Angolan president, chairman of the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola [MPLA] -- party of labor, had a meeting with PCF Secretary General Georges Marchais.

During the fraternal and warm meeting the two leaders stressed the need to further develop cooperation between France and Angola. They also stressed the need to strengthen the long-standing ties between the MPLA -- party of labor and the PCF. This meeting was attended by Jose van Dunem, MPLA Central Committee secretary and foreign relations section chief, and Maxime Gremetz, PCF Central Committee secretary and foreign policy section chief.

GOVERNMENT DECIDES TO PARTICIPATE IN SINAI FORCE

AU301635 Rome ANSA in French 1605 GMT 30 Oct 81

[Text] Rome, 30 Oct (ANSA) -- Italy will participate in the multinational force that will be stationed in Sinai following the final withdrawal of the Israeli troops scheduled for 25 April next year, it was announced in Rome in the early afternoon today. The decision was adopted at the morning meeting of the Italian Government presided over by Mr Giovanni Spadolini.

The decision to send the Italian sailors to Sinai was adopted by the Council of Ministers after Mr Giovanni Spadolini, prime minister, and Mr Emilio Colombo, minister of foreign affairs, emphasized that Italy's participation in the multinational force "was a highly responsible action for peace."

"Considering Italy's role and responsibilities in the Mediterranean basin," Mr Spadolini stated, "the presence of our troops in the international contingent promotes the realization of the conditions for peace and security in the Middle East, providing a new momentum to the process of negotiations which, having begun at Camp David, should be able to develop within a broader context and involve all the parties concerned."

Speaking on his part about the contacts in progress within the European framework, in view of the participation of EEC member countries in the Sinai multinational force, the Italian minister of foreign affairs, Mr Emilio Colombo, declared that Great Britain, France and the Netherlands should also decide within a few days to send troops to Sinai.

"This decision," Mr Colombo stressed, "will represent further testimony of the commitment of the EEC governments to concretely promote, through the definitive withdrawal of Israeli troops from Sinai, the implementation of resolution 241 adopted by the Security Council" (on 22 November 1967). Italy's participation in this multinational force will be limited to two or three naval units which would be entrusted with patrolling the Sharm ash-Shaykh area.

Colombo Comments

AU301958 Rome ANSA in English 1946 GMT 30 Oct 81

[Text] Rome, 30 Oct (ANSA) -- The "connection" between today's Italian foreign policy decision to participate in the multinational forces of the Sinai and the global politics of Western Europe in this direction was underlined here today by Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo in remarks to the press.

Italian Defense Minister Lelio Lagorio, speaking at the same informal press session, emphasized however that the type of contingent that Italy intends sending to the Sinai force has not yet been "determined".

During the press session Colombo reminded journalists that three other European countries -- France, Great Britain and Holland -- will participate in these "forces. It is important," Colombo added, "that the other European countries which are not participating, express their political adherence to this act."

The head of Italian diplomacy said that Egypt has often insisted that Italy participate in "multinational forces." Egypt particularly insisted on this participation after the assassination of Egyptian President Anwar as-Sadat (on October 6 when Colombo himself and Italian President Sandro Pertini attended As-Sadat's funeral in Cairo and met with the then-president designate, Husni Mubarak, Colombo remarked).

Colombo also said that for Italy today's decision will not influence the future of negotiations to resolve the Mideast crisis within the context of the declaration agreed upon in Venice last year.

In Venice, in June of 1980, the member nations of the European Economic Community (EEC) requested that the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) carry some of the weight for resolving the problem of "self-determination" of the Palestineans.

Minister Colombo explained that today's decision "is an authorization by the cabinet to decide, as soon as all of the conditions are realized -- that is, that the other countries also make a decision, that they decide according to our own conditions, in the same political context in which we have decided.

"We realize that things are going in that direction but formal declarations will be made at the moment in which everyone has realized the conditions of which I am speaking," the minister continued.

Colombo then announced that he will "inform" Parliament on the problem of the multinational forces. He added that in the lower house, "we will study the ways in which to realize this plan."

A journalist present asked the minister, "in an operation of this kind, opposed by most of the Arab world, what type of risk can we expect?"

Colombo responded by noting that "this is why I said before that it has been our concern to put this operation in the context of that which has been the specifics of European policy in this matter which, as you know, since it was favorable to Camp David for what those accords could offer, has however maintained that only a global peace process would be able to provide order in the Mideast and that therefore, with the Venice declaration, the process has gone beyond Camp David."

"The operation which we are involved in today, is being executed on the basis of the necessity of maintaining stability in Egypt, in order to favor the realization of whatever can be done to evacuate the occupied territories. But this is strictly tied to the political position assumed in Venice, that is, proceeding in the direction that we have already begun."

Responding to the question of whether or not a formal announcement could be expected from the EEC in this direction, Colombo replied that "there should be one. We have been working in this direction. Some still have doubts, but we think that they can be overcome."

Defense Minister Lagorio stated that "a conclusion must be reached on a political level" before the decision is made on the type and size of the Italian contingent to send to the Sinai. Lagorio also said that Colombo has furnished his government colleagues with an ample report which the cabinet agreed upon.

He also observed that "Italy has moved with extreme caution and has contributed to determining a decision by the EEC 'Ten' and is still using its diplomacy so that the Arab nations understand the sense and the significance of the presence of European military contingents in the Sinai, whose meaning is to contribute to the restitution of Egyptian territories in Egypt.

"This political discussion," Lagorio said, "will now be followed up in the appropriate places and when it is mature, it will pass over into the technical-operative phase, which will be the military one."

COLOMBO RECEIVES ARAB LEAGUE SECRETARY KLIBI

AU311434 Rome ANSA in English 0835 GMT 31 Oct 81

[Text] Rome, 31 Oct (ANSA) -- The factors which tipped the Italian Government towards the decision to take part in the multilateral peacekeeping force in the Sinai to oversee the final Israeli pullout from the occupied peninsula in April were spelled out in the evening by Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo for the Arab League secretary general Chadli Klibi, currently on visit to Rome.

Klibi, who voiced a negative opinion of the Rome government decision announced yesterday, was told that one of the major considerations behind the move was Italy's concern for the fulfillment of a key point in the peace process set in motion with the 1978 Camp David framework agreement, the return of the Sinai to Egypt.

Other reasons behind the decision, and those shared by the Arab World as well, Colombo explained, were the desire to not compromise the stability of Egypt and the fact that the Israeli withdrawal from the Sinai dovetails with United Nations Resolution 242, which calls for a return of all the Arab territories occupied by Israeli since the 1967 six-day war.

The foreign minister noted that the final phase of the evacuation of the Sinai is, at least, a partial application of this resolution.

In conclusion, the Italian diplomatic chief referred to the conviction that Italian participation in the multilateral force in no way impugns the Middle East peace initiative endorsed by the European Economic Community heads of state and government in Venice, in June 1980.

The Arab League secretary general, in Rome for talks on ways and means to revitalize the bogged-down European-Arab dialogue, countered with the view that, "Italian and European participation in the multilateral Sinai force could lead to a reduction of the ten EEC member nations' capacity to mediate in the Middle East."

Klibi said that the evacuation of the Sinai concerns only Egypt and not the entire Arab front and emphasized the position that there can be no lasting solution in the Middle East without settlements for all the root causes of the crisis, especially the Palestinian problem.

Earlier in the day, the Italian defense minister, Lelio Lagorio, reported that the type of contingent Italy intends to send to the Sinai had not yet been determined.

The government communique which announced the decision referred to a limited military commitment, two or three navy patrol boats to patrol the Sharm ash-Shaykh zone.

CULTURAL AFFAIRS OFFICIAL LEAVES FOR PRC

AU020903 Rome ANSA in English 0835 GMT 2 Nov 81

[Text] Rome, 2 Nov (ANSA) -- The head of the Italian Foreign Ministry's cultural affairs department, Sergio Romano, was on his way to Beijing today to attend tomorrow's joint Italian-Chinese cultural and scientific commission meeting in the Chinese capital.

The commission's second such meeting will be devoted to renewing the two countries' cultural and scientific cooperation program for 1982-83.

The first meeting was held in Rome in October 1979, one year after the commission was created by a bilateral cultural and scientific cooperation agreement.

BRIEFS

NEW CAR AMBASSADOR -- Rome, 26 Oct (ANSA) -- The Italian Government has voiced its agreement to the appointment of Antoine Kezza as the Central African Republic's new ambassador in Rome, the Foreign Ministry here said today. [Text] [Rome ANSA in English 1515 GMT 26 Oct 81 AU]

FINLAND

POTENTIAL FINNISH ELECTION FIELD EXAMINED

PM020939 Stockholm DAGENS NYHETER in Swedish 28 Oct 81 p 12

[Tor Hoegnaes dispatch: "Election Battle Underway"]

[Text] Helsinki, 27 October -- The battle over who will succeed Urho Kekkonen as president will shake political life in Finland right up to the final election 26 January. If the people were allowed to vote directly Mauno Koivisto (Social Democrat) would become president, say several opinion polls, which give Koivisto 60 percent of the voters from various parties.

But the presidential election is indirect, the voters elect 301 electors who will gather in the Parliament building 26 January to elect a president for a 6-year term. There is every opportunity for horse-trading and tactical party maneuvers.

As yet there are no officially nominated presidential candidates. But in November the parties will hold extraordinary congresses and meetings at which candidates will be determined.

The Swedish People's Party is the first off the mark and will probably select Prof Jan-Magnus Jansson at the extraordinary party congress in Tampere 14 November.

Jansson is editor-in-chief of HUFVUDSTADSBLADET, a former party chairman and minister. He leads the Paasikivi Society, an association which fosters good relations with the Soviet Union, among other things. Jansson is generally thought to be an interesting alternative if things really do reach in impasse.

The Social Democrats' party council will meet 18 and 19 November and will choose Prime Minister Mauno Koivisto as its presidential candidate.

There are no surprises to be expected at the meeting in the light of Koivisto's immense popularity.

However, it will be difficult for the Center Party to agree on a presidential candidate at its congress in Kuopio 22 November. Two prominent Center politicians, Ahti Karjalainen and Johannes Virolainen, are competing for the candidacy. Their support among party colleagues has been fairly even, but now the enterprising and dynamic Virolainen has set a hard campaign in motion. The final outcome could be an unpleasant surprise for the party leadership, who support Karjalainen.

Virolainen, who is speaker in the Finnish Parliament, gave a press conference Tuesday [27 October] as soon as Kekkonen's departure was a fact. He was in a very good mood and bubbling with vitality.

He read a written statement in which Kekkonen's achievements, especially in the field of his ostpolitik, were praised. Virolainen also declared that he is willing to run in the election at the party congress for the presidential candidacy.

"I am not doing this out of a sense of duty because people from different parts of the country want me as a candidate, but I am doing this because I really want to be presidential candidate," Virolainen said.

It is difficult to predict how the battle will end. Karjalainen has the party's leadership behind him and therefore the whole of the wide-reaching party machine. But Virolainen has the rank and file.

The National Coalition Party will hold a congress 28 November and will choose Party Chairman Haari Holkeri as its candidate.

The Liberal People's Party will choose a woman, Helvi Sipila, as its presidential candidate. She is well-known at UN headquarters in New York. It is still not clear who the Finnish People's Democratic League will nominate. But Party Chairman Kalevi Kivisto has been mentioned.

However, it is generally expected that the final showdown will be between Koivisto and the Center Party candidate or some other Centrist candidate, such as Jan-Magnus Jansson.

The Social Democrats needs more than 150 electors for Koivisto to be elected in the first of the three possible rounds of voting. The party is hardly likely to have that many electors. But it will probably have over 100.

Nonsocialist circles are at present trying to warn the public against voting for Koivisto, who is a Social Democrat. They are pointing to France, where Mitterrand dissolved the parliament, which then was elected with a Socialist majority in the new elections. But ordinary people are not interested in the Mitterrand syndrome and would rather have popular hero "Manu" Koivisto as Kekkonen's successor.

NORWAY

NORWAY, ICELAND AGREE ON OIL EXPLOITATION

PM301505 Oslo AFTENPOSTEN in Norwegian 23 Oct 81 p 9

[Excerpts] "Our two nations' position in the North Atlantic alliance creates a strong community of interest between us," Prime Minister Kaare Willoch said in his speech at the government's dinner for Icelandic President Vigdis Finnbogadottir at Akershus Slott on Thursday [22 October] evening.

"It is of benefit to us and to security in our part of the world that there are no doubts about the solidity of the security policy stability which has been created here; first and foremost through our countries' NATO membership, but also through the whole pattern of security policy which has been established between the Nordic countries," Willoch said.

The prime minister also touched on the possibilities of closer industrial cooperation between Norway and Iceland. He pointed to the fisheries [as published] agreement concerning Jan Mayen Island, which had been signed by the two countries' foreign ministers earlier in the day, as an example of how good neighbors can settle a dispute amicably.

The main points in the agreement on Jan Mayen which was signed by Foreign Ministers Svenn Stray and Olafur Johannesson are as follows:

Iceland's continental shelf will extend 200 miles in the direction of Jan Mayen. Norway and Iceland will set up joint bodies as the need arises when there is the prospect of exploiting the possible oil resources on the continental shelf. Norway will have a right to 25 percent of any finds on the Icelandic section of the continental shelf, and Iceland will have 25 percent of finds on the Norwegian section.

If the results of the seismic explorations justify the commencement of drilling, joint venture arrangements will be discussed by the two parties and the oil companies.

The agreement means that all demarcation disputes between Norway and Iceland have now been settled.

SWEDEN

USSR OFFICIALLY APOLOGIZES FOR GROUNDED SUB

LD311114 Stockholm in Swedish to Europe and the Middle East 1000 GMT 31 Oct 81

[Excerpt] The Soviet Government has officially expressed regrets to the Swedish Government about the incident involving the grounded submarine. The apology, which Soviet Ambassador Mikhail Yakovlev conveyed to the Foreign Ministry in Stockholm last night, says that the Soviet Government regrets that submarine No 137 entered Swedish territorial waters and a Swedish restricted military area. However, the Soviet Union does not make any comment on the submarine traveling so far into the Karlskrona Archipelago.

It is very unusual for the Soviet Union to act in this way. The Swedish Foreign Ministry says it is unaware of the USSR ever before conveying this kind of apology in similar cases from one government to another.

Foreign Minister Ola Ullsten says in a comment that Sweden had demanded an apology from the USSR. He describes the apology as a success and adds that this shows that the Soviet side is willing to cooperate.

Soviet Envoy Confers With Ullsten

LD021102 Stockholm in Swedish to Europe and the Middle East 1000 GMT 2 Nov 81

[Text] A settlement in the affair concerning the grounded Soviet submarine seems to be in sight, despite the fact that the deadlock situation still continued early this morning. On Sunday night Soviet Ambassador Mikhail Yakovlev paid a visit on his own initiative to the Foreign Ministry in order to conduct personal talks with Foreign Minister Ola Ullsten. It was agreed in the talks that the interrogation of the Soviet submarine captain will be held ashore or aboard a Swedish vessel outside the restricted area. This is necessary so that the captain can be assisted by Soviet Embassy personnel. The Swedish authorities will not allow Soviet personnel to enter the restricted area where the submarine lies aground.

In Karlskrona contacts took place on Sunday night between the submarine and Soviet officials from the embassy in Stockholm. The captain of the Soviet submarine refuses to leave his vessel to be interrogated by Swedish authorities, and is waiting for orders from his base in the Soviet Union. The Swedish side emphasizes that the submarine will not be refloated before an interrogation has taken place. In the course of the night and this morning there was no contact between the submarine captain and defense forces negotiator Karl Andersson. The weather in the area deteriorated on Monday morning and the wind force is between gale and storm.

USSR Agrees to Interrogation

LD021152 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 1130 GMT 2 Nov 81

[Text] The Soviet Government has now agreed to the Swedish authorities carrying out an interrogation of the Soviet submarine captain. The interrogation is to take place aboard a Swedish warship outside the restricted area. Diplomats from the Soviet Embassy will be allowed to be present at the interrogation. The Soviet Government has also granted permission to representatives of the Swedish defense forces to board the submarine in order to inspect it. The time for the interrogation of the captain or the inspection of the submarine has not yet been fixed.

PAPER PONDERS FUTURE OF POST-KEKKONEN FINLAND

PM291727 Stockholm DAGENS NYHETER in Swedish 28 Oct 81 p 1

[Olof Santesson editorial: "After the Kekkonen Era"]

[Text] Kekkonen is going. Everyone realized that the moment was approaching when an era would come to an end. Nevertheless the Finns could probably wish that they felt a little better prepared.

The frequent and depressing medical bulletins from Kekkonen's sickbed have, paradoxically enough, done more to reduce the element of crisis surrounding the presidential election that has now been forced on Finland. And for Finland's sake one would wish that the changeover of head of state will begin to seem like a more normal political event, a routine in a country in comfortable circumstances.

But now that Kekkonen is forced to renounce his office and make way for a successor it is a changeover without precedent in the history of the Republic of Finland. The majority of Finns have known no other head of state in their adult lives. Kekkonen was given his first ministerial post in 1936, when several members of the present government were not even born. He had political responsibility before any other of today's leaders throughout the world had any position at all worth talking about.

Kekkonen was a man formed by the conditions faced by a poor and threatened Finland. Now he is rounding off his career at the age of 81 after 25 years as president, and this is happening in a prosperous welfare state, strongly identified with today's endeavors to create detente and preserve peace. The fact that things have gone as well for Finland as any other country in our age can claim is in no small measure connected with Kekkonen's personal achievements.

Everyone realizes that it is as the representative and guarantor of Finland's foreign policy that Kekkonen has primarily won his place in the people's consciousness. The security policy based on a friendly relationship with Finland's big neighbor, the Soviet Union, which was initiated by his predecessor he both pursued and further developed. For a long time now we have been talking of the Paasikivi-Kekkonen line.

In practice, Finland has moved from restraint and caution to an active policy. The fact that the CSCE conference is connected with the name of Helsinki is an expression of this. But this has not prevented Kekkonen from teaching a younger generation of Finnish politicians not to mix feelings and sympathies in foreign policy decisions.

The phrase is typical of Kekkonen. This tough athlete and experienced professional politician never became a cosy father figure for the nation. His style has rather been the sharp and the hard. He has been just as authoritative in domestic as in foreign policy. The balance between the bodies of state has been disturbed for a long time now. In a Finland of numerous party political divisions Kekkonen has been a more overshadowing figure than follows from the constitution itself. The whole of society has been subjected to his sharp gaze and eagerness to intervene and influence. Some observers have a very dark picture of Kekkonen as an almost stifling figure in this respect. There is some truth in this picture.

Nevertheless, an important contribution to a more healthy political life in Finland was Kekkonen's introduction of the People's Democrats to the context of government. His work still seems incomplete; Would Kekkonen, if his health had not failed him, not also have finally broken the decades of discrimination against Finland's conservative party, the National Coalition Party, as a possible government party?

What will come after Kekkonen? "We are electing a successor to Kekkonen, but not a new Kekkonen -- a ruling leader figure!" This is how a well-known Finn put it.

It is obvious that the Center Party, Kekkonen's own party, will fight a very hard battle to fill the presidential chair again. The party is having difficulty in achieving internal unity around Ahti Karjalainen, a former prime and foreign minister. For this reason the lead that social democratic Mauno Koivisto, acting president during Kekkonen's illness and the country's most popular politician, now has seems so much the greater.

Violent attacks on Koivisto cannot be ruled out. The center is threatening to question his ability to maintain Moscow's confidence. This confidence is the very foundation of the present security policy. It is not certain that Koivisto's support -- principally within his own party and in some smaller nonsocialist groups — will be enough to give him enough electoral college votes in the presidential election.

The key role would seem to fall to the People's Democrats' communist majority, on which the centrist leaders are pinning their hopes. For the time being this majority has been cool toward both Karjalainen and Koivisto.

Finland has never had a social democratic president: The struggle could be a bitter one. It was in the past too, although people have almost forgotten this in recent years with Kekkonen as an almost unopposed candidate for the majority of Finns.

A leader with the stature which so many people gradually discovered in Kekkonen is not to be expected in the next few years. No one grows into such a unique power role overnight. Finland must get used to living without the old man's authority, in both domestic and foreign policy. Things would be best like this. But no one who feels interest in and warmth for the Finland which has emerged can ignore Urho Kekkonen's remarkable work.

KIPRIANOU RECEIVES NEW U.S. AMBASSADOR

NC301944 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1730 GMT 30 Oct 81

[Text] President Kiprianou has expressed the firm conviction that the Cyprus problem depends on Ankara, which must change its attitude, and that everything possible should be done toward this aim to force Turkey to abandon its intransigence.

Today when accepting the credentials of the new U.S. ambassador, Mr Ewing, President Kiprianou said that a just and viable solution will not only benefit the Cypriot people but will also serve the cause of international peace and security. The president of the republic stressed that we cannot, under any conditions, accept the legalization of the invasion's outcome. He added that there should be a solution based on a federation that safeguards the unity of the state and people, which is where the happiness of all Cypriot people lies.

Mr Kiprianou further said that we want to see the UN resolutions and those of the summit conferences implemented. This, he said, would secure a truly independent, sovereign, territorially integral and nonaligned Republic of Cyprus. We do not ask anything more or less than the rights other independent countries and free people exercise. We do not want the Turkish Cypriots to suffer in any way. On the contrary, Mr Kiprianou stressed, when we struggle for a just solution of the Cyprus problem, I firmly believe that our efforts are exerted for all the Cypriot people, and that the future of the Turkish Cypriots, and particularly their welfare and happiness, lies in cooperation with the Greek Cypriots and the rest of the population within a unitary, independent state.

In presenting his credentials, the new U.S. ambassador said that his government attaches great importance and gives high priority to achieving a just and lasting solution of the Cyprus issue. For this reason, he added, I convey to you the strong assurances of President Reagan and Secretary of State Haig. Mr Ewing expressed the hope that a fruitful dialogue will result in a just, viable and lasting agreement that will satisfy the political, economic and human needs of both communities. My government, he added, strongly wishes the further strengthening of the close ties that bind our two countries, and I look forward with enthusiasm to contributing to this procedure. He also said that economic and cultural relations have considerably developed in the past years, and that the prospects for further strengthening them are excellent. Present at the ceremony were Foreign Minister Rolandhis and other officials.

Press Comments on Ceremony

NC011408 [Editorial Report] Four 1 November Greek-language Cypriot papers carry commentaries on the addresses exchanged between new U.S. Ambassador Ewing and President Kiprianou at the 30 October ceremony on the presentation of the ambassador's credentials. The communist organ KHARAVYI and the right-leaning I SIMERINI are among those papers which do not comment on the event at all.

The pro-Democratic Party paper I ELEVTHEROTIPIA carries an unattributed commentary entitled "The Correct Basis," lauding Kiprianou's reply address to Ambassador Ewing and pointing out that "The Cyprus issue is a problem of occupation and invasion by Turkey against the independent Republic of Cyprus. Therefore, it is not a problem or dispute between the Greeks and Turks of Cyprus." The commentator then notes that any constructive decision must be made in Ankara and concludes: "On the basis of all this, it is not enough to express any assurance -- as the new U.S. ambassador did the day before yesterday -- that the United States desires a just Cyprus solution. As a superpower, the United States has both the ability and the means to move in the direction of Turkey and exert the appropriate pressures on it so that Turkey will abandon its intransigent stand and change its partitionist philosophy. Only on this basis will progress be made in the Cyprus issue."

TA NEA, organ of the socialist EDEK Party, carries an unattributed commentary entitled "Fruitful Dialogue" which notes that "the new U.S. ambassador, in presenting his credentials, conveyed wishes and hopes for a 'fruitful dialogue.' At the same time, he also expresses Reagan's and Haig's haste for a Cyprus solution." After stressing that the Ankara attitude is the obstacle to a solution, the commentary points out that "if the United States wants an early solution, it must exert an early and effective pressure on Ankara," and concludes that "as long as the United States does not say this to Ankara, the United States will continue the criminal and inhuman policy of Kissinger, and nobody can feel friendly with a criminal."

The pro-center union daily O KIRIKAS in an unattributed commentary describes Ambassador Ewing's statement as "superficially sensational but empty in depth." The commentary cites Ambassador Ewing in expressing how much importance the United States attaches to achieving a just Cyprus solution and the high priority it gives to the problem. In conclusion, the paper emphasizes that "it is not enough that the United States supports the UN secretary general's efforts toward achieving a solution to the 'difficult' and 'complicated' problem facing the Cypriot people. If the United States truly desires the success of these efforts, it can prepare the ground and create the necessary prerequisites for the efforts to become fruitful.

The independent daily O FILELEVTHEROS carries an unattributed commentary entitled "Nothing More, Nothing Less." The paper comments jointly on the accreditation of both the FRG and U.S. ambassadors devoting the bulk of its article to endorse President Kiprianou's reply address at both events and emphasizing that the message to the foreign envoys is that, although a small country, Cyprus is a full UN member state and does not demand anything more or anything less than other independent and free nations are enjoying. Addressing itself to the new FRG and U.S. ambassadors, the paper stresses that "the two new ambassadors, through their contacts here, will soon be able to affirm more of what they already know about Cyprus and acquire a personal knowledge and opinion about the various aspects of the problem. We know that it is not the ambassadors who formulate their countries' foreign policy on a problem, but they can contribute considerably to the formulation of this policy. This is why we are awaiting the contribution of Mr Ewing and Mr Landau to the formulation by Washington and Bonn of such a policy which will lead to a just Cyprus solution in the interests of the Cypriot people as a whole and peace in our area and in broader areas."

SOVIET TECHNICAL COOPERATION DELEGATION ARRIVES

NC311250 Nicosia Domestic Television Service in Greek 1830 GMT 30 Oct 81

[Text] Within the framework of economic and technical cooperation between Cyprus and the Soviet Union, a Soviet delegation arrived on the island headed by Mr (Dralo), first deputy director of the Economic and Technical Cooperation Department of the Soviet Union's Foreign Economic Relations Committee. The delegation was received at the airport by the director general of the planning bureau, Mr Aristidhou, who will head the Cypriot Delegation at the negotiations, and a Foreign Ministry representative. The talks will focus on expansion of the prospects and possibilities that exist for the two countries' cooperation in executing development projects.

Meeting With Rolandhis

NC311251 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1130 GMT 31 Oct 81

[Text] Foreign Minister Rolandhis today met with Mr (Dralo), head of the five-member Soviet delegation visiting Cyprus for contacts with officials for the purpose of expanding the prospects and possibilities for cooperation between Cyprus and the Soviet Union in carrying out development projects.

Mr (Dralo) was accompanied on his visit to Mr Rolandhis by Soviet Ambassador Astavin. Today, the members of the Soviet delegation also had a meeting with the director general of the Ministry of Agriculture.

SOLIDARITY MEETING OPENS IN NICOSIA 31 OCT

NC010932 Nicosia CYPRUS MAIL in English 1 Nov 81 p 1

[Text] Mr Romesh Chandra, chairman of the International Committee of Solidarity with Cyprus, has reassured Cyprus that "millions of people in the world" are determined to see that the unity and independence and non-alignment of Cyprus are safe-guarded.

Mr Chandra, who is also the chairman of the World Peace Council, was addressing the opening meeting of the Executive Committee of the International Committee of Solidarity at Philoxenia hotel yesterday. More than 30 delegates from several countries, representing national and international organisations, parliamentarians and other personalities, are taking part.

President Kiprianou, in a message read for him by the director of the presidential office, Mr Vovidhis, gave thanks for the "consistent and valuable support to our struggle for freedom and justice".

The holding of this conference demonstrates that democratic principles and moral values transcending the barriers of creed, language and tradition can still bind peoples together in the pursuit of justice for a better world, he said. "Your steady support for the Cyprus cause and your continued solidarity with the people of Cyprus", the president declared, "will, no doubt, contribute to the successful outcome of our struggle".

The minister to the president, Mr St. Katsellis, addressed the meeting expressed Cyprus' gratitude for the support and said that the committee's slogan "Cyprus struggle for the world and the world struggle for Cyprus" has international appeal as it proves that the Cyprus struggle is one for principles and the implementation of human rights, as well internationally proclaimed declarations.

Mr Katsellis said that President Kiprianou's proposal for total demilitarisation and disarmament of Cyprus is valid and will be repeated whenever necessary.

The chairman of the coordinating committee of Cyprus parties and organizations, Miss Ourania Kokkinou, also gave thanks for the support, and underlined that the people of Cyprus demand justice and respect for their inalienable rights. Cyprus, she said, is the motherland of all the Cypriots; Greeks and Turks and the Turkish Cypriots are themselves victims of the same invader. "There can be no law or morale giving the right to any country to occupy by force of arms half our land and uproot one third of our people, causing untold hardship for the whole of the island's people" she said.

After the opening session, the director general of the Foreign Ministry, Mr Pelayias, acquainted the members with present political developments and members of the committee of relatives informed the committee about the situation regarding the non-progress towards the investigation concerning the fate of some 2,000 missing persons.

Declaration Issued

NC011644 Nicosia Domestic Television Service in English 1615 GMT 1 Nov 81

[Text] The executive body of the International Committee of Solidarity with Cyprus has called on Turkey to withdraw immediately its invasion forces from the territory of the republic of Cyprus. In a declaration at the end of the 2-day session held in Nicosia, the committee expressed total support and solidarity with the struggle of the Cypriot people for an independent, nonaligned, demilitarized, federal and integral Cyprus where the human rights of everyone will be guaranteed.

The committee said it considered the Cyprus problem an international one of huge dimensions, the result of foreign intervention in the internal affairs of Cyprus. It demanded the termination of these interventions so that a permanent and just solution could be found. The committee appealed to the secretary general of the United Nations, the Security Council and all the signatories of the Helsinki Final Act to take the necessary measures for the implementation, in the case of Cyprus, of the principles of UN and the Final Act. It also expressed support for the Soviet proposal for holding of an international conference to consider the wider aspects of the Cyprus problem.

In a message to the president of the Republic, Mr Kiprianou, the committee gives the assurance that it will intensify its campaign of solidarity with Cyprus. It also supports the Cyprus Government's request for the imposition of the United Nations sanctions on the aggressor. In a message to the Greek prime minister, Mr Papandreou, the committee welcomes his statements that the Cyprus problem is one of invasion and foreign occupation.

GOVERNMENT DENIES IOANNIDHIS RESIGNATION REPORT

NC311904 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1739 GMT 31 Oct 81

[Text] On being asked about a report carried by the Turkish News Agency ANATOLIA about the imminent resignation of the representative of the Greek Cypriot community at the intercommunal talks, Mr Ioannidhis, following pressure from Greek Prime Minister Papandreou on President Kiprianou during their Athens talks, the government spokesman said the report was totally unfounded and unworthy of any denial.

LISSARIDHIS URGES REJECTION OF WALDHEIM IDEAS

NC312002 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1730 GMT 31 Oct 81

[Text] The socialist EDEK Party today released the text of address delivered last night in Limassol by Party Chairman Lissaridhis. In his address, Lissaridhis stated that the evaluation of the UN secretary general is wrong and that it must be withdrawn. He added that after the proper answer is given to this incorrect Waldheim evaluation, the Cyprus issue must be raised at the UN General Assembly. He said that the true facts must be presented at the UN General Assembly together with the context of the proposals of both sides and that a request must be made for the appointment of the committee of member states which has remained pending since 1979.

Lissaridhis stressed that the Cyprus issue must again be placed within its true dimensions as a question of occupation, as it has been very clearly placed by Greek Prime Minister Papandreou.

Lissaridhis stated that the spirit of change in Greece also embraces Cyprus and that the conditions of occupation dicate unity, but an anti-occupation unity and not a unity of silent acceptance and legalization of the occupation.

DAILY: WALDHEIM IDEAS ACCEPTED FOR DISCUSSION

NC311145 Nicosia I DHILINI in Greek 31 Oct 81 p 1

[Text] During its meeting yesterday, the Council of Ministers accepted the Waldheim ideas as a basis for discussion with the aim of continuing the dialogue. At the meeting, it was noted that the Greek Cypriot side's observations on the Waldheim ideas will be expounded at the intercommunal talks table. The acceptance of the ideas by the Council of Ministers has fully corroborated I DHILINI, which reported in its 20 October issue that the new Greek prime minister does not reject the ideas and also in its 25 October issue reported that the ideas will be conditionally accepted.

A decisive role in accepting the ideas was played by Mr Papandreou's stand during his talks with President Kiprianou, as well as with the two biggest Cypriot parties DISI [Democratic Rally] and AKEL. Following this development, it is considered certain that the National Council will maintain a similar stand.

According to our reliable information, during their recent talks in Athens, Mr Papandreou and Mr Kiprianou reached the conclusion that the inter-Cypriot talks must continue at any rate because possible interruption would cause complications which would be difficult to confront and, therefore, acceptance of Waldheim's "new ideas" is considered imperative even out of necessity.

Mr Lissaridhis' EDEK party is the only party in the National Council which has unreservedly stood against the new ideas of Waldheim. EDEK is already in a difficult position, because its stance is contrary to the views of Mr Papandreou. Our information further says that, in order to avoid a clash with the Greek prime minister, Mr Lissaridhis will express his views at the National Council meeting next Tuesday. Although his views will be against the acceptance of Waldheim's "ideas," Mr Lissaridhis will not denounce the government and the other parties for accepting them, because a possible denunication would also be directed against the Greek Government. Finally, according to our information, the Greek Cypriot side's reservations and remarks will be raised at the negotiating table where the Greek Cypriot interlocutor will expound the reasons for our disagreement as well as our counterproposals on the points of disagreement.

COMMITTEE CRITICIZES MISSING PERSONS DEADLOCK

NC301303 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1130 GMT 30 Oct 81

[Text] Reverend Khristoforos, chairman of the Pan-Cypriot Committee of Missing Persons and Undeclared Prisoners, speaking at a press conference today, referred to the deadlock in the investigatory committee on missing persons and blamed the Turkish side for this. The committee's chairman released official documents showing the Turkish side's unwillingness to cooperate for the solution of the question of missing persons and its continuous retrogressions in connection with arrangements for the functioning of the investigatory committee. Reverend Khrisostomos also criticized the UN secretary general's envoy on the committee for not insisting on the full implementation of the agreements reached and for making suggestions which were completely contrary to the agreements.

NORTH'S PAPER ON GREEK PLAN TO SEND TROOPS

NC301000 Nicosia BOZKURT in Turkish 29 Oct 81 p 1

[Article on I DHILINI report: "Andreas Papandereou Eager to Become National Hero -- Reported that Greece Will Land More Troops on the Island"]

[Text] Lefkosa [Nicosia]-- The Greek Cypriot paper I DHILINI carries a report from Athens to the effect that Greece will land an equal number of troops in Cyprus unless Turkish troops are withdrawn from the island in the near future. The paper characterizes the Turkish peace force in Cyprus as "an invading force" and reports that new Greek Prime Minister Papandreou is determined to send a military force and the necessary arms and equipment to Cyprus. The paper stresses that it has obtained this information from "extremely reliable circles."

I DHILINI then goes on to say that following the Papandreou-Kiprianou meeting, Greek Cypriot Defense and Interior Minister Veniamin will proceed to Athens in the near future to finalize the matter. The paper also reports that Greece will soon send Britain and Turkey, which are guarantor states, a note demanding the withdrawal of "the invading forces" from the island. Unless this is done, says the paper, Greece is determined to land an equal number of troops on Cyprus.

AIR FORCE REPELS ATTEMPTED TURKISH VIOLATION

NC301708 Athens AVRIANI in Greek 30 Oct 81 pp 1, 6

[Excerpt] Until recently, New Democracy let the Turks roam our airspace at will. Last Monday, however, our allies learned a "good lesson" from the government of change and the heroic airmen who until now were obliged to "swallow" the provocations and humiliations of the Turks for the sake of the notorious Greek-Turkish "friendship."

According to our information, at around 1330 last Monday, four Turkish military aircraft started to violate Greek airspace. Immediately, however, 15 Phantoms of the Greek Air Force "took off" from the combatant air units at Thessaloniki, Larisa and Agkhialos and forced the Mehmetciks [Turkish soldiers] to change course and return to their country.

This feat by the Greek airmen was applauded and welcomed with cheers at our Pentagon because for the first time Greek pilots were free to do their duty in accordance with the dynamic national policy of Mr Papandreou, who has stated that he will not make the slightest concession nor will he allow our enemies to seize an inch of our territory, airspace or territorial waters. With its huge popular support, the government is determined to exercise a dynamic national policy and defend the country's independence and territorial integrity.

In addition, we have information that the prime minister and national defense minister has given explicit and strict orders to increase control over all Greek territorial waters and airspace. It should also be stressed that, most probably, this action by the Turkish aircraft constituted a "dress rehearsal" to sound out the new Greek Government's reaction. We hope our "allies" realize that Mr Papandreou is not joking.

Government Confirms Violation

NC311646 Athens ELEVTHEROS KOSMOS in Greek 31 Oct 81 p 1

[Text] In answer to a question regarding the published report on the violation of Greek airspace in the Aegean by Turkish aircraft, Mr Dh. Maroudhas, deputy minister to the prime minister in charge of press affairs, has stated that approximately 7 days ago Turkish aircraft entered international airspace [under Athens FIR control] without previously announcing their flight.

MESIMVRINI Reaction

NC311752 Athens MESIMVRINI in Greek 31 Oct 81 p 1

[Excerpt] In reply to a question after his meeting yesterday with the Turkish ambassador, Prime Minister Papandreou stated "I am not yet ready to reply," without clarifying whether he will continue or stop the dialogue with Turkey. The government is thus trying to gain time by covering (or at least scaling down) the continuing Turkish provocations.

The government spokesman stated yesterday, in reply to a question by journalists, that there was no violation of our national airspace (10 miles) by the Turks. He said: Simply, a few days ago Turkish aircraft entered the Athens Flight Information Region [FIR] without having first submitted a flight plan. Reliable circles stress that this is exactly equivalent to violating the Athens FIR!

The incident occurred last Wednesday (our national day) and caused quite an upheaval at the Pentagon. Ultimately, the new political leadership chose to reply in the "generally accepted" way (a policy that it used to decry the New Democracy for observing) -- intercepting the Turkish aircraft and submitting a protest to Ankara through the Turkish Embassy in Athens.

Provocations such as those of last Wednesday were frequent during the past 2 years. Usually the Turks violate international rules of air routes -- which supplement the ICAO provisions -- that demand the submission of a flight plan every time a foreign military plane enters the Greek or the international Athens FIR.

According to certain reports, as it was obvious, Prime Minister Papandreou brought up the issue with Mr Alacam, the Turkish ambassador in Athens. The same reports revealed that Mr Papandreou stressed that such provocations impede the creation of a climate of trust between the two countries.

PAPANDREOU CONFERS WITH TURKISH AMBASSADOR

NC301842 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1800 GMT 30 Oct 81

[Text] At noon today, Prime Minister Papandreou received Turkish Ambassador Alacam in his political office. Following the meeting, which lasted about half an hour, the prime minister made the following statement:

During my preelection campaign, when I analyzed the problem of Greece and Turkey in the Aegean -- of course there is also the Cyprus issue, but it is not a bilateral question -- I said at the same time that I planned to offer an olive branch, that is, to make it clear to the Turkish Government that the basic target, strategic target, is the securing of peace in the area. And this was basically my message to the representative of the Turkish Government. This was the deeper meaning of the meeting, a message of peace to the Turkish Government.

Answering a question about whether the Greek-Turkish dialogue will continue, Mr Papandreou said: I am not ready to give you an answer on this matter. You are aware of our positions from the past, and those have not changed.

To another question if at the meeting with the Turkish ambassador the Cyprus issue was also discussed, the prime minister answered: We did not discuss the Cyprus issue, because both he and myself recognize that, despite the fact that we are guarantor powers, the Cyprus issue is a question that concerns the United Nations, the international community. It is a question of an independent and nonaligned member state of the United Nations whose sovereignty we are not going to undermine.

GOVERNMENT REPLY ON U.S.PLANES SPYING ON LIBYA

NC301648 Athens I KATHIMERINI in Greek 30 Oct 81 p 3

[Text] "The government does not know of anything official" regarding yesterday's press reports according to which special U.S. planes flying from Ellinikon airport are spying on Libya. The government spokesman made this statement when asked yesterday about these reports, a republication of a Washington POST despatch from Athens. He further said that the government has not asked for any explanations because an official protest was not made.

PAPANDREOU RECEIVES VISITING CYPRIOT AKEL LEADER

NC301636 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 1500 GMT 20 Oct 81

[Text] The prime minister today received AKEL Secretary General Papaioannou and conferred with him on the Cyprus issue. Prior to calling on the prime minister, Mr Papaioannou had a meeting with KKE Secretary General Florakis, with whom he also discussed matters pertaining to the Cyprus issue. The AKEL secretary general, who will leave for Nicosia at 1800 today, was also to meet with official opposition leader Rallis, but this was not possible because Rallis is visiting Corfu.

Papandreou, Papaioannou Comment

NC301956 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 1900 GMT 30 Oct 81

[Text] At 1315 today, Cypriot AKEL Secretary General Papaioannou visited Prime Minister Papandreou at his political office for talks on the Cyprus issue.

Speaking to newsmen afterward, Mr Papandreou said: I am greatly pleased that I had the opportunity to meet and talk with Mr Papaioannou, whose party represents a considerable section of the Cypriot people.

I have assured Mr Papaionnou that Greece, the new government of change, will actively support the Cypriot people's struggle for the immutable goals of national independence, the unitary and undivided status of Cyprus, free movement and the return of refugees to their homes. At the same time, we also had the opportunity to talk about the handling and tactics of the struggle. What we agreed upon with President Kiprianou are exactly the views we expressed at our meeting today.

Mr Papaionnou said that he congratulated Mr Papandreou on his assuming the office of prime minister and that he wished his government success in the task of change, because this will also help the Cypriot people's struggle. He added: I have briefed the prime minister on the situation prevailing in Cyprus and the steps we intend to implement with regard to the latest developments in the Cyprus issue. I believe we have agreed that what was discussed with the Cypriot president is the right course. Mr Papandreou has once again assured me that the new Greek Government will fully stand by the side of the Cypriot people's struggle for a Cyprus that is united, independent, nonaligned and free of foreign troops.

Today, Mr Papaioannou also met with KKE Secretary General Florakis.

The AKEL secretary general, who left for Cyprus at 1800 today, said that he also intended to meet with official opposition leader Rallis, but the meeting could not be held because Rallis is in Corfu.

PAPANDREOU SAYS CYPRUS STILL 'PRIORITY' ISSUE

PM301131 LE MONDE in French 29 Oct 81 pp 1, 6

[Bernard Brigouleix interview with Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou in Athens; "Turkey Represents a Potential Danger for Greece"; date not given]

[Excerpt] [Question] Do you think that your victory, the scope of which surprised even your friends, is a specifically Greek phenomenon or, rather, a new sign of the rise of the left which is being observed elsewhere in Europe too?

[Answer] It is a little of both. In southern Europe there is at present a fairly general movement which consists of seeking solutions to the crisis in socialist-type programs. I have always thought that if capitalism did not quickly provide those solutions when it had ensured a sustained rate of development -- until the past few years -- socialism's hour would come. By socialism I mean our brand of socialism, like that of our French comrades, which is liberal, democratic, self-managing and decentralizing.

But at the same time, I observe that northern and southern Europe are certainly not reacting in the same way to the increasing economic dangers, the stepping up of social conflicts and a tendency for the class struggle to resurface. Unlike ours, northern Europe's reaction is more to give power to conservatives, as in Britain, Sweden, Norway, the Netherlands and possibly the FRG in the future.

And there is also a specifically Greek dimension. When I formed the Panhellenic Socialist Movement [PASOK] in 1974, the reference to socialism seemed suicidal, even to those around me. Today, even on the right, people feel obliged to claim to follow socialism to some degree.

What has happened meanwhile? It is important to understand that Greece has hitherto had rightwing governments, more or less alternating with extreme rightwing dictatorships. In addition, we have had three foreign occupations; Bulgarian, Italian and German. The national liberation front leadership was markedly communist (even though the patriotic group within it was much more composite) and the civil war left terrible memories.

It was this, among other factors, which led to the leftwing forces' long ostracism. Even my father was quickly prevented from pursuing a policy which was, let's say, centrist and populist in 1965. Similarly, when the dictatorship was successfully overthrown in 1974, the thirst for change did not take concrete form immediately, because the memory of the colonels' regime made the voters stop and think since they wanted to avoid anything which could be portrayed as a provocation.

What happened on 18 October is the result of all that; the people finally dared to give themselves the means fo change for which they had hoped so long.

[Question] During the campaign you stressed the fact that PASOK, according to you, was the only party to pose the political problems in terms likely to end the civil war once and for all. In a more general way, do you intend to take national reconciliation measures?

[Answer] Securing this reconciliation was one of the fundamental points in our program and is still one of our priorities. Although this government is the first socialist cabinet in Greece's history, it is taking office without the slightest spirit of revenge. I will do all I can to be the prime minister of all the Greeks. There is none of the usual confusion in my mind between the interests of the party which I lead and those of the country. I am sure that those who may still doubt this will soon realize it.

[Question] One of the points in your program which raised most apprehension, not to say anxiety, in the Western camp was your intention to leave the NATO military organization. What is your position on this now?

[Answer] Europe's division into two opposing camps is the main cause of the arms race, to which we do not want to contribute. Nonetheless, Greece, which forms part of the Western camp, has a particular problem with NATO. For instance, this problem explains our different approach to these questions from some of our European, and especially French, socialist comrades.

The problem is as follows: We are members of an alliance of which another member -- Turkey -- represents a potential danger for us. Now not only is NATO at refusing to guarantee the security of our eastern borders but it is giving Ankara disproportionate military support. Among other things, this military support is likely to have the effect of breaking the balance of forces in the Aegean. While such an iniquity remains, how could we fail to consider dissociating ourselves [from NATO]?

Special Status in EEC

[Question] You have also given the impression of wanting to break your Western ties in the economic sphere too, since you spoke of leaving the EEC. What is the position now?

[Answer] In this case, too, I want the specifically Greek aspect of the problem to be taken into account. It is not that we feel tempted to break the ties uniting us with Europe. Greece is of course a Balkan and Mediterranean country but it is also, and above all, a European country. This is not the issue. The point is that for a state like ours, poorly developed on the industrial plane and with low productivity, it is now economically dangerous to be incorporated in a unit whose other members are in general far ahead of us. The game is much too unfair. With the present state of our economic forces we cannot be a full member of this community bowing to rules which are excessively unfavorable to it.

Does this mean we should leave the EEC? We have not reached that point. We are not even asking for the status of a mere foreign external associate. We are prepared to remain closer to our partners, but on different bases which will have to be established with us. We must negotiate a special status for Greece which takes its economic characteristics into account.

The formal problem has not been raised, but it will be as soon as possible. After all, even advanced industrialized countries like Britain requested and were granted renegotation of their status. It is at this price that the EEC can function for the good of all its members, not by trying to cast very different national economies in the same mold, which at present is merely exacerbating the competition among nations -- competition which it was intended to abolish.

[Question] Do you think you can succeed in achieving some collectivization of the Greek economy without breaking with its national and international capitalist environment?

[Answer] I still think this is feasible, but we will constantly try to ensure that the Greek economy is not led into a union [as published]. Quite the reverse, the aim is to steer it out of that by relying as much as possible on incentive and voluntary steps. This does not rule out some real governmental measures, for instance, for restructuring a vast public sector, for implementing the vital reform of the banking system, the pension system, social security and so forth. But in many essential spheres we are counting on persuasion and freedom.

In particular, this method will be used in agricultural production -- a sphere in which we would like to encourage reallocation, the creation of voluntary cooperatives to make better use of technological progress, and in the sphere of small and medium-sized enterprises which should receive greater support from the banks and which we hope to mobilize.

In the immediate future, to significantly slow down inflation it will probably be necessary to freeze some prices -- just a few, I would like to stress -- and launch a campaign for investment in production (especially through the development bank if private capital remains too hesitant) in order to increase supply. For the time being, I would like to point out that out initial contacts with the employers are not bad.

Priority to Cyprus

[Question] The first foreign head of state you received since becoming prime minister was President Kiprianou. Does this mean that Cyprus is still a priority for you?

[Answer] How could it fail to be? The situation has scarcely changed since the 1974 Turkish invasion. But I would like to make two observations in this respect: The first is that the key problem is not that of relations between the island's two communities, but of the presence of the Turkish occupation army on some 40 percent of the republic of Cyprus' territory; Second, anything which attacks Cyprus also ultimately threatens Hellenism as a whole. This is why, all things considered, I prefer a dead-lock situation -- but one in which right still refuses to give way to might -- to a situation which would have evolved in the sense of a "normalization" of the occupation of the north of the island. Events have unfortunately shown that Greece alone cannot guarantee Cyprus' independence, but it will spare no effort to contribute to it. That is why, in particular, we have just doubled our economic aid to Nicosia.

[Question] Do you intend to give a new boost to Franco-Greek relations?

[Answer] Yes, because I am convinced that the two countries have something essential to do together. We are very close to each other spiritually. When Mr Karmanlis was prime minister, he followed a policy of rapprochement with Paris which we are going to pursue and even accentuate. This will obviously be particularly easy since the French leaders are our friends and we share the same objectives and feelings. It is not just the government which wants a new rapprochement with France. It is the Greek people.

KKE ISSUES STATEMENT ON ELECTION OUTCOME

NC311745 Athens RIZOSPASTIS in Greek 31 Oct 81 p 1

[Statement issued on 30 October by the political office of the KKE Central Committee on the plenary session the KKE Central Committee held to discuss the outcome of the elections -- date of session not given]

[Text] The KKE Central Committee met in plenary session and discussed the election results and the subsequent situation, using the thesis presented on behalf of the political office by Central Committee Secretary General Comrade Kharilaos Florakis as the basis for consideration.

Comrade Kharilaos Florakis stressed that there was an election victory of the democratic forces. The parliamentary majority was wrested away from the rightwing and passed to the political forces that support change in one form or another. The KKE, which pioneered the struggle against the rightwing, increased its strength. This is a great success, particularly if one bears in mind the conditions under which the election battle was waged, and particularly if one bears in mind the fact that the view -- "first of all let us get rid of the rightwing and then we can see" -- predominated among the broad masses of people.

Our party, Comrade Kharilaos Florakis emphasized in another part of his address, which is strongly dedicated to the program of change and to opening the way for socialism, will define its position toward the PASOK government in each given instance in accordance with the government's positions and actions on the various programs of change. The KKE will support every government action that serves national independence, democracy and the people's interests. On the other hand, it will oppose every government measure that prevents the country's approach to the way toward true change and toward progress. It will also undertake efforts aimed at unification and joint action by the forces of change, particularly within the people's mass movement.

Comrade Kharilaos Florakis also stressed that under the new conditions, new opportunities are being created for the further development of the people's movement, and that this must become the main factor in the progress toward change. The plenum of the Central Committee approved a resolution that will be published soon.

[Dated] 30 October 1981, [signed] the Press Office of the KKE Central Committee

SOVIET OFFICIAL REITERATES OIL-SUPPLY OFFER

NC301600 Athens NEWS in English 30 Oct 81 p 12

[Text] The Soviet Union is willing to implement the agreement signed about 2 years ago between Soviet leaders and then-Prime Minister Konstandinos Karamanlis for the purchase by Greece of Soviet oil. This was stated by the head of the Soviet trade mission to Greece, Mr Novakovskiy, to Commerce Minister Akritidhis during their meeting yesterday.

The two officials also discussed Greek-Soviet trade in general and agreed on the need to further develop trade between the two countries in the framework of the new Greek Government's economic program.

FOREIGN MINISTRY VIEWS ON PAPANDREOU STATEMENT

TA311023 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 31 Oct 81

[Text] The Foreign Ministry has announced that the essence of Turkey's policy toward Greece consists of solving problems through peaceful means.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Ambassador Nazmi Akiman today replied to reporters' questions on the statement made by Greek Prime Minister Papandreou following his meeting with Turkish ambassador to Athens Fahir Alacam yesterday. Akiman said the following: We welcome Greek Prime Minister Papandreou's move to meet with our ambassador in Athens and conduct an exchange of views with him concerning Turkish-Greek relations. Papandreou has declared that the Greek Government will follow a policy of encouraging good relations with Turkey and stressed that he wants the problems between the two countries to be solved through peaceful means. As stated by our prime minister on 27 October, that is the essence of Turkey's policy toward Greece. It is natural that we will carefully evaluate what the Greek prime minister conveyed to our ambassador yesterday. Because good faith can be transformed into the stage of implementation, the resolution of our problems will be facilitated.

MEDIA RESPONDS TO PAPANDREOU FORIEGN POLICY

GUNAYDIN Commentary

NC021128 Istanbul GUNAYDIN in Turkish 29 Oct 81 pp 1, 4

[Commentary: "Why Has Papandreou Lost His Reason Over Turkey?"]

[Text] At first glance, Greek Prime Minister Papandreou gives the impression of a psychopath who has lost his reason over Turkey. Since assuming power, he has been making pathetic statements to the television networks of the world as if he has received a war ultimatum from Turkey, creating the impression that "Turkey is about the attack Greece." In reality, Papandreou is consciously playing the role of the oppressed. His sly calculations show conspicuously between the lines of his interviews.

Papandreou knows that he will not be able to carry out his many disputable and difficult pledges in a short time to check inflation, to leave the military wing of NATO and to dismantle the U.S. bases. In the first few days in office, he needs topics that will bring him quick successes. So he thought inflaming disputes with Turkey would be an easy way to victory. Cyprus and the Aegean were adopted as the first two targets in the Greek prime minister's efforts to incite the West against Turkey. Papandreou, who sees the Aegean as a Greek sea, considers the Aegean army Turkey has formed for its own defense as a threat to Greece. He talks of Cyprus as "our land." It is certain that once he secures support from the West, he will increase the intensity of his attacks on Turkey. The Greek prime minister considers the temporary suspension of democracy in Turkey as an opportunity to attract Europe to his side.

For the time being, Turkey will watch Papandreou's pathetic television interviews with a smile. However, if the scenario of this comedy pushes us into a difficult position in the future, Greece may have to face a drama.

Venizelos, who was a Cretan like Papandreou, landed troops in Izmir during World War I on the assumption that he could count on the support of the West. Later, he had to sign a peace treaty with Turkey at the cost of leaving behind in Anatolia the bodies of thousands of innocent Greek soldiers. It would be both in his interest, as well as in the interest of his country, if he took the opportunity to throw a glance at history.

MILLIYET Editorial

NC021112 Istanbul MILLIYET in Turkish 29 Oct 81 p 1

[Editorial by Mehmet Barlas: "The Greeks Are Happy"]

[Excerpt] What concerns Turkey most with regard to the Cyprus issue is the fact that Papandreou completely ignores the Turkish Cypriot community and the intercommunal negotiations. According to him, Cyprus is under Turkish occupation and the independent state of Cyprus is face to face with the Turkish Republic.

On the other hand, his demand that the United States should provide Greece with assurances against Turkey requires that we be in a state of readiness against such a development. "The Johnson letter of 1964" and "the Kissinger letter of 1976" must not be followed by a "Reagan letter of the 1980's."

We do not believe that the United States will jump at this demand, which is one of Papandreou's domestic policy maneuvers, and comply with it at the cost of offending Turkey. We do not think that a new southeastern European policy can be formulated for Papandreou who keeps preaching "we are being threatened" and who is trying to incite the nationalist feelings of his people simply because he finds it difficult to fulfill the pledges he made during his election campaign.

Briefly put, the attitude that Papandreou is adopting at a time when internal confusion is continuing in Iran, when the Iraqi-Iranian conflict is continuing and when Egypt's fate is still in the balance, has become a new source of instability in the area. And yet, the Greeks, when talking about their new prime minister, frequently maintain that "he has learned much from the past. He is not at all like his father." We believe they are mistaken.

GUNAYDIN Report

NC020944 Istanbul GUNAYDIN in Turkish 29 Oct 81 p 4

[Ahmet Barin report from Athens: "He Is Looking For Trouble"]

[Text] Following his interviews with British and U.S. television networks in which he tried to convince the world of "Turkish aggression," Greek Prime Minister Papandreou made Turkey the main topic of his speech on National Day. The Greek prime minister said: "There are clouds threatening world peace. Territorial claims on our country from the East (Turkey) lend dangerous dimensions to the crisis in our region."

Following this attack on Turkey, he referred to Cyprus for the first time since 1974 as "the national Greek region." He added: "part of our national region has been occupied by foreign forces."

The Greek prime minister has also suggested that the Cyprus dispute be resolved at an international conference, a view expounded by the Soviet Union. The previous Greek Governments had always opposed an international conference.

On the other hand, according to Greek newspaper ELEVTHEROS KOSMOS, Papandreou will first give notes to Britain and Turkey, demanding the withdrawal of their troops from the island.

ANATOLIA Comments

TA301356 Ankara ANATOLIA in Turkish 1330 GMT 30 Oct 81

[Text] Ankara, 30 Oct (AA) -- Following repeated statements issued by Greek Prime Minister Papandreou and his unfounded claims regarding Turkey's policy vis-a-vis Greece, diplomatic circles in Ankara reiterated that "Turkey does not nurture ambitions about the territory of any of its neighbors and respects the territorial integrity of all its neighbors."

Pointing out that "Turkey always wants to solve its problems through peaceful ways and negotiations," the same circles noted: "Andreas Papandreou made several statements both before and after the elections, especially after. These are being received as statements of intention, since, on the whole, there is no government program yet. The Greek Government has not made a statement on its official stand. In bilateral relations, a statement made by one of the sides remains unilateral unless the other side accepts it. At present, Turkey is awaiting the announcement of the official Greek attitude.

However, in addition to this, the basic principles of Turkish foreign policy and Turkey's view regarding the Cyprus issue has been transmitted to the big powers, the nonaligned nations and the countries directly concerned with the Cyprus issue through our ambassadors. Such moves will continue."

More Press Reactions

TA301322 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1125 GMT 30 Oct 81

[Excerpts] Ankara, 30 Oct (AA) -- Turkish dailies Friday quote Head of State General Evren as announcing on the republic day that "the (?unity of the nation) will be maintained to eternity and Greek Premier Papandreou as claiming that "NATO gives more military aid to Turkey then it does to Greece: on their first pages. Another feature is Consultative Assembly speaker Sadi Iramk's overheard words to Ground Forces Commander General Ersin during republic day ceremonies: "You will see that we will elaborate an ideal constitution."

Mehmet Barlas, MILLIYET columinist, (?notes) differences between Papandreou's actions since he assumed power and his promises, stressing that what the Greek voter expected in fact from the government (was) to lower the inflation rate. "In order to prepare a balanced budget, austerity measures will be required and how will the Greek people, used to imported goods, react to this?" He asks, adding that Papandreou is not yet preoccupied with these issues, being still occupied with making verbal attacks on Turkey whenever he opens his mouth. The article is titled "Things Difficult and Easy."

Burhan Felek (MILLIYET), too, writes in his column Greece must give up anti-Turkish activities, and the Aegean islands, militarized in violation of international agreements by Greece must be demilitarized.

Mehmet Ali Birant (MILLIYET) deals with Turkey's relations with the West, in "Panic on the Western Front." In NATO lobbies, everybody was concerned about how the climate created by the recent anti-nuclear demonstrations can be changed and new countries on whose soil nuclear missiles can be placed are being sought, with Turkey's and Greece's names on top of the list. Papandreou's stance on this point is determined. Despite the sensitivity of Ankara on this issue, the West may knock in the future on Ankara's door with such an objective, he says. Another reason causing uneasiness in some circles in the West is the U.S. Rapid Deployment Force, he adds.

"Germans (Federal) have started to apply to us 'Nazi maltreatment" with German authorities trying to turn Germany into a country uninhabitable for Turks making decisions not compatable with human rights," GUNAYDIN says in front page banners referring to the outcome of recent Turco-German talks on the visa requirement.

Another item on the first page of GUNAYDIN features Socialist International leader Willy Brandt as calling for a halt in aid to Turkey "using as an excuse the closure of political parties in the country." The leader of the "party in power tries to poke his nose into Turkey's domestic affairs," the paper adds.

EUROPEAN COMMUNITY

NEW STATEMENT ON MIDDLE EAST SITUATION LIKELY

PM301005 Brussels LE SOIR in French 29 Oct 81 p 3

[Excerpts] Luxembourg, 27 Oct -- A new European statement on the Near East dealing in particular with the participation of four EEC countries in the multilateral peacekeeping force in Sinai could be published in early November. The opposition of Greece, which refuses to give its blessing to this force within the framework of the Camp David process, could be overcome by basing the European stand not on Camp David but on the Venice resolution (which Athens approves) and on UN Resolution 242, with a possible reference to Saudi Prince Fahd's plan. This information was gathered from the delegations to the EEC Foreign Ministers Council, which meets here Monday and Tuesday.

In order to overcome Greek opposition, this statement, which would in particular sanction the dispatch of troops from the four European countries to the Sinai, would be based not on the Camp David process but on the Venice European declaration, which is approved by the new Greek Government.

It would also be based on UN Resolution 242 on withdrawal from the occupied territories. In this spirit the multilateral peacekeeping force would no longer be a means of implementing the Camp David agreements but a means of contributing to implementation of the UN resolution. In addition a reference to Venice would have the advantage of placing the question in an all-embracing context (and not in the bilateral context of Egyptian-Israeli relations) and of referring to the Palestinian people's rights. It is also probable that this new document will make at least a partial reference to Saudi Prince Fahd's plan.

PORTUGAL

COMMUNIQUE ISSUED BY PCP, GDR PARTY DELEGATION

For text of the joint communique issued on the 19-22 October visit by a delegation of the Socialist Unity Party of the GDR as reported by NEUES DEUTSCHLAND of 23 October, see pp E 4-6 of the 30 October Eastern Europe DAILY REPORT.

SPAIN

BASQUE PARTIES ISSUE STATEMENT ON MERGER

LD010280 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 1900 GMT 31 Oct 81

[Text] The joint committee conducting the merger negotiations between the Communist Party of Euskadi and the Party for the Basque Revolution tonight issued the text of the two parties' merger agreement. The document says that at present trade union unity is not organizationally possible, because this would require unified trade union activity by the three major trade unions in Euskadi -- the General Union of Workers, the Workers Commissions and ELA-STV.

The merger agreement will be discussed by both parties' grass roots and later will become the basic text on which the motions to be debated at the two parties' unification congress will be based. This congress will be held next spring.

FBIS DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 212 3 November 1981

CONTENTS

BENELUX

NETHERLANDS

Ministers' Views Sought on Plan for New Cabinet [DE VOLKSKRANT 30 Oct] F 1
'Final' Proposal Ready [DE VOLKSKRANT 28 Oct] F 1
PVDA on Coalition [NRC HANDELSBLAD 26 Oct] F 1

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Government, SPD Assess Brezhnev Remarks J 1
Schmidt: FRG Need Not Apologize for Peace Rallies J 1
Official Clarifies Schmidt Remarks on Reagan J 1
Arms Cache Came From Bundeswehr Stock J 2
Strauss Warns Schmidt Against Concessions to GDR J 2
President Praises Good Relations With Malawi J 2
Military Aid Not the Answer to Mideast Problems [DIE WELT 30 Oct] J 3

FRANCE

31 Countries Represented at Africa Summit K 1
Mitterrand's Opening Remarks K 1
Cot Meets Eyadema, Comments on Relations [Lome] K 1
'Bobby Sands Group' Claims UK Ship Bomb Attack K 2
Briefs: Radio France K 2

ITALY & THE VATICAN

Press Comments on U.S. Senate AWACS Vote L 1
Party Leaders Comment on Spadolini Government L 2
PLO's Hammad Raps European Sinai Force L 3
PLO's 'Arafat To Attend Rome Symposium L 4
Greek Premier Interviewed on NATO, EEC, Cyprus L 4
Foreign Ministry Dismisses Soviet Press Charges L 4

SPAIN

Madrid Explosion Linked With Armenian Group N 1
Felipe Gonzalez Addresses PSOE Madrid Congress [LA VANGUARDIA 22 Oct] N 1

NORDIC AFFAIRS

NORWAY

Defense Minister Cites Close Cooperation With U.S. [AFTENPOSTEN 27 Oct] P 1

SWEDEN

Ullsten Explains Status of Soviet Submarine Captain P 2

UNITED KINGDOM

Lord Carrington Discusses Mideast Issues Q 1

CYPRUS

Defense Minister To Meet With Papandreou R 1
Archbishop Attacks Dialogue, Praises Papandreou [ALITHIA 2 Nov] R 1
Paper Supports Withdrawal of Waldheim's Ideas [O ANEXARTITOS 2 Nov] R 2
Paper Questions 'Unanimity' With Papandreou [I DHILINI 2 Nov] R 2
ALITHIA Derides AKEL for Call for Unity [2 Nov] R 3
AKEL Committee Plenum Issues Resolution [KHARAVYI 1 Nov] R 3
Economic Talks With Soviets Open 2 November R 7
Government Again Requests Removal of UN Official [I DHILINI 3 Nov] R 7
Kiprianou To Visit Sofia 23 Nov, Baghdad 20 Dec [O FILELEVTHEROS 1 Nov] R 7
Briefs: Bulgarian Education Minister Arrives R 7

GREECE

Navy Holds Aegean Exercise With France, Italy S 1
Papandreou Interviewed on NATO, Turkey, Cyprus S 1
[London AL-MAJALLAH 31 Oct-6 Nov]
Paper Reports U.S. Attempt To Maintain Influence [RIZOSPASTIS 1 Nov] S 2

TURKEY

Paper: Greek Media Ignore Ulusu Offer of Peace [GUNAYDIN 20 Oct] T 1
Court Sentences Ecevit to 4 Months' Imprisonment T 1
Heroin Smuggling Supports Armenian Terrorists [GUNAYDIN 30 Oct] T 1
Turkish Armenians Condemn Anti-Turk Terrorism T 1
National Congress on Economy Convenes in Izmir T 2
Opening Session T 2
Press Reaction to Papandreou ABC Interview T 3
Briefs: Uranium Deposits T 5

OTHER COUNTRIES

AUSTRIA

Kreisky Comments on European Peace Movement [ARBEITER-ZEITUNG 2 Nov] U 1

PORTUGAL

European Security Conference Opening, Matias Speaks U 1
[DIARIO DE NOTICIAS 20 Oct]

NETHERLANDS

MINISTERS' VIEWS SOUGHT ON PLAN FOR NEW CABINET

PM030923 Amsterdam DE VOLKSKRANT in Dutch 30 Oct 81 p 1

[Text] The Hague -- Informateurs De Galan and Halberstadt want to receive the reactions this afternoon of ministers Van Agt, Van der Stee, Terlouw, Den Uyl and Van Thijn to the proposals they will present to these government members this morning. The Van Agt Cabinet was unable to reach agreement on a government declaration because the differences of opinion on financial policy and the possibilities for an employment policy seemed insurmountable.

The two Labor Party [PVDA] informateurs will present their proposals today to the so-called nuclear cabinet -- the prime minister and the ministers of financial affairs, economic affairs, social affairs and employment and the interior. They want a reaction to their plan, described yesterday as "elaborate and substantial," by the end of the afternoon. However, the possibility is not ruled out that the five ministers (two from the Christian Democratic Appeal, two from the PVDA and one from Democrats '66) will need more time before they can outline their views.

'Final' Proposal Ready

PM030913 Amsterdam DE VOLKSKRANT in Dutch 28 Oct 81 p 3

[Excerpts] The Hague -- The two Labor Party [PVDA] informateurs, De Galan and Halberstadt, are expected to meet the queen today with a progress report on their work. There will then be discussions either today or tomorrow with five ministers from the outgoing Cabinet on these proposals. If these talks lead to agreement, the crisis could soon be resolved.

The text produced by the informateurs seems largely to be in the nature of a final proposal. By approaching matters in this way the informateurs have kept two avenues open. The first is that within the framework of their commission they will be able to patch up the split in the Cabinet. If the group of five ministers accepts their proposal and the rest of the Cabinet agrees, the parliamentary groups of the three government parties will not need to be formally involved in the further course of events. The outgoing Cabinet will be reinstated in its present form and the Second Chamber will be able to see from the government declaration what the compromise proposal from the two informateurs looks like.

A second possibility still open to the two informateurs is that the government parties' parliamentary groups could be involved in further discussions through their chairmen. In the tense political situation, the informateurs must keep both approaches open. Inside the Cabinet the prime minister in particular seems to have little enthusiasm for a proposal from informateurs with a PVDA background, on which first the group of five ministers and later the whole Cabinet would have to reach agreement.

PVDA on Coalition

PM020949 Rotterdam NRC HANDELSBLAD in Dutch 26 Oct 81 p 3

[Excerpt] The Hague, 26 October -- The Labor Party [PVDA] wants to repair the coalition with the Christian Democratic Appeal and Democrats '66 without making any further concessions over the employment program. In a statement Saturday, the PVDA congress said that the firm agreements in the government accord for a new and active employment program together with the guarantees for the preservation of the purchasing power of national minimum wages would remain valid. Despite obvious reservations, the congress showed that a majority were in favor of restoration of the coalition.

GOVERNMENT, SPD ASSESS BREZHNEV REMARKS

LD021609 Hamburg DPA in German 1515 GMT 2 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 2 Nov (DPA) -- On Monday the Federal Government and the leadership of the SPD assessed the recent remarks of the Soviet state and party chief Leonid Brezhnev on disarmament policy as confirmation of the Soviet desire to negotiate. With regard to Brezhnev's offer in his DER SPIEGEL interview of "very substantial reductions" on both sides in the area of nuclear medium-range missiles in Europe, Government Spokesman Kurt Becker said that the Federal Government welcomes Moscow's readiness to negotiate and the flexibility of the Soviet positions, which have been expressed several times recently. According to Becker, the government is analyzing Brezhnev's remarks with great care and takes note of them with great interest.

Becker's assessment of the Brezhnev interview was reserved in reference to the passage regarding disarmament, of Brezhnev's contention that in the sphere of medium-range weapons there is a balance between East and West, the government spokesman said that this remark is not a real novelty but belongs to the mainstream of Soviet statements. Becker reiterated Bonn's rejection of the proposal repeated by Brezhnev that the United States and the USSR should agree on a moratorium on medium-range weapons. The Federal Government, he said, has given its opinion on the "conjectural model" and sees no reason to change its attitude.

SCHMIDT: FRG NEED NOT APOLOGIZE FOR PEACE RALLIES

LD021826 Hamburg DPA in German 1721 GMT 2 Nov 81

[Text] Aachen, 2 Nov (DPA) -- Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt made very favorable statements on the peace demonstrations in the Federal Republic. Addressing the delegates' assembly of the main association of German retail trade in Aachen, Schmidt said that the Germans need not apologize to anyone in the United States for such demonstrations taking place here. There were demonstrations before for issues less positive than peace. Moreover, the participants in the demonstrations could not be lumped together with the communists.

The Federal Government also need not apologize for its policy to any participant in the demonstrations. The German peace policy was greatly trusted by many states.

Referring to the impending disarmament talks between the superpowers in Geneva, the chancellor said, "A zero solution in Eurostrategic weapons -- why not work toward this objective?" But the Geneva negotiations must under no circumstances be misused to freeze an existing imbalance.

OFFICIAL CLARIFIES SCHMIDT REMARKS ON REAGAN

LD021816 Hamburg DPA in German 1443 GMT 2 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 2 Nov (DPA) -- Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt made no criticism of American President Ronald Reagan and Washington's policy in a talk with American journalists in Bonn, Government Spokesman Kurt Becker said. The government spokesman, who attended the talk with the journalists, however conceded to reporters on Monday in Bonn -- commenting on press reports which interpreted Schmidt's remarks as criticism -- that the chancellor might have "perhaps made a somewhat casual remark."

Becker said that the 16 American journalists in the talk with Schmidt repeated criticism of Reagan made in the United States and asked whether the chancellor thought them justified.

Schmidt answered that Reagan did not have this image in Europe, at least not in the FRG. Becker also denied that Schmidt criticized the American high interest rate policy. The chancellor spoke of the U.S. monetary policy and its effect of producing high interest rates, an effect which Reagan himself regretted. Yet according to Becker, Schmidt did speak of the "unhappy" circumstance that in a time of deepening recession in the United States such a high interest rate level persisted and had to be adopted by other states. Becker confirmed that Schmidt had, as he had often before, described the level of U.S. interest rates as "crazy."

Prompted by the American criticism of Reagan, Schmidt furthermore, according to Becker, "in the style of a political scientist" clarified the differences in the career of American and FRG politicians, in particular in the case of those holding high office. Schmidt absolutely did not make a critical assessment, but pointed out that heads of government in Germany brought with them two decades of experience in all spheres of politics when they took office, whereas American presidents often only become familiar with international problems when they take office.

The American journalists went into the talk -- in Becker's view -- with the expectation that the chancellor could be brought to express severe criticism of the United States. Schmidt made an effort to bring "very suggestive questions with wide-ranging implications" down to the level where they belong.

ARMS CACHE CAME FROM BUNDESWEHR STOCK

LD031112 Hamburg DPA in German 1545 GMT 2 Nov 81

[Text] Hanover, 2 Nov (DPA) -- According to Lower Saxony security officials, most of the weapons and all the ammunition discovered in a wood near Oechtringhausen, Uelzen Kreis, come from Bundeswehr stocks. So far, 88 boxes from 31 different hiding places have been found. The search for one of the largest caches of arms of rightwing extremists in the Federal Republic has now been concluded. The cache was discovered last Monday.

The list published by security authorities contains, among other things, 156 kg of explosives, 230 explosive charges, 51 mine detonators, 50 antitank grenade launchers, 258 handgrenades, and 13,530 rounds of ammunition. Among the 15 guns discovered are 3 pistols, 2 hunting rifles, 2 small-caliber single-shot weapons, a Bundeswehr G-3 rifle and a submachine gun.

The inventory, which, according to Manfred Nitzschmann, chief investigating officer in the department for state protection of the Lower Saxony criminal investigation service, has been drawn up from a detailed list made by 44-year-old forestry official Heinz Lembke, also includes chemicals among which are 0.5 kg of mercury, 1 liter of sulphuric acid, 1.9 kg of phosphorus, 0.05 kg of potassium cyanide, 19 grams of arsenic, 9 grams of strychnine, 500 grams of ether and 1 kg of carbon disulphide.

There is no concrete evidence pointing to accomplices of Lembke, who committed suicide on Sunday. However, Lower Saxony Interior Minister Egbert Moecklinghoff told newsmen: "We have some suspects." The investigating authorities also believe the weapons and ammunition were not only stolen. "It is not possible to steal such quantities. They must have been supplied," an investigation official said.

STRAUSS WARNS SCHMIDT AGAINST CONCESSIONS TO GDR

LD021322 Hamburg DPA in German 1203 GMT 2 Nov 81

[Text] Munich 2 Nov (DPA) -- In a letter to Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt Bavaria's Prime Minister Franz Josef Strauss has warned against "concessions" by Bonn in important issues of intra-German relations. "Not one-sided advance favors by the Federal Government but rather the future conduct of the GDR Government will show whether normal good-neighborly relations on the basis of equal rights can be developed," Strauss wrote -- according to the Munich State Chancellory on Monday -- to the chancellor with reference to his planned meeting with GDR state and party chief Erich Honecker at the beginning of next year.

The Bavarian head of government once again insisted particularly on the revocation of the compulsory exchange amount for visitors to the GDR, which was increased in October 1980. If the meeting between Schmidt and Honecker should take place, Strauss wrote, its outcome would be measured with reference to this point. He gave notice of very strong opposition to possible concessions by Bonn on the recognition of a GDR citizenship and the demands of East Berlin on the status of the permanent missions.

In the letter to Schmidt Strauss also spoke out against the words of the Federal Minister for Inner-German relations, Egon Franke (SPD), concerning the course of the border on the Elbe. He reminded Schmidt that according to agreements already made the border runs along the eastern bank of the river. There is no reason to deviate from this interpretation of the legal situation. Nor could he understand how Franke could call into question the central office for monitoring infringements of human rights by GDR organs on the German-German border, when the GDR is violating international law and the basic treaty by means of automatic firing devices.

PRESIDENT PRAISES GOOD RELATIONS WITH MALAWI

LD022034 Hamburg DPA in German 1610 GMT 2 Nov 81

[Excerpt] Bonn, 2 Nov (DPA) -- Federal President Karl Carstens today underlined the determination of the Federal Republic to bring cooperation with developing countries to successful conclusions despite higher oil prices and the economic recession. Speaking at a reception in honor of the president of Malawi, Hastings Banda, at Brühl castle near Cologne, Carstens said that the major problems between North and South demanded an increasingly urgent solution. This could only be done through cooperation since confrontation would bring equally great damage to developing countries, industrialized countries and oil-producing countries. Carstens paid tribute to the good relations between the Federal Republic and the southeastern African state of Malawi. The two countries felt united by friendship and mutual understanding. The possibilities of political, economic and cultural cooperation between the two countries were not yet exhausted.

MILITARY AID NOT THE ANSWER TO MIDEAST PROBLEMS

DW301157 Bonn DIE WELT in German 30 Oct 81 p 1

[Thomas Kielinger commentary: "Reagan After His Victory"]

[Text] The vote on the AWACS sales package for Saudi Arabia ended with an impressive Reagan victory. It was a victory the President and his government could use very well. Up to 24 hours prior to the Senate vote, the White House was not certain it would win this fight regarding its Middle East policy. The sales package was presented too late and without consultations. Eventually the great charm of Ronald Reagan was victorious. Reagan had pointed out convincingly in individual talks with undecided senators how much foreign political damage would have been done if the President were to be blocked by the Senate majority of his own party. The strategic situation in the Middle East has been further clarified after this vote. Saudi Arabia will be firmly imbedded in the security guarantees of the leading Western power. The West as a whole can count on a partnership-like supply of oil, Saudi Arabia's most important raw material. With the installation of the defensive radar system, the United States will achieve an operative link for its new Rapid Deployment Force. In case of a serious foreign threat to the oil fields, the U.S. combat reserves at sea could make an organized countermove on the basis of information collected by AWACS.

But there should be no mistake: Military aid is no substitute for the solution of political problems. The Saudis must pay increased attention to the internal stability of their system, and Washington will have to ask Riyadh for more intense help in solving the Arab-Israeli conflict. So far Saudi Arabia has undermined rather than supported the peace work of Camp David. We must see whether the friendly words of Prince Fahd during his Bonn talk with Federal Chancellor Schmidt with regard to Mubarak really signal a change in Saudi Arabia's relations with Egypt. It also remains to be seen whether Israel will consider this to be an alleviation of its threatened situation.

31 COUNTRIES REPRESENTED AT AFRICAN SUMMIT

LD031304 Paris Domestic Service in French 1200 GMT 3 Nov 81

[Excerpts] A total of 31 heads of state and government assembled in Paris this morning for the eighth African summit. There is no specific agenda. It is topical events which are to be discussed. First of all, the major conflicts are to be discussed and this, in fact, is what happened this morning.

Mitterrand's Opening Remarks

NC031210 Paris AFP in English 1150 GMT 3 Nov 81

[Text] Paris, 3 Nov (AFP) -- France will give unconditional aid towards the reconstruction of Chad, French President Francois Mitterrand said today at the opening of the eighth annual Franco-African summit here.

Mr Mitterrand, speaking to representatives of 31 states, also reiterated a call for the deployment of an inter-African force in Chad, saying it was the only reasonable way to create the necessary conditions for President Goukouni Oueddei to govern the country and reorganize the national army.

Touching on other major African issues, Mr Mitterrand called the conflict over Namibian independence "one of the most preoccupying" and warned against "interminable negotiations" in attempts to settle the conflict.

France considers as a priority the setting of a firm schedule for Namibian independence, he said.

About the conflict in the Western Sahara, Mr Mitterrand welcomed moves by Moroccan King Hassan and the Organisation of African Unity towards holding a referendum on self-determination in the disputed territory.

In general, "France thinks that Africa will be able to find its place only in a world that respects the independence of nations, rejects interference and is capable of...setting aside conflicts and defending peace," Mr Mitterrand said. "Africa has a role to play in efforts to balance the world economy between the rich and the poor."

Relations between rich and poor nations must be more equitable, Mr Mitterrand said.

"France will not wait for the end of global negotiations to act," he vowed. "We refuse the egotism of the short-range view of each one for himself and the market for all."

There is no contradiction in tackling the economic problems facing France and its African friends at the same time, he said.

COT MEETS EYADEMA, COMMENTS ON RELATIONS

AB011045 Lome Domestic Service in French 1900 GMT 30 Oct 81

[Excerpts] This morning, President Eyadema received Jean-Pierre Cot, minister of cooperation with former colonies. The two men reviewed French-Togolese relations and the African situation, especially the latest developments in the Chadian affair. Mr Cot revealed that all aspects of cooperation between France and Togo will be reexamined the visit he will pay to Lome next month.

On Chad, the minister mentioned the initiatives by the Togolese head of state and expressed the desire to see these initiatives taken up again.

[Begin Cot recording] It goes without saying that I was very pleased to meet General Eyadema and he gave me a good impression. I can say briefly that Togo is a country which plays a very precious role in African affairs generally. We discussed a number of topics: French-Togolese relations, which are at their best, and we are happy to note the economic situation which is very difficult at the moment because Togo is hard hit by the fall in the prices of the raw materials [words indistinct] and you are aware that the French Government is determined to follow the path of solidarity [words indistinct] because the world economic crisis hits your country particularly. We also discussed African issues, and the situation in Chad in particular. President Eyadema has played and will continue to play a very important role in the reconcilation and peace process in Chad and we very much rely on his action. [words indistinct].

I hope that in the very near future, President Eyadema will be able to play this role, which he has continued to play within the framework of the Lagos accord, in order to create favorable conditions for the return of peace and the sovereign independence of Chad.

Finally, we discussed the forthcoming French-African summit, which will be held in a few days. We expressed satisfaction over the prospects and the reunion generally. We discussed the conception of this French-African summit as well as its future and we were particularly happy to note that President Eyadema supports it.

The president of the Republic of Togo held talks with the President of the French Republic yesterday. They said they were very happy to have established contact, without which nothing can be achieved. Then they discussed some issues extensively this morning -- this is normal. I believe all these contribute to strengthening the major ties between France and Togo. On my part, I am determined to strengthen these ties during my forthcoming visit to Lome next month and I discussed this with the president. I am delighted that I will know your country at last. I will be able to see the fruit of French-Togolese cooperation and to discuss the problems and the difficulties which you, like us, are now facing [words indistinct]. [end recording]

'BOBBY SANDS GROUP' CLAIMS UK SHIP BOMB ATTACK

NC022027 Paris AFP in English 2017 GMT 2 Nov 81

[Excerpt] Nantes, northwest France, 2 Nov (AFP) -- The abortive bomb attack on the British navy survey vessel Hecate, in port here, was claimed today by a so-called "Bobby Sands group", informed sources said.

Earlier today French navy experts defused a 1 kg (2.2 lb) bomb placed on the buffer-raft between the dock and the Hecate's hull. The bomb had been linked by wire to the raft.

The sources said a telephone caller to the Nantes Daily PRESSE OCEAN said in accentless [word indistinct] that the mysterious group had acted "to support the political and military struggle of the Irish republicans for liberty and national independence". The 120-man crew of the Hecate were alerted to the bomb early this morning after a minor explosion was heard on the quay alongside which the vessel was moored. Divers found an explosive charge that experts said could have caused a great deal of damage had it exploded properly. They said either defective workmanship or material had caused its malfunction.

BR[illegible]

RADIO FRANCE -- A "decentralized" radio station will be opened for Chateauroux and its area in the first months of 1982. This will be the first of the five local radios which Radio France has been authorized to establish before the enactment of the forthcoming law of the audio-visual media. Radio France already has three decentralized stations, Frequence-Nord in Lille; Radio Mayenne in Laval; and Melun FM. [Paris Domestic Service in French 1700 GMT 30 Oct 81 LD]

PRESS COMMENTS ON U.S. SENATE AWACS VOTE

AU301553 Rome ANSA in English 1543 GMT 30 Oct 81

[Text] Rome, 30 Oct (ANSA) -- U.S. President Ronald Reagan's thumping victory in getting congressional approval for the sale of AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia was seen by many Italian papers today as the start of a new Mideast strategy in America's foreign policy.

The Senate approved the sale 52-48 yesterday, LA STAMPA daily said, adding that this was a good thing for Mideast pace hopes, even if the decision ran certain risks.

These risks could not be avoided, however, if the road was to be left open for a negotiated solution of the Arab-Israeli conflict, the paper continued.

The Reagan administration had been given the last piece it needed for a puzzle that formed the bases from which new negotiations could start, the paper said.

Washington's relations with Riyadh have been made more solid, a new relationship of alliance and military cooperation with Israel has been forged, while at the same time, U.S. ties with Egypt have been strengthened in equal degree, LA STAMPA claimed.

The America of Reagan and Haig (U.S. secretary of state) has thus laid the fundamental pieces of that strategic consensus which should serve as a basis of a new security for all the states in the region and which should promote, new, broader peace talks, the daily concluded.

MANIFESTO, a paper for those to the left of the Italian Communist Party, said that Reagan had not only chalked up an important victory on the difficult ground "for him" of foreign policy, but had definitely put an end to the negotiations process begun at Camp David. Reagan had opened a new chapter in Mideast history, a history still to be written, and had launched the idea of a new multipolar alliance still to be forged, the paper said.

Many Italian newspapers today spoke of a personal success for President Reagan.

Many senators did a last minute about-face on the AWACS issue when they voted in favor of selling to Saudi Arabia. IL GIORNALE NUOVO of Milan quoted one senator as saying that Reagan could sell refrigerators to Eskimos.

IL GIORNALE praised "the strong man in the White House" and said that the sale was clearly needed given Riyadh's absolute need to be defended against its neighbors which the paper described as "poor, aggressive, radical, and either influenced by the Soviet Union or, in any case, revolutionary." Saudi Arabia's defense is likewise important to the West, the paper said.

CORRIERE DELLA SERA claimed that Reagan's political clout on the domestic and international scene had been strengthened and that the effectiveness and credibility of his leadership had been enhanced. CORRIERE listed three big advantages to the United States of the senate vote; that of protecting the vital oil supply line from the Middle East, the reinforcement of U.S.-Saudi ties on a political level (and possibly involving Riyadh in the peace talks with Israel) and finally, broadening the maneuvering room of the U.S. with respect to the Arab world.

PARTY LEADERS COMMENT ON SPADOLINI GOVERNMENT

AU030900 Rome ANSA in English 0845 GMT 3 Nov 81

[Text] Rome, 3 Nov (ANSA) -- The situation facing Italian Prime Minister Giovanni Spadolini, who heads a coalition composed of Christian Democrats, Socialists, Social Democrats, Liberals and his own Republican Party, in his bid to defeat a soaring inflation rate and set the Italian economy back on its heels, is still uncertain following set-backs suffered because of political maneuvering among the parties of his coalition.

The opposition Communist Party however, the nation's second largest grouping, has given signs of coming to Spadolini's aid, and denouncing alleged efforts to foment a government crisis.

Authoritative Milan daily, CORRIERE DELLA SERA summed up the situation in Monday's edition, headlining its political comment with "An Uncertain Majority and a Less Difficult Opposition."

In a speech delivered Sunday in a town in Italy's northeast region marking armed forces day, Spadolini stated that "the economic emergency is the toughest battle the country, all of it, has to fight."

But a recent proposal from Socialist Party Chairman Bettino Craxi calling for a "legislature pact" to ensure government stability has fired a political debate on just how long Spadolini's government will be around to face that battle.

Many political observers took Craxi's proposal as a bid to unseat Spadolini and set up a new government with himself as premier.

Spadolini also made an appeal to the Italian public in a televised appearance on Saturday in which he pleaded for their "understanding, intelligence, pride and love for (their) country."

Responding to this appeal, Communist Party leader Gerardo Chiaromonte, in an article appearing in today's edition of his party's organ, L'UNITA maintains that "the dramatic appeal which Spadolini has launched to Italians has a realistic foundation.

"The economic situation of the country is very serious," the Communist Party's economic section head warned, "and we cannot help but agree with the fact that the prime minister denounces this and calls the attention of all the Italians to it

Declaring that Spadolini is telling the truth about the economic situation, Chiaromonte adds that the prime minister "cannot but find approval (for his statements). (His) initiative should help to break apart, in some way, an absurd whirl of meetings, declarations, and interviews, all pretending to discuss another government which should be formed, without any reference to the concrete facts and the dramatic (situation) of the Italian society."

Today's edition of Socialist Party organ, L'AVANTI however carries an article inspired by Craxi denying that the proposal could have a destabilizing effect.

In that article, all the political parties are invited to see the proposal as "a key to positive and constructive search, free from particular prejudices."

Christian Democrat leader Guigi Granelli expressed his support for Spadolini in a declaration on Monday in which he stated that "In a difficult time for the country, the Christian Democrats cannot weaken the credibility of the government participating or letting itself participate in conjectures for alternative solutions in the short term.

"If someone intends to use a government crisis operation," Granelli continued, "they should assume the responsibility publicly, without using the Christian Democrats as a cover."

PLO'S HAMMAD RAPS EUROPEAN SINAI FORCE

AU030912 Rome ANSA in English 0845 GMT 3 Nov 81

[Text] Rome, 3 Nov (ANSA) -- The eventual participation of Italy, France, Holland and Great Britain in the multilateral peacekeeping force set to oversee the final Israeli pullout from the occupied Sinai Peninsula in April was described as "indicating that Europe will participate in the realization of the Camp David agreements, which the Arabs reject" by Nimir Hammad, Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO) representative in Italy.

Hammad also described the move as a "step backward in respect to (European Agreements in) Venice" at a press conference in which the PLO member took part here on Monday.

During that press conference, an announcement was made by the Italo-Arab Friendship Association that PLO leader Yasir 'Arafat had been invited by them to close an "international symposium on Jerusalem" slated to get underway on December 17.

That invitation has sparked speculation here concerning Italian recognition of the PLO and refocused the debate, informed observers point out, on last Friday's decision by the Italian Government to send a contingent to the Sinai peacekeeping force.

At the press session, the PLO representative stated that the Venice declaration was a positive one because "it seemed to open the way for a European role in a framework, under the supervision of the United Nations, which would be much larger than that of the Camp David agreements."

The declaration referred to was signed in June of 1980 in Venice by the European Economic Community (EEC) ten member states in acceptance of the Camp David agreements while maintaining that the Palestinians should also be associated with negotiations aimed at resolving the Mideast crisis.

In his press conference remarks, Hammad maintained that "official recognition of the PLO -- the only representative of the Palestinian people -- is indispensable for reaching a just and durable peace in the Mideast."

"A similar step by Italy and the EEC," he said, "could put pressure on the United States, who continue to give their total support, militarily, economically and diplomatically, to the state of Israel."

In response to questioning about an eventual recognition by the PLO of Israel, Hammad replied that "Israel must recognize the existance of the Palestinian people and their right to self-determination. After that it can ask anything, and everything can be discussed."

Hammad was also questioned on the Mideast peace plan suggested by Saudi Arabian Prince Fahd which, among other things, outlines the creation of a Palestinian state with East Jerusalem as its capital and the recognition of a state of Israel residing within the borders existing before the six-day war" in June of 1967.

The PLO representative replied that the Arab nations would take a "unified" position on the issue during the summit of Arab government heads of state slated to take place at the end of November in Morocco.

Also present at the press conference was Msg. (Hilarion) Capucci, the Palestinian Catholic prelate who was arrested and condemned to 12 years imprisonment in Israel in 1974 after he was accused of smuggling arms for the Palestinians into the country.

Capucci, freed by the Israelis and now residing in Rome, stated that "You cannot ask a man for what he does not have."

"When Israel recognizes the right of the Palestinian people and the PLO to exist," Capucci continued, "then every other question will find an answer."

PLO'S 'ARAFAT TO ATTEND ROME SYMPOSIUM

AU021550 Rome ANSA in English 1519 GMT 2 Nov 81

[Text] Rome, 2 Nov (ANSA) -- Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasir 'Arafat has been invited to Rome by the Italo-Arab Friendship Association to close the "International Symposium on Jerusalem" slated to get underway on December 17. In announcing the invitation to 'Arafat today, the chairman of the association, Emo Egoli, tossed out the challenge. "We will see what the (Rome) government does then and if there is really an opening and a willingness to further the dialogue with the PLO."

Referring to 'Arafat's past position on a visit to Italy, that he could come only after the country officially recognizes his PLO, Egoli explained simply, "this problem has been overcome" and added, "now it's up to 'Arafat to freely decide whether he will come or not." Friendship association sources said today they were certain that the PLO leader would accept the invitation.

GREEK PREMIER INTERVIEWED ON NATO, EEC, CYPRUS

AU301539 Rome ANSA in English 1525 GMT 30 Oct 81

[Text] Turin, 30 Oct (ANSA) -- Greece cannot help but distance itself from an alliance like NATO which refuses to guarantee the country's borders while granting a "disproportionate" amount of military aid to Turkey which "represents a potential danger to us", according to Greece's new socialist premier, Andrea Papandreou, in an interview published today by the Turin daily LA STAMPA. In response to Western apprehension over Papandreou's campaign remarks that he wanted to pull Greece out of NATO's military sector, the new premier said that the massive military aid being given to Turkey by the alliance threatened to upset the balance of forces in the Aegean.

He denied, however, wanting to take Greece out of the European Economic Community. Nevertheless, he insisted on the dangers his country was exposed to in being a member of a community where the other partners were more advanced from an economic point of view. He said that given the current state of this country's economy it could not achieve equality with its EEC trade partners if it stuck strictly to regulations which were to unfavorable to Greece. Therefore, he said he would ask for a special statute for Greece that would take into account its specific economic requirements.

However, for Papandreou, the chief problem remains Cyprus. The island republic has both a Greek and a Turkish community but was partially occupied by Turkish forces in 1974. Athens is ready to do everything possible to see to it that the island maintains its independence.

FOREIGN MINISTRY DISMISSES SOVIET PRESS CHARGES

AU020913 Rome ANSA in English 0830 GMT 2 Nov 81

[Excerpt] Rome, 2 Nov (ANSA) -- Italian Foreign Ministry sources took offense this weekend at Soviet press "insinuations" that CIA agents have infiltrated the Rome government. The charge, which appeared Saturday in the Soviet SOVETSKAYA ROSSIYA daily, was dismissed by these sources as a "imaginery and offensive insinuation." They told reporters seeking an official response to the charge that the Italian Government does not ordinarily stoop to responding to "this kind of slander" from the press but they did say that, what mattered, in these tough times for international relations, was to keep cordial relations between Italy and the Soviet Union intact.

Relations between the two countries were described as a "prominent component" of the East-West detente process, which is crucial to balance in international relations. The thrust of the SOVETSKAYA ROSSIYA article was to show that the Rome government's friendship with the United States was noxious to Italy.

MADRID EXPLOSION LINKED WITH ARMENIAN GROUP

LD030110 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 0000 GMT 3 Nov 81

[Text] The injuries sustained by three people, two of them municipal policemen, when a bomb exploded outside the Swissair offices in the Plaza de Espana in Madrid this evening have been described as only slight. The damage, however, was considerable and the adjoining offices were also affected. Municipal police arrested three people thought to have been connected with the planting of the device.

In a telephone call to AFP, the secret Army for the Liberation of Armenia has claimed responsibility for planting the bomb.

FELIPE GONZALEZ ADDRESSES PSOE MADRID CONGRESS

PM021051 Barcelona LA VANGUARDIA in Spanish 22 Oct 81 p 9

[Excerpts] Madrid, 21 October -- The 29th Spanish Socialist Workers Party [PSOE] Congress began this morning in Madrid under the banner "roots for democracy," with applause for the delegation of PASOK, which has just won the Greek elections, and for the results of the Andalusian referendum.

Executive Committee's Conduct

Felipe Gonzalez, who opened the congress on behalf of PSOE Chairman Ramon Rubial, absent because of his wife's ill health, delivered a long speech lasting almost 2 hours in which he took stock of the outgoing Executive Committee's conduct and to some extent outlined the policy that the PSOE will pursue over the next 3 years.

With regard to the party's "critical sector," he said: "I regret the absence of certain comrades. Not because they are entirely right but because they have their arguments and these arguements must evolve within the party." Following this remark, which was loudly applauded, he urged "comrades who disagree to argue their cases within the party and not resort to token stands." He rejected proportional representation in the leadership bodies and said that the party has begun a process of federalization.

He said that the Greek socialists won the elections because the right has lost the support of some sectors of society, and this is "something that has not yet been adequately pondered by Spanish socialists. We are accused of being a party of intellectuals, whereas in fact we do not yet have enough intellectuals and specialists, who would make it easier to provide an alternative answer for our society." Continuing with his self-criticism, he said that the PSOE lacks young people and that the party still discriminates against women.

Grand Right

Felipe Gonzalez made several references to the grand right. "The liberal bourgeoisie has failed to bring us closer to Europe or to modernize society or the state structures. Therefore it is a challenge for the socialists to complete these historical tasks." He discussed the model of society adhered to by the Union of the Democratic Center [UDC] and the Spanish Confederation of Employers' Organizations [CEOE], "without managing to compare it with the model of society of any of the Common Market countries. The model that they talk about is a joke and an abstraction, because the Spanish right's model of society is a mixture of all the interests of the oligarchy and of the state. We propose a different model of society: socialism within democracy."

Criticisms of Government

He mentioned the UCD government's inability to perform its task, "sometimes because of fear, other times because of weakness or internal splits, other times because it has to defend the interests of certain pressure groups."

He said that the government "has still not come to terms with the Spain of the autonomies." He cited the bad distribution of national income, saying that the government "has been unable to restructure the territorial imbalance affecting Spain because this can only be achieved through solidarity." With regard to the 1983 elections, he said that "we do not want to erode the government because it is already sufficiently eroded."

General Union of Workers [UCT] Strategy

"What the UGT cannot reproach us for are all the efforts that we have made to support its strategy of negotiation. And we support it for two reasons: because the economic crisis can only be surmounted by negotiation and because this strategy is the one that best defends the workers' interests."

Next Felipe Gonzalez discussed 23 February [attempted coup], which he described as an historic milestone for democracy because of the people's response. "Those events revealed a permanent threat that had existed since January 1976. The roots of this threat must be sought among the oligarchical and civilian sectors of Spanish society that use sectors of the armed forces to defend their interests.

"Following the attempted coup d'etat we socialists realized that it was necessary to form a new majority in parliament. We suggested to Calvo-Sotelo a UCD-PSOE government to strengthen the civilians, versus the military, power."

Spain of the Autonomies

The Socialist leader stated clearly that Spain will be unable to consolidate democracy unless we manage to consolidate the state of the autonomies and vice versa. We must tackle the issue of the autonomies without any irresponsible separatist ambitions. Either Spain continues to be Spain with the autonomies or there will be no democracy and no autonomies."

With regard to the national agreement on employment, he said that "it is something to which any European country would aspire and something which any European government and employers' organization would sign without hesitation. But the CEOE is confronting us with a lamentable operation, by trying to eliminate it, the employers' organization is failing to honor the agreement on the basis of its criticism of some elements of the state budget. We will not defend these elements and will put forward our own alternatives. We will show that the CEOE's criticisms backfire, since 90 percent of the public deficit is used to finance the tax relief granted to major enterprises."

He repeated that the CEOE is conducting a political, not an economic, operation. "We know that the right will never look favorably on us and will always oppose our alternatives."

Foreign Policy

With regard to foreign policy he said that the PSOE's efforts are directed toward a rapproachment with Europe and Latin America and relations with the Arab world. He broached the subject of NATO and said that the government must explain why it is in such a hurry to join. He called for a referendum and denied that the PSOE holds an ambiguous stance. "We simply say that we do not want to join."

His closing remarks concerned socialist strategy. "The worst strategy is the kind that cannot be implemented. We must therefore adapt our strategy to real conditions in Spain. You must choose the people best suited to continuing this work to make possible a thorough change for all Spaniards."

In the afternoon Felipe Gonzalez and [PSOE Deputy Secretary General Alfonso] Guerra replied to the various criticisms of the Executive Committee's conduct, though these were all fairly mild. The Executive Committee's conduct was approved.

NORWAY

DEFENSE MINISTER CITES CLOSE COOPERATION WITH U.S.

PM021629 Oslo AFTENPOSTEN in Norwegian 27 Oct 81 p 5

[Eivind Karlsen interview with Defense Minister Anders Sjaastad; no date given]

[Excerpts] "Oil-rich Norway must be able to afford to maintain a credible national defense. This must be strong enough so that we -- together with our allies in NATO -- can deter attacks or pressure on Norway," Defense Minister Anders Sjaastad said. "The buildup of forces in our immediate area and the shortcomings in our armed forces indicate that we need greater real-term growth in the annual defense budget if our defense capability is not to be weakened. This would be a cheap premium to pay to preserve peace and freedom in Norway."

In an interview with AFTENPOSTEN, Norway's new defense minister stressed: "It goes without saying that the Conservative government will not accept lower defense spending. Together with the Christian People's Party and the Center Party we announced our determination in the Storting last year to increase the defense budget by more than the Labor Party's 3 percent. This is a commitment we must jointly live up to. Increased spending is necessary for several reasons. One is the buildup the Soviet Union has implemented over a lengthy period in areas very close to Norway, and this is partly of an offensive character. This has created an imbalance which, it is true Norway will not counterbalance alone, but we must make our contribution to its reduction. In addition all the branches of the armed forces are in the middle of an extremely necessary process of material renewal."

[Question] The antiaircraft defense of our airfields is one of the most pressing tasks.

[Answer] It is not satisfactory. It will have to be if we are to be able to operate our own aircraft and, not least, receive reinforcements in a secure manner. We must decide as soon as possible what sort of missile system we want now that the Roland II which we have backed up to now is out of the picture. The need is so acute that we may have to resign ourselves to a missile system which can only partially carry out the tasks we have for it, rather than wait for the ideal system.

[Question] Cooperation with NATO and the United States plays a key role in our defense and security policy.

[Answer] There is no reason to hide the fact. The United States is and will remain the most important guarantor of Norway's security. This is a relationship we must be clear about the whole time. I know myself that there is considerable knowledge in Washington of Norwegian life and understanding for our position. This is the fruit of close cooperation over the years. I view the anti-Americanism one now finds in many Western European countries with concern. Not saying when one does not agree with one's friends is doing them a disservice; but it must be done in a friendly and trusting manner, and we must be open to advice and comments ourselves.

[Question] But what if the Americans get tired of all the criticism and say "defend yourselves"?

[Answer] This must not be allowed to happen. Neither we nor Western Europe could look after ourselves in the defense area in the foreseeable future without close cooperation with the United States. This will be the case at least as long as the Soviet Union is armed to the teeth with both nuclear and conventional arms, and as long as the societies in the East are such that the people there are unable either to influence or control their politicians and their actions.

Let there not be the slightest doubt that NATO and Norway are first and foremost striving to reach results through the negotiations between the United States and the Soviet Union. But if there is no success, then there is no answer but to counter Soviet armament with the necessary rearmament measures -- to make the Soviet leaders understand that we mean business.

SWEDEN

ULLSTEN EXPLAINS STATUS OF SOVIET SUBMARINE CAPTAIN

LD022140 Stockholm International Service in Swedish 1900 GMT 2 Nov 81

[Excerpts] The interrogation of the Soviet submarine captain began Monday afternoon on board a Swedish torpedo boat outside the restricted military area in the Karlskrona Archipelago. The government is satisfied with the Soviet decision to agree to the interrogation, said Foreign Minister Ola Ullsten at a press conference Monday afternoon.

But what if this interrogation does not yield anything other than the captain adhering to his version that he made a navigational error because of a faulty gyrocompass? What will happen then? Will the submarine be released anyway? This is how Foreign Minister Ullsten replied:

[Begin recording] I do not want to anticipate the investigation. I want to say [words indistinct] we refrained from taking legal measures. We can only ask to hear the version of what happened from the captain and crew.

[Question] You said you had the four demands satisfied. Does this mean the interrogation of the captain and the inspection of the submarine, or the visit on board the submarine, are merely a formality?

[Answer] No, it does not mean that. The fact is that we are allowed to conduct this investigation -- we think it is a natural demand to be able to carry out such an investigation. It took some time before we obtained a concession to conduct such an investigation with the cooperation of the captain of the submarine and on Swedish territory.

[Question] But is compliance regarding the interrogation and investigation sufficient for the release of the submarine, and for it to be allowed to go home?

[Answer] We said these are conditions we place for the relase of the boat, but before that measure is taken the commander in chief of the armed forces, who was requested to conduct an investigation, will report the results to the government. [end recording]

Foreign Minister Ullsten thus does not want to specify how far the government wants the commander in chief to carry out his investigation so that the submarine and its crew will be released. But at the same press conference the Foreign Ministry expert on international law, Bo Johnson, indicated that it is possible to conduct new interrogations of the captain of the vessel if it is believed that he is not giving sufficient information. The personal immunity insured for the captain and his navigation officer means they will be sent back to their boat after the interrogations.

LORD CARRINGTON DISCUSSES MIDEAST ISSUES

LD022210 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 2056 GMT 2 Nov 81

[By Tom McMullan, PA diplomatic correspondent]

[Excerpts] Lord Carrington angered journalists tonight by asking for a broadcasting ban during a meeting about his Middle East trip tomorrow.

Radio and television were asked not to record his question-and-answer session with the Conservative Friends of Israel group at Caxton Hall, London about Britain's attitude to the Saudi plan.

At tonight's meeting the foreign secretary acknowledged that there were differences between Britain and Israel in their approach to the Middle East. His speech according to some observers was seen as an attempt to develop a new dialogue with Israel, which he may visit in the new year. Lord Carrington said Britain and the other Common Market countries felt that lasting Middle East peace would only be possible if there was a measure of justice for all parties.

"This must include justice for the Palestinian people, not simply in physical and humanitarian terms but in political terms too".

He feared the Camp David process would not do this. "Our view, that the Palestine Liberation Organisation must be brought into peace efforts if a lasting settlement is to be reached, continues to be misunderstood and distorted. I make no apology for my firm belief that no good will come of pretending that the PLO can be ignored, or that they do not have a very wide measure of support amongst the Palestinians, both inside the occupied territories and elsewhere."

He said it was necessary to convince the PLO, of the need to accept Israel's right to live in peace and security as fundamental to the search for a peace settlement.

"Until there is a clear signal to this effect, Israel cannot realistically be expected to talk to the PLO, given her suspicions that the PLO's aim remains the destruction of Israel," he said.

Israel's fear that a Palestinian state on the West Bank and Gaza, would pose a grave threat to her security and act as a base for Soviet influence in the area, were "exaggerated" he believed.

Earlier Lord Carrington acknowledged to Arab journalists that Britain would contribute to the Sinai peacekeeping force despite reservations about the decision. The force is intended to operate from next year when Israel as part of the Camp David peace process hands back the remainder of Sinai to the Egyptians. The foreign secretary said the United States had asked four European countries -- Britain, France, the Netherlands and Italy -- contribute along with Australia, New Zealand and Canada had also been asked. [sentence as received]

He said this presented some difficulties for Britain which was anxious that there should be a European position compatible, but not exactly the same and certainly not competitive -- with what the Americans plan.

"I do not think we can pretend that we are anxious to do it," he said.

So far Whitehall is giving out the minimum of information about the British contribution of the cost. Senior ministers acknowledge there has been discussion about who will pay. The Americans are expected to make the major contribution, but ministers are not prepared to say if the British taxpayer will also have to contribute.

DEFENSE MINISTER TO MEET WITH PAPANDREOU

NC021152 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1130 GMT 2 Nov 81

[Text] Cypriot Defense Minister Veniamin went to Athens today for talks with Greek Prime Minister Papandreou in his capacity as minister of national defense. During the talks, there will be a discussion of matters related to the defense of Cyprus. Veniamin is accompanied by the chief of the National Guard, General Papanayiotou.

ARCHBISHOP ATTACKS DIALOGUE, PRAISES PAPANDREOU

NC021140 Nicosia ALITHIA in Greek 2 Nov 81 pp 1, 8

[Text] Archbishop of Cyprus Khrisostomos, speaking yesterday at a commemorative service for EOKA hero Photis Pittas at Frenaros village, once again voiced his stand against the process of inter-Cypriot negotiations (the pseudonegotiations, as he described them) and praised the position taken by the new Greek Prime Minister Papandreou.

Among other things the archbishop stated, "we are not alone anymore. Greece is fighting with us -- not theoretically or in order to keep up appearances -- but considering us basically not as some distant relatives who create problems for it but as its genuine sons, who are distressed and in danger and need its active motherly care and protection. This Greece of today counsels us and demands: Processes which have proved calamitous should be stopped because they divert our issue from its proper foundation; we should cease to cooperate in processes which present our issue as one of intercommunal differences, a fact which favors Turkey and its allies. On every opportunity we must present our issue as an issue of invasion and occupation as it truly is. Our struggle should not be to make the invader grant us a few percentages of territory which he grabbed from us and to accept certain constitutional provisions which will only legalize division and occupation, but the struggle should be for the liberation of all of Cyprus and a struggle for justice for all its inhabitants.

"We must all unreservedly support this correct position which is recommended by the present leadership in Greece and which will once again lend authority and context to the UN resolutions and strength to our just cause. It would be a very grave mistake, with irreparable harmful aftereffects, if parties and developments in Cyprus were to insist upon lines and processes -- which they fully accepted but proved not only to be totally fruitless but also calamitous -- only because they fear being accused of changing policy."

The archbishop then referred to Papandreou's forthcoming visit to Cyprus, connecting it to a planning of the struggle. Referring to the Waldheim "ideas," the archbishop said, "If the Waldheim ideas refer to implementation of the resolutions adopted by the United Nations for a solution to the Cyprus problem then we must welcome them. If not, however, then we must not be afraid of rejecting them. Their acceptances as a basis for discussion will have far more dire and harmful repercussions on our cause than their rejection. This is because such an acceptance would only trap us both within processes and lines of thinking which will irrevocably render the UN resolutions completely useless. No matter how powerless these resolutions may be, they still remain the only objective recognition of our just cause. We believe that instead of being frightened, we must employ the rejection of these ideas as an opportunity to place the UN secretary general face to face with his responsibility; to call upon him insistently and demandingly not to remain uninvolved but to convene a conference of the interested parties in accordance with the special provision of the UN resolutions, for the exclusive purpose of having all the provisions of these resolutions fully implemented."

PAPER SUPPORTS WITHDRAWAL OF WALDHEIM'S IDEAS

NC021144 Nicosia O ANEXARTITOS in Greek 2 Nov 81 p 1

[Editorial: "The 'Ideas' Must Be Withdrawn"]

[Text] With the advent of PASOK to authority, all Cypriot sides now accept the repositioning of the Cyprus issue on its proper foundation -- as a question of aggression and occupation. In other words, they accept that the Cyprus issue, basically, is not an intercommunal dispute, but a dispute betwen Turkey on the one hand and Cyprus, international law and UN principles on the other hand. Consequently, they accept that there can be no solution of the Cyprus issue unless Turkey withdraws its occupation troops and its colonists from Cyprus and ends its interference in the affairs of the Republic of Cyprus.

The sincerity of all sides will be tested within the framework of this repositioning on the basis of their approach to the "Waldheim ideas." The philosophy behind these "ideas" is partitionist. Their aim is to divert the Cyprus issue and turn it toward legalization of the occupation and toward a confederal solution.

The context of these "ideas" has already been analyzed. This has been done both by the parties and the portion of the press that wants to inform its readers on what is basic and important.

The analysis clearly demonstrates what these "ideas" mean. To this analysis was added Dr Lissaridhis' recent revelation that these "ideas" incorporate elements which, although appearing as positions acceptable to both sides, have never in fact been discussed or mentioned to the National Council.

This is a startling revelation, becasue the fact that one can reach erronious evaluations, based on true facts, is something that could inadvertently happen. To make evaluations, however, based on forged facts that never occurred only testified to deceit. The same deceit was established concerning the Waldheim formula upon which the August 1980 negotiations were resumed, which forced the president of the republic to send a lengthy letter to Waldheim restoring things to their proper foundations.

It is natural that the National Council cannot permit a resumption of this deceit and -- in order to avoid any reference to intent -- distortion of facts. It has a duty to point out to Waldheim that he has a duty to withdraw his "ideas."

Inaccuracies cannot become the basis for negotiation. The primary duty of someone who chairs any negotiation is respect of the interlocutors. The attribution to these interlocutors, or even to only one of them, of views that were never expressed in no way testifies to any such respect.

All this is in addition to the unacceptability of the positions Waldheim presents as allegedly equidistant to the positions of the two sides. There is no common ground between dissimilar things. There is no equal distance between a confederation and a federation. These are two different things altogether. Waldheim is the first who knows this.

PAPER QUESTIONED 'UNANIMITY' WITH PAPANDREOU

NC021348 Nicosia I DHILINI in Greek 2 Nov 81 p 3

[From "Our Opinion" column: "unanimity Among Those Who Disagree"]

[Text] The Greek prime minister said that the line of Mr Lissaridhis, with whom he has political and ideological ties, is on the right course with regard to the actions on the Cyprus problem. And during their talks, unanimity was noted.

A few days later Mr Kiprianou had talks in Athens with Mr Papandreou. Unanimity was noted during these talks as well. However, Mr Lissaridhis' line is completely different from that of President Kiprianou. Mr Papandreou's line is also different from that of Mr Kiprianou, because Mr Papandreou is following a line different from that of the Rallis government with which the Cyprus Government was in full agreement. Also, Greeks in both Cyprus and Greece have been wondering how it is possible for Mr Papandreou to agree with both Mr Lissaridhis and Mr Kiprianou while the Democratic Party chairman and the EDEK chairman do not agree on anything.

But as of the other day this question has become more difficult following the Papandreou-Papaioannou meeting at which the AKEL secretary general agreed with what Papandreou and Kiprianou had agreed. Truly, how can the prime minister of Greece agree with all those who have been disagreeing among themselves?

Can the three political leaders of Cyprus explain to the people how they can possibly disagree among themselves but agree with Mr Papandreou on the same thing -- the actions in connection with the national issue of Cyprus? An agreement of the three who have been disagreeing among themselves with the prime minister of Greece is totally inconceivable. The people have every right to know what precisely is going on.

ALITHIA DERIDES AKEL FOR CALL FOR UNITY

NC021047 Nicosia ALITHIA in Greek 2 Nov 81 p 7

[From the "Judgment and Comment" column: "AKEL and the 'Democratic Patriotic Forces'"]

[Text] AKEL once again started talking about the reunification of the so-called "democratic patriotic forces" which fell apart under the people's wrath as a result of their own sins and unforgivable mistakes at the people's expense. It points up the "need" for "patriotic unity and action" by all these "democratic patriotic forces" on the basis of "a minumum" program.

However, how can these "democratic patriotic forces" possibly be brought back from the dead and be reunited after they have insulted and accused each other, and broke up after blaming each other for the mistakes they committed jointly at the expense of the people? How can AKEL once again cooperate with EDEK at a time when they are at each other's throats? How can it once again cooperate with the Democratic Party [DHIKO] after it accused its chairman of leading the country to calamity?

Unless, of course, AKEL has decided to accept the truth and admit that the Democratic Rally represents the true democratic patriotic forces and that it will now attempt to cooperate with it in order to save the country. AKEL ought to clarify its position.

AKEL COMMITTEE PLENUM ISSUES RESOLUTION

NC011150 Nicosia KHARAVIYI in Greek 1 Nov 81 pp 1, 3

[Excerpts] The present delicate and crucial phase of the Cyprus problem, which has climaxed in the consultation with the UN secretary general, makes more than ever imperative the need for a firm and solid unity of all the patriotic and democratic forces based on a minimum program and the securing of measures for the implementation of the program to be agreed upon.

This position is stressed in the resolution of the Fifth Regular Plenum of the AKEL Central Committee and Central Control Committee held last Monday. The resolution, which was released yesterday, says that the AKEL Central Committee will play a truly pioneer role in the question of unity and in working out a minimum program which will also include measures for its implementation.

Concerning the Waldheim "ideas," the plenum believes that their approach should be based on the following criteria: 1. Whether the "ideas" are within the framework of the UN resolutions and summit agreements. 2. If they contribute toward conducting substantive talks for a just and peaceful solution, AKEL will contribute toward facing the "ideas" in the right way by supporting what is positive, rejecting what is negative and submitting concrete counterproposals.

The plenum also dealt with the forthcoming presidential and municipal elections. The resolution stresses that AKEL will struggle for the election of a democratic president who will promote the Cyprus issue on the basis of the determined line, accept and promote the unity of democratic forces, agree to a minimum program and measures for its implementation and follow a consistent anti-imperialist and nonaligned policy.

In the municipal elections, AKEL will struggle for the election of councils composed of democratic forces and toward blocking the seizure of any municipality by forces of the reactionary rightwing.

The plenum proclaimed the 15th party congress for May 1982 and assigned specific duties for the further numerical, qualitative and ideological development of the party.

The full text of the resolution is as follows:

"The Fifth Regular Plenum of the AKEL Central Committee and Central Control Committee was held in Nicosia on 26 October 1981. After discussing the Political Bureau's report on the domestic and international developments from the time of the previous plenum until today, and taking into consideration the speech by the Central Committee's secretary general, the plenum has adopted the following resolution:

"A. Internal Developments

"1. The internal political situation during the period under review is dominated mainly by three significant events: (A) the deadlock in the Cyprus issue and efforts to overcome it, which are centered on the declared intention of the UN secretary general to take a more active initiative toward mobility of the dialogue and maintenance of the negotiations procedure; (B) our party's efforts to promote the unity of the patriotic and democratic forces; and (C) the 24 May parliamentary elections for members of the House of Representatives as well as the 28 June 1981 elections in the Turkish Cypriot community.

"2. The intensive consultations on the Cyprus issue, which have been held at the UN headquarters, resulted from the fact that the intercommunal talks, which opened in September 1980 and at which both sides submitted new comprehensive proposals, have not made any progress in a whole year.

"The Central Committee and Central Control Committee plenum establishes that the lack of progress in the talks, which creates the danger of a new deadlock and stalemate in the Cyprus issue with unforeseen consequences, is due to: (A) primarily and mainly to the reaction of the U.S.-NATOite quarters against a peaceful, just, mutually acceptable and viable Cyprus solution which would serve the vital interests of the Cypriot people as a whole; (B) the intransignet line which Ankara's military junta and the chauvinistic Turkish Cypriot leadership continue to follow with the encouragement of the U.S.-NATOite imperialism. Following a specific policy with predetermined goals, the Turkish Cypriot leaders submitted on 5 August 1981, with Ankara's approval, certain proposals which could not constitute the basis for conducting a substantive and constructive dialogue and, moreover, for a just Cyprus solution based on the UN resolutions for Cyprus and the summit agreements. (C) The international tension worldwide and particularly in the Near and Middle East region, which is the result of the cold war policy followed by the Pentagon headed by U.S. President Reagan.

"3. In view of the deadlock to which the intercommunal talks are being led, the UN secretary general has announced his intention to submit some "new ideas' to preserve -- as he put it in his report to the UN General Assembly -- 'the mobility of the negotiating process.'

"The Central Committee and Central Control Committee plenum believe that the Waldheim 'new ideas,' after they are submitted officially, should be approached on the basis of the following criteria:

"A. Whether they are within the framework and in keeping with the UN resolutions on the Cyprus issue and the summit agreements.

"B. Whether they contribute to the holding of substantive talks on the internal aspect of the Cyprus issue and for a peaceful, just, mutually acceptable and viable, Cyprus solution.

"Approaching the Waldheim 'new ideas' on the basis of the above criteria, the plenum believes it is the party's duty to contribute toward facing them correctly and finally to support everything positive, criticize everything negative, reject what it will consider unacceptable in them and submit concrete counterproposals.

"4. Assessing the present crucial and delicate phase of the Cyprus issue culminated in the UN secretary general's consultations concerning his 'new ideas,' the Central Committe Committee and Central Control Committee plenum stress that the need for a firm and solid unity of all the patriotic, democratic forces of our struggling people which should be based on a joint minimum program is more than ever imperative today.

"The Central Committee of our party will play a truly pioneer role in the question of unity among the patriotic, democratic forces, and, for this purpose, the party will contribute to the working out of a minimum program which will also include measures for its implementation.

"5. The Central Committee and Central Control Committee plenum considers it a duty of the party to contribute toward the promotion of the intercommunal talks. In a spirit of good will, we must exhaust all possibilities for the success of the talks. If, despite all this, the talks are led to a deadlock, we should be prepared to appeal to the UN General Assembly, asking for its more active support toward a Cyprus solution.

"6. The plenum of the AKEL Central Committee and Central Control Committee considers it expedient to reaffirm our party's position on the Cyprus issue. This position, in its completed form, is as follows;

"A. The settlement of the internal aspect of the Cyprus problem must be the result of intercommunal talks which, to succeed, should be substantive and constructive. Through the intercommunal talks, we pursue a peaceful, just, mutually acceptable solution based on the UN resolutions and the summit agreements. We aim at the struggle for a truly independent, sovereign, territorially integral, nonaligned, federal and demilitarized Cyprus -- a Cyprus without dividing walls, foreign troops and military bases on its territory. The solution of the Cyprus issue must guarantee the right of voluntary return of refugees to their homes and the tracing of the fate of missing persons.

"B. The settlement of all questions related to the international aspect of the Cyprus issue must be discussed at a special international conference within the framework of the United Nations.

"Among other things, such questions are:

"I. The abolition of the treaties of guarantee and alliance.
"II. The securing of new valid and effective international guarantees.
"III. The demilitarization of Cyprus, including the abolition of the British bases and the U.S. radio monitoring stations.

"7. Along with the present critical turn of the Cyprus issue, the Central Committee and Central Control Committee plenum establishes that the economic situation of Cyprus has deteriorated because of reduction in the tempo of economic development, increased unemployment, energy crisis and rise of inflation and the disturbing deficit in the trade balance.

"8. The Central Committee and Central Control Committee plenum considers it necessary that the procedures should be speeded up for the holding of municipal and communal elections in the towns so that local authorities may be elected by next spring.

"Concerning the presidential elections in 1983, the plenum defines the party position as follows:

"Our main strategic aim is to block the road of the reactionary rightwing to power. Our party will struggle for the election of a democratic president who will come from the patriotic, democratic forces. Such a president must be prepared to:

"(A) Promote the Cyprus issue toward a solution based on the UN principles and resolutions on Cyprus and the summit agreements.

"(B) Accept and promote the cooperation and unity of action among the patriotic, democratic forces.

"(C) Follow a consistent anti-imperialist and active nonaligned foreign policy and support the people's struggles for independence, democracy and progress.

"(D) Follow and implement a popular policy confronting and solving the people's economic and social problems.

"(E) Agree on a minimum program of common acceptance and on measures for its implementation.

"The plenum of the AKEL Central Committee and Central Control Committee believes that the May 1981 parliamentary elections, under the conditions they were held, have acquired tremendous political significance. These elections have been a hard political battle with the patriotic, democratic, anti-imperialist forces headed by our party on the one side and the proimperialist forces of reaction and economic oligarchy on the other side.

"B. International developments

"The main characteristic of international developments is the intensified battle between the forces of peace, progress and socialism headed by the Soviet Union and the most reactionary, warmongering forces of imperialism and reaction headed by the intrasigent militarists of the Pentagon and NATO.

"While the world peace-loving forces are following a consistent policy of detente in international relations, for the limitation of armaments, banning of production of new nuclear arms and disarmament in general -- a policy which responds to the people's vital interests and leads to the safeguarding of peace -- the aggressive circles of the U.S.-NATOite imperialism are following a completely opposite, warmongering, cold war policy.

"C. The Party

"Developments both in the Cyprus issue and the internal policy and economic situation in general as well as in the international arena place the party before serious duties. Our party's response to these serious duties demands its multifaceted strengthening. The more our party becomes stronger in the political, organizational, ideological and economic sectors, the more efficiently and satisfactorily will it be able to play its pioneer role and mission and fulfill its duties to the people.

"The Central Committee and Central Control Committee plenum proclaims the 15th party congress for May 1982.

"The plenum of the AKEL Central Committee and Central Control Committee -- being fully conscious of the present crucial phase of the Cyprus issue, the deterioration of the economic affairs and of the serious duties our party is shouldering as the people's pioneer political force -- calls all the party members to a real alert in honor of its 15th congress in fulfillment of the duties facing us so that our party may become worthy of the Cypriot people's hopes and confidence.

ECONOMIC TALKS WITH SOVIETS OPEN 2 NOVEMBER

NC021810 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1730 GMT 2 Nov 81

[Text] The work of the first session of the Cyprus-Soviet intergovernmental committee for cooperation in the economic and technical field opened in Nicosia today. The Cypriot delegation is headed by Mr Aristidhou, director general of the planning bureau, and the Soviet delegation by Mr (Dralo), first deputy director of the Department of Economic Cooperation of the Soviet Union. The meeting examined, among other things, the existing prospects and possibilities for Cypriot-Svoiet cooperation for the carrying out of development projects.

Today, the Soviet delegation met with Finance Minister Avxendiou. During the meeting, there was an exchange of views on the progress achieved in the bilateral economic relations. Possible fields of cooperation between Cyprus and the Soviet Union were also examined.

GOVERNMENT AGAIN REQUESTS REMOVAL OF TALKS OFFICIAL

NC031150 Nicosia I DHILINI in Greek 3 Nov 81 p 1

[Text] The Cypriot government has asked the UN secretary general for the immediate removal of Mr Pilloud because of his repeatedly unacceptable stand toward the missing persons question. The government had asked for Mr Pilloud's removal a long time ago, but Mr Waldheim was in a difficult position because Mr Pilloud comes under the International Red Cross. According to authoritative reports, during yesterday's meeting between Foreign Minister Rolandhis and Mr Gobbi, this question was discussed, and the request for Mr Pilloud's removal was repeated. During the same meeting, it was also decided to hold a meeting of the committee on missing persons with Mr Gobbi, in Mr Rolandhis' presence.

KIPRIANOU TO VISIT SOFIA 23 NOV, BAGHDAD 20 DEC

NC010822 Nicosia O FILELEVTHEROS in Greek 1 Nov 81 p 1

[TExt] The president of the republic, Mr Sp. Kiprianou, will pay official visits to Sofia on 23 November and Iraq on 20 December for talks at the invitation of the leaders of these two countries.

BRIEFS

BULGARIAN EDUCATION MINISTER ARRIVES -- Bulgarian Minister of Education Fol arrived in Cyprus tonight on an official visit at the invitation of the republic's Minister of Education Konomis. During his stay in Cyprus, Fol will be received by President of the Republic Kiprianou. He will also meet the president of the House of Representatives, Ladhas, and will have talks on educational issues with his Cypriot counterpart, Konomis. The Bulgarian minister will also inaugurate the Bulgarian cultural center in Nicosia. Fol was received at the airport by Minister of Education Konomis and Bulgarian Ambassador Bochev. [Text] [Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 2000 GMT 2 Nov 81 NC]

NAVY HOLDS AEGEAN EXERCISE WITH FRANCE, ITALY

NC022054 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1930 GMT 2 Nov 81

[Text] Beginning today, a small-scale fleet exercise is being carried out in the Aegean under the code name Niriis 81. Destroyers, missile boats, torpedo boats, submarines, naval helicopters, naval support planes and auxiliary vessels are participating in the exercise together with air and naval units from France and Italy. Certain stages of the exercise will be supported by air force planes. The purpose of the exercise is to train personnel in the various forms of naval operations and to develop cooperation among allied units.

PAPANDREOU INTERVIEWED ON NATO, TURKEY, CYPRUS

PM021639 London AL-MAJALLAH in Arabic 31 Oct-6 Nov 81 pp 12-19

[Interview given to AL-MAJALLAH by Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou in Athens; date not given]

[Excerpt] [Question] You have often reiterated in your speeches that the Arab states will support your policy. Can you specify these states? And what is your government's stance on the Middle East?

[Answer] There are two parts to the question. The first part is that I must emphasize in my answer that our stance on the Middle East problem is extremely lucid, since no peace can be established in the Middle East unless an independent Palestinian state is established. This must be sought through an international conference, such as the Geneva conference for example, in which all the parties concerned will participate, including the Soviet Union and the United States. The conference must specify Israel's right to exist. The second part is related to our relations with the Arab states. This matter is very important to Greece, since we seek to develop our historical relations with all the Arab people.

We Will Not Allow It

[Question] What do you intend to do with the Atlantic alliance and the U.S. military bases in Greece?

[Answer] We do not take the same view of the North Atlantic alliance as other European states. As far as we are concerned, this alliance is a different matter. It does not guarantee our eastern border with Turkey whereas it asks us in return to assist in containing a presumed threat originating from the North (Warsaw Pact). Such an alliance has failed to defend and repel the armed invasion of Cyprus. Our agreement to return to the ranks of the alliance, which was signed in 1980 and which is called "the Rogers agreement," involves giving concessions affecting Greece's sovereignty rights which cannot possibly be relinquished, and accepting the Atlantic alliance's supervision of our air space over the Aegean. We shall endeavor to remove all the nuclear warheads present on Greek territory and to reestablish our control over the U.S. military bases. We will not allow the use of these bases in the event of any foreign intervention against any country in the Middle East, for example. Such bases will not help us in the event of war on a limited scale, but they will lead to a nuclear holocaust in the event of an all-out world war. The restoration of Greek control of these bases will be carried out according to a specific timetable -- that is, during a transitional period. In any case, we will not allow our armed forces to be weakened (the countries of the Atlantic alliance, led by the United States, currently account for 80 percent of the Greek Armed Forces' supplies and equipment) because we shall establish our own military industries. As far as the United States in concerned, it must understand that Greece is an independent country, despite the fact that I spent 20 years in the United States. When it understands this, we will then be able to speak the same language and to talk and negotiate elaborately.

[Question] What will the socialist government's attitude be to Cyprus?

[Answer] Greece is regarded as the force guaranteeing the independence of Cyprus. On this basis, Greece has the right and indeed is duty-bound to support the Cypriot people's struggle. The slogan of the New Democratic government is to give an opportunity to the Cypriot Government to decide the extent of Greek support. The Greek Government will also inform world public opinion of everything related to the Cyprus problem and mobilize all forces to help find a just solution to this problem. Any future talks should aim at establishing a new constitution for the island. Such negotiations will bear no fruit except after the withdrawal of the foreign forces from the island, because any talks under the present conditions would inevitably lead to an acceptance of the fait accompli -- the partitioning of the country -- in view of the fact that the current participants in the dialogue are the Cyprus Government and the Ankara government and not the Greek and Turkish Cypriot communities, and especially because Turkey has military forces on the island, which are considered a principal negotiating weapon. This is why we seek the withdrawal of all the foreign forces from the country, including the British bases there.

[Question] How would you describe your relations with Turkey?

[Answer] The Greek and Turkish peoples must coexist. This can be achieved if the two countries become free of any foreign interference. We are contemplating holding a dialogue with the Turks provided that this involves no concessions with regard to Greece's right of air and naval sovereignty over its continental shelf in the Aegean area.

PAPER REPORTS U.S. ATTEMPT TO MAINTAIN INFLUENCE

NC021202 Athens RIZOSPASTIS in Greek 1 Nov 81 p 1

[Text] U.S. agencies are working out ways to protect their influence over key positions and vital sectors of the state apparatus. Their immediate goal is to have their "people" remain in positions which they already hold. The 18 October election result created an atmosphere of concern and insecurity among U.S. circles here and they have already started to reorganize their activities adjusting them to the new conditions.

With this end in mind, the main weight of their efforts is directed toward protecting their support within the state apparatus and collecting data to support their future interventionist and other subversive activities in the country's political affairs. According to the same reports and in order to support these activities, recent staff meetings have been held within U.S. agencies which, apparently, have reached decisions on specific measures and activities. These U.S. reactions also reach into other sectors of government activity and are cooredinated with parallel action by the rightwing. It was characteristically noted that leading personalities of "New Democracy" have not only maintained their approaches to sensitive links within the state apparatus but are attempting to put them into use within a campaign to undermine the new government.

Without a doubt the propaganda campaign launched by the rightwing press is also pointed in the same direction with reports about alleged "pogroms of dismissals," about "heads rolling" and so forth among the administrative personnel of the public services. There is an obvious attempt to create a climate of suspicion and enmity toward the new government within the ranks of public servants, to limit and even prevent certain changes within the public administration which, naturally, will have no effect on its salaried employees.

The problem of purging the state apparatus of the cancerous growths of U.S. influence and its local brains remains acute and pressing. The correct handling of this problem -- as noted by political observers -- is necessary not only for the purpose of implementing change but also to protect smooth democratic function and the very survival of democratic government.

PAPER: GREEK MEDIA IGNORE ULUSU OFFER OF PEACE

NC020920 Istanbul GUNAYDIN in Turkish 20 Oct 81 p 1

[Text] Athens -- The Greek press has ignored Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu's speech in which he said that "we do not covet any of our neighbor's territory." The Greek television network carried a brief reference to Ulusu's speech in its 2100 newscast, but this reference was dropped in subsequent newscasts. The vast majority of Greek people have thus been kept uninformed of Prime Minister Ulusu's peace reply to Prime Minister Papandreou.

COURT SENTENCES ECEVIT TO 4 MONTHS' IMPRISONMENT

NC031050 Paris AFP in English 1041 GMT 3 Nov 81

[Text] Ankara, 3 Nov (AFP) -- Former Turkish Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit, who led the country from January 1978 to October 1979, was sentenced to four months' imprisonment here today by a martial law court for having broken a decree banning political activity. Mr Ecevit's conviction was connected to a statement he gave to foreign news organizations two weeks ago, in which he criticized Gen Kenan Evren's decree.

The military junta headed by General Evren on October 16 disbanded all political parties, and assigned their property and bank accounts to the national treasury.

Mr Ecevit's statement, referring to a televised speech during which General Evren explained the move, also demanded the right to reply to what he termed "unjustified criticism" of his Republican People's (social democratic) party.

Mr Ecevit may not appeal today's decision, as sentences under three years are not subject to appeal. But the command of the Ankara martial law administration could appeal it, and the former prime minister will not begin serving his sentence until his conviction is confirmed. The decision should be made public in a few weeks, informed sources said.

HEROIN SMUGGLING SUPPORTS ARMENIAN TERRORISTS

NC030904 Istanbul GUNAYDIN in Turkish 30 Oct 81 p 4

[Text] Stockholm (THA) -- As a result of a report prepared by the Turkish security organization for the purpose of warning the world through Interpol, a big heroin smuggling network has been uncovered in Sweden. This network reportedly has been transferring the proceeds from its heroin smuggling to Armenian terrorists.

According to a report by the Swedish police, this network was set up by Armenians who came to Sweden from Iraq and Syria in 1978. It is composed of 19 Armenians and 6 Swedes and has earned 300 million krona (about 6 billion Turkish lira) from the heroin smuggled into Sweden since 1978. It has been revealed by the Swedish police that these sums have been deposited with Swiss banks to be transferred to Armenian terrorists.

TURKISH ARMENIANS CONDEMN ANTI-TURK TERRORISM

TA011118 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 1 Nov 81

[Text] A special mass was held at the Istanbul Armenian patriarchy for the Turkish representatives martyred in foreign countries. The mass, held at the (Turkrikor Lissavorik) Armenian church in Karakoy, was conducted by Armenian Patriarch Shnork Kaloustian.

In a speech during the special mass, Kaloustian said that as the spiritual leader of Turkish Armenians and on behalf of the Armenian community in Turkey, he once more condemns the abominable murders of Turkish representatives and expresses his indignation to the whole world.

Pointing out that the murders directed against Turkism, the Turkish nation and the Turkish Republic, which unfortunately implicate Armenians and which originate with international terrorism, constitute a great injustice, Kaloustian said that, as is the case everywhere, reaction to terrorism is mounting among Armenian circles abroad, and noted that this is a pleasing development.

Noting that the abominable attacks directed against Turkish diplomats abroad are denounced by the chief Armenian patriarch as well as all spiritual leaders and the members of sensible Armenian communities in the world, Kaloustian said that these reactions will increase daily, that these assaults and murders cannot be condoned and that they do not bring honor to the Armenians.

Kaloustian asked God's mercy for the innocent Turkish diplomats, who were martyred on duty for the sake of their country, and expressed his condolences to the bereaved families.

Kaloustian also called on Armenians in foreign countries to oppose abominable murders, struggle against devious mentalities and to not allow treacherous (?murders). He added that international terrorism has turned into a very big organization and expressed the belief that it can be frustrated through the cooperation of all countries, and firm and definite measures to be approved by the Turkish state.

Numerous Armenian religious personalities and Armenian community members attended the special mass held by the Armenian patriarchy in Istanbul.

NATIONAL CONGRESS ON ECONOMY CONVENES IN IZMIR

TA020725 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 0700 GMT 2 Nov 81

[Text] The second Turkish economy congress convened in Izmir today and began work with Head of State General Evren's opening speech. Some 1,500 delegates representing all sectors of the economic field are participating in the congress. Minister of State and Deputy Prime Minister Turgut Ozal will also address the congress, reviewing Turkey's economic situation. The congress will conclude its work on Saturday, 7 November.

Turkey's development policies, foreign economic relations, social progress and employment, infrastructural investments, energy, transportation, agriculture, industry, domestic trade and services are the main subjects to be discussed in the congress. More than 200 papers will be read at the congress on these subjects.

Opening Session

TA021150 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 2 Nov 81

[Excerpts] The second Turkish economy congress was opened in Izmir today by Head of State General Evren's speech. In his speech, General Evren recalled that Turkey faced grave economic difficulties prior to the 12 September 1980 [coup] and that economic sectors were transformed into hostile camps. He added that through the climate of social peace and security which prevailed last year, Turkey's economy was reactivated and a great amelioration was achieved.

The congress convened at 0930 today at Izmir's Ataturk Sports Hall. The national hymn was sung following a brief ceremony. The Izmir governor, head of the planning committee which prepared the congress, then took the rostrum. After he expressed his pleasure over the holding of the congress in his city, the governor recalled that the first Turkish economy congress was convened even before the Lausanne Treaty was signed or the republic declared. He said this only demonstrates the importance which the great Ataturk attached to economic subjects. He then proposed convening the congress in Izmir every 10 years.

In accordance with a proposal voted upon and passed, Prime Minister Ulusu was elected chairman of the congress. Professors Omer Celal Sarp and Behcet Uz were elected as deputies to the chairman. In a speech after he was elected chairman, Ulusu said that it was a happy coincidence that the second Turkish economy congress was meeting on Ataturk's centenary. He expressed his belief that the congress would accomplish its historic task. He then invited Head of State General Evren to make his opening speech at the congress.

Following General Evren's sppech, State Minister and Deputy Prime Minister Turgut Ozal addressed the congress. In his speech, Ozal said that for a developing, growing and strengthening Turkey, the savings of the people were as necessary as the power of the state for the establishment of a modern economic infrastructure. Noting that with the 12 September action anarchy was eliminated in the country and big steps were made in the field of labor peace, Ozal said that inflation was lowered to less than 40 percent annually and substantial growth was achieved in state income. He expressed his belief that the economic policies currently being implemented would eliminate Turkey's balance of payments deficit within 2 years. Ozal added that Turkey's 1981 exports would reach more than $3.5 billion. Stressing the importance of infrastructural investments to provide for a steady economic progress, Ozal said that infrastructural deficiencies created a bottleneck in Turkey's development efforts. Ozal concluded: Our people's spirit of enterprise has played a great role in the increase achieved in foreign exchange incomes. That is why all bureaucratic difficulties impeding our people's powers of free enterprise will be eliminated, and measures will be taken to encourage such steps, to implement the Ataturk principle that all problems can only be solved through complete cooperation with the people.

After Ozal's speech, Professor Mustafa Aytan from the school of business administration, Istanbul University, presented a paper on Ataturk's economic views.

Turkish Confederation of Labor [Turk-Is] leader Ibrahim Denizcier addressed the congress on behalf of the workers; Turkish Union of Agricultural Chambers leader Osman Ozbek spoke on behalf of the farmers; Turkish Tradesmens Association leader Husamettin Tiyansan spoke on behalf of small shopkeepers; Turkish Union of Trade and Industrial Chambers President Mehmet Yazar addressed the congress on behalf of the businessmen and industrialists; and finally, Central Bank Governor Osman Siklar spoke on behalf of the bankers.

Following these speeches, the first session of the second congress was concluded.

Members of the National Security Council, and a delegation from the Consultative Assembly under its speaker Sadi Irmak were also present in the ceremonies, in addition to several ministers, representatives of the judiciary, the Aegean army commander, the Izmir mayor, members who participated in the first Turkish economy congress and representatives of international organizations which cooperate with Turkey, foreign officials and some 1500 delegates from all the sectors of the economic field.

The congress will meet tomorrow. Seven committees were set up to conduct work on various subjects. It will end on Saturday, 7 November.

PRESS REACTION TO PAPANDREOU ABC INTERVIEW

NC301055 [Editorial Report] The Turkish-language Istanbul press for 27 and 28 October carries various articles and commentaries on Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou's ABC interview, including: MILLIYET, in a 27 October commentary entitled "Papandreou's Phobia" by Sami Kohen, reporting from Washington, says: "The interview granted by Greek Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou to the ABC Television Network the other night has shown to the Americans that, following government changes in Greece, U.S.-Greek relations are about to enter a difficult period.

"For instance, U.S. diplomatic circles could not help saying, after listening to what Papandreou had to say, 'We stand to suffer a lot at this man's hands. Greece is going to be a new headache in the eastern Mediterranean.'

"From our point of view, this first statement by the Greek prime minister televised in the United States is such that it is capable of creating serious anxiety and even pessimism about the future of the Greek-Turkish relations."

Referring to Papandreou's allegations over the ABC Television Network in the United States, Kohen says: "Papandreou created the impression in the minds of millions of Americans, who are not familiar with the facts, that Turkey has claimed territory from Greece, and that it tried to extend its existing territorial waters in and the airspace over the Aegean. Had the ABC interviewer been familiar with facts, he would have asked Papandreou whether it is Athens which aspires to change the extent of the width of the territorial waters and airspace now in force to its advantage and which 'has claims', or Ankara." Commenting further on Papandreou's ABC interview, Kohen says: "The Greek leader has let the cat out of the bag by admitting that he wants to bargain over Greece's stay in NATO and that he will ask a high price for this. Greece is, first and foremost, asking the U.S. and NATO to provide it with security against any attack from the 'East'."

Papandreou is further quoted as demanding that "the information obtained on the U.S. bases should not be shared with Turkey, for he deems Turkey not an ally, but a rival, and even an enemy; and that these bases should not be engaged in activities that are likely to offend the 'Third World' countries, particularly the Arab countries which he is currently courting."

Stating that Papandreou's ideological beliefs and his world outlook will undoubtedly lend Greek politics a new dimension, Kohen believes that Papandreou "is trying to achieve his aspirations through a systematic animosity against Turkey. As we have already stated, Papandreou will attempt to impel Turkey to pay his fat invoice. What is more, he will try to do this through the United States and NATO." Kohen finally asks: "Will the world stomach all this?"

HURRIYET, on 27 October, carries a dispatch from Washington in which Turkish Ambassador to Washington Sukru Elekdag is quoted as having told HURRIYET exclusively: "Turkey is situated at the most dangerous spot in the world. Because of this, its strategic importance has gained a vital character." Ambassador Elekdag made this comment on Greek Prime Minister Papandreou's statement that the improvement in Greek-U.S. relations will depend on the amount of pressure the United States is prepared to exercise on Turkey: "We, as Turkey, wish to see Turkish-American relations develop in accordance with their own specific merits. We cannot agree that these relations should be handled in such a manner that they would depend on the U.S. relations with other countries. We believe that in the light of the bitter experiences of the past whose traces have newly been erased, the U.S. administration also cherishes such healthy and wise views."

On 27 October, HURRIYET carries an aditorial by Oktay Eksi entitled: "Papandreou's Logic." Eksi says: "This Papandreou is a wonderful man ... just like his father; ambitious, bad-tempered, and I am afraid a little unbalanced. He appeared before ABC, the famous U.S. television network, and argued that 'his country is threatened by Turkey.'" Here Eksi attempts a summary of what Papandreou said on U.S. television and continues: "Papandreou repeated more or less the same deliriums in his program, a summary of which appeared in HURRIYET on 21 October. He argues that 'the NATO alliance is incapable of protecting Greece's frontiers against Turkey.' He is also quoted as saying: 'Cyprus is a matter of priority for the Greek nation. Greece, which, as a guarantor state possesses legal rights on Cyprus, considers it its duty to actively support the struggle of the Greek Cypriot people.'"

Eksi then refers to the points which Papandreou omitted and adds: "The views expressed by the Turks on the question of the contental shelf have nothing to do with the rights of the Greeks protected by international law. What is at stake is the continental shelf that is outside Greek territorial waters. International law encourages the parties concerned to try and resolve their differences through bilateral talks. This is what Turkey wants...when Papandreou says 'NATO does not provide any security for our eastern wing,' he makes himself laughable.

"When Papandreou says 'Cyprus is a matter of priority for Greece,' and claims to have legal rights on Cyprus as a guarantor state, he should not forget that Turkey had exactly the same rights when it landed in Cyprus in 1974. Any argument that ignores this fact is absurd and fallacious.

"As to the 'Aegean Army' and the 'landing craft', the islands in the Aegean were militarized contrary to the 1947 Lausanne and Paris agreements long before the Aegean Army was formed. May we ask: Isn't Greece ashamed to bring up the question of the 'Aegean Army?'"

On 28 October, CUMHURIYET carries an unattributed commentary entitled "Athens' Panhellenism" in which the writer says: "With the establisment of the Ataturk republic, Turkey abandoned the Pan-Islamic and Pan-Turkism movements, decisively determined the frontiers of the state and identified itself with the principle of 'peace at home, peace abroad' within the framework of the national pact. Ankara does not want to move beyond its frontiers, or allow its frontiers to be narrowed; nor will it tolerate those who would attempt to divide our homeland. This is the inalienable view and belief of Turkey, no matter what government is in power."

The writer then says that there is a contrast between the abandonment of Pan-Islamism and Pan-Turkism and the coming to power of the Panhellenic Socialist Party in Greece in 1981, and adds: "Panhellenism, whose roots stretch as far as the middle of the 19th century, is, in a way, synonymous with the 'megalo idea.'" Referring to Papandreou's interview over the ABC Television Network, the writer says: "If Papandreou's statement was not erroneously translated, it is obvious that this reasoning is 'confusing and strange.' Is providing defense guarantees for one member of NATO against another compatible with the existence of the alliance? The Greek prime minister seems to forget that the Aegean Army was formed after the Aegean Islands were militarized right under Turkey's nose, contrary to the existing treaties."

The writer then says: "Andreas Papandreou has identified himself with a many-sided strategy: While he plans to increase Greece's support for the Greek Cypriots, he intends to allow the PLO to open the highest-level possible legation in Athens. While he is trying to establish close relations with France and other European countries, he is endeavoring to use the United States as a means of pressure against Turkey. Ankara must evaluate developments in Athens with meticulous care. Historic Greek politics once again fully manifests itself. Thinking that it has caught Turkey at a distressed and difficult moment of its history, Greece is launching an extensive policy of aggression."

BRIEFS

URANIUM DEPOSITS -- Sebinkarahisar (Giresun), 27 Oct (AA) -- Rich deposits have been discovered in Sebinkarahisar, near Giresun by a group of scientists from the Middle East Technical University and the state-run organization "Institute of Metal Researches." Sebinkarahisar deposits consititue 80 percent of uranium deposits in Turkey, university sources said. [Text] [Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1150 GMT 27 Oct 81 TA]

AUSTRIA

KREISKY COMMENTS ON EUROPEAN PEACE MOVEMENT

AU021200 Vienna ARBEITER-ZEITUNG in German 2 Nov 81 p 2

[Text] Vienna (AZ, SK) -- The peace movement in Europe will touch off negotiations by the superpowers on arms limitation, Chancellor Kreisky declared in an interview published in the latest issue of the youth periodical RENNBAHN-EXPRESS. "Owing to the fact that hundreds of thousands are demonstrating in many countries, one cannot simply bury one's head in the sand. Both Reagan and Brezhnev will have to realize that no one is willing to accept the arms race any longer without a genuine readiness for negotiations."

In principle, Kreisky declared, it must be said that by demonstrations alone peace cannot be secured. They can only be part of a comprehensive peace policy for which the politicians are responsible. He himself, he said, would "not march with the demonstrators because it can never be ensured that such demonstrations will not be misused for political ends." However, Kreisky also refused to participate in the pointless calculations about whether the SS-20 or the Pershing missiles are stronger. For any war that were to break out in Europe today, irrespective with which weapons it might be waged, would destroy this continent, he said.

Asked about the Austrian army, Kreisky said a neutral state must be ready to defend itself. "Our army is not a war army," he said, adding that what was necessary was to be alert and not to invite anyone to obtain political influence in Austria through military operations.

PORTUGAL

EUROPEAN SECURITY CONFERENCE OPENING, MATIAS SPEAKS

PM301425 Lisbon DIARIO DE NOTICIAS in Portuguese 20 Oct 81 p 3

[Excerpt] Europe's security and defense "will gain from the strengthening of relations on other continents," specifically, Africa, the Middle East and Latin America, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs Leonardo Matias maintained at the opening of the international conference on European security and the civil defense of large cities, organized in Lisbon by the Institute of Strategic and International Studies (IEEI). Leonardo Matias, who was speaking at the opening session of the conference yesterday morning, representing the foreign minister, began by emphasizing the importance of this IEEI initiative because of its contribution to "warning public opinion of the dangers which the current correlation of forces in Europe is creating for the democratic, free and pluralist societies."

Referring to the government's foreign policy, the secretary of state for foreign affairs declared himself in favor of "negotiations for the limitation of nuclear weapons, provided that they result in a real nuclear parity at lower levels and not in the preservation of the existing imbalance. "We also believe," he added, "that beyond the field of nuclear weapons, a simultaneous effort in the sphere of conventional weapons must be pursued, since it is also our duty in this field to seek necessary balances which will eliminate the disadvantage at which the West finds itself." After asserting that "feasible security must be based on a stable and real military balance," the member of the government stressed that "in order to be effective detente needs to be mutual and cannot be compatible with the pursuit of destabilizing aims or with the creation or encouragement of tensions in other areas of the world, since it must be worldwide and indivisible, or else we could create phony and unilateral security situations which end up by exacerbating the dangers of confrontation." Highlighting Portugal's stance on detente, Leonardo Matias asserted that this aim is not confined to East-West relations but also involves the "diversification of relations with other areas of the world. That is why," he emphasized, "Portuguese foreign policy places particular emphasis on the intensification and strengthening of our relations with areas with which we are linked by parallel historical, cultural and civilizing experiences and by common economic interests, such as Latin America, Africa and the Middle East."

FBIS DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 213 4 November 1981

CONTENTS

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Schmidt Gives Bonn Luncheon for Malawi President J 1
Genscher Receives CSSR Deputy Foreign Minister J 1
Brandt Sees Technology Hindering Security Policy J 1
Kohl Takes Hard Line on Peace Movement J 2
Soldier Detained Over Neo-Nazi Arms Caches J 2
'Reaganomics' Creates Wealth, Poverty Extremes [DER SPIEGEL 26 Oct] J 3
Poll Results on Domestic Politics Reported J 9

FRANCE

Soviet UNESCO Translator Asks Asylum in Paris K 1
LE MONDE on Dangers of Europe's Sinai Role [1-2 Nov] K 1
Mitterrand Opens Summit With African Leaders K 2
Eyadema Comments on Chad K 3
Mobutu Meets Mitterrand K 3
Arms Being Sent to Chad, More Support for OAU Force [LE MONDE 27 Oct] K 3
Mauroy Calls for Unity, Warns Against Neutralism [LE MONDE 27 Oct] K 4

ITALY & THE VATICAN

L'UNITA Covers Berlinguer Latin American Visit L 1
Mexico City Meetings [16 Oct] L 1
Address at PCM Congress [20 Oct] L 2
Visit to Nicaragua [22 Oct] L 4
Managua Departure Speech [23 Oct] L 5

NORDIC AFFAIRS

DENMARK

Soviet Diplomat Expelled for Espionage Activities P 1

FINLAND

Soviets Hint at Presidential Preferences [DAGENS NYHETER 1 Nov] P 1
Briefs: Siberian Pipeline P 2

NORWAY

Outspoken Ambassador Faces Dismissal by Stray [ARBEIDERBLADET 29 Oct] P 2

SWEDEN

Interrogation of Captain to Take Place on Sub P 3
Chief of Staff Boards Sub P 3

CYPRUS

Spokesman on Kiprianou's USSR Visit, UK Bases R 1
National Council Delays on Waldheim Ideas R 1
Rolandhis Tries Last Missing Persons Issue Effort R 1

TURKEY

Foreign Ministry Assessing Papandreou's Speeches [HURRIYET 31 Oct] T 1
Additional Comments [HURRIYET 1 Nov] T 2
Evren Reviews Economic Situation at Conference T 3
ARAYIS Discusses Society, Political Parties [24 Oct] T 5
Publication of TERCUMAN To Resume 3 November T 6
Economic Protocol With Norway Signed in Oslo T 6

OTHER COUNTRIES

AUSTRIA

Al-Qadhdhafi Threatens Attack on U.S. Embassy U 1
Interior Ministry To Review Security U 1
Briefs: Anti-U.S. Rally U 1

SPAIN

Army Officers Form Clandestine Opposition Union U 1

SCHMIDT GIVES BONN LUNCHEON FOR MALAWI PRESIDENT

LD031346 Hamburg DPA in German 1241 GMT 3 Nov 81

[Excerpt] Bonn, 3 Nov (DPA) -- The Federal Government has assured Malawi of further support. At a luncheon for President Hastings Banda, Chancellor Helmut Schmidt said in Bonn today that relations between the two countries are an example of how North and South should cooperate. He said that under Banda's leadership, Malawi had shown that a small country with few raw materials and no outlet to the sea could constantly improve its material and social living standards. The Federal Government would continue to contribute to the successes of this policy in accordance with its possibilities.

Prior to this, Banda, in a talk with Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, had discussed the situation in southern Africa in detail. He strongly endorsed the efforts of the group of five Western states -- the United States, Canada, Britain, France and the Federal Republic -- to achieve Namibia's independence in free elections. Chancellor Schmidt stressed that the Federal Government, as a member of the group of five, is making strong efforts for the achievement of this aim in 1982.

GENSCHER RECEIVES CSSR DEPUTY FOREIGN MINISTER

LD031248 Hamburg DPA in German 1217 GMT 3 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 3 Nov (DPA) -- Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher today received Czechoslovak Deputy Foreign Minister Mecislav Jablonsky, for a 1-hour exchange of views in Bonn. In the talk, which dealt with preparations for the planned meeting between Genscher and CSSR Foreign Minister Bohuslav Chnoupek in Bonn in December, the federal foreign minister also stressed the hope that Moscow would respond to the Western offer of a zero option. It is the German view that this could act as a signal for other weapons areas, too. Genscher also stressed the particular German interest in agreement, at the Madrid CSCE review conference, on a European disarmament conference. In Genscher's opinion, such an agreement would be "an almost historic step."

BRANDT SEES TECHNOLOGY HINDERING SECURITY POLICY

LD031338 Hamburg DPA in German 1121 GMT 3 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 3 Nov (DPA) -- SPD Chairman Willy Brandt called today for a more critical attitude in the Federal Republic toward arms policy and demanded a "strong emphasis" on security policy having precedence over weapons technology. In Bonn today, he also pointed to considerations about modern defense systems, which may help solve the problem of tactical nuclear weapons in Europe.

"We do not want ever newer weapons to be thrust into our hands and then, only as a second step, to reflect on the political consequences," Brandt said in a speech to mark the 100th anniversary of the Dietz publishing house in Bonn. "We must try to prevent technology from having an excessive influence on the development of security policy, with the result that the opposite of what otherwise characterizes social democracy takes place; that an obsession with figures causes us to get lost in details of military technology and to perhaps even lose peace."

Brandt pointed to reputable experts who are of the opinion that the chances of opposing the conventional preponderance of a possible aggressor with intelligent defense systems are rising. One must continue to think along these lines. "Something would have been gained if one day we were able to solve the problem of tactical nuclear weapons in Europe in this way," he said. "If it were possible to make many of the nuclear weapons in Europe superfluous in some other way it could mean additional security, particularly for our country."

Political observers see in these statements by Brandt certain parallels with the thesis advanced by CDU politician Kurt Biedenkopf, who has said that in the long run a consensus for the strategy of nuclear deterrence cannot be maintained under democracy, and who has urged a strengthening of conventional defenses until effective disarmament is achieved.

KOHL TAKES HARD LINE ON PEACE MOVEMENT

LD031210 Hamburg DPA in German 0949 3 Nov 81

[Excerpts] Hamburg, 3 Nov (DPA) -- CDU Chairman Helmut Kohl has strongly reaffirmed his party's determination to assume political responsibility in Bonn. Outlining basic principles in a speech to over 2,000 particpants at the CDU party congress in Hamburg today, Kohl said that the CDU took over the intellectual leadership of the Federal Republic years ago and is supported by a clear majority of the population. "We are ready for political leadership and are ready to take over political responsibility at any time."

Kohl strongly criticized the Federal Government because it puts confidence in the Federal Republic's reliability as part of the Western alliance at risk. European developments, aid for the Third World and economic and social stability are threatened.

Kohl emphatically warned against neutralist tendencies in the Federal Republic. Weakness and lack of leadership in the Bonn coalition increases the danger to central Europe. A neutralist nationalism would strive for a socialist republic of Germany. A neutralist Germany would remain free only as long as the Soviet Union wished. "This must not happen and this will not happen," Kohl stated. The decisive fact was for the Federal Republic to remain part of the West and in the alliance with the United States.

Kohl warned that the Soviet Union could interpret the demonstrations in Western capitals not as a sign of a deep longing for peace but as a symptom of weakness and paralysis, and make no concessions at all in disarmament negotiations. The peace movement and its supporters would then have achieved the opposite of what the majority of its supporters wanted.

He said that the more than 250 Soviet medium-range missiles are not aimed at targets in the United States but at West European centers. With their conventional superiority, too, the Soviets want to create fear among the West Europeans and spread the impression that subjugation to the will of a relentless superpower is inevitable. This fear has to be countered with the courage of conviction.

Kohl gave the assurance that, in the interests of the unsolved German question, the COU/CSU wants understanding with the East. It wants to establish trust and is aiming for cooperation in many spheres. Commenting on the various opinions in the CDU / CSU about the peace movement, Kohl said that one needs to show understanding toward true pacifists.

Dealing with domestic issues, Kohl accused the government of having plunged the country into a crisis through "socialist mismanagement."

Kohl stressed that peace without weapons is an illusion. Without the protection of the alliance freedom has no permanence. He called upon youth in particular to remember values and virtues and appealed for greater commitment to the limination of hunger and misery in the Third World, the overcoming of the "fear of technology" in the Federal Republic, greater concern for the environment and more solidarity between the generations.

SOLDIER DETAINED OVER NEO-NAZI ARMS CACHES

LD031706 Hamburg DPA in German 1512 GMT 3 Nov 81

[Summary] Karlsruhe/Lueneburg, 3 Nov (DPA) -- A 34-year-old member of the Bundeswehr has been detained in connection with the large caches of weapons and explosives on Lueneburg Heath, on suspicion of being a member of a criminal organization. This was confirmed by a spokesman of the Federal Prosecutor's Office. The soldier is to be brought before an investigating judge in Lueneburg this evening for the issuing of an arrest warrant. The authorities in Karlsruhe are not prepared to give further details. This morning the Federal Prosecutor General, Kurt Rebmann, took over investigations in connection with the discovery of the largest arms caches of right-wing extremists in the Federal Republic.

REAGANOMICS CREATES WEALTH, POVERTY EXTREMES

DW021343 Hamburg DER SPIEGEL in German 26 Oct 81 pp 158 - 169

[Article: "Reagan's America -- A Land for the Rich"]

[Text] The poor must economize further, but the rich are displaying their wealth more freely than ever before -- in the White House meals will be served in the future on tableware which costs almost $1,000 per setting. America, Ronald Reagan thinks, must at last return to the true God-given values of the simple life.

Alice Fisher, 46, divorced, three children, welfare recipient, considered her situation. Times were too hard for her to squander money, she said contritely in the Washington POST.

But she was subjected to temptations. Friends had asked her -- her children were spending the night with their grandparents -- and she had finally gone with the others to the beer parlor of the small town where she lives.

Afterwards she could not sleep because of the $4 she had spent for three beers.

Four dollars is a lot in Alice Fisher's budget -- and since 1 October it has been even more than ever before.

It was on this day that the new fiscal year began in America during which Alice Fisher will receive more than 20 percent less welfare -- some $198 instead of $254 per month. The amount of food stamps she receives was also reduced from $99 to $90.

Prior to 1 October Alice had already found it hard enough to feed her three teenage children. Now more often than before, she tells the Washington POST, she will have to "do without lunch for myself" and give the children "noodles with margarine as main course" for supper.

Alice Fisher is not an isolated case. For instance, Fred Baron from Miami, who is blind, has become a "prisoner in his own home" as a result of the cuts. The bus for disabled persons which used to pick him up and take him to work stopped running because of the cut of federal funds as of 1 October.

John Holborn, who used to work for the San Francisco Sanitation Department, will now have to "put cardboard in my daughter's shoes when the soles are worn out just as my mother did with my shoes."

Holborn lost his job because he was one of the recipients of "CETA," a state job procurement and training program that fell victim to the cuts. Savings: $3.8 billion.

U.S. citizens Alice Fisher, Fred Baron and John Holborn are only three of millions of Americans who are facing a winter of deprivation because the $35 billion Ronald Reagan has cut from the budget translates for them into the simple but practical question of whether they will continue being able to afford meat once every week or the daily fare of $1.20 to go to work.

Ronald Reagan wants to settle his budget in the following way:

Publicly assisted housing construction: cut by $4.4 billion or 40 percent,

Social welfare: some $1.6 billion saved on the basis of stricter criteria,

School meals for needy children: reduced by more than one-third from $4.4 billion to $2.9 billion,

Food stamps for which more than 22 million needy Americans are eligible: reduced from $12.8 billion to $10.2 billion, 1 million Americans are affected.

The sum total of reductions in state grants amounts to $20 billion, roughly 8 percent of the previous social expenditures. But this in only the beginning of the blood letting. Since the deficit in next year's budget will be much larger than was assumed in the spring, President Reagan has already announced further Draconian cuts.

No matter that American pupils will have empty stomachs, that single mothers with children who do not go to school yet cannot afford a job or a kindergarten, or that municipal authorities are considering whether to economize on garbage removal or fire protection -- the money from the state coffers will be flowing more thinly in the future.

But at the place where all of these drastic measures were thought up and decided -- in the White House in Washington -- there is little evidence of economies. At the U.S. President's residence a sort of "millionaires' parade" seems to be going on, as Ronald Reagan was told at a press conference early in October.

The reason for such a judgment was the acquisition of 220 new hand-painted place settings of tableware consisting of 4,732 individual pieces with gold trim and the Presidential seal. Cost per setting: some $950 or a total of $209,508.

Nearly four times as expensive was the renovation of the seat of government. Following Nancy Reagan's tastes, interior decorator Ted Graber furnished the 14-room private residence (7 bathrooms) with new carpets (yellow in the living room, peach in the bedroom, red in the President's office) as well as matching curtains and wallpaper.

The total cost of about $1 million was paid by the Reagan's wealthy friends. They enabled the President to generously forego the $50,000 offered by Congress for redecorating the White House. This amount would have been just enough for one room, according to the calculations of interior decorator Graber, who was personally selected by Nancy Reagan. America's taxpayers nevertheless paid as well because America's rich generally write off such gifts against their taxes.

Many of Reagan's predecessors knew how to surround themselves with wealth. John F. Kennedy, for example, owned expensive beach houses, yachts and planes. Lyndon B. Johnson increased as much as he could his possessions of cattle, land and limousines, and Richard Nixon's little White Houses in San Clemente (California) and Key Biscayne (Florida) cost the taxpayers millions of dollars for improvements and maintenance costs.

But hardly any other presidential couple has ever managed in a 9-month period in office to demonstrate so much private and state-owned wealth as Nancy and Ronald Reagan plus the entourage that moved from America's West to Washington together with the two former film stars. Wealthy America greeted the Reagan's lifestyle almost with a sigh of relief. With Reagan a "new social era" began, says Amitai Etzioni, a sociologist at George Wasington University: "We observe a change from voluntarily accepted simplicity to an expensive life style." The conservative U.S. NEWS AND WORLD REPORT stated: "Suddenly it is all right again to be rich and show it."

It is also okay to be poor and thus everyone knows where he belongs.

While Ronald Reagan is considered abroad as the unrestrained advocate of rearmament who wants to spend billions of dollars on the greatest military program in American history, the Americans view him mainly as a strict disciplinarian who is about to lead his people back to the simple values of the 19th century — to a time when free activities of entrepreneurs could develop without cumbersome state impositions and with weak concern for the general public; when demonstrating wealth was considered a social act because it urged the lower classes to imitate it, and when the poor did not imagine they had a right to support but stood modestly with cap in hand to take alms from the charitable-minded.

In doing this, Ronald Reagan has undertaken the most far-reaching domestic political aboutface in the United States since Franklin D. Roosevelt.

It has become a question lately whether he will succeed to the degree he planned: Congress will not accept the second cuts as simply as it did the first, a Washington demonstration with more than 250,000 people participating in September, against the President's nonsocial social policy showed that public resistance was becoming active.

Yet two out of three Americans questioned last month in a CBS and New York TIMES opinion poll approved of Reagan's savings program; every second person even demanded more cuts than did the President. The people still believe the President of the rich when he states on television that his austerity measures are only aimed at eliminating the swindlers and spongers from the system, while the "security net for the really needy" will remain.

It is certainly true that swindling welfare organizations in the United States is easier than in smaller countries. The mere fact that there is no compulsory local registration in the United States tempts some people to help themselves from various welfare posts in several states.

The sphere where the state must help poor citizens is much smaller in the United States than in all other Western democracies. A 10 percent cut of social expenditures hits millions of U.S. citizens much harder than it would as a rule in one of the Scandanavian welfare states. Many Americans will really face the grave alternative this winter of whether they want to heat or eat.

Social expenditures have increased considerably in the United States too. Yet they amounted to just 10.6 percent of the gross national product in 1979 -- about one-third of what the Federal Republic spends, namely about 30 percent.

The United States looks correspondingly underdeveloped in those fields used to measure the social quality of life.

The most powerful industrial nation of the world with its highly developed medical research work holds merely 13th place in the world in the fight against infant mortality -- that is, the same level as the midget state Malta.

Medical care is in even worse shape. Measured by the number of physicians per 100,000 inhabitants, the United States holds merely 20th position in the world, with regard to teachers it holds at least 11th place. As before, however, the United States leads in the field of personal consumption with regard to the number of cars, freezers, television sets or telephones owned by the individual.

In the "disproportion between private wealth and public poverty" (John Kenneth Galbraith), between the economic strength of the nation and insufficient social security of its citizens lie the most outstanding differences between America and the social orders of its European mother countries.

Its existence is explained by the breach with which the Americans abandoned the British crown in the late 18th century.

From the very beginning Americans have considered themselves to be a community of equals, particularly of equally strong people who viewed the state as something like a night watchman; state measures for establishing social justice were always viewed with great mistrust.

Two basic issues of American history which were effective up to the 20th century intensified the rejection of state care: the experience of the frontiersmen with their strong individualism and closely knitted communities where they helped each other on a voluntary basis without any superior authority.

The rather continuous economic success of the nation throughout the first 150 years of its history entailed the incorporation of one wave of immigrants after another, particularly in the middle class. No class-conscious lower class came about -- in contrast to Europe -- which could wrest social benefits from the state.

It was only the great depression of the thirties and thus the spectacular collapse of the American belief in the constant rise of any American willingness to work which created new relations between the citizens and the state: the "New Deal" established by Franklin D. Roosevelt.

In economically ruined America the Federal Government largely took upon itself measures of protection and supervision for which a closely knit network of new authorities was set up in Washington.

The Social Security Act of 1935 laid the cornerstone for a public welfare system which in its most important elements has been preserved to this day. This was unemployment and pension insurance financed by a 1 percent tax on wages and salaries, payable in equal shares by the employer and the employee (it has since increased to more than 13 percent).

For the care of orphans, invalids, the blind or war victims, the law prescribed guaranteed federal grants to state institutions. In this way at least the beginning of a system was created which was intended to help the individual through catastrophies in his personal life. The most conspicuous shortcoming -- the lack of a state health insurance plan -- has not been eliminated to this day.

The concept of the "Great Society" carried out by Lyndon B. Johnson in the sixties caused yet another, qualitiative leap to occur in U.S. social doctrine.

What now prevailed in the United States was the view that the state must not only protect its citizens against the worst consequences of individual misfortune but that it was also its task to correct widespread grievances in society. The new element was the realization, still considered radical by most Americans, that poverty, for example, need not necessarily be attributed to failure, laziness or stupidity but may well have social causes.

A whole generation of idealistically-minded young Americans set out to conquer these "new frontiers," originally discovered by Kennedy and began the war on poverty and racism with the same missionary zeal with which their forefathers once waged the battles against the Indians.

Comprehensive lawmaking provided the arms: The Civil Rights Act directed against racial discrimination or the Economic Opportunity Act that emerged from the "war against poverty," both dating back to 1964. A confusing multitude of new programs was designed to do away with urgent social distress on the local level: "Head Start," for example, for underprivileged children of preschool age, "Vista," the domestic counterpart of the Peace Corps, development corporations for ghetto reconstruction -- all of them linked, in turn, with new and amply staffed planning staffs and official authorities in the federal capital.

Washington, people thought at the time, could tackle social grievances in the communities with less prejudice and more vigor than could corrupt local politicians who had obviously surrendered in the face of these grievances.

Environmental protection or health insurance for working people now was considered a task of the Federal Government and stipulated by law as such. The authorities created for that purpose inundated the U.S. economy with floods of regulations and rules.

Actually the United States had thus just begun to catch up on its social deficit and to combat the rudest excesses of its laissez-faire capitalism which had been rather unbridled until then. Granted, the billion dollar programs did not eliminate the distress as they should have, yet they did make life easier for many Americans.

The number of Americans living in poverty numbered 35 million in 1959, and they still total nearly 30 million today. Blacks and whites sit side by side in school, buses and at restaurant counters, yet the economic gap between the races has remained nearly unchanged in the past 20 years.

But without the programs of the Great Society it would have been even worse.

This was by no means realized by all Americans, especially not if they belonged to the white middle class. As far as they were concerned, socialism had broken out in Washington where government functionaries meddled in private affairs.

They saw their children forcibly transported from their nice green suburbs to the radically mixed ghetto school of the downtown slums.

On the job, less experienced colleagues were preferentially promoted just because they belonged to a previously under privileged, but now legally privileged, minority. Independent businessmen had to waste valuable working hours completing forms for the environmental bureaucrats in Washington.

The resentments of the middle stratum thus provoked by state pressure helped the conservative revolution of Republican Ronald Reagan win victory -- a revolution which, consequently, is a counterrevolution because it rolls back the social achievements of the United States since Franklin D. Roosevelt's New Deal and dismantles Johnson's Great Society.

The closure by the Reagan administration of the Washington authority set up in the sixties to counteract poverty in the United States was highly symbolic.

The personnel of the Environmental Protection Agency will be cut by 40 percent in the next 2 years.

The U.S. economy in the future need no longer be afraid of unpleasant impositions by the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission in Washington. The administration has hinted that it will no longer seriously consider any programs for the establishment of equal opportunities for minorities and women.

The conservatives applaud such a dismantling of "big government." For them their counterrevolution is taking place on behalf and to the advantage of original American values: The fathers of the nation had fought for the independence of the American colonies against the all powerful English state, columnists Evans and Nowak announced. In the "Reagan Revolution" -- as the title of their new book reads -- it is the "liberation of the Americans from the government in Washington" that matters.

The depressing social ease displayed by the conservatives in this connection is connected with their rediscovered belief in the God-willed mission of the rich in American society.

When Ronald Reagan has four pairs of cowboy boots fitted for 1,000 dollars each (the price not including extras such as a 14-karat gold presidential seal to be worked in), this allegedly does not have anything in common with squandering, it just vitalizes the economy.

In this connection only whining liberals will remember that it was the very same week when the President bought his thousand-dollar boots that the Health and Human Services Department announced the new regulations for welfare recipients: their total possessions not including kitchen utensils and television sets must not exceed a value of 1,000 dollars or they forfeit their claim to support.

In the newspapers the different American worlds are clashing daily with such discord as has not existed for a long time.

The Texan daily THE DALLAS NEWS wrote that caviar and mink coats are "in," you learn in the society pages of the newspapers, as are handbags of alligator leather and plastic surgery for men, "who like to talk about it in great detail."

Hanne Merriman of Washington's exclusive department store Garfinkel's has seen customers "who think nothing of spending 1,500 dollars for a jacket, a shirt or a blouse."

Particularly striking is the love for finery in the status symbols on the street. While rich automobile owners under down-to-earth and energy conscious Jimmy Carter in many cases left their big cars in the garage and indicated their harmony with the energy austerity wave by means of Datsuns and Toyotas, the "gas guzzlers" in the places where rich Americans congregate are part of daily life again.

And anybody who is unable to afford a status vehicle of his own has the option of driving up in a rented limousine driven by a chauffeur: The magazine NEW YORK noted that "an hour in a new, silver colored cadillac with tinted windows and blue upholstery" does not cost more "than a dozen red roses" -- about 35 dollars an hour.

This "showing off" (NEW YORK) has a variant away from Washington, Houston or Seattle in the vast country or America. So-called air parks are currently booming -- communities where houses are built on both sides of runways.

The inhabitants of the air parks often are hobbyists who fly oldtimers but there are also other wealthy people who fly to their workplaces in their own small aircraft. So far there are 40 communities with their own runways in the United States.

Under existing plans Spruce Creek near Daytona Beach (Florida) will be enlarged to become the biggest air park. On a former World War II naval airport, a total of 2,000 apartments and single-family homes will be built with hangars and runway connections.

What coincides with the attempt of the rich American "to establish wealth as the main component of high social status" (U.S. NEWS AND WORLD REPORT) is the trend to revive the values and feelings of life that had once been linked with it.

The latest example of such excursions into the past is offered by the new travel catalogue of American Express (AMEX): The travel office plans to reopen in the spring of 1982 the "golden era of transcontinental railroad traffic."

In each of four luxury railroad coaches from 1926 and 1949 rented by railroad enthusiasts, 40 AMEX patrons can cross the United States from New York to Los Angeles on a tour of 9 days. The cost of the "sentimental journey in a private railroad coach": 2,295 dollars per person.

On the basis of the new instructions of the Department of Agriculture on school meals, the children of the needy were not supposed to get a whole glass of milk a day but a few gulps less, their meat portions were supposed to be reduced to one quarter of a hamburger and ketchup was supposed to be considered vegetables. This diet-kind of food met with so much biting criticism that its introduction was postponed for the time being.

The new nonchalance with which the powerful of America demonstrate their swell life is being ideologically supported by the doctrines of George Gilder, the social apostle of the conservatives.

In his book "Wealth and Poverty," issued early this year -- the bible of the administration kept on the nightstand in the President's bedroom -- Gilder preaches to the Americans that they should learn to appreciate their millionaires again because: "the soundness of a country's economy depends on how the country views its wealthy people."

It is important according to Gilder not to chase them out of the country with sharp and progressive taxation and not to keep them from making investments, and Reagan promptly formed his tax reform in such a way that the rich were getting massive advantages.

The state may not give anything to the poor, for otherwise it would just tempt them to be lazy, taking the impetus and the chance from them to rise to the class of the rich through hard work.

Gilder explains his tale of ample chances for entrepeneurial talents to get ahead with touching examples such as the story of a Lebanese immigrant who was selling vegetables from a cart 10 years ago, and who is now ruling over a whole shopping center in Massachusetts thanks to the help of his numerous offspring.

But even George Gilder would not claim that this would also be a recipe for the success of such a public welfare recipient as Alice Fisher, single with three children.

Social budget cuts blurred the differences between poor American such as Alice Fisher, who live fully from welfare support, and working people making so little that they received state support so far.

In order words: Alice Fisher would hardly take a job, if she found one, for extremely low pay. Other jobs do not exist for untrained women of her age.

Before she had at least a claim for food coupons or apartment rent support. That 's now out in many cases: Why should she work then?

One of her friends, Maggie Merman, considers giving up her job in a shoe factory to take more care of her children: Once the support was cut, she would not make much more than what Alice Fisher gets in the form of welfare support.

It is therefore quite predictable that the social support cuts would not fill the social expenditure deficit in the federal budget but rather increase it -- because the incentive to work for lower income brackets does not increase at all as the ideologists of the America of the rich believe.

Ronald Reagan is probably also wrong on a second point with regard to his American fellow man: He planned the reductions or cuts of federal subsidies to fan the initiative of federal states or communities. He assumed that they would gladly step in where the big brother in Washington had discontinued his payments.

But in order to do that local taxes would have to be increased, and the obstinate taxpayers refuse to do it.

Fred Baron, the blind man from Miami, begged his fellow citizens at a community meeting in moving words to finance a bus for the handicapped with community means.

The fellow citizens booed him out angrily.

POLL RESULTS ON DOMESTIC POLITICS REPORTED

DW031305 [Editorial Report] Mainz ZDF Television Network in German at 2255 GMT on 2 November 1981, in moderator Horst Schaettle's "Politbarometer" program carries the results of an opinion poll on the peace movement, the popularity of leading politicians and FRG-USSR relations. The statistics in percentages are based on answers of 1,001 persons questioned between 13 and 16 October 1981. Asked whether the peace movement is "necessary, superfluous, harmful, or indifferent," the poll shows the following results in percentages in general and split up according to political parties:

	All People Questioned	SPD	CDU/CSU	FDP	Environmentalists
Necessary	45	51	35	38	94
Superfluous	25	21	31	29	1
Harmful	12	9	17	14	3
Indifferent	18	19	17	19	2

The opinion of the age group 18 to 24 on the peace movement compared with the opinion of all the other participants in the poll in percentages:

	All Others	Age Group 18-24
Necessary	45	66
Superfluous	25	10
Harmful	12	10
Indifferent	18	14

Ratings of Top-Ranking FRG Politicians:

Chancellor Helmut Schmidt	plus 2.4 points
Foreign Minister and FDP chairman Genscher	plus 1.9 points
CDU/CSU opposition leader Kohl	plus 1.1 points

Asked about relations between the FRG and the USSR on the background of Brezhnev's forthcoming visit to Bonn 46 percent of the people questioned think relations are rather good, while 54 percent believe relations are poor.

SOVIET UNESCO TRANSLATOR ASKS ASYLUM IN PARIS

NC031909 Paris AFP in English 1904 GMT 3 Nov 81

[Text] Paris, 3 Nov (AFP) -- A Soviet translator with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organisation UNESCO here, career diplomat Nikolay Polyanskiy, 42, has been granted political asylum in France, the diplomat said here today. The French Foreign Ministry confirmed that Mr Polyanskiy had sought asylum in France on October 16.

The diplomat told AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE that he took the decision because of differences of opinion with the Soviet regime and the "impossibility to express them." Mr Polyanskiy, married with three daughters, one aged 5 and twins aged 12, held the UNESCO post from July 15 to October 15, the day before he made the asylum appeal. His family joined him in Paris, travelling via Yugoslavia, on October 15. The French Interior and Foreign Ministries, while confirming that the diplomat had sought refuge in France, stated that a decision on his request for asylum could only be made through the office for protection of refugees and stateless persons.

Previously, Mr Polyanskiy, who is a native of Omsk, was third secretary at the Soviet Embassy in Berne, from 1976 to 1978, then worked at the Soviet Defence Ministry's press service for a year, followed by two years at the Moscow Diplomacy Academy. His UNESCO contract was for three months only, and it was at its expiry that he sought asylum.

Mr Polyanskiy is the third Soviet citizen to seek asylum in France in five months. Last June, an official at the UNESCO Secretariat, Aleksey Pleshakov, 42, sought refuge here. In August, the chief of the Soviet scientific co-operation delegation on the French Kerguelen islands in the Indian Ocean, Vladimir Sankovich, [words indistinct] appeal just before a Soviet vessel was to pick him up.

In his statement to AFP, Mr Polyanskiy, a member of the Soviet Communist Party since 1970, said he could no longer bear "living a lie."

Evoking the era of Stalinist rule, he said, "one tries to forget what was done, to make believe that one was working in the right direction, but it is false."

Mr Polyanskiy said that he had hoped the Czechoslovak experience of "socialism with a human face" would have succeeded, and he expressed the same view for events in Poland today.

As to Afghanistan, he said that no-one in the Soviet Union believed the version of "fraternal aid" sent at the demand of the Kabul authorities. "Everyone knows that it is a lie, but no-one can say anything and it is that which revolts me the most. One is now forced to talk another language," he said.

LE MONDE ON DANGERS OF EUROPE'S SINAI ROLE

PM031649 Paris LE MONDE in French 1-2 Nov 81 p 1

[Editorial: "A Commitment by the Ten in Sinai"]

[Text] Paris, London, Rome and The Hague, which have decided to take part in the Sinai peace-keeping force, and the other EEC capitals which have given them their blessing, are expecting strong criticism from the Arab countries and their friends. The Italian decision was officially announced on Friday (the French, British and Netherlands decisions are to follow on Monday); the PCI described it as "very serious" and the TASS agency warned Western Europe that it was "complicating its relations with the Near East." During talks held while attending the Cancun summit in particular, Arab leaders bitterly criticized the Europeans for reviving the "moribund" Camp David process.

The U.S.-backed Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty, which resulted from the Camp David agreements, makes provision for UN "forces" and "observers" to supervise the military clauses and peace in Sinai after withdrawal from that territory next April. When, as was to be expected, the UN Security Council did not decide to shoulder that responsibility, Egypt and Israel appealed to the Americans and "volunteer" states.

Initially, only the Americans and Fiji accepted. It was President as-Sadat's assassination which prompted Paris and the other Europeans to risk the adventure which will probably prompt others to participate. In short, the Europeans want to help make the first part of the Camp David agreements irreversible; the withdrawal from Sinai and the Egyptian-Israeli peace. This does not mean that they approve of the second part -- the whole procedure relating to the West Bank -- which does not allow the Palestinian people, they think, to freely determine their future.

To go beyond Camp David, the Ten think that Prince Fahd's Saudi plan which, in exchange for withdrawal from the territories occupied by Israel, recognizes "the right of all states in the region to live in peace," offers "a good basis" for discussion. Unfortunately, this is far from being the view of all the Arab countries. Moreover, the PLO's attitude, which will be decisive, is still ambiguous.

It is a little too early to know whether the PLO is playing hard to get for tactical reasons. It has always tried, and this is not surprising, to exploit each diplomatic episode to secure better recognition on the international plane. It obtained some satisfaction in the Ten's statement in Venice last year. It is now trying to obtain more.

Moreover, Mr Signorile, a (Socialist) Italian minister of state, suggested on Friday that Italy should give the PLO full recognition "to restore the balance," but it is doubtful that his suggestion will be adopted.

In any case, a very difficult game has begun in the Near East. Forthcoming events include the visit to Riyadh on 3 November by Lord Carrington, [British] foreign secretary and chairman of the Ten's Council of Europe; the Arab summit in Fez on a still uncertain date; President Mitterrand's visit to Algiers on 30 November; and [French] External Relations Minister Cheysson's visit to Israel in early December.

MITTERRAND OPENS SUMMIT WITH AFRICAN LEADERS

NC031941 Paris AFP in English 1853 GMT 3 Nov 81

[Text] Paris, 3 Nov (AFP) -- The first day of the 31-nation Franco-African summit was dominated by news that Libyan Leader Mu'ammar al-Qadhdahafi had decided to pull his troops out of Chad. But the development caused no visible surprise to Chadian President Goukouni Oueddei -- "they are leaving at our request", he said during the two-day summit -- but to most delegates it was unexpected, and they preferred not to be rushed into hasty comments.

Senegalese leader Abdou Diouf, however, called the reports "excellent news." Earlier, Mr Diouf had called for the diversion of five percent of national defence budgets -- amounting to some 25,000 million dollars -- to development programmes.

Opening the conference, French President Francois Mitterrand put African problems in the context of East-West and North-South relations. He stressed national independence and the need to balance the world economy between rich and poor nations. Mr Mitterrand said that peace was essential for development, and warned that in any area of tension in Africa the great powers were tempted to intervene if the problem was not settled quickly by the countries directly concerned.

The French president expressed the hope that the conference, which has no fixed agenda, could achieve concrete results in order to bring other countries into the search for a new international economic order.

A number of speakers called for measures to stabilise the prices of basic materials, and the foreign ministers were expected to draw up proposals in this resepct. Delegates were to have dinner tonight with President Mitterrand at the Chateau of Versailles near Paris.

Eyadema Comments On Chad

AB301654 Paris AFP in French 1557 GMT 30 Oct 81

[Text] Paris, 30 October (AFP) -- The Franco-African conference taking place in Paris on 3 and 4 November and President Goukouni Oueddei's participation offer a favorable opportunity for an exchange of views by the Africans on Chad, Togolese President Gen Gnassingbe Eyadema affirmed in Paris on Friday.

Commenting on president Goukouni Oueddei's demand for the withdrawal of the Libyan forces from Chad before some journalists, President Eyadema said it is the responsibility of the president of the transitional National Union Government of Chad to find the ways and means of restoring peace to the country . Only the Chadians, he said, can decide on the choice of their leaders, their orientations and their alliances in order to safeguard the national unity and relaunch the economy which has been completely destroyed by war.

Continuing, the Togolese head of state said: It is the responsibility of the 12-member permanent committee and the structures set up by the OAU to propose new solutions if necessary in conformity with the Lagos accords of 22 August 1979. The permanent committee is composed of Benin, Cameroon, the Central African Republic, Congo, Guinea, Libya, Niger, Nigeria, Senegal, Sudan and Togo as well as the current chairman of the OAU.

Concerning the French aid offer to the inter-African force for Chad, President Eyadema said it is President Goukouni Oueddei's responsibility to accept or refuse the aid offers and the suggestions of friendly or brotherly states pending the time the Chadian people can make their decision known. As we have always done whenever peace and security are threatened in our regions, we the heads of state will exchange views in order to find a solution to this painful problem, added the Togolese head of state. The Franco-African summit conference which will open on 3 November and President Goukouni Oueddei's arrival in Paris offer a favorable opportunity for this exchange of views, he said.

Mobutu Meets Mitterrand

AB301703 Paris AFP in French 1630 GMT 30 Oct 81

[Text] Paris, 30 Oct (AFP) -- French President Francois Mitterrand and Zairian head of state Mobutu held a 1-hour talk Friday afternoon at the Elysee in Paris.

As President Mitterrand accompanied his guest onto the steps of the palace, he declared: Zaire and France have a lot of things to confer on and our relations are long-standing ones.

Our discussions made it possible for us to examine economic cooperation between France and Africa, the president added.

For his part, President Mobutu refused to make any statement.

ARMS BEING SENT TO CHAD, MORE SUPPORT FOR OAU FORCE

PM041103 Paris LE MONDE in French 27 Oct 81 p 1

[Text] On 26 October an unofficial source in Paris confirmed that France began to supply "some logistical support" last week to the Chad National Unity Transition Government [GUNT] President Goukouni Oueddei. For the time being this support apparently consists in sending light weapons.

In addition, Kenyan head of state and current OAU Chairman Arap Moi responded favorably on 24 October to Mr Mitterrand's call for an inter-African peace-keeping force to be sent "urgently" to Chad. He has asked the pan-African organization's Secretary General Kodjo to go on a mission to Ndjamena. Following Senegal, Nigeria, represented by President Shagari, agreed on Sunday to take part in the inter-African force. Finally Colonel al-Qadhdhafi received Mr Malo, French ambassador in Tripoli, on Monday morning. The "urgency" invoked by the head of state in his message to Mr Arap Moi from Cancun can apparently be explained by the growing pressures exerted by Tripoli on President Goukouni Oueddei for a "union" between their two countries. The latter's resistance to Tripoli's insistence has apparently confirmed Mr Mitterrand, who received him at the Elysee in September, in the opinion that the young GUNT President is a "nationalist" who needs immediate support to maintain his country's very relative independence.

In Cancun the French president therefore tried to persuade his African partners present for the need for a rapid intervention by an inter-African peace-keeping force in Chad. He seems to have succeeded. On the one hand Nigeria is now promising to send troops -- "as soon as the OAU asks us to," President Shagari said during a stopover in Barbados on his way home -- and on the other Algeria seems to approve of Paris' support for an inter-African force within the OAU framework. On Sunday EL MOUDJAHID said that the intervention of this force would be "a positive factor in itself," although inadquate to "restore peace."

The French initiative has received U.S. approval. "We are prepared to offer our help," U.S. Secretary of State Haig said in Cancun on Saturday. "Anything which might support the OAU action," he added, "is in line with our wishes, especially as regards the implementation of the Nairobi resolution."

In addition to starting to give President Goukouni Oueddei military aid, the French Government has also given the air force instructions to organize the transport of Senegalese and Nigerian troops to Ndjamena as soon as possible. The GUNT president's isolation in face of the Libyans is apparently particularly glaring since Acyl Ahmat, his foreign minister, who is generally regarded as pro-Libyan, is at present prolonging a foreign visit to avoid being mixed up the the quarrel between Ndjamena and Tripoli. In Paris it is still not known whether Goukouni Oueddei will be capable of resisting Tripoli's pressures. But France's concern seems to be to offer him every chance of succeeding. Moreover during the weekend the Libyans apparently tried to approach the French authorities to persuade them that Goukouni Oueddei is not being pressured by them. Paris apparently rejected those overtures, considering a tough attitude appropriate.

As regards the organization of the inter-African force, Mr Kodjo (OAU secretary-general) has advocated "bilateral agreements" (between the countries which will send military contingents and Ndjamena) and expressed the view that it could be in Chad "before the end of the year." For his part, before leaving Cancun Mr Cheysson "called on the OAU to apply to the United Nations to finance this force, which would constitute a seal of approval also." In the French view the dispatch of this inter-African force to Chad could also have the advantage of helping to improve relations between Tripoli and Khartoum, which have been damaged notably by the fighting between Libyan forces and Hissein Habre's Northern armed forces, which are waging guerrilla warfare in eastern Chad which borders on Sudan. Indeed, Paris fears that Colonel al-Qadhdhafi may continue to use the pretext of Sudan's aid to Hissein Habre to keep his troops in Chad.

MAUROY CALLS FOR UNITY, WARNS AGAINST NEUTRALISM

PM031257 Paris LE MONDE in French 27 Oct 81 pp 8-9

[Excerpts] Valence -- After Mr Mitterrand's message to the [Socialist Party] congress had been read, the premier [Pierre Mauroy] spoke: "Do not forget," he told the membership, "that over and above the confrontations of political life and parliamentary incidents, we are now responsible for France to all the French people... I will make no gesture and take no initiative which might undermine our national community. Let us never forget that we are the government of quiet strength."

After noting that "the growth in Western Europe of a kind of neutralism hidden behind pacifist statements should put us on our guard," the premier mentioned that at times inconsistent initiatives and statements were made by some ministers. "Ministers must be allowed to be politicians and express their ideas and feelings. Moreover the French people draw clear distinctions between debate, which helps to clarify the future, and official decisions. The premier's role is to allow this thinking and to make decisions. The restriction imposed by government solidarity means that a decision must never be announced before it has been ratified."

Mr Mauroy then recalled the broad outlines of his economic and social policy as he has already described them several times. "We are fighting on the backs of 2 million umemployed," he said in particular. Then he turned to the debate on nationalization.

"All the maneuvers (of the right -- LE MONDE editor's note) will fail," he stated. "The leftwing deputies will pass the nationalization decisions which the people want. What is happening in the National Assembly illustrates the value of the nationalization policy. The opposition is reacting so fiercely because we are touching what it regards as the supreme value: money. Some bankers are showing the mentality of the Koblenz emigres and have no hesitation in acting against their country. I am referring to one particular banker, not the others. I am not classifying them all.... Those who think that France is unworthy of their money are unworthy of France.... deposits abroad, yes; exodus of capital, No!"

Mr Mauroy added: "The opponents of change do not doubt the consistency of the government's policy. They have realized that it is consistent, and they have made their choice. They know that our consistency means honoring our pledges. They reject that consistency because it means the end of their power and privileges.... In the fight for change we are sure of being able to rely on the vast majority of those civil servants who know they are first and foremost the nation's servants. In the fight against unemployment it is not the government which will create all the vital jobs. We expect French enterprises to invest and take on staff. We need entrepranurs. And the vast majority of them know that they need the government's recovery policy. Moreover your mobilization is the only thing which can effectively counter the revanchist forces."

Mrs Neiertz: Neither Pershings nor SS-20S

On Saturday afternoon Mrs Vernoique Neiertz presented the foreign delegations one by one. The most loudly applauded were the representatives of the Afghan resistance, the PLO and the Israeli Labor Party. Similarly the congress delegates gave a particularly warm welcome to the Nicaraguan Sandinist front and Salvadoran national revolutionary movement delegations. On the other hand the representatives of the Vietnam Communist Party and especially CPSU representatives Boris Ponomarev and Vadim Zagladin were greeted with whistles, as was Polish United Workers Party delegate (Nojna). "I have kept the best until last," Mrs Neiertz said, before inviting applause for the PASOK delegation. The participants then stood and sang the International twice. Mrs Neiertz, who is chief of international relations in the National Secretariat, then said: "Neither Pershings nor SS-20's! We will not take part in the march organized by the peace movement because it is necessary to discuss such initiatives, and we have not been asked to do so. It is not enough to say you are pacifist! Peace today requires the rejection of the present imbalance in Europe. To restore the balance we must stop the deployment of the SS-20 missiles. The nondeployment of the American missiles must be tied to the withdrawal of the Soviet missiles.

[PS first secretary] Mr Jospin recalled the PS stance on Peace, which is that a balance must be established in Europe "at a low level." The announcement of the deployment of the Pershing missiles must be clearly tied to the withdrawal of the SS-20 missiles," he added. "It is not enough to proclaim pacifist sentiments, especially if those pacifist sentiments tend to be a little unilateral. What interests us is peace and not pacifism per se." Mr Jospin proposed that the PS should launch a national petition on the subjects of peace and simultaneous disarmament. He also suggested promoting a European initiative which would be of the same type, and updating Francois Mitterrand's proposals for a conference on the reduction of forces and tension in Europe.

L'UNITA COVERS BERLINGUER LATIN AMERICAN VISIT

Mexico City Meetings

PM301155 Rome L'UNITA in Italian 16 Oct 81 p 1

[Ugo Baduel dispatch: "Berlinguer Talks With Lopez Portillo"]

[Text] Mexico City -- Comrade Enrico Berlinguer met yesterday evening with Mexican President Lopez Portillo at the latter's residence at Los Pinos. This is the first of the PCI secretary general's three appointments in Mexico City: today he will hold a press conference with Mexican and foreign journalists present in the capital and tomorrow he will deliver a public speech in a major auditorium in the city at the closing ceremony of the Mexican Communist Party's [PCM] extraordinary congress. On Tuesday, with another stopover in Cuba, Berlinguer will be in Managua, Nicaragua. As we said, yesterday saw the start of the extraordinary PCM congress. It is the congress that will ratify the communist party's decision to unify with five of the other parties which constitute the left in Mexico. A preliminary meeting between Comrades Berlinguer, [PCI Foreign Section Chief Antonio] Rubbi and [PCI Foreign Section aide Renato] and Sandri and PCM leaders also took place yesterday.

Berlinguer was met at Mexico City airport Wednesday evening by comrades of the PCM which invited him; Secretary General Arnoldo Martinez Verdugo, Political Commission members Pablo Montez and Incarnacion Perez, Central Committee member Enrique Semo and Foreign Section Chief Cauthemoc Sandoval.

Despite the delay of about 2 hours in the aircraft's arrival, Berlinguer read out a statement to the journalists there. After greeting on the PCI's behalf the Mexican people, whose great democratic and revolutionary traditions are known and valued by the Italian communists, Berlinguer said that Mexico has a major role to play on the American Continent and throughout the world, especially with regard to the struggle against reactionary dictatorships, support for the cause of the peoples' freedom and independence and the issues of resolving the tragic inequalities between the industrialized and the developing or underdeveloped countries.

Mexico's awareness of this role is evinced partly by the initiative of convening the imminent Cancun conference.

A few more remarks about the departure from Cuba, also on Wednesday evening; Comrade Fidel Castro went to pick up Berlinguer at the Italian delegation's Cuban residence and accompanied him to the airport, where he embraced him at the foot of the steps.

In Cuba, too, Comrade Berlinguer released a statement in which he said, among other things, that he had had wide-ranging and in-depth conversations that were not purely diplomatic, but informal and sincere, with Comrade Fidel Castro and the Cuban comrades.

"I noted," he added, "their great interest in the Italian and European situation and in our party's policy. The conversations dealt mainly with the major issues of peace, development and the peoples' independence. We noted," Berlinguer said, "major convergences, especially on the issues of the struggle for a new international economic order. There are also points on which, as is known, our analyses and assessments do not agree with those of the Cuban party and government. We did not conceal these differences and diversities of assessment, which we frankly acknowledged, but this did not prevent us from conducting the broadest exchange of views in a climate of great understanding and friendship. Now my journey is taking me to Mexico," Berlinguer concluded, "where I will again present the PCI's important issue of relations between Europe, especially the European workers movement, and Latin America."

Address at PCM Congress

PM301501 Rome L'UNITA in Italian 20 Oct 81 p 21

[Report on PCI Secretary General Enrico Berlinguer's 18 October address to Mexican Communist party (PCM) Congress in Mexico City: "Leftwing Forces Struggle for Peace and Development"]

[Excerpts] We Italian communists have come to Mexico -- and the same applies to Cuba and Nicaragua -- to learn and to extend the channels and forms of an increasingly active friendship and solidarity between our people and the European democratic forces and the Central American and Latin American peoples as a whole, from Chile to Mexico, from the Caribbean to Argentina.

And we hope that the more openminded and farsighted U.S. forces too will devote themselves increasingly effectively to opposing imperialist policy and dictatorship and to supporting the Latin American people's liberation and progress. This matches the U.S. people's best traditions and interests.

I have discussed the special and original nature of the Latin American process, but it would be entirely wrong to regard it as a purely regional phenomenon or at least as one divorced from the problems that occupy the world scene and constitute its center. The Latin American situation, with its positive and negative aspects, constitutes a nerve center of the crucial issue of international life. I am referring to the issue of development; peace is the ultimate asset, because its opposite -- a nuclear holocaust -- would imply the end of the world itself, whereas development is the precondition for achieving a new international balance without which peace will be increasingly precarious and threatened.

The world situation is alarming. There are diverse and complex reasons for its exacerbation. The fact is that the arms race is now becoming increasingly frenetic and unrestrained and hotbeds of tension and conflicts are multiplying, especially in the Third World. The international economic crisis itself, which is affecting almost all countries in various ways, with grievous consequences for the workers' employment and living standards, and which has lethal repercussions for the underdeveloped countries, is greatly exacerbating the tensions in interstate relations.

In 1980, world military spending reached $450 billion; in the same year the Third World's total foreign debt rose to $450 billion; it is enough to compare the two figures to realize the extent of the world's precariousness and imbalance and ot realize that this situation cannot, must not, continue if we want to avert disaster.

The first duty now is for the initiative and mobilization of the peoples and the states, albeit proceeding from differing conditions and interests, to be aimed at imparting a new thrust to detente, ending the climate of mutual mistrust and containing the arms race.

A basic precondition of this is the resumption of serious negotiations between the USSR and the United States to limit nuclear missiles and to start the process of general, controlled and balanced disarmament -- a process in which all the world's states must be involved.

It is necessary now for the open conflicts in various parts of the world to be resolved through negotiation, within respect for every state's independence and every people's rights. And it is necessary to demand and to impose an end to the recourse to force, threats and pressures on the part of one state with respect to others.

The peoples of southern Africa -- especially Namibia and Angola -- must be supported in the struggle to attain and consolidate their independence, which is being trampled or threatened by the aggressiveness of the racist regime that oppresses South Africa.

In the Middle East, leaving aside the illusory Camp David agreements, peace must be based on the recognition of the Palestinian people's national and state rights, as well as on the security of all states, including the state of Israel.

In Central America, the Guatemalan and Salvadoran peoples, crucified by systems of unrestrained plundering and cruelty, must be able freely to chose their own future.

The Western conservative and reactionary forces and imperialism are reacting to the impetus emerging from the Third World and trying in every way to restore the old balance of forces and relations based on domination. But the counterrevolution cannot be exported lest international relations deteriorate still further. But the principle of full observance of the nations' independence and sovereignty must be observed on the other side, too. What I mean is, for instance, that when the Soviet troops entered Afghanistan, the peoples' liberation cause was not defended but a demonstration of power politics took place which, we believe, has helped to exacerbate international tensions, as well as violating a principle that in today's world can tolerate no exceptions.

The Third World countries and peoples are the prime protagonists in the battle for development. We believe, however, that the industrialized socialist countries too, which rightly do not consider themselves responsible for a backwardness which stems from colonialism and the machinery of imperialist domination, must not distance themselves from these problems but make an essential contribution of ideas and initiatives in the creation of a new and equitable international economic order.

Nevertheless, we believe that it is the industrialized capitalist countries which must bear the major responsibilities and duties, not only because of their colonialist past but also because the present organization of the world market remains based on unfair exchange.

Certainly there must be large-scale transfers of Western capital and technology to the Third World, especially to the economically least developed countries. But that is not all. To help relieve the vast depressed areas and to make this aim one of the elements in the development of their own economies, the Western countries must at last consider the both difficult and pressing issue of the conversion of production and the reorganization of consumption and lifestyles. Of course, the first dimension of the North-South dialogue is interstate. Mexico is now preparing to host in Cancun the summit that is meeting to examine the outlines, and before that the possibilities, of a resumption of the dialogue.

Italy is not among the countries invited to attend, but allow me to express from this platform, on behalf of the capitalist world's strongest communist party, the hope that after innumerable postponements and commitmerts solemnly made but systematically violated by the industrialized countries, the summit can at least facilitate a start to specific and rapid global negotiations, the natural forum for which is and must remain the United Nations.

We know that some governments are motivated by these intentions, but there is another, more powerful, government that wants to entrust the solution of the development problem to the free interplay of the market laws, in other words to the might of the multinational enterprises which dictate these laws or turn them to their own profit. The prospect that would derive from such a policy -- which President Reagan has again cruelly confirmed in the past few days -- is that the rich would become richer and the poor poorer, both in relations among the various nations and areas of the world and within the individual countries themselves. Moreover, whatever the outcome of the coming summit, the success of the battle against underdevelopment depends to a large extent on the ability of the Third World peoples and of the working class and democratic forces of the entire West to converge more and more in a battle in which strictly national motivations are always guided by an awareness of the real dimensions of today's world.

Visit to Nicaragua

PM301243 Rome L'UNITA in Italian 22 Oct 81 pp 1, 18

[Ugo Baduel dispatch: "Berlinguer Talks With Protagonists of Nicaragua's Sandinist Revolution"]

[Excerpts] Managua -- It is the youngest revolution, not only in Latin America but in the world; and it is also the most original and "different" of the experiences emerging in this latter part of the century. We are talking about Nicaragua's Sandinist revolution, the characteristics it has displayed, which have been reflected in the political system upheld by the Sandinist National Liberation Front, the contradictions of this country that has emerged -- very poor but full of potential -- from a tragic dictatorship that lasted over half a century, and the dangers and threats that have been assailing the current process for just over 2 years since 19 July 1979, the date of the revolution.

Thus, it is possible to understand the following remark that [PCI Secretary General Enrico] Berlinguer made at the airport Tuesday morning: "This is the most exciting part of the visit we are paying to Latin America." This visit expresses full solidarity with a revolution that in our country has been followed with particular sympathy by the communists, democratic and leftwing forces and young people.

Tomas Borge Martinez, one of the legendary Sandinist revolutionaries and a member of the nine-member leadership that heads the front, who was imprisoned and tortured by the Somozists, was there to meet Berlinguer and Comrades Rubbi and Sandri at the foot of the steps from the aircraft, in his khaki uniform and black beret, gray haired and stockily built. He kissed Berlinguer on both cheeks and said with a broad smile: "It is incredible; you are Sandino's double; you have the same build and the same face."

The first meeting was with Daniel Ortega, coordinator of the junta (which also includes Sergio Ramirez, at present abroad, and Cordova Rivas, the private entrepreneurs' representative) and with Henry Ruiz, minister of planning and one of the nine-man leadership that heads the front. Berlinguer explained the aims of the visit; we are seeking advice from you to strengthen specific friendship and solidarity with your revolution and with Nicaragua, he said. We are very interested in your experience in the political, social and economic field; the interest with which we have always watched your revolution is due to its originality and also, though we are so far away from you, to the affinities we feel with your experience. In reply, Ortega recalled his visit to Rome, where he met with the pope, Pertini and Berlinguer himself, and discussed the subversion to which the revolution is being subjected both internally and from abroad.

The foreign conspiracies are on an even larger scale; yesterday the newspapers reported an exchange of gunfire with a patrol of Hondurans well inside the country's northern border.

Quite a different topic was discussed at our 2-hour conversations in the afternoon at the Foreign Ministry. Here, Berlinguer encountered one of the most extraordinary features of revolutionary Nicaragua, namely the priest-ministers; Foreign Minister Miguel d'Escoto, with his long white hair under his worker-priest's beret; the young Social Welfare Minister Edgar Parrales; University Rector Armando Lopez; Father Uriel Molina, a priest in Managua, and Alvaro Arguello, a member of the State Council (an equivalent of our former National Council). These men represent a part of the church which, strengthened by Vatican Council II, have experienced the first real experiment of religious and Catholic regeneration amid a struggle and under the banner of the gospel. They are all Sandinists, some of them Marxists, and they have fought and have lived through and suffered an experience in which the facade of the church hierarchy suddenly became worthless in the face of the need to struggle with the people for justice.

Managua Departure Speech

PM301247 Rome L'UNITA in Italian 23 Oct 81 p 15

[Unattributed report: "Berlinguer's Visit to Latin America Ends. Statement Released Before Departure from Managua"]

[Text] Managua -- Before leaving for Italy [PCI Secretary General] Comrade Berlinguer released the following statement:

At the end of this last stage of my visit to Latin America, I would like to express my thanks to the Sandinist Front for the invitation to visit Nicaragua. It was a very brief visit, but one on which my varied and numerous meetings enabled me to gain a direct acquaintance with the domestic and foreign policy of the Sandinist National Liberation Front [FSLN] and the Nicaraguan Government and also with the conditions amid which the reconstruction process is taking place, following the victory of the revolution. These conditions are certainly terrible, on account of the decadent state in which the Somoza regime left the country and an international situation in which Central America is one of the points of greatest tension and of most direct interference by imperialism.

Under such conditions, it is more necessary than ever to step up action in support of and solidarity with the national reconstruction task undertaken by the Sandinist Front.

In this connection, I believe that the constribution of the EEC and the Italian Government must be still greater. I have confirmed to the junta and FSLN leaders the commitment of the Italian communists, together with all the other democratic forces, to further develop all possible useful initiatives of solidarity with Nicaragua.

We have had several friendly and cordial conversations with the protagonists of the revolution, during which topics connected with the past 24 hours' events in Managua were discussed, among others. Though, obviously, I lacked sufficient information to form a value judgment about the arrest of a number of citizens in Nicaragua, I immediately expressed -- as soon as I was informed of it and subsequently during a lengthy conversation with planning minister and FSLN Directorate member Henry Ruiz -- our party's position of principled opposition to the recourse to administrative measures if they are used against the expression of opinions, of whatever kind. We Italian communists believe that divergences and disagreements and even propaganda openly hostile to the revolutionary process which fall short of acts of sabotage and subversion can and must be dealt with and resolved by political means.

The original process of the Sandinist revolution and the past 2 years' experience of rebuilding the country under the FSLN's leadership have prompted great sympathy and a surge of solidarity and hopes in broad sectors of the world and in the minds of all democrats and progressives. It is important that this valuable asset of Nicaragua's revolutionary forces be maintained.

What I hope and what Italian communists and democrats hope is that the process of the Sandinist revolution will continue in accordance with its own characteristics. This is the fraternal hope that we address to the Sandinist comrades, thanking them again for the friendship and cordiality with which they welcomed us to their country.

DENMARK

SOVIET DIPLOMAT EXPELLED FOR ESPIONAGE ACTIVITIES

NC041025 Paris AFP in English 1010 GMT 4 Nov 81

[Text] Copenhagen, 4 Nov (AFP) -- The Danish Government has expelled Soviet Embassy Second Secretary Vladimir Merkoulov after deciding he carried out subversive activities, Foreign Ministry sources said here today.

According to the daily paper BERLINGSKE TIDENDE, the Foreign Ministry declared Mr Merkoulov "persona non grata" three weeks ago.

The Soviet embassy confirmed that Mr Merkoulov, posted here since 1977, had left the country. He had done nothing contrary to Danish law, it added.

According to the newspaper, Danish security police ascertained that Mr Merkoulov had connections with the Soviet KGB intelligence agency, and had engaged in a wide variety of activities which Denmark considered subversive.

Among these were infiltration of local anti-NATO (North Atlantic Treaty Organization) and pro-nuclear-free zone groups.

Mr Merkoulov, according to the paper, financed a left-wing political advertisement campaign and attempted to influence Danish opinion-makers by means of private meetings, lunches and gifts.

A Soviet embassy spokesman said he did take part in public meetings, but did nothing contrary to Danish law.

FINLAND

SOVIETS HINT AT PRESIDENTIAL PREFERENCES

PM031647 Stockholm DAGENS NYHETER in Swedish 1 Nov 81 p 10

[Text] Helsinki, 31 October -- The Soviet Union does not approve of the plans of the Finnish People's Democrats to nominate second education minister Kalevi Kivisto -- who is not even a communist -- as its presidential candidate, DAGENS NYHETER has heard.

A couple of representatives of the CPSU Central Committee were in Finland recently and let it be known that relations between the organizations could become strained if the People's Democrats nominate Kivisto. Communist Party Chairman Aarne Saarinen could be selected instead.

Two Soviet party men, Sapasnikov [as published] and Smirnov, also discussed the forthcoming presidential election with people from the Social Democratic Party and the Center Party.

In their contacts with the Social Democrats the Soviet guests expressed themselves a little more politely. They had nothing negative to say about Mauno Koivisto, but let it be known that Party Chairman Kalevi Sorsa would also be a good presidential candidate.

Center Party politician Ahti Karjalainen is also held in high regard in the Soviet Union. It was obviously with some satisfaction that the visitors heard a report of the situation from the Center Party, when they were told that the party leadership is trying to make sure that Karjalainen will win the candidacy in the competition with Johannes Virolainen.

It was clear that Karjalainen would need the support of the Conservative National Coalition Party in order to win election. The Center Party has promised the national coalition participation in the next government if Karjalainen is successfully placed in the president's chair.

Officially the Soviet Union will not interfere in Finland's presidential election, but DAGENS NYHETER has heard that continued interest from the CPSU is to be expected.

Leading Finnish communists are used to receiving advice from their Soviet comrades. However, it is another matter whether they then always follow their advice.

In the presidency issue more reliance is being placed on President Brezhnev's message to President Kekkonen, which was delivered on Friday. Brezhnev expressed the conviction that the confidence created between Finland and the Soviet Union in the Kekkonen era will continue when a new president assumes office.

The Finns, expert as they are at reading between the lines, take this as an indication that the Soviet leaders do not feel any worries about the outcome of the forthcoming presidential election. All the main candidates are acceptable.

But even if this interpretation is correct, the eagerness of the participants in the presidential game is hardly likely to be dampened -- and the struggle within the Finnish Communist Party will continue.

The minority communists are continuing to cast doubts on Mauno Koivisto (Social Democratic Party) and are declaring that Ahti Karjalainen is the absolute winning card from the foreign policy viewpoint.

The minority are also trying to trip up Kalevi Kivisto. A working group which principally consists of the leadership of the Communist Party and the People's Democratic League made no progress when it discussed the candidate question on Thursday [29 October]. The minority communists do not want Kivisto to be the candidate.

BRIEFS

SIBERIAN PIPELINE -- The Finnish cooperative organization Metex will participate in the construction of the Siberian gas pipeline. The Finns will participate in planning the buildings for the pumping stations, material deliveries and the control of the working site [word indistinct]. The value of the agreement Metex signed is over FM300 million. The agreement includes a total of nearly 300 buildings for 41 pumping stations. Metex firms that have signed this subcontract are Kone Oy, Suomen Puhallintehdas Are Oy, Hana Oy and Naaraharju Oy. [Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 1400 GMT 2 Nov 81 LD]

NORWAY

OUTSPOKEN AMBASSADOR FACES DISMISSAL BY STRAY

PM040955 Oslo ARBEIDERBLADET in Norwegian 29 Oct 81 p 10

[Excerpts] Foreign Minister Svenn Stray is said to have threatened Ambassador Jens Evensen with dismissal. According to information received by ARBEIDERBLADET, Stray made it clear to Evensen that he would have to leave his post in the Foreign Ministry if he persists in his involvement in the question of nuclear-free zones.

But Jens Evensen is not allowing himself to be gagged. Soon Tiden Norsk Forlag will be publishing a book on security policy. One of the questions which the book will raise is that of nuclear-free zones in the Nordic countries. One of the contributors is Jens Evensen. The demarche from the Willock government has led to reactions throughout the labor movement.

"If this is correct and the Willoch government intends to take its threat seriously, I would describe this as an absolutely hair-raising decision," said Einar Forde, member of the Storting Foreign Affairs and Constitution Committee and deputy chairman of the Labour Party.

Jens Evensen has been a central figure in the debate on nuclear-free zones in the Nordic countries. The Willoch government is now trying to put him into political coldstorage.

"I do not think that Evensen should accept the impositions. They conflict with the practice which has been followed in recent years. If the new government were to go through the whole civil service to prevent civil servants from expressing their political views, it would have a busy time of it," Labor Party Deputy Chairman Einar Forde said.

Forde described the Willoch government's demarche against Evensen as a clear political action.

"Evensen is an international expert in this field and can make important contributions to the debate on nuclear arms and nuclear-free zones both here in Norway and internationally. Limiting Jens Evensen's involvement is not only wrong, but it is also a loss to the whole of the debate on the nuclear arms race. With this demarche the government has revealed attitudes which I thought had gone out of date years ago," Einar Forde said.

SWEDEN

INTERROGATION OF CAPTAIN TO TAKE PLACE ON SUB

LD032134 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 2100 GMT 2 Nov 81

[Text] The deadlock which arose earlier this evening in the affair concerning the Soviet submarine in Karlskrona Archipelago now seems on its way to being broken, in that Swedish defense leaders are taking half a step backward. They are doing this by permitting the continued questioning to take place aboard the submarine inside the restricted military area. But the Soviet embassy officials will not be allowed to be present. This deadlock arose earlier this evening when the Soviet commander announced that henceforth he would not be available for questioning on Swedish territory, but put forward the demand that the questioning should take place aboard the submarine. Petr Guzhin received these instructions directly from the Soviet Union today. And the situation seemed deadlocked, since Sweden insisted that the questioning should take place outside the restricted military area. The commander in chief also announced earlier this evening that he was not satisfied with the answers obtained so far in the inquiry and that is why the questioning has to continue, but the question was where.

What caused the change in the Soviet attitude is unclear, but the fact that the Soviet captain was shown to the world press yesterday evening in a manner embarrassing to him has definitely had a negative effect on the negotiating (?atmosphere).

Chief of Staff Boards Sub

LD041052 Stockholm International Service in Swedish 1000 GMT 4 Nov 81

[Excerpts] It is still unclear whether the interrogation of the Soviet submarine captain in the Karlskrona Archipelago will continue. [passage omitted] Swedish military representatives in Karlskrona say that the most important thing now is not a discussion with the submarine captain, but the technical examination of the submarine. Chief of Staff Karl Andersson was on board the submarine at 0900, the defense staff has announced, and further visits to the Soviet vessel are expected during the day. Soviet Ambassador Mikhail Yakovlev, at his own request, called on Foreign Minister Ola Ullsten on 3 November to express his views on the handling of the submarine affair. However, there was no question of a formal Soviet protest. Swedish ambassador to Moscow Carl de Geer has been twice called to the Soviet Foreign Ministry. The Swedish Foreign Ministry press office says that the essential talks on the submarine affair are being conducted in Stockholm between Foreign Minister Ullsten and the Soviet ambassador.

SPOKESMAN ON KIPRIANOU'S USSR VISIT, UK BASES

NC031226 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1130 GMT 3 Nov 81

[Text] Answering a question in connection with a press report on the president's visits to Moscow and Washington, the government spokesman said that, with regard to the visit to Moscow, preparations are being made by both sides, but that the exact date of this visit has not yet been fixed. As for the visit to Washington, the spokesman added, there is no change: it will take place prior to the end of the year.

The spokesman also answered a question as to whether the Cyprus Government is considering the possibility to appeal to the International Court [of Justice] or seeking international arbitration if the British Government continues its negative stand toward the payment of the amount it owes for the facilities being provided to the British bases in Cyprus. In his answer, the spokesman stated that the government is considering various alternative solutions in case the negotiations fail.

NATIONAL COUNCIL DELAYS ON WALDHEIM IDEAS

NC040810 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 0430 GMT 4 Nov 81

[Text] The National Council will meet next Monday under President of the Republic Kiprianou to continue its detailed examination of the UN Secretary General Waldheim's evaluation of the inter-Cypriot talks. The evaluation began yesterday afternoon at the National Council's meeting, which lasted 6 hours.

Taking part in yesterday's meeting were: Chairman of the House of Representatives Ladhas; AKEL Secretary General Papaioannou and Assistant Secretary General Fandhis; Chairman of the Democratic Rally [DHISI] Kliridhis and Deputy Chairman Matsis; chairman of the socialist EDEK Party Lissaridhis and Secretary General Khatzidhimitriou; Secretary General of the Democratic Party [DHIKO] Poškotis and parliamentary representative Galanos; Foreign Minister Rolandhis; interlocutor Ioannidhis; counsellor Triandafillidhis. Counsellor Mrs Soulioti did not attend as she is overseas.

ROLANDHIS TRIES LAST MISSING PERSONS ISSUE EFFORT

NC031953 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1730 GMT 3 Nov 81

[Text] Foreign Minister Rolandhis today conferred with special envoy of the UN secretary general in Cyprus Gobbi and the deputy special representative, Thornberry, in a last effort to disperse the difficulties and obstacles in the function of the investigatory committe on missing persons. The meeting was attended by representative of the Greek Cypriot side on the investigatory committee Mikhailidhis and an appropriate official of the Foreign Ministry, together with chairman of the missing persons and undeclared prisoners committee, Khristoforos, and two other members of the committee.

The government spokesman, replying to a question, expressed the government's disappointment that the procedural aspects of the question of the investigatory committee on missing persons have not yet been resolved. The spokesman added that the government will continue its full harmonious cooperation with the Pancyprian Committee of Relatives of Missing Persons and Undeclared Prisoners in order to promote the whole issue.

FOREIGN MINISTRY ASSESSING PAPANDREOU'S SPEECHES

NC031350 Istanbul HURRIYET in Turkish 31 Oct 81 pp 1, 9

[Commentary: "The Turkish Foreign Ministry Has Evaluated the Speeches of the Greek Prime Minister; Papandreou Is Spoiling the Atmosphere"]

[Text] Ankara (HURRIYET) -- The Turkish government has begun to assess all speeches made by Greek Prime Minister Papandreou in an air of hostility. There is agreement on the fact that Papandreou's utterances against Turkey -- which sound as if he was declaring a cold war -- have begun to electrify the atmosphere. However, it has been stated that Turkey will devise a new policy against Papandreou's outbursts without losing its temper. It has also been stated, in the meantime, that if Greece lands troops on Cyprus, Turkey will not remain a mere onlooker but react very strongly.

Circles close to the government stress that the successive speeches delivered by Papandreou before as well as after the elections are full of contradictions. They add: "Papandreou has chosen this path for the purpose of misleading world opinion; but the facts being what they are, the world will not be misled. We are going to adopt a definite stand against the attitude of the Greek prime minister in the days ahead. It is difficult at this moment to verify what the Greek prime minister is seeking to achieve by electrifying the air."

A responsible official, who stated that Turkey does not covet the land of any of its neighbors, continued: "The Greek prime minister is advancing strange arguments. He asks the United States and NATO to guarantee the security of Greece's borders with Turkey. Such a demand is inappropriate. It is difficult to understand how two states in the same defense alliance can threaten each other's borders. In reality, the Greeks are creating a storm in a teacup against our determined stand that the islands in the Aegean should be demilitarized."

The same official stated that Turkey will insist on the demilitarization of the Aegean islands without taking the slightest step backward. He went on: "We will not give up the demands we have put forward at the meeting of the Turkish-Greek Foreign Ministries secretaries general. The demilitarization of the islands is our first and foremost condition. The Greeks turn a deaf ear to this demand. Our arguments concerning the continental shelf and the [joint] control of the Aegean airspace have not yet been resolved. We had earlier informed them that we do not accept the Greek view of the Aegean islands being a continental shelf. Following with this viewpoint, our ships will continue to sail the Aegean Sea and fly over Aegean airspace. We totally oppose the extention of Greek territorial waters to 12 miles in the Aegean Sea and to the implementation of such a decision. Such an attempt will bring about many changes in the Aegean and the equilibrium will definitely be upset. We have also informed Greece that we do not consent to the cancellation and violation by Greece of the rights given to our kinsmen in Thrace under the Lausanne Treaty."

Another official stated that the situation is being assessed and that countermeasures are being taken at the government level. He added that Turkey will not be a mere onlooker at the landing of Greek troops on the island [of Cyprus]. He said: "Greek attempt to land troops in the Greek sector of the island will lead to grave consequences. The Greeks cannot risk such an adventure which would spark tension in the east Mediterranean. We are planning what to do in the event of such a move. The Greeks also landed troops on the island before 1967 but following our ultimatum, they pulled their troops out in 15 days."

The official further stated that Turkey is now engaged in working out the kind of policy it will implement in the event of obstruction of the intercommunal talks being conducted under the surveillance of UN Secretary General Kurt Waldheim.

He continued: "We shall insist on the dispute being resolved through intercommunal talks. If the Greeks wish to take the issue to international conferences, we shall oppose that view too. Meanwhile, also, the declaration of independence by the TFSC is on our agenda."

On the other hand, Foreign Ministry spokesman Ambassador Nazmi Akiman said: "The attitude of the Greek prime minister is being studied, but the program of the Greek Government is not yet known. Let us see how the issues will be treated in the government program, then our government will make a new assessment."

Also stating that it is not yet known whether the Greek Cypriots will refer the Cyprus issue to the UN General Assembly, Akiman added: "The United Nations previously adopted a resolution calling on Turkey to withdraw its troops from Cyprus. This resolution has not been implemented because of Turkey's opposition. I do not believe that the resolution stands any chance of revival."

Papandreou's statement to the press after his meeting with Turkish Ambassador Fahir Alacam to the effect that "his aim was to protect the peace," aroused concern in diplomatic circles in Ankara and it was characterized as "inconsistent." But as no report has yet been received from Ambassador Alacam, the authorities have refrained from making any comment. They merely said: "These words by the Greek prime minister cannot be taken seriously. What he said yesterday differs from what he says today. Is there a war going on that would require him to protect the peace? We are expecting a report from Athens so that we may make an appropriate assessment."

Additional Comments

NC031018 Istanbul HURRIYET in Turkish 1 Nov 81 pp 1, 11

[Text] Ankara (HURRIYET) -- The report on the 30-minute meeting of Turkish Ambassador to Athens Fahir Alacam with Greek Prime Minister Papandreou reached the Foreign Ministry the other night. The officials concerned worked late into the night to evaluate the report. At the end of this evaluation, an official statement was issued which said that "the exchange of views was gratifying." However, these officials stated that "they did not believe" in the seriousness of the sincerity Papandreou showed to the Turkish ambassador or in his message of friendship.

The officials also stated that there were serious differences between the Greek prime minister's preelection and postelection speeches. They added that the good will message he sent has not inspired confidence. On the contrary, it has created doubts.

The officials concerned have stated that in the initial stage they have received Papandreou's attitude with dignity and that they will continue to evaluate the situation while awaiting the publication of the Greek Government's program. They added that they will continue to assess the situation according to the way the Greek Government handles issues.

After stating that they expected the Greek prime minister to refer to "friendship" in his speeches from now on, they added: "We too are in favor of resolving our differences through peaceful means. This is what friendship and good neighborliness dictate. If the Greek prime minister wishes true friendship with us, and if he is sincere in his peace message, he will withdraw his troops from the Aegean islands and come to the negotiating table with Turkey to settle the remaining issues."

Foreign Ministry spokesman Ambassador Nazmi Akiman gave this response to questions put to him by the journalists: "We welcome Prime Minister Papandreou's initiative in meeting our Athens ambassador and exchanging views with him on Turkish-Greek relations. Prime Minister Papandreou has stated that his government will pursue a policy of good neighborliness with Turkey, stressing his desire to see that issues outstanding between the two countries are resolved peacefully.

As stated by our honorable prime minister on 27 October, this is in fact the essence of the policy that Turkey is pursuing toward Greece. It is natural that we shall carefully assess what the Greek prime minister told our ambassador yesterday. As good intentions are put into practice, the solution of our problems will become easier."

EVREN REVIEWS ECONOMIC SITUATION AT CONFERENCE

TA021520 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 2 Nov 81

[Speech by Head of State General Evren at the opening of the second Turkish congress on the economy on 2 November in Izmir -- recorded]

[Excerpts] Dear delegates of the second Turkish economy congress, dear guests and listeners: Our main objective in convening the second congress on the economy -- which is taking place 58 years after the first such congress was held after the victorious war of independence, and on Ataturk's centenary -- is to seek the economic ways and means that will provide Turkey's development -- a vital, national and sacred task. The first congress was also convened with the same purpose in mind.

I am convinced that, in the light of economic principles set forth by Ataturk on various occasions, your congress will exert efforts to further strengthen our economic structure, to seek and find the most proper methods that will ensure national prosperity and happiness, and to contribute to the implementation of these measures. I wish you all success in your work. [applause]

In order to appreciate what was accomplished following 12 September 1980, we must recall the situation in the country before this operation. As it will be recalled, conditions before 12 September dragged the country to the brink of disaster and disruption and the social and economic life of our people was under heavy pressures. As a result of these pressures, production decreased, investments dwindled and unemployment grew. This development exacerbated the climate of unrest and insecurity which the incidents of anarchy and terror created. However, following the 12 September operation, those who incited unrest in the factories were captured, discrimination was eliminated and an impartial administration provided the climate of peace and tranquillity which the Turkish workers deserved and, as a result, factories whose production had fallen to 15 percent of their capacities, began to operate at a rate of 80 to 90 percent.

Prior to 12 September, even the most optimistic reports said Turkish industry was operating at 30 to 35 percent of its capacity. These included state-owned economic enterprises. There was no medicine available and minor surgery was carried out without anesthesia. There was a scarcity of cooking oil. Even vital commodities such as electric bulbs were hard to come by. Though it could produce almost half its energy needs from its own sources, Turkey was forced to import 80 percent of its energy needs as state-owned hydroelectric and coal mining installations were badly managed and oil exploration in the country was not carried out as it should be. In 1980, Turkey was obliged, therefore, to import $3.5 to $4 billion worth of oil to meet its needs. Even if efforts are made to reduce its 1 million-ton import of oil by increasing its own production, Turkey cannot pay all the oil bills accumulated so far.

The economic difficulties had a bad effect on more than one field. Political terrorism, escalating inflation, the tight restrictions on imports, the drop in the real value of wages were all factors leading to the violation of laws. It is believed that if this situation had continued, it would have resulted either in a complete disaster for Turkey or in a civil war or, more probably, the armed forces would take over. These were probabilities published in foreign press organs on Turkey's fate. Assessments by Turkish officials based on real facts and figures were not much different. The Turkish people were desperate and waiting for the worst.

The reasons that led to such a disaster of the economic situation can be listed as follows: disregard for Ataturk's economic guidelines, efforts by those engaged in acts of terror in a bid to destroy the country, to divide it and to implement their own perverse ideologies, and the negligence of those responsible in using their powers and authority to prevent such a development.

It has been clearly demonstrated that peace in the country is the result of economic progress as economic progress itself is dependent on peace. The main factor in providing the economic amelioration -- conceded by foreigners as well as the Turkish people -- during the last year has been the result of peace and tranquillity in the country that has permitted the full functioning of the economic enterprises.

Dear members, now I would like to dwell on economic (?factors). The first factor which I would like to point out is the determination of economic principles based on the Ataturk principles and ideas developed in Turkey free of polemics and cliches which will incorporate all scientific activities and the definition of these principles in a manner conducive to implementation. It has been observed that uniting economic concepts in groups such as socialist, communist, capitalist, free and planned economies which separate them into enemy camps is not only detrimental in the economic field but in our social and political life as well. The important point is to approach economic developments in Turkey in a positive manner, taking into consideration the whole system of economic and national power and determining all factors supporting or [word indistinct] our economy and all modes of behavior compatible with our national goal. I believe that the current level of science and technology, the possibilities of the Turkish nation and the existing accumulation of knowledge in Turkey are sufficient to determine the measures -- without creating contradictory alternatives -- which will enable our national economic system to develop in accordance with our national goals. The scientific methods and technology to be used by the Turkish economic system can definitely and in detail be found in Ataturk's principles of state controlled economy, populism and democracy.

Dear friends, the most important duty of the state vis-a-vis the citizen and the Turkish people is to determine the goals and basic principles which will regulate and direct all the functions of a national economic system within the framework of the Ataturk principles, to clearly formulate a general economic policy, and to determine and implement all major economic activities taking into consideration the conditions existing at a given time and place. The state needs initiative in order to fully implement this duty.

The factors to be taken into account in implementing this duty should be dealt with in accordance with their social and economic characteristics. Both the Turkish economy and the Turkish public were adversely affected because political ambitions and goals and individual interests were the principles guiding economic policy. It is important to ensure that Turkish economic policy be kept away from such deviations. The economic system is part of the national power system and it functions in an uncontrollable atmosphere of international conditions.

Now, dear members, I will briefly dwell on planning. The plan which the state will prepare to regulate and develop the economy should be based on the Ataturk principles, scientific principles and givens, conditions in Turkey and its experience and knowledge. Due to technological developments which have been implemented until now and due to the successful results, planning has become an indispensible tool in the administration of all [word indistinct]. The process of planning, which is being implemented in the economic field as well, is continuously developing. Economic principles opposed to planning are gradually becoming less effective. Furthermore, it has become a necessity to determine how economic crises will directly or indirectly affect developments in both developed and developing economies, and to speedily take the necessary measures, thus controlling the implementation [of economic programs].

I believe the Turkish economy will speedily develop through effective and sufficient planning -- both in the macro and micro level -- of the processes of production and consumption which comprise economic events. Planning consists of determining the goals and their realization. Planning should deal with future economic activities, the manner in which they will be realized and by whom.

Dear members, I will express our views on foreign capital by quoting from the statement made by Ataturk at the Izmir economic congress. He says: "Our country is big. We need a lot of labor and capital. Therefore, we are always ready to give the necessary guarantee to foreign capital provided our laws are followed. It is desirable that foreign capital serve our economy."

It is necessary to view foreign trade as a significant part of the national economy and to regulate foreign trade relations in accordance with this principle. The free foreign currency exchange rates will be an indication of the development of our economic power. The speedy realization of this hope depends upon developing industrial production. All other activities should be guided by economic activities in a bid to achieve economic success. The path to be pursued on the subject is illuminated by the Ataturk principles.

The convening of economic congresses which bring together all those concerned with economy is, no doubt, very beneficial. The discussion of the great economic problems faced by our people and state is [word indistinct] to your national and historic responsibility. You will fulfill this duty which you have shouldered with a sense of economic and social responsibility. I thank you for attending this meeting. I wish you success and the fruitful conclusion of your efforts. I wish this congress to be auspicious. Thank you. [applause]

ARAYIS DISCUSSES SOCIETY, POLITICAL PARTIES

NC030928 Ankara ARAYIS in Turkish 24 Oct 81 pp 5, 6, 7

[Editorial of the week: "Society and the Political Parties"]

[Excerpts] A billboard bearing a six-arrow emblem being pulled down from where it was hanging and a horse statue lying on the ground [the emblems of the abolished Republican People's Party and the Justice Party, respectively] was the most important news in last week's newspapers. These two symbols being brought down signifies the end of an important chapter in the book on Turkish social and political life which began with the war of liberation and withstood the tests of events in 1946, 1950, 1960 and 1971.

A law enacted by the National Security Council abolished the political parties, whose activities were suspended on the morning of 12 September 1980 and whose movable and immovable property were all transfered to the state treasury.

For communities that have not been able to develop their democratic institutions and that have failed to turn this into an inalienable demand, such practices may not seem to be very important. But for communities like Turkey, that have become used to party life for over 60 years and to multiparty life for 30 years, the instant abolition of all democratic institutions signifies a radical change. It is, therefore, not an exaggeration to say that we have witnessed one of the most drastic political atrocities in Turkey since the war of liberation.

One end of the future is imbedded in the past. At a time when the sketches of the future communal and political structure are being drawn up, the past should be carefully evaluated. It is understood that the fundamental reason for the abolition of the political parties was due to the conditions prevailing in Turkey on 11 September 1980. Who is responsible for these conditions? Certain politicians were held responsible for bringing Turkey to [the brink of disaster on] 12 September.

As a natural extension of this evaluation, the old politicians were banned from entering the Consultative Assembly and it was even stated most authoritatively that they would not be allowed to participate in the general elections. Right or wrong, such a practice is not basically very important, but when action is taken against the basic institutions of democracy, the dimensions change.

From the community's point of view, outside interference in the natural realities of political life does not yield positive results. The Turkish community experienced this with striking examples in the recent past. Following the 27 May 1960 revolution, a political party was closed down, but in the periods that followed, another party, built on the same foundations, emerged with an even more ferocious structure. [referring to the Justice Party, which was formed after the closure of the Democratic Party in the sixties]. Other artificially established parties survived legally for some time, but they failed to be accepted by the public and faded away.

A new political structure is to be formed in Turkey. In doing so, attention must be paid to the basic rules of democracy. Above all, no unexpected institutions should be imposed on the Turkish community, which has developed its own democratic traditions and which has become used to living under such a regime.

A six-arrow billboard or a grey horse statue pulled down from the wall may, at first glance, symbolize the end of an era. However, it must not be forgotten that the political parties of the future will be composed of people who were devoted to the abolished parties. Indirectly, the ultimate aim must be to create an order that will not run counter to the democratic norms of these people and that will make them feel that such an order responds to their political desires. Such a result can be achieved only by passing through the natural phases of communal life.

PUBLICATION OF TERCUMAN TO RESUME 3 NOVEMBER

TA021955 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 2 Nov 81

[Text] The publication and distribution of the daily TERCUMAN, which was banned on 27 October 1981, will be resumed tomorrow. The publication and distribution of TERCUMAN had been suspended by the 1st Army and the Istanbul, Canakkale, Edirne, Kirklareli and Tekirday Martial Law Command because of an article that appeared in the paper.

ECONOMIC PROTOCOL WITH NORWAY SIGNED IN OSLO

TA022000 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 2 Nov 81

[Text] The Turkish-Norwegian joint economic committee meeting has ended in Oslo. A protocol was signed at the end of the talks. The protocol was signed on behalf of Turkey by the economic affairs adviser of the Foreign Ministry secretary general, Ambassador Oktay Iscen, and on behalf of Norway by the director general of the Ministry of Commerce and Shipping, Ambassador (Tor Stock).

According to information given by the Foreign Ministry, the Norwegian donation of some 50 million krones to be extended to Turkey in 1981 within the framework of the OECD will be available in December after it has been approved by parliament. In accordance with the protocol, Norway will speed up the use of financial funds -- in the form of donations -- to be made available to Turkey for various projects. Furthermore, contacts between the two countries will be increased with the aim of developing and strengthening cooperation.

The Turkish delegation also held contacts with firms specializing in oil prospecting in open seas. Possibilities for cooperation between these firms and the Turkish Petroleum Corporation in oil prospecting in the seas were discussed during these meetings. The delegation also held contacts with leading Norwegian tourist establishments. A decision was made to undertake activities aimed at increasing the tourist flow from Norway to Turkey.

AUSTRIA

AL-QADHDHAFI THREATENS ATTACKS ON U.S. EMBASSY

AU031946 Vienna Domestic Television Service in German 1830 GMT 3 Nov 81

[Excerpt] A Terrorist attack threatens the U.S. Embassy in Vienna. According to the U.S. intelligence agencies, the Libyan head of state, Al-Qadhdhafi, has planned attacks against four U.S. embassies -- in London, Paris, Rome and Vienna -- in revenge for the downing of two Libyan planes by U.S. fighters several weeks ago. The Austrian security officials are on alert, have strengthened the surveillance of U.S. agencies and have rechecked existing security measures.

This terrorist threat is taken quite seriously here, because the new U.S. ambassador to Vienna Cummings, like the new U.S. ambassador to Rome Rabb, is regarded as a close friend of President Reagan. Speculation regarding a possible connection between the current terrorist threats and the attacks by the recently arrested Palestinian terrorist chief (Younis) were rejected by the Austrian Interior Ministry.

The American public is particularly worried about the news because it has been revealed that the Libyan terrorist commandoes have been trained to use American weapons by former employees of the Central Intelligence Agency. It has also been suggested that the Libyan military intervention in Chad was planned by former CIA employees.

Interior Ministry To Review Security

AU040727 Vienna Domestic Service in German 0600 GMT 4 Nov 81

[Text] Austria -- An Interior Ministry spokesman last night confirmed that the security measures for the protection of the U.S. embassy in Vienna and other U.S. institutions in Vienna are currently being reviewed. According to press reports, terrorist commandos are said to plan, upon the initiative of Libyan chief of state Al-Qadhdhafi, attacks on the embassies of the United States in Vienna, Rome, London and Paris.

BRIEFS

ANTI-U.S. RALLY -- Armament freeze: United States to the Conference Table: Against Pershing and cruise missiles: A demonstration for these aims will take place in Vienna, which has been called by a large politically nonaffiliated committee and by numerous organizations. The demonstration will start on Friday at 1630 at the Stafa department store on Mariahilferstrasse in Vienna's seventh district. [Text] [Vienna VOLKSSTIMME in German 3 Nov 81 p 1 AU]

SPAIN

ARMY OFFICERS FORM CLANDESTINE OPPOSITION UNION

NC031318 Paris AFP in English 1241 GMT 3 Nov 81

[Text] Madrid, 3 Nov (AFP) -- A number of army officers has formed the clandestine "Spanish Military Union" (UME) which is opposed to King Juan Carlos and democracy, reliable army sources said today. The UME was distributing violently critical pamphlets in army barracks against the king, who is also the army supreme commander. The plotters have learned from the experience of the unsuccessful military putsch last February 23 and have maintained strict secrecy.

Last March UME distributed a 42-page pamphlet criticising senior army officers and analysing the discontent among officers and men. Sources said here that UME was in the process of forming a special putsch unit for future action. Some of its members were in favour of forming a "national republic".

FBIS DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 214 5 November 1981

CONTENTS

BENELUX

BELGIUM

Paper Ponders Ceausescu Stance on Zero Option [LE SOIR 29 Oct] F 1

NETHERLANDS

Somber Defense Delegation Returns From USSR [NRC HANDELSBLAD 30 Oct] F 1
Station Plans Relay of Moscow TV Channel [DE VOLKSKRANT 28 Oct] F 2
Paper Examines Implications of Reagan AWACS 'Win' [DE VOLKSKRANT 30 Oct] F 2

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Official Defends Military Training for Foreigners [FRANKFURTER RUNDSCHAU 2 Nov] J 1
Brandt Views State of Coalition, Brezhnev Remarks J 2
CDU Calls for 'Overall Arms Limitation' Policy J 2
Relations With Albania Seen as 'Desirable' J 3
Brezhnev's Bonn Visit the 'Only Option' Left to Him [FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE 2 Nov] J 3
Brezhnev Remarks on Arms Limitation Self-Serving [DIE WELT 2 Nov] J 4
Commentator Views Brezhnev Remarks in Soviet Context [SUEDDEUTSCHE ZEITUNG 4 Nov] J 5

FRANCE

French-African Summit Ends, Appeals for Peace in Chad K 1
Reaction to Libyan Withdrawal K 2
Government Faces Dilemma on Computer Exports to USSR [LE MONDE 21 Oct] K 2
AWACS Deal Ends U.S. 'Diplomatic Apathy' [LE MONDE 30 Oct] K 4

ITALY & THE VATICAN

Good Reaction to Reagan Invitation to Spadolini L 1
Defense Minister Comments on Sinai Peace Force L 2
Sudanese Vice President Arrives for Visit L 2
Fishing Boat Intercepted by Tunisian Patrol L 2
Paper Reviews Government's Position on Mideast [LE REPUBBLICA 1-2 Nov] L 3

SPAIN

Deputies Withdraw From UCD, Possible Party Breakup N 1
Briefs: Basque Militants N 1

NORDIC AFFAIRS

SWEDEN

Officers Examine Equipment of Detained USSR Sub P 1
Sub Commander 'Cooperative' P 1
Coded Messages Jammed P 1
Sub Grounding Linked to Weapons System Testing P 1
Tests Declared 'Routine' P 2
Government Reports Sharper 'Tone' in Sub Affair P 2
Report on Investigation P 3
USSR To Pay Costs P 3
Ullsten Expects Decision Soon P 3
Government Meeting P 4

UNITED KINGDOM

Queen Outlines Government Program for New Term Q 1
Carrington Interviewed on Eve of Saudi Visit Q 2
[ASH-SHARQ AL-AWSAT 3 Nov]
DAILY TELEGRAPH Wary of Saudi 'Peace Plan' [3 Nov] Q 3

CYPRUS

Defense Minister Returns From Athens Talks R 1
National Council Discusses Waldheim Evaluation R 1
Gobbi Given Deadline on Missing Persons Issue [I ELEVTHEROTIPIA 4 Nov] R 1
O FILELEVTHEROS Discusses Defense Problems [4 Nov] R 1
Nicosia Paper Scores AKEL's Inconsistency [O AGON 4 Nov] R 2
AKEL Calls for Joint Action To Isolate Rightwing [KHARAVYI 5 Nov] R 3
North's Denktas Criticizes Papandreou Statement [Bayrak Radio] R 4

GREECE

Papandreou Confers With Cyprus Defense Minister S 1
KKE Issues Resolution on Policy Position S 1
New Democracy Attacks Cypriot Archbishop's Views S 1
[I KATHIMERINI 3 Nov]

TURKEY

France's Mitterrand Sends Message to Evren T 1
Naval Commander Tumer Departs for FRG Visit T 1
AFP: Military Holds 29,929 Political Prisoners T 1
Our Radio Criticizes Prosecution of Ecevit T 2
MILLIYET Discusses Settlement of Cyprus Issue [31 Oct] T 3

BELGIUM

PAPER PONDERS CEAUSESCU STANCE ON ZERO OPTION

PM300933 Brussels LE SOIR in French 29 Oct 81 p 3

[Pol Mathil article: "Zero Option on Missiles or Romania's Challenge"]

[Excerpts] By taking a public stance in favor of the "zero option" on the Euromissiles, Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu has just launched a strong challenge to the Soviet Union in the most sensitive area of its foreign policy. In two interviews granted to a West German daily and weekly during FRG President Carstens' visit to Romania, Mr Ceausescu advocated the withdrawal of the Soviet SS-20 missiles from Europe in exchange for the abandonment of the plan to deploy American medium-range cruise and Pershing missiles in the European theater.

Competent circles put forward several explanations for this new "iconoclastic" gesture.

Two of the hypotheses put foward are noteworthy. It is possible that Mr Ceausescu is stepping up the pace in view of the danger that the USSR may propose the deployment of these missiles on Romanian territory, which is at present free of Soviet troops.

In addition Mr Ceausescu recently embarked on a great prestige operation in the West. Romania's financial situation is, in fact, very difficult. Although it is not in a "Polish" situation, Romania is having serious difficulties in meeting repayment deadlines. Mr Ceausescu has just discussed this with Mr Tyler, one of the directors of the IMF (of which Romania is the only communist member). He is at present discussing it with Mr Carstens and on 2 November he is sending Mr Cornel Burtica, first deputy prime minister and minister of international cooperation, to discuss it with the EEC Commission in Brussels.

NETHERLANDS

SOMBER DEFENSE DELEGATION RETURNS FROM USSR

Rotterdam NRC HANDELSBLAD in Dutch 30 Oct 81 p 3

[Text] Schiphol, 30 Oct -- In a somber mood over the prospects for the forthcoming Soviet-American negotiations on limiting the nuclear arms race, a Netherlands defense delegation returned to the Netherlands yesterday from the Soviet Union. The delegation had been paying a 4-day visit to Moscow.

The general impression that these talks would be difficult had been strengthened in talks with the Soviet authorities. According to delegation leader H.J. Neuman, director of the Institute for Peace Research, the Soviet Union does not seem prepared to limit the talks to a small number of weapons systems -- something which he considers a precondition for achieving results in the foreseeable future.

The U.S.-Soviet negotiations begin in Geneva on 30 November.

The Soviet Union sees the peace movement as European opposition to the United States and adopts a sympathetic approach to it. Of the Netherlands peace movement Neuman said that the Soviet Union welcomes it not so much because it is taking place in the Netherlands, "which is hardly seen as a European power," but because of its "influence, which could have favorable effects for the Soviet Union much more important than whether something was or was not happening in the Netherlands."

Apart from Neuman and De Vries the delegation also included second chamber member A.B.M. Frinking (Christian Democratic Appeal), Telder Foundation Director Prof Dr J.J.C. Voorhoeve (People's Party for Freedom and Democracy), H. Hendrikse of the Institute for Peace Research and Amsterdam businessman E.H. van Eeghen. The latter took the initiative for the trip. All the delegation members took part as private individuals. The aim was to gain a broader insight into the Soviet view of current peace and security questions.

STATION PLANS RELAY OF MOSCOW TV CHANNEL

PM041113 Amsterdam DE VOLKSKRANT in Dutch 28 Oct 81 p 1

[Excerpt] Amsterdam -- Cable Television Amsterdam [KTA] will very shortly -- perhaps even today -- begin transmitting Russian television broadcasts through the Amsterdam cable network. Today the KTA will install the equipment for receiving Moscow 1, whose signal is broadcast by a Russian satellite.

The Netherlands Post, Telephones and Telecommunications Administration and Mr Van der Louw, minister of Culture, Recreation and Social Welfare, at present hold the view that the Russian satellite broadcasts may not be transmitted because this would be illegal "tapping of private communications," as one of the arguments runs. KTA takes as its point of departure that any broadcast signal that is not coded is free to be used.

KTA wanted to talk the matter over with Minister Van der Louw, but because an agreement with him did not seem likely in the short term, KTA is now commencing the Russian broadcasts without consultation. "Our subscribers have a right to it," KTA Director Jacons said yesterday evening. Reception quality will determine whether the Russian broadcasts will be begin today on channel 29 of the Amsterdam cable network or not.

PAPER EXAMINES IMPLICATIONS OF REAGAN AWACS 'WIN'

PM041331 Amsterdam DE VOLKSKRANT in Dutch 30 Oct 81 p 3

[Editorial: "Reagan Wins"]

[Excerpts] By pulling out all the stops -- by lobbying and applying pressure -- the White House has succeeded in piloting the sale of AWACS aircraft through the Senate. If Reagan had come off worst in the AWACS affair, which had obviously become a matter of prestige, then his position with regard to Congress would have been thoroughly weakened all along the line. But in the international context of the blocking of the AWACS supply to Riyadh would have had serious consequences, which would not have been outweighed by the profit to be gained from a defeat inflicted on the President. Relations between the United States -- and the West as a whole -- and Saudi Arabia, which plays a crucial bridging role in the Middle East, would have become seriously strained, and all the more so because Washington recently announced a "strategic alliance" with Israel. The Saudi regime is, however, oriented toward the West and the Western economies to such an extent that there need be no immediate fears of a radical change of political course in Riyadh. But in the eyes of the Arab world the Saudis would undoubtedly have suffered a serious loss of face.

Since the death of President as-Sadat the Saudi leaders have indicated through various channels that they wish to restore their ties with Egypt by grasping the opportunity offered to them by the changing of the guard in Cairo. Although Saudi Arabia itself is still a declared opponent of the Camp David accords, the approach to Egypt contains no indications of an attempt to break off the peace process with Israel. This is a hopeful development. It also weakens the political reservations which Israel has voiced against the supply of AWACS to Riyadh, since U.S. strategic consideration of Saudi Arabia would be at the expense of Egypt. The successful AWACS operation gives the Reagan administration room to develop political initiatives which could help to break Egypt's isolation. However, the worrying question is whether Reagan and his men will show themselves to be as active and skillful in the hypersensitive Middle East as they are in the toing and froing in Washington.

OFFICIAL DEFENDS MILITARY TRAINING FOR FOREIGNERS

DW031021 Frankfurt FRANKFURTER RUNDSCHAU in German 2 Nov 81 p 2

[Ulrich Mackensen interview with Willfried Penner, parliamentary state secretary in the Federal Defense Ministry in Bonn; date not given]

[Text] FR: Mr Penner, just recently a new instruction course opened at the Hamburg Leadership Academy for officers from countries which are not affiliated with NATO. Among the participants is also a soldier from South Korea, a country in which, according to Amnesty International, torture is still applied. Does this not harm the prestige of the army of a democratic state?

Penner: It is our view that we need not shirk contacts even with states of different structures, and this also holds true for the Bundeswehr. But it is true indeed that there are states whom we would wish greater proximity to human rights. In any event, however, contacts are better than no contacts, also because alleviations can be attained through contacts in individual cases.

FR: At the moment the Bundeswehr extends training assistance to 40 countries, one of them still being Iran, but also Paraguay. Shouldn't we keep our hands off in that respect?

Penner: Surely many states exist in the world which do not measure up to democratic standards, and depressing forms of the violation of human rights happen in many states. If you wish to exert any influence at all on these conditions, then it is not by refusing contacts but by utilizing existing contacts to make life better for the people affected.

FR: Several years ago Chilean Lieutenant Colonel Kraushaar as the guest of the Bundeswehr was the talk of the town when he uninhibitedly advertised the dictatorial regime in his homeland. Who is it, anyway, that determines the countries which get military aid?

Penner: It is not, of course, the Defense Ministry alone which participates in this decision; the Foreign Office, too, has an important say in it, and rightly so because ultimately this involves foreign relations. It is uncontested that these kind of relations do not always guarantee successes and that there are also some people whom one would prefer to see aloof from such contacts.

Just the same, the Federal Government made it clear in earlier times as well that there are limits and that, should these limits be trespassed, it will not hesitate to draw the proper conclusions.

FR: What sense is there in military training aid to non-NATO states anyway? Would development aid alone not be better?

Penner: I think these are two different areas. Development aid lives up to its purpose, as does military training aid. Many states are interested in military aid because of the attractiveness of the Bundeswehr, to complete their own military knowledge and, if necessary, to make use in their own country of the experiences thus gathered. For foreign policy reasons, too, you cannot resist this petition.

FR: Hence, this training and equipment assistance will continue?

Penner: Surely the training aid will be continued, but as before it will be our duty to very carefully determine when such aid must be banned. In this connection it is necessary to keep in mind, however, that these training programs always are devised on a long-term basis, wherefore it is not always possible to react immediately to special events in the eligible countries. It is a highly complicated and complex field with which we have to deal, and we are aware indeed that we are balancing a sharp edge, namely, living up to the requirements of a predictable, continuous foreign policy on the one hand and to the criteria of our own state on the other.

BRANDT VIEWS STATE OF COALITION, BREZHNEV REMARKS

DW051207 Hamburg Norddeutscher Rundfunk Network in German 1145 GMT 4 Nov 81

["Excerpts" from reporter Burchardt interview with SPD Chairman Willy Brandt: date and place not given -- recorded]

[Text] [Question] If you listen to the current tenor of the speeches at the CDU congress in Hamburg, you sometimes get the impression that the opposition has already parked its van in front of the chancellor's office. Do you think that there is reason to think about a premature change of government?

[Answer] I don't think so actually. Quite a lot can naturally depend on next year's Landtag elections with regard to stability in Bonn because if the opposition were to achieve a two-thirds majority in the Bundesrat, governing would become even more difficult for the Social-Liberal coalition than it already is. But that is still far away. Who knows what new factors will arise by then. I assume after the difficult coalition talks -- unfortunately, two rounds of talks were necessary on the federal budget -- that the coalition will be able to continue its work.

[Question] Naturally the basic question arises as to how far a party can support a government with regard to a liberal partner whose basic economic ideas differ somewhat from what is called Social-Democratic reform policy. How far can a party support a government which has become so dependent that it cannot implement these principles any more?

[Answer] Yes, there is something to this. The difficulties are somewhat greater whenever the famous social network is involved. I think that some of my Free Democratic friends make it too simple by saying that cuts must be made in fields where one has been spending the most in past years. I think that developments in the social field -- if times become more difficult -- cannot take place in opposition to the trade unions but only in cooperation with them.

[Question] Brezhnev said in a DER SPIEGEL interview that the Federal Republic is in about the same international political situation now as it was in the early seventies. The assumption has been expressed that Brezhnev might be coming to Bonn now to drive a wedge between Bonn and Washington.

[Answer] I think that Brezhnev is wrong with regard to the point you mentioned. The situation in the Federal Republic in 1981 cannot be compared with that in 1970. I say somewhat immodestly that at the time when I was setting the direction and had sufficient support for normalizing our relations with the Soviet Union and the other Warsaw Pact states, we were in a more favorable political situation internationally than now. The Americans were talking with the Russians, and one of my main motives was to see to it that the Federal Republic did not become isolated. Another main motive was to see to it that we could look after our own interests in Moscow, Warsaw and elsewhere without having others take care of them.

Today, we and other Europeans face the problem -- it has been a problem at least for the last 2 years -- of how to prevent the deteriorating relations between Washington and Moscow from having a negative effect on Europe.

[Question] Also in the sense of a European nuclear free zone?

[Answer] That is a dream for the future, but I cannot be against it in principle because the program of my party has this in mind.

CDU CALLS FOR 'OVERALL ARMS LIMITATION' POLICY

LD051140 Hamburg DPA in German 1035 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Excerpt] Hamburg, 5 Nov (DPA) -- The CDU national conference in Hamburg today adopted by a large majority a guideline resolution on important questions of economic, social, peace and education policy.

The resolution states that, for the CDU, overall arms limitation is the priority aim in foreign policy. A decision formulated today states that the most important current foreign policy aim is the overall limiting and reduction of arms and a balance at the lowest possible level, "under the condition of undiminished security." In the debate on the motions dealing with peace policy, the party conference also reaffirmed its agreement with the two parts of the NATO dual decision.

The union [CDU/CSU] which called for a fresh peace initiative in Europe, urged the Soviet Union to demonstrate its readiness for cooperation and detente at the forthcoming negotiations, and to end the occupation of Afghanistan which is a violation of international law. In the debate, Deputy CDU Chairman Kurt Biedenkopf again urged that the question of alternatives for a permanent peace system in Europe should be examined. Biedenkopf, whose theory that the nuclear deterrent is not suitable in the long-term for preserving peace and that a consensus for it cannot be gained has met with opposition in the CDU/CSU, again stressed that the search for a long-term alternative in no way calls the Atlantic Alliance into question. "We are seeking alternatives, but we are not questioning what already exists," he said.

RELATIONS WITH ALBANIA SEEN AS 'DESIRABLE'

LD031758 Hamburg DPA in German 1716 GMT 3 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn/Tirana, 3 Nov (DPA) -- The Federal Government shares the view of Albanian party chief Enver Hoxha that a normalization of relations between the Federal Republic and the Socialist People's Republic of Albania is desirable. This comment by the Bonn Foreign Ministry was made today in response to press reports from Tirana that in his speech at the eighth Albanian Communist Party congress, Hoxha expressed an interest in establishing diplomatic relations with the Federal Republic in which he sees "no insuperable difficulties."

A Foreign Ministry spokesman said that the Federal Government has so far only seen press reports of Hoxha's remarks. Previously, Albania had made normalization contingent on "unacceptable financial conditions," the spokesman said. This means big reparation demands claimed by Albania for damage done in World War II. The Federal Government has been unable, the spokesman said, to find out whether Albania has changed its mind. Only such a change can facilitate the establishment of diplomatic relations.

BREZHNEV'S BONN VISIT THE 'ONLY OPTION' LEFT TO HIM

DW021535 Frankfurt FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE in German 2 Nov 81 p 1

[Leo Wieland Editorial: "A Bit of Self-Preservation"]

[Text] Leonid Brezhnev's first trip to the West after the intervention in Afghanistan will take him to Bonn. The visit suits the Soviet leadership well which speaks of a "complicated international situation." It allows it to demonstrate an example of normal interstate relations in the middle of the East-West thunderstorm. This seems to be advisable and profitable to the Kremlin also with a view to its own people and the East European neighbors.

Meanwhile, the excursion to the Rhine is not one of several options but, if closely scrutinized, the only one: Mitterrand does not wish any meeting with Brezhnev as long as the latter's soldiers are in Kabul. Nothing draws him to Mrs Thatcher. The time is not ripe for a meeting with President Reagan. So what remains is the Federal Republic of Germany with which the Soviet Union is connected by more treaties and cultivated contacts than with any other country in the West.

These Germans at the same time are Moscow's most important trade partners. Their industry participates in old, and is interested in new, big projects. Their banks prove to be generous creditors. Their government does not obstruct the technology transfer for reasons of egoism in energy economy. Giving a few impulses more in this field surely is not Brezhnev's least concern. A gas pipeline from Siberia to central Europe is a foreign-exchange yielding investment in the future.

As long as Soviet industrial goods are hardly competitive on the world market and as long as enormous grain imports each year eat up the modest stock of hard currency, a tangibly great deal of good money on a long-term basis will come in only through the sale of fuels. Viewed from this angle Brezhnev's Bonn visit also is a bit of self-preservation for him. In the broader sense of the word this applies to his concept of policy toward the West, detente and peaceful coexistence -- the latter after Lenin's recipe: seize where possible, cooperate where necessary.

The Soviet public these days is being carefully tuned to this event. The state-conducted media orchestra neglects gross attacks on Chancellor Schmidt and confines itself to critical interim tones in the case of the foreign minister. This must be so, because the chief of the party and the state cannot visit a country where animosity awaits him. Consequently the Federal Republic and its governing politicians are placed temporarily into suitable light. The former appears as a home of a powerful anti-American peace movement. The latter are credited with having at least partially resisted the pressure for an arms buildup and having sought to persuade Washington to talk.

Moscow's propaganda desists from openly exploiting the internal conflicts in the Bonn government parties. It always quotes only the suitable voices, omits the others, and reminds the members of the Socialist International of common ideals. A supplement to this sort of public relations work in the forefield of the Brezhnev visit was a striking stream of German visitors to the Soviet capital. The guests ranging from Brandt via Lambsdorff and Vetter to Kiep were courted (the latter in a way hardly worth mentioning). Brezhnev granted all sorts of private audiences. Foreign diplomats were incessantly amazed: "Whenever I turn on Soviet television and no ice hockey match is relayed at that moment, there is definitely a German to be seen in the Kremlin," said an Englishman, slightly exaggerating.

For the time being little is in sight in the way of tangible material results of the Brezhnev visit. What matters is the frank exchange of opinions, the outward appearance and thus an opportunity of self-representation. Brezhnev's major topics are arms control and security policy. Unlike President Reagan, who cannot dodge ticklish debates even on variants of the unthinkable, namely, nuclear war, Brezhnev enjoys the advantage of being able to talk of peace above everything else. For the sake of that he will put up with criticism of Afghanistan and worried questions concerning Poland. It is a different question whether the timing would not be favorable for demanding a bit more from the visitor from Moscow in the bilateral, humanitarian sphere. If the trickling resettler figures were reflecting the level of relations, for example, then these relations would be in bad shape indeed.

Brezhnev's Bonn appearance precedes an important event by only a few days: the Americans and Russians plan to talk about medium-range weapon in Geneva on 30 November. What may be expected from Brezhnev in this connection is a climatic contribution rather than new proposals concerning the matter at issue. There will not be any such thing as a Soviet-American thaw even after the first meeting between Foreign Ministers Haig and Gromyko in New York -- who have a date next January again. PRAVDA's venomous rhetoric remaining unchanged, observers in Moscow at best note cracks in the ice. If these cracks could be widened at the Geneva negotiating table by means of Soviet readiness to make concessions, then Bonn's efforts for an improvement in the climate between the great powers would have been worthwhile. Brezhnev may learn on the Rhine that it is neither in the interest nor in the power of the Federal Republic to do more than persistently solicit such negotiations while remaining determined to share in the support of a correction of Soviet advanced armament by the West. This would simultaneously freshly mark the boundaries of separate detente policy in Europe.

BREZHNEV REMARKS ON ARMS LIMITATION SELF-SERVING

DW021533 Bonn DIE WELT in German 2 Nov 81 p 2

[Friedhelm Kemna commentary: "Brezhnev's Wooing"]

[Text] The Hamburg news magazine says it experienced what Ronald Reagan failed to achieve for his government: a logical, authoritative explanation of the positions of Soviet policy. Leonid Brezhnev supplied a troop of interviewers from the Elbe with a smooth picture of his peace strategy.

That Reagan's reconnoiterers have to achieve in toilsome guesswork is passed on by the German magazine people straight from the horse's mouth: Brezhnev counted out 975 missiles for them. The General Secretary said surprisingly that certainly not the West but maybe the Soviet Union needs nuclear counterarmament. The publisher of the magazine considered a question about the Afghanistan invasion as so sacrosanct that he did not put it. Brezhnev really gave useful information with regard to his Bonn visit: the Soviet Union seems determined to make the Germans "in the course of the tested line" partners of "basic decisions" for the security policy of the eighties. The tenor of the wooing is obvious: Those capable of mustering some insight are supposed to take the position of mediators -- or opponents -- with regard to those Americans who are unwilling to show insight. They would have, however, to accept an inequality the Kremlin master has ready for the Geneva negotiations, namely that there is nothing to be said about NATO counterarmament but only about the reduction of existing NATO arms systems and Soviet SS-20 medium-range arms. Washington and Bonn take a completely different view of this, at least for the time being.

COMMENTATOR VIEWS BREZHNEV REMARKS IN SOVIET CONTEXT

DW041349 Munich SUEDDEUTSCHE ZEITUNG in German 4 Nov 81 p 4

[Editorial by Moscow correspondent Josef Riedmiller: "A Month of the Russians"]

[Excerpts] Brezhnev's information to DER SPIEGEL and that given lately to a group of West German journalists in Moscow is not as poor with regard to news value as it may seem. Soviet information policy permits conclusions at least with regard to what will take place in the month of November. It is full of appointments and dates of great importance for the Soviets. Brezhnev's lectures to DER SPIEGEL will be followed by celebrations on the occasion of the 64th anniversary of the Ocotber Revolution. The CPSU Central Committee will be meeting in mid-November to hear Brezhnev's domestic and foreign policy report and then adopt the economic plan for the coming year. In the ensuing session of the Supreme Soviet, the financial and economic situations will be discussed. This certainly will not be an occasion to experience political success in view of the new poor harvest and the necessity to buy more grain from the West. Brezhnev hopes to experience success on the occasion of his Bonn visit and the Soviet-American negotiations in Geneva on limiting medium-range weapons in Europe which are to begin a few days after the visit.

So it will be a month of the Russians. They opened it with three remarkable clarifications: Moscow considers its SS-20 medium-range missiles to be the equivalent of the Forward Based Systems (FBS) of the Americans and similar French and British weapons, and it considers the zero solution as encompassing currently existing Eurostrategic weapons and not as NATO's renunciation of "counterarming" with Pershing II and cruise missiles in exchange for the scrapping of the SS-20's; the Soviets rule out the possibility of limiting a nuclear war regionally, thus disproving the peace movement argument that this is an implementable policy if the United States envisages such a scenario for Europe; and Brezhnev recognized in his speech at the 26th CPSU Congress and now again that the principle of a military balance, and thus also of deterrence, is the means to safeguard peace.

This leaves questions open with regard to Soviet military doctrine involving not defensive but offensive action against an attacker, thus giving room to what can be interpreted as an attack. We must also ask whether the strong counterstrikes at the assumed deployment areas of moble (American) missiles announced by Brezhnev -- strikes which promise to be effective only if these missiles have not yet been fired -- presuppose preventive war which is being verbally rejected by the Soviets. The Russians will count missiles with the Americans, not with the Germans, conflicting opinions can be heard in Moscow about the Federal Republic's contribution to the "counterarmament" conception. Brezhnev will not use his Bonn visit to sign significant documents but to point out the weight of his goals. The time for this seems favorable because the wind is blowing from many directions in the face of the Germans. The Soviet attacks against the Americans result from great disappointment in their policy, but nothing would be more wrong than to conclude that Moscow was changing its orientation and looking for a new partner called the Federal Republic of Germany. Soviet policy will remain firmly directed at the United States the more unpredictable the latter becomes, there is no confused thinking in Moscow where they have always made a clear distinction between big, medium and small powers.

FRENCH-AFRICAN SUMMIT ENDS, APPEALS FOR PEACE IN CHAD

NC042118 Paris AFP in English 2049 GMT 4 Nov 81

[Text] Paris, 4 Nov (AFP) -- The annual Franco-African summit conference -- the largest since it was inaugurated in 1973 -- ended here today with an appeal for the urgent setting up of the projected pan-African peace force in Chad.

At a final press conference chaired by French President Francois Mitterrand, Zaire President Mobutu Sese Seko read his own resolution on Chad, adopted by the summit, calling for help in forming Chad's integrated national army and in rebuilding both the country and the administration.

He also announced that his own government, Benin and Gabon had agreed to join Nigeria and Senegal in providing troops for the pan-African force.

The conference, which grouped delegations from 33 countries, also issued a detailed appeal for regulation of prices of raw materials and of the essential commodities imported by developing countries.

The so-called "Paris appeal", which referred back to the April, 1980 Lagos plan of action at the African economic summit, said that without security in pricing Third World countries were "prevented from planning their future."

There should be a halt to the "scandalous situation" where there was "brutal fluctuation" in Third World incomes because prices were "fixed at the whim of markets situated thousands of miles away, or as a result of specualation."

During the press conference, at which Mr Mitterrand was joined by Mr Mobutu and the conference doyen, Ivory Coast President Felix Houphouet-Boigny, the French leader fielded questions about the future of Chad following the latest developments there.

During the past 48 hours Libyan troops have started withdrawing from Chad at the request of President Goukouni Oueddei, who called for aid from Tripoli 11 months ago to help him break the stalemate in that country's civil war.

The French president refused to be drawn into detailed discussion of possible developments in the central African state, refering questioners to Chadian President Goukouni Oueddei who took part in the conference although he did not attend the press conference.

In a break with the traditions of past years the normal Francophone conference, which has 20 full members, was joined by observer delegations from several English, Arab, Portuguese and Spanish-speaking states of Africa.

Sierra Leone President Siaka Stevens and General Mohamed Siad Barre of Somalia joined 18 other presidents at the conference, as observers, while Kenyan Foreign Minister Robert Ouka arrived here Tuesday night to represent this year's chairman of the Organization of African Unity (OAU), President Daniel Arap Moi.

Mr Mitterrand said that the conference organization could not be compared with the commonwealth of English-speaking states, for it now attracted not only "Anglophone, but Lusophone and Hispanophone states."

But it retained an informal character, and it was important that the Francophone countries of Africa "keep their original traits."

The conference was proving a way to "develop and maintain a dialogue between Africa and France," Mr Mitterrand said.

In reply to questions on several political issues in Africa, including Chad, Namibia and the Western Sahara, Mr Mitterrand said that the conference was taking care not to try to substitute itself for the OAU.

On Namibia the French President said that all the delegations agreed that the independence process should be completed in 1982. As regards the Western Sahara, he went on, despite some differences, all delegates supported the latest OAU initiative, which calls for a referendum in the disputed territory, and added the hope that "self determination of the peoples would happen normally."

In reply to another question he noted that the issue of internal security in member countries had been raised by some delegates, although he was quick to add that it was not a major subject for debate.

"When people are allies they help each other," he said, "which means we shall study (defence) agreements carefully before signing them."

Next year's summit will be held in Kinshasa, which was originally the agreed venue for this year's meeting before it was transferred to Paris.

Reaction to Libyan Withdrawal

LD041910 Paris Domestic Service in French 1800 GMT 4 Nov 81

[Text] While in Chad the airbridge established by Al-Qadhdhafi is permitting virtually all of the Libyan troops stationed in Ndjamena to be evacuated at an accelerated rate, the French American [as heard] summit in Paris is ending in a mood of uncertainty. Most of the heads of state express satisfaction over Al-Qadhdhafi's withdrawal but wonder whether in the shorter or longer term his absence will increase the risks of a renewal of the civil war in Chad. The French Government for its part reaffirms its willingness to contribute to the consolidation of the unity of Chad and pays tribute to President Goukouni's cool.

Following the announcement of the Libyans' withdrawal from Chad, the ball is now in the court of Africa and France. In order to avoid the absence of Al-Qadhdhafi's soldiers leading to troubles in Ndjamena, the inter-African force should arrive on the spot as quickly as possible. It should thus be established as rapidly as possible, otherwise France's diplomatic efforts run the risk of being reduced to nothing.

GOVERNMENT FACES DILEMMA ON COMPUTER EXPORTS TO USSR

PM041625 Paris LE MONDE in French 21 Oct 81 pp 1, 38

[Jean-Michel Quatrepoint article: "Paris Hesitant to Authorize Supply of Computer Equipment for Gas Pipelines"]

[Text] Will the government sanction the contract signed 30 September in Moscow by the Thomson group for the supply of computer equipment for gas pipelines? Because of its economic and political implications and because of the questions which it poses about the orientation of French diplomacy, what could have been just a simple business slip-up looks like it is becoming one of those "prickly issues" which haunt the authorities and industrial circles.

In order to try to unravel the intricacies of a very complex matter, we need to go back a bit. Everything begins with the plan for a Soviet-European gas pipeline. About 5,000 km long, it is to link the Soviet deposits in Siberia to Europe.

The FRG and France, in principle, are to receive half of the envisaged supplies (35 to 40 billion cubic meters in total per year) with the Netherlands, Italy, Austria, Belgium and Sweden sharing the rest.

Western banks have signed a credit agreement with the USSR allowing that country to obtain the equipment necessary to build the gas pipeline.

The equipment purchases will run to about $10 billion. The USSR has already signed several contracts for the supply of pumping stations with Mannesmann (FRG), Creusot-Loire (France), and ENI (Italy). France's credit of (provided essentially by Credit Lyonnais) is of the order of Fr10 billion and incurs 7.75 percent interest.

Several Stages

The French share mainly includes the supply of automated devices, computers and telecontrol and telecommunications systems for gas pipelines. For the Soviet authorities, faithful to their custom, this contract is in "several parts"; that is, it is the start of much broader cooperation and includes several stages. The first, called yamal 1, is concerned with equipment intended for the gas pipeline to Europe; the second stage (Yamal 2) mainly includes the supply of a computerized control system for all Soviet gas pipelines. These two parts of the contract represent an overall total of Fr1.8 billion, of which about FR1 billion is for yamal 2. It is the biggest contract ever concluded for this type of equipment.

There were two French firms -- MATRA and Thomson -- in the bidding. The first joined with an engineering firm, Sofregaz, and subcontracted its mini-computers to Thomson. But the latter company had made its own proposal in association with an American consultant specializing in gas pipelines.

The French authorities "backed" the proposal from MATRA, which was effectively accepted and obtained a letter of intent from the Soviet authorities. This is where the problems began, because the Quai d'Orsay and the Ministry of Defense showed serious reservations about this contract. Although the two departments were in agreement on sanctioning the delivery of equipment for just the gas pipeline to Europe, they were opposed to any mention being made in the contract, in whatever way, of the latter stages, mainly the yamal 2 plan for computerized control of the system of Soviet gas pipelines.

Why this stance? Since the invasion of Afghanistan East-West relations have cooled and the U.S. administration has been far more disapproving about the transfer of technology to the countries of the East. Reagan's arrival in the White House in January 1981 only served to reinforce this tendency, and the United States does not conceal its intention of returning to a stricter application of the rules of the Coordinating Committee for Multilateral Exports Control (COCOM).

In principle a great deal of computer equipment is under an embargo. For the older products there has been hardly any problem. On the other hand prior agreement must be obtained from COCOM to supply high-performance equipment.

Formerly, numerous European countries and even American firms got around this provision. They presented COCOM with a watered down version of their contracts with the countries of the East, with the specifications and performances of the computers minimized. Well, it seems that the attitude of the Quai d'Orsay and the Defense Ministry has developed toward greater respect for the COCOM rules.

MATRA was therefore told 28 September not to sign the contract, which Lagardere's firm did with a heavy heart. The Soviet authorities then immediately contacted Thomson and within 48 hours Philippe Giscard d'Estaing, director of international affairs for this group, signed the contract which MATRA had been forced to refuse. The document initialed by Thomson deals with supplies for the European gas pipeline, but it also mentions the future stages, mainly the yamal 2 contract, and envisages a time limit for its finalization.

In Paris "they" have been examining the Thomson dossier for 3 weeks and there are still political reservations about this contract. What is the explanation for this greater sensitivity to American arguments, this desire to respect COCOM rules better?

"It is not possible to talk 'tough' to the USSR in political terms, denounce their action in Afghanistan and elsewhere, and sell them modern technology," they say. "There must therefore be a relationship between the political and the commercial."

These new "crusaders" which one meets in the corridors of power come from various backgrounds: from the old regime, but also from socialism, which has always had an "Atlantic" trend in its center. They are in favor of a reduction of business with the countries of the East (and even with the Arab countries) in preference for exchanges with the OECD and the Third World countries. They are especially very hostile to the gas contract with the USSR, merging with Washington's stance on this. It is known that in Ottawa, Reagan "berated" his European allies, cautioning them against the risk of energy dependence on the USSR.

Certainly Paris has never seriously envisaged going back on this gas contract, and the negotiations on a price indexing formula, which have been under way all summer, are near to a favorable conclusion. But in the matter of high technology equipment or strategic products it seems that the Quai d'Orsay, just as the Defense Ministry and certain other even wider circles, are no longer as insensitive as previously to the "Atlantic sirens."

It will still be necessary to decide on the Thomson dossier, and there are voices everywhere warning against the consequences of too strict an "attitude" with regard to the specifications of equipment. "Not only would France lose this contract, but there would be a chain reaction," an industrialist explains. "In all, French industry would stand to lose contracts worth billions of francs...to the advantage of its Japanese, German and even American competitors, who ask fewer questions. Moreover, what is it that objectively strengthens the USSR the most: the sale of wheat to feed its population or the sale of computers...."

Aware of being "caught in a trap" the authorities are seeking a compromise solution, which would make it simultaneously possible to sanction the Thomson contract, while asking that company to share it with MATRA....and to respect the spirit of COCOM, while supplying the necessary equipment to the Soviets. In brief, to return in some measure to previous practice.

AWACS DEAL ENDS U.S. 'DIPLOMATIC APATHY'

PM040959 Paris LE MONDE in French 30 Oct 81 p 1

[Editorial: "Mr Reagan and the AWACS"]

[Excerpts] The ardent campaign waged for weeks by President Reagan for the sale of five radar aircraft to Saudi Arabia has borne fruit: By 52 votes to 48 the Senate rejected a motion which would have blocked not only the AWACS order but a whole package of sophisticated weapons worth more than $8 billion. This is an undeniable victory for Mr Reagan.

The White House's arguments for securing the decision are more psychological than strategic. The main aim was to prove that the President still had his freedom of initiative and action without risking being disowned by the Congress. His sympathies with the Israeli state have not prevented him from supplying the arsenal to one of that country's enemies. Should this be seen as the start of a move to balance American policy in the Near East, which has hitherto virtually given in to Jerusalem decrees? In any event this is a marked gesture of good will toward Saudi Arabia, a state which Washington will do anything to keep in the "moderate" camp even though it condemns the Camp David agreements.

Could the plan put forward by Crown Prince Fahd — who made a detour via Bonn on his way back from Cancun to visit his "friend" Helmut Schmidt — be an element of discussion for Washington if the Egyptian-Israeli negotiations on "Palestinian autonomy" remained deadlocked? In any case, there would have been no point in making quasi-Herculean efforts to secure Senate approval for the AWACS sale if there was merely to be a return to the diplomatic apathy which has hitherto characterized the American attitude to the Israeli-Arab conflict.

Thus the AWACS affair would seem to be a means and not an end in itself.

The history of the arms contract with Riyadh however, has yet to be written. Jerusalem, which may know what it is doing on this subject, sees Saudi Arabia's possession of AWACS as a threat to its security.

GOOD REACTION TO REAGAN INVITATION TO SPADOLINI

AU050857 Rome ANSA in English 0845 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Text] Rome, 5 Nov (ANSA) -- United States President Ronald Reagan's invitation to Premier Giovanni Spadolini to make a visit to the U.S. was seen here as having strengthened the position the Italian Government which can now boast an important international recognition.

The great majority of political commentators here saw the Reagan move as a big boost to Spadolini's five-way coalition government of Christian Democrats [DC], Socialists, Social Democrats, Republicans and Liberals after recent polemics and warnings that a crisis might be in the offing. The government partners yesterday hurried to express their satisfaction over Spadolini's invitation to go to Washington.

Christian Democratic official Manfredo Manfredi said that it was to be interpreted as American recognition of the government's activities on an international plane and as a confirmation of the attention the Reagan administration is giving Italian political affairs. Manfredi, who is deputy chairman of the DC group in the house, said that the Christian Democratic Party deputies, like party Secretary Flaminio Piccoli, had confirmed their loyal and constructive support for the premier and have urged him to persevere with the government's agreed-upon program. Manfredi also stressed that it was not with a political crisis that the country's economic crisis could be eased.

The reference to Piccoli was not by chance. A chill had been thrown into the coalition by Socialist Secretary Bettino Craxi with his proposal for a "legislature pact" with Piccoli. This pact would set up a preferential relationship between the two parties, and was seen by many as leading eventually, although indirectly, to a weakening of the present administration.

Liberal Party President Aldo Bozzi yesterday said that in Italy a strange situation was developing where, on the one hand, the majority forces expressed their support for the government, but weakened its prestige and credibility by linking it to an emergency situation and talking of formulas for its successor.

"On the other hand, the Communist Party says it will combat the government but in reality backs it," not out of confidence in Spadolini but out of aversion for solutions offered as a replacement for him, Bozzi continued.

However, a softening of the PCI position towards Spadolini, (at least in so far as remarks recently made by party veterans Gerardo Chiaromonte and Giorgio Napolitano were interpreted) is not destined to have any real effect on the political picture, in the view of Socialist Deputy Secretary Claudio Martelli. He said that the communists were dealing with the Spadolini government the way they do with NATO... bowing to it on a general plane but fighting it on all practical matters.

Martelli, in an interview to Milan's IL GIORNALE today, also denied that his party had proposed any legislature pact. He claimed that the Socialists had called for negotiations on political orientations and policies. Negotiations do not mean an agreement, but rather a probe to see if an accord is possible or whether a rupture is inevitable, he said.

Meanwhile, this afternoon the cabinet meets to discuss among other matters, a bill for the monetary revaluation of companies' goods and capital.

DEFENSE MINISTER COMMENTS ON SINAI PEACE FORCE

AU040837 Rome ANSA in English 0830 GMT 4 Nov 81

[Text] Grosseto, 4 Nov (ANSA) -- Italian Defense Minister Lelio Lagario described the peacekeeping force to be sent into the Sinai for the final phase of the Israeli withdrawal from the peninsula in April as an "operation of peace" similar in many ways to the one mounted to save Indochinese refugees, in a statement delivered here Tuesday. The defense chief, who shared the reviewing stand with head of state Sandro Pertini for an airforce parade and flyover, declared in his prepared statement that, "our armed forces will never threaten anyone.

"We are a peaceful country and our armed forces are an expression of a peaceful country which wants to live in peace with everyone, in a peace based on security," Lagorio said.

When questioned by newsmen on the Rome government decision to join the Sinai peacekeeping force, the defense minister replied, "I do not see how it is possible to criticize someone who will arrive saying: we are here to restore something to its legitimate owner, something which was taken by force." In his encounter with the press, Lagorio also said that a contingent of volunteers would be preferred for the Sinai mission in the spring.

Thus far, four governments of the European Economic Community, Britain, France, Italy and the Netherlands, have agreed to send troops to take part in the peacekeeping force.

SUDANESE VICE PRESIDENT ARRIVES FOR VISIT

AU050847 Rome ANSA in English 0833 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Text] Rome, 5 Nov (ANSA) -- Sudanese Vice President 'Umar at-Tayyib has arrived in Rome for a three-day visit. During his stay he will have meetings with Italian political leaders, including Defense Minister Lelio Lagorio.

The Sudanese official arrived at Rome's Leonardo da Vinci Airport Wednesday afternoon.

FISHING BOAT INTERCEPTED BY TUNISIAN PATROL

AU041954 Rome ANSA in English 1938 GMT 4 Nov 81

[Text] Rome, 4 Nov (ANSA) -- An incident in which an Italian fishing boat was attacked by a Tunisian patrol boat on Tuesday morning in the zone of the Sicilian Canal was clarified here today by an official note from the Italian Ministry of Defense. The note stated that the incident occurred at eight am on Tuesday in an area of the canal ten miles north of Mammellone.

At that hour, the Italian Navy frigate "Fasan", conducting a fishing patrol in the canal, came to the aid of the Italian fishing boat, the "Condor Uno" which had been intercepted by a Tunisian motor patrol.

According to the ministerial note, the presence of the Italian navy frigate prevented the capture of the fishing boat by the Tunisians who had used arms to convince the Italians to surrender their boat. Damages suffered to the fishing boat testify to the use of arms, according to the ministry.

Once the Italian frigate was sighted, the ministry note concluded, the Tunisian patrol boat left the scene and the "Condor Uno" proceeded to the north, escorted by the frigate.

PAPER REVIEWS GOVERNMENT'S POSITION ON MIDEAST

PM041659 Rome LA REPUBBLICA in Italian 1-2 Nov 81 p 2

[Text] Rome -- Yesterday's meeting in Beirut between Palestinian Leader 'Arafat and Italian Ambassador Luccioli Ottieri is the most substantial step taken so far by the Foreign Ministry within the framework of the diplomatic offensive in which it will try to explain to the Arabs the peaceful significance of our participation in the multinational force. All Italian diplomats in Arab capitals have received detailed instructions: The international task force (totaling 2,500 men) has nothing to do with Camp David; is, if anything, a development of the stance adopted by the Europeans in Venice; and does not in the least jeopardize the necessity of a dialogue with the PLO. Indeed, the Rome government considers it impossible to resolve the Middle East dispute without involving 'Arafat's organization.

Thus, Luccioli Ottieri assured the PLO chairman of "the Italian Government's desire for relations of understanding and friendship with your organization" and described the Sinai international peace force as identical "in spirit" to the UN peace force in south Lebanon, in which Italy is represented by a number of helicopter pilots.

According to the ambassador, the meeting was marked by "the utmost cordiality." 'Arafat replied that "there are friendly relations between the PLO and Italy," but expressed "disappointment" at Spadolini's decision to participate in the Sinai operation. "We want better relations with Italy," he stressed.

PLO representative in Rome Hammad was equally caution: "We appreciate the stance adopted by [Minister for Southern Italy] Signorile, [Interior Minister] Rognoni, [Foreign Trade Minister] Capria, [Minister Without Portfolio for Civil Defense] Zamberletti and [Education Minister] Bodrato, which are in line with our incessant demands for full recognition of the PLO by the Italian Government." Nevertheless, Hammad complained that the government's decision "weakens Europe's position in the Arab world."

Signorile's proposal for our government's recognition of the PLO is supported by some representatives of the DC leftwing, such as Silvestri and Treasury Undersecretary Francanzani.

AVANTI rails against the PCI, without naming it, however. "It is amazing that there are some people in the left who, like Moscow, clearly for ulterior motives, are fanning the flames of the most extreme stances in the Arab world, which cannot be identified with 'Arafat's."

The Foreign Ministry was favorably impressed by 'Arafat's statement in favor of "coexistence" with Israel, in accordance with Saudi Crown Prince Fahd's plan. This could be a step toward the "conditional mutual recognition" between Israel and the PLO hoped for by our diplomats.

At present, Italy restricts itself to political, not legal and diplomatic recognition of the PLO. As far as Rome is concerned, 'Arafat represents only part of the Palestinian people. The PLO, however, claims full recognition on a level with other states, since it claims to represent the entire Palestinian nation.

The degree of Arab reaction to the multinational force will be measurable at the 25 November Fez summit, which 15 countries have already announced they will attend. Syria has announced that it will ask its Arab partners to adopt a joint stance with respect to European countries willing to participate in the Sinai operation: "It jeopardizes European-Arab relations and means the ned of any kind of dialogue between the EEC and the Arab countries." [as published: apparently quoting a Syrian source]

DEPUTIES WITHDRAW FROM UCD, POSSIBLE PARTY BREAKUP

LD041558 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 0700 GMT 4 Nov 81

[Text] [Begin UCD President Sahagun recording] If anyone feels he belongs on the left rather than in the center, let him join a leftwing party or find the place which suits him best. And if anyone feels he belongs on the right rather than in the center, let him find his place on the right. That is what rightwing parties are for. [end recording]

[Announcer] And indeed they have gone, in a veritable stampede which has left the UCD dazed, and consequently has left the whole difficult internal equilibrium of the country and its political balance vulnerable. About 20 UCD members of parliament have now left the party or are about to for one reason or another. The truce which the Executive Committee called for on Monday has not happened, and the Prime Minister himself has now been drawn into the situation affecting the UCD, which he was doing his best to avoid.

And this is where we begin the story. Last night, Calvo-Sotelo spent 4 hours at a meeting at the Moncloa Palace with six of his ministers to examine the situation, and all the signs now are that he is going to pick up this hot potato wihtout further delay, as various sectors in the party had demanded. EL PAIS this morning carries the following headline on its front page: Calvo-Sotelo Prepared To Take Over as President of UCD. Last night's meeting was not attended, however, by UCD President Rodriguez Sahagun because he was not invited. He has since expressed surprise at this and said he expects to be given an explanation today. Other comments on the situation have come from Adolfo Suarez, who said he is very sad, and among others from Felipe Gonzalez who said everybody should keep calm.

Then there is also the decision by 15 or 16 Social Democrat members of parliament to leave the party, a decision which was finalized last night. These are headed by Fernandez Ordonez, just 2 months after his resignation as minister of justice. Thus we have a complex array of news relating to the possible breakup of the UCD.

The first point is Calvo-Sotelo's meeting with six of his ministers -- the so-called crisis team. Here is a report from Alberto Martinez:

[Begin recording] Ministers Martin Villa, Roson, Oliart, Perez-Llorca, Cabanillas and Garcia Diez locked themselves away in a meeting last night with Prime Minister Calvo-Sotelo to examine the situation inside the UCD and to consider possible ways out of the crisis. Earlier, at 2000, the prime minister went to the Zarzuela Palace to discuss official business with King Juan Carlos: and earlier still, at 1700, he had a meeting with Carlos Ferrer Salat, president of the CEDE, the employers' organization.

According to a government spokesman, speaking at around 0400 this morning, four options were considered at the crisis team meeting: First, that the situation could be left as it is -- this was considered to be unfeasible. Second, parliament could be dissolved -- this was also considered unlikely. Third, the prime minister could resign -- this was also ruled out. And fourth, Prime Minister Calvo-Sotelo could take responsibility for running the party -- this, in the view of the government spokesman, was the most likely of all. This fourth option would be put into effect, not at an extraordinary party congress but by the party's Political Council. This could be done by means of a change to the statutes made at the Palma de Mallorca congress, under which the party presidency -- currently held by Rodriguez Sahagun -- is decided by the Political Council. The government spokesman further stressed that nothing definite has yet been decided, since the meeting of the crisis team is to continue today.

BRIEFS

BASQUE MILITANTS -- Ten Basque militants belonging to the separatist Euskadiko Eskerra coalition have been arrested over the past two days in the province of Guipuzcoa, police said here today. The ten were reportedly to held under anti-terrorist legislation. [Text] [Paris AFP in English 1516 GMT 4 Nov 81 NC]

SWEDEN

OFFICERS EXAMINE EQUIPMENT OF DETAINED USSR SUB

NC041406 Paris AFP in English 1352 GMT 4 Nov 81

[Text] Karlskrona , Sweden, 4 Nov (AFP) -- A Swedish officer today had "technical" discussions with the commander of a Soviet submarine that ran aground near a naval base here last week, the Karlskrona naval base announced. Swedish Commander Carl Andersson and Captain Piotr Guzhin met on board the "Whisky-137" submarine and examined the equipment that the Soviet officer said broke down before the vessel ran aground in the Swedish military zone.

Today's meeting followed six hours of questioning Monday aboard a Swedish destroyer. There was no word on when a new hearing would be held. Meanwhile, local Swedish radio today broadcast a Soviet radio message from the Kaliningrad base asking the submarine for detailed information on the position and type of Swedish vessels guarding it. The security cordon has been reinforced since the submarine was refloated Monday. According to local newspapers, a senior Soviet naval officer whose presence was kept secret for days after the sub ran aground. [sentence as received] Swedish military authorities have made no direct mention of this officer but, according to reports, have implicitly confirmed his presence aboard the Whisky-137.

Sub Commander 'Cooperative'

LD042006 Stockholm International Service in Swedish 1900 GMT 4 Nov 81

[Text] Here is a situation report from a press conference in Karlskrona given by Commodore Lennart Forsman:

The press conference of Commodore Lennart Forsman is over, and he announced that Commander Karl Andersson had been on board the Russian submarine on several occasions today, and he also said that the Soviet commander is very cooperative and gives answers to all questions put by Karl Andersson. Karl Andersson is back and has forwarded the information to the commander in chief. Lennart Forsman also said that there is increased activity by Russian naval units off the Blekinge coast, which is seen as a clear demonstration of strength. Presumably it can be said with all certainty that there will be no departure for the submarine today since we, the assembled Western press including us Swedish journalists, have been called to a press conference at 0800 tomorrow.

Coded Messages Jammed

LD042034 Stockholm International Service in Swedish 1900 GMT 4 Nov 81

[Text] Earlier today discussions were picked up on the short wave band between the submarine captain and his superiors on a Soviet ship outside Swedish territorial waters. This is what it sounded like: [Passage of Russian recording indistinct]

The Swedish military jammed these Soviet transmissions. The submarine chief complained to the Swedish navy's representative, who replied that the jamming will cease if the Soviet radio officer does not code his messages but instead transmits in clear text to the ship lying outside Swedish territorial waters.

SUB GROUNDING LINKED TO WEAPONS SYSTEM TESTING

LD042122 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 2100 GMT 4 Nov 81

[Text] Secret tests of a new Swedish weapons system were in progress just as the Soviet submarine ran aground in Blekinge archipelago 8 days ago. This was confirmed this evening by the defense staff.

A new submarine [word indistinct] torpedo was being testcd and, in addition, secret materials tests were being carried out outside Aspo, on 27 October, the day the submarine ran aground. Helicopters and submarines took part in the tests. The defense staff says that the Soviet Union probably knew about these tests and this may be the reason for the submarine's inquisitive [word indistinct].

Tests Declared 'Routine'

LD042154 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 2100 GMT 4 Nov 81

[Interview with (Roger Johansson), press officer of the Swedish Defense Staff, on 4 November conducted by unidentified Stockholm Radio correspondent; place not given -- recorded]

[Text] [(Johansson)] On 27 October we carried out tests outside Aspo with a new submarine (?interceptor) torpedo [as heard]; these were secret materials tests. On the Swedish side, helicopters and submarines took part in these tests. This is more or less all I can say about this activity.

[Question] You cannot say anything about how the Soviet military authorities might have found out about this?

[Answer] Well, it isn't really so odd, because in connection with this exercise, the tests, one must go out in advance and talk to the people who are to take part and so on. So there was an entirely open, not confidential communication about 2 weeks before the tests. Of course, no secret information was included about the content and the aim of the tests or what tests were to be carried out.

[Question] Could the Soviet submarine have gained valuable information?

[Answer] I cannot comment on that. I have no idea of that.

[Question] You have not obtained any proof through radio monitoring or material on board the vessel, or such like?

[Answer] I cannot comment on that either.

[Question] Were these routine tests?

[Answer] These tests were a link in the testing of this submarine (?interceptor) torpedo, but by no means sensational tests completely decisive for (?the activity). They were routine tests, if one may use the expression, for testing [words indistinct] is not particularly [word indistinct].

GOVERNMENT REPORTS SHARPER 'TONE' IN SUB AFFAIR

LD041440 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 1400 GMT 4 Nov 81

[Text] The tone has now been sharpened in the submarine affair. The Swedish Foreign Ministry has reacted strongly to the demand of Soviet Ambassador Mikhail Yakovlev that the investigation must be speeded up. During his meeting with Foreign Minister Ola Ullsten yesterday, Yakovlev officially expressed demands on how the matter is to be handled. [Words indistinct] he said that the investigation is proceeding too slowly.

The same demand was expressed to Swedish ambassador to Moscow Carl de Greer, when he was called to see Deputy Foreign Minister Zemskov. Permanent Under Secretary of State Leif Leifland rejects the Soviet (?accusations) in clear terms. He says the interrogation of the Soviet submarine captain could have begun [words indistinct] earlier [words indistinct] earlier [words indistinct].

Already last week [words indistinct] two alternatives: the discussions should take place either on Swedish territory outside the military restricted area, where Soviet diplomats could be present, or on board the submarine, without any Soviet diplomats. The Soviet authorities chose the first alternative, and two diplomats flew from Stockholm to Karlskrona. One of the Soviet diplomats has now returned to Stockholm.

Report on Investigation

LD041804 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 1700 GMT 4 Nov 81

[Text] The commander in chief, Lennart Ljung, today handed over a new report to the government. The report contains a detailed statement on what has been found out so far in the submarine affair. It concerns the questioning of the Soviet commander and the examination of the submarine's navigation equipment. Nobody has wanted to give a statement on how long the investigation by the commander in chief is to continue. The government is meeting right now to review the report. A communique from the government is expected later this evening.

USSR To Pay Costs

LD042246 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 2100 GMT 4 Nov 81

[Text] The submarine affair is costing quite a lot of money. According to the defense staff, one can reckon with about 500,000 kronas per day, and most of this the Soviet Union will eventually have to pay [words indistinct]. The agreement with the Soviet Union means that they are to pay for the actual salvage, and large parts of the costs must be classified among that, the Defense Ministry says. They say that the final bill to the Soviet Union will be several millions.

Ullsten Expects Decision Soon

LD042322 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 2100 GMT 4 Nov 81

[Interview with Swedish Foreign Affairs Minister Ola Ullsten by Stockholm Radio correspondent Thomas Hempelt, on 4 November -- recorded]

[Text] We have also spoken to Foreign Affairs Minister Ola Ullsten, and he also confirms these tests.

[Ullsten] A technical test was in progress involving helicopters and Swedish submarine [words indistinct].

[Question] Does this make the whole thing more serious?

[Answer] Well, it is equally serious, irrespective of the cause, when a foreign naval [word indistinct] violates Swedish territorial waters. Of course, it would be very serious if they had known that this test would take place. We have no evidence of that.

[Question] Will the indication of espionage become more credible (?now)?

[Answer] That suspicion has, of course, existed all the time and it becomes neither more nor less credible [words indistinct].

[Question] The Russian ambassador was at the Foreign Ministry (?again) this evening. What was that conversation about?

[Answer] We have had quite a few conversations during this past week, and I cannot reveal the contents of this conversation either.

[Question] Is there impatience now on the Soviet side that things are proceeding slowly?
[Answer] (?There is) reason to be impatient that our territory is violated by [words indistinct].

[Question] What do you say to them when they express this kind of criticism?
[Answer] [Passage indistinct]

[Question] You do not think that things are proceeding slowly?
[Answer] No, one cannot claim that. We have acted according to all rules and in a reasonable way, as we see it.

[Question] Will there be a government decision now on this?
[Answer] I hope it will be possible for the government to make a decision tomorrow.

[Question] And that decision means that this vessel can leave and that this affair is wound up?
[Answer] One cannot [word indistinct] what the decision will contain, but the commander in chief submitted his report this evening. We shall examine it this evening and during the night and hope to be able to make a decision tomorrow.

[Question] And no further measures are needed by the commander in chief?
[Answer] No, now (?it should not be necessary), not as regards the inquiry.

[Question] Would further activity from the Swedish side be possible after the inquiry has been completed?
[Answer] Of course, we must examine the whole affair and see what political reactions it may cause.

[Question] And what can it [words indistinct]?
[Answer] I cannot enter into that, but it is still a very serious matter that has taken place and we must [words indistinct] (?react accordingly).

Government Meeting

LD051026 Stockholm International Service in Swedish 1000 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Text] The government is meeting just now to discuss the submarine affair. The government will decide whether it will be satisfied with the information yielded so far by the interrogations and the examinations of the submarine and whether it will release the Soviet submarine. The report of the commander in chief of the armed forces, Lennart Ljung, will be the basis of the decision.

During its meeting, the government decided to convene the Advisory Council for Foreign Affairs to a meeting at the palace at 1230 [as heard]. In the meantime the government continues its preparations in the submarine affair.

If the government decides to release the submarine, it will take at least 3 hours before the submarine can depart. First a seaworthiness examination will be carried out. Two navy minesweepers will then escort the submarine to international waters.

Late on Wednesday evening, one more Soviet frigate joined the naval unit close to the Swedish territorial limit. Soviet strength now consists of 11 ships. Even Danish warships have approached the area and are now keeping a watch on the Soviet ships at radar distance.

QUEEN OUTLINES GOVERNMENT PROGRAM FOR NEW TERM

LD041024 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 0925 GMT 4 Nov 81

[Excerpt] The Queen, in her speech opening the new session of Parliament today, said:

My government regard the security of the nation and the preservation of peace as matters of the first importance. Increased resources will be devoted to defence and the most efficient use made of them. My government will continue to play an active role within the North Atlantic alliance.

International efforts to enable Afghanistan to resume her independent and non-aligned status will have my government's active support. Despite the situation in Afghanistan and Cambodia, my government will continue to work for better East-West relations, for an early and successful conclusion to the Madrid meeting on the Helsinki Final Act and for specific, equitable and verifiable measures of arms control.

They welcome the forthcoming negotiations between the United States and the Soviet Union on limiting long-range theatre nuclear forces.

My government reaffirm their strong commitment to the European Community. During the remainder of the British presidency, and thereafter as a member state, the United Kingdom will play its full part in its development.

My government are anxious to see satisfactory decisions on restructuring the community budget and improving the common agricultural policy. They will seek early agreement on a revised common fisheries policy, and will continue to support the accession of the community of Spain and Portugal.

My government support the contribution of the member states of the European Community towards a just, lasting and comprehensive settlement of the Arab-Israel dispute and will continue to work with all the parties to the dispute. They support the efforts of the Non-aligned Movement, the Islamic Conference and the United Nations to bring about a negotiated settlement to the conflict between Iran and Iraq.

Efforts to reach an internationally recognised agreement in Namibia will be continued, in cooperation with our allies.

My government attach great importance to the Commonwealth and the United Nations and will continue to play an active part in both organisations. They will join with other countries and responsible international organisations in efforts to resolve the economic difficulties of both developing and developed countries.

My government will seek to maintain close relations between the United Kingdom and the Republic of Ireland.

Members of the House of Commons, estimates for the public service will be laid before you.

My Lords and Members of the House of Commons, my government attach the utmost importance to maintaining progress in reducing inflation by the pursuit of firm monetary and fiscal policies, to further improving the efficiency of the economy, and to strengthening industry, so as to restore competitiveness abroad and prosperity at home. They hope to see this assisted by further reductions in the level of wage settlements.

Plans for public expenditure will reflect the importance of restricting the claims of the public sector on the nation's resources. My government share the nation's concern at the growth of unemployment and will continue to direct help to those groups and individuals most hard-pressed by the recession.

A bill will be introduced on employment and labour relations.

Measures will be introduced to amend the financial arrangements of the National Coal Board and some other public undertakings, and to facilitate private investment in the oil-producing business of the British National Oil Corporation. Measures will also be proposed to facilitate private investment and promote competition in the activities of the British Gas Corporation.

State involvement in transport will be further reduced and the fixed penalty system for road traffic offences observed and extended.

My government's policies will seek to ensure that all individuals, whatever their race, colour or creed, have equal rights, responsibilities and opportunities.

My government will continue to devote themselves to the complex problems of Northern Ireland. The search will go on for acceptable ways of enabling the people of Northern Ireland to play a fuller part in its administration. My government will work for improvements in the security situation.

The requirements of law and order and the services employed to uphold them will continue to enjoy my government's complete support. Legislation will be introduced to improve the criminal justice system in England and Wales.

Measures will be brought forward to amend the law relating to the assumption of civil jurisdiction by courts in the United Kingdom and for the reciprocal enforcement of judgments in civil and commercial matters.

Legislation will be introduced to establish a scheme of unified housing benefit and to place a duty on employers to provide sick pay during the early weeks of sickness.

A bill will be brought forward to improve the safeguards for detained patients and to make other reforms in the law on mental health in England and Wales.

Measures will be introduced to implement my government's conclusions on the report of the committee of inquiry into local government in Scotland and to provide for a modernised code of civic government in Scotland.

Legislation will be introduced to improve the accountability of local authorities for the level of their rates.

Other measures will be laid before you.

CARRINGTON INTERVIEWED ON EVE OF SAUDI VISIT

PM041491 London ASH-SHARQ AL-AWSAT in Arabic 3 Nov 81 p 1

[Wafa'i Diyab report: "Carrington in Saudi Arabia today, Amir Fahd's initiative is a very important step and the European states are agreed on this matter"]

[Text] London -- British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington has stated that Saudi Crown Prince Fahd's initiative is a very important step on the road to reaching a solution to the Middle East crisis.

Replying to a question put to him by ASH-SHARQ AL-AWSAT at a meeting attended by a number of Arab journalists in London on the eve of his departure for the Saudi Arabian kingdom, Lord Carrington said: The European states are in agreement on this matter, and they do not believe that the points contained in the initiative constitute any obstacle to reaching a solution to the area's crisis. Rather they find them compatible with the Venice conference resolutions.

He added: Certainly, nothing will be conducive to ending the crisis unless we reach a specific agreement in this regard. This requires long debate and discussion. However, the important thing that has occurred recently is the declaration of this initiative and the need to proceed from it to holding an international conference to discuss the area's crisis in detail with the blessings of all the states concerned in the area's crisis, including the Soviet Union and the United States.

Lord Carrington went on: I met Prince Fahd in London and we discussed this initiative. I also discussed the same subject with [Saudi Foreign Minister] Prince Sa'ud al-Faysal in Cancun, but we did not go into details. For this reason I find my visit to the Saudi Arabian kingdom (today) and the discussions that will take place during it very important.

Lord Carrington added: I am very interested at this stage to learn the Saudi position on the situation in the area and the next step which the Saudi Arabian kingdom intends to take. It is important for me to emphasize Europe's eagerness to play an effective role to contribute to finding a solution to this crisis, particularly at such a difficult time as this.

The British foreign secretary added: In my view, a solution needs time, and I do not believe that the United States, Israel or Egypt intends to make any effective move before Sinai returns to Egypt. This means that the solution is frozen until next April. What we are doing at present is making preparations to get things moving after this period. On the possibility of his meeting with PLO Executive Committee Chairman Yasir 'Arafat during his stay in Riyadh, Lord Carrington said: I am prepared to meet him at any time if such a meeting would contribute to the achievement of peace. His presence in Riyadh during my visit to the kingdom is a coincidence for which we have made no preparations at all. Asked about the possibility of Britain's recognizing the PLO as the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people, Lord Carrington said: We do not recognize organizations; if we start doing that, there is no easy way of ending it.

DAILY TELEGRAPH WARY OF SAUDI 'PEACE PLAN'

PM031505 London THE DAILY TELEGRAPH in English 3 Nov 81 p 16

[Editorial: "Tilting to the Saudis"]

[Excerpts] Israel is in a high state of alarm and indignation at what Mr Begin's government perceives to be a concerted tilt by the Reagan administration towards Saudi Arabia. Mr Reagan has been stressing -- as he did again yesterday in welcoming King Husayn of Jordan to Washington -- the need for other Middle East countries to be drawn into peace negotiations. American officials have also been expressing interest in the Saudi Arabian "peace plan" put forward by Prince Fahd. In fact this is not a peace plan at all. It is a reiteration of all the long-standing Arab demands which, if conceded, would leave Israel defenceless. It has attracted attention because of a highly ambiguous final point implying possible acceptance of the state of Israel.

Lord Carrington, who begins an official visit to Saudi Arabia today, will be able to discuss the Saudi "plan" with Prince Fahd and other Saudi Arabian leaders. He might be well advised to stress to them the importance of doing nothing to impede completion of the Camp David peace agreements between Israel and Egypt. Under the agreements, the remaining one-third of Sinai is due to be handed back by Israel to Egypt next April. Following the murder of President as-Sadat, this is now becoming a highly contentious issue in Israel. The "rejectionist" Arab states, such as Libya and Syria, would like nothing better than for the agreements to collapse and Israel to hold on to the vital remaining bit of Sinai. This, they reckon, would bring Egypt back into the fold and enable preparations to begin forthwith for yet another Arab-Israeli war. It is against such dangers that all those currently "tilting" towards Saudi Arabia and the PLO should be on their guard.

DEFENSE MINISTER RETURNS FROM ATHENS TALKS

NC042023 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 2000 GMT 4 Nov 81

[Text] Interior and Defense Minister Veniamin returned to Cyprus tonight from Athens where he had talks with Greek Prime Minister and National Defense Minister Papandreou on matters pertaining to Cyprus' defense.

National Guard Commander Lieutenant General Papanayiotou has also returned with Mr Veniamin.' Lieutenant General Papanayiotou had accompanied Mr Veniamin on his visit to Greece.

NATIONAL COUNCIL DISCUSSES WALDHEIM EVALUATION

NC041226 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1130 GMT 4 Nov 81

[Text] The government spokesman has stated that at yesterday's meeting of the National Council, an exhaustive debate, in a constructive atmosphere, was held on the Waldheim evaluation, and that various views were expressed. The spokesman added that since this is a delicate phase of the Cyprus problem, it would be correct to avoid any comments that could give the wrong picture or wrong impressions.

The spokesman also stated that all publications on the matter so far are speculations, because the National Council will conclude its debate next Monday before crystallizing final views. The spokesman added that after the debate is completed next week, President of the Republic Kiprianou will make a statement on behalf of the National Council or he will hold a press conference on the issue in order to inform the press and the public.

GOBBI GIVEN DEADLINE ON MISSING PERSONS ISSUE

NC040950 Nicosia I ELEVTHEROTIPIA in Greek 4 Nov 81 p 1

[Excerpt] In reference to yesterday's meeting held at the office of Foreign Minister Rolandhis by UN Representative Gobbi with the Pan-Cyprian Committee of Relatives of Missing Persons and Undeclared Prisoners, authoritative reports state that:

Our side has given Gobbi a time limit of 1 week to confirm through consultations he will have with both the UN Secretariat and the Turkish Cypriot side that during our side's recent contacts in New York an agreement was in fact reached on the following:

-- Participation by a representative of the missing persons committee in the investigatory committee;
-- Keeping minutes on the deliberations of the investigatory committee;
-- Implementing the first stage of the investigation in establishing the fate of missing persons which is for the accused side to accept the obligation to furnish explanations on each individual case of the missing persons.

Our reports state that our side has clearly expressed to Gobbi its determination to appeal to the Third UN Political Committee if his answer is negative.

O FILELEVTHEROS DISCUSSES DEFENSE PROBLEMS

NC041240 Nicosia O FILELEVTHEROS in Greek 4 Nov 81 p 3

[From the "Liberal" Column: "Defense Problems"]

[Excerpts] Cypriot Defense Minister Khristodhoulos Veniamin and the head of our National Guard, General N. Papanayiotou, are in Athens for a series of meetings with Andreas Papandreou, in his capacity as the Greek national defense minister.

It is obvious that the Athens meetings will discuss Cypriot defense problems at a time when Cyprus is facing an open danger from the presence here of Turkish occupation troops and when Turkish policy toward our problem is in no way peaceful.

Out people, who are gravely concerned about their own future, view the efforts to strengthen Cyprus' defense with satisfaction. It is obvious that no matter what we do, militarily we are far behind our opponent. This is proved by the fact that while we have the inalienable right to take action to liberate our enslaved territories, we have not moved nor are we now moving toward the idea of aggressive action. All our efforts are directed at strengthening our defense.

As a result of the recent efforts to strengthen the National Guard, the Turkish Cypriot leadership has adopted positions which not only are unacceptable but also are provocative. After speaking of the unconstitutuional character of the National Guard (the Turkish leaders respect the constitution of the Republic of Cyprus so much), the Turkish Cypriot leaders said that every attempt to strengthen the Cypriot Army is interpreted as an act of aggression! What do the Turkish Cypriot leaders want? Do they want us to remain unarmed so that we will be easy victims for Attila at the moment they choose?

We very well know that the Turkish leaders do not understand arguments, no matter how logical they may be. They understand a different language. We repeat: We have no prospect of liberating our enslaved territories by military means. We do, however, have every inalienable right to strenghen our defense in order to deal with every possible adverse development. This is the purpose served by the Athens talks of Defense Minister Veniamin and Chief of the National Guard Papanayiotou.

NICOSIA PAPER SCORES AKEL'S INCONSISTENCY

NC041216 Nicosia O AGON in Greek 4 Nov 81 p 1

[From the "My Opinion" column: "But This Is his Duty -- Waldheim, Ideas and AKEL"]

[Excerpts] Dhinglis, [Pan-Cyprian Labor Federation assistant secretary general] has said that the left could never imagine that the UN secretary general could submit proposals on the Cyprus issue which would fully satisfy the Greek side.

It is a pity that the left and Dhinglis could not imagine the most natural of things, that is, that the UN secretary general could submit proposals on the Cyprus issue which would be in accord with the UN principles and resolutions. Dhinglis could never imagine such a thing, that is, submission by Waldheim of proposals which, for example, would provide for the return of all refugees to their homes; nor Waldheim proposals which would demand the withdrawal of the occupation forces of a foreign country which invaded another, much smaller country.

Why is all this considered unthinkable, Dhinglis?

A UN secretary certainly has the duty to submit recommendations that fall within the spirit and the letter of the principles of the UN Charter. From what everyone knows, both these principles and the charter do not recommend the creation of refugees or invasions and occupations. Even the UN resolutions on Cyprus, to which AKEL so frequently refers, support the return of all refugees to their homes and the withdrawal of the foreign troops.

Yet, in the ideas he submitted, Waldheim excludes the return of all refugees. By recommending that 30 percent of the island remain a Turkish Cypriot area, he deprives the right of a certain percentage of the refugees to return to their homes, automatically overthrowing both the UN resolutions and principles.

AKEL and Dhinglis appear to be confusing a very lucid point and ignoring another important one:

1. They appear to be ignoring the fact that the UN secretary general is not some third person, a neutral arbitrator, who submits both positive and negative recommendations to two disputing sides. He is the leading personality of an international organization that has the duty and the obligation, in any mediation effort he undertakes, to recommend things compatible with both the principles and the charter of the roganization he leads, irrespective of whether his recommendations are not liked by one or the other of the two sides.

2. AKEL and Dhinglis appear to have forgotten the mediation effort of Galo Plaza, who in his mission operated within the UN principles and submitted recommendations in accord with these principles. This is because, at that time, Plaza was doing his duty while Waldheim is not. The left is not concerned nor can it imagine such a thing. It is unfortunate that on the question of Waldheim's ideas, AKEL is not acting responsibly or correctly. It says, for example, that it will judge the initiative on the basis of whether it responds to the UN resolutions.

AKEL, however, is afraid to tell the people that the Waldheim ideas are not in accord with these resolutions, since Waldheim does not recommend the return of all refugees to their homes as demanded by the resolutions.

On the other hand, AKEL recommends that we accept the positive and reject the negative aspects of the ideas while it knows very well that if we do this then the Turks will do the same, with the result that Waldheim's initiative with fail.

Let us hope we have learned something from past mistakes and that we will not once again be faced with the culmination of wrong actions which could lead us to even worse situations.

AKEL CALLS FOR JOINT ACTION TO ISOLATE RIGHTWING

NC051000 Nicosia KHARAVYI in Greek 5 Nov 81 p 1

[Editorial: "Joint Line and Tactics"]

[Excerpts] The question of correct line and tactics in the struggle for a just and permanent solution to the Cyprus issue continues to remain in the epicenter of the country's political affairs. Adoption of an integral, firm line and tactics by all the patriotic forces would help closer cooperation and unity of action and a more effective advancement of the Cyprus issue toward its solution and toward the isolation of the pro-imperialist rightwing which is prepared to accept an adulterated NATO solution or some Camp David arrangement.

We sincerely believe that all democratic forces, which have common goals and aims in the liberation, anti-imperialist struggle, could adopt a joint line and lay down joint tactics during today's delicate and critical phase of our struggle. It is time that differences and disagreements over tactics be overcome through exhaustive discussion, because in the past they created rifts between the democratic forces. More specifically, they must overcome differences related to the process of the intercommunal talks being conducted under UN auspices on the basis of UN resolutuions for the exclusive purpose of finding a solution to the domestic aspect of the Cyprus problem by the two communities.

These are goals common to all patriotic democratic forces of the Cypriot people. The most important, however, is that these positions, including that on the demiliterization of Cyprus, have been accepted internationally and incorporated in the UN resolutions on Cyprus. They could, as a result, become the basis for a joint line in our struggle both on the domestic and international fronts.

It has also been accepted -- both in Cyprus and internationally -- that the Cyprus issue has two aspects; the domestic aspect, which has to do with the constitutional structure of the Cyprus Republic and the solution of all domestic differences by the two basic communities. This does not mean we view the Cyprus issue as a domestic issue. We do not accept the view that the Cyprus issue was created by differences between the two communities. As it is today, the Cyprus issue is a problem of foreign invasion and occupation. It is the product of an imperialist plot by NATO military circles. For this reason, it is an international issue which the United Nations is now dealing with. The UN resolutions demand restoration of the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of Cyprus and the immediate withdrawal of foreign troops; this is its international aspect. This, however, does not mean that its domestic aspect should or could be solved for us by the foreigners. The domestic aspect must be solved by the Cypriots themselves without any foreign involvement. This is also incorporated in the UN resolutions which provide for the conduct of intercommunal talks under the auspices of the UN secretary general.

The Cyprus issue is basically an international problem of invasion and occupation, of restoration of the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of a UN member state. The process of the intercommunal talks for the solution of the domestic aspect cannot replace the international process for restoring the Republic of Cyprus. Since August of 1974, the Soviet Union has proposed the convening of an international conference within the UN framework and with the participation of the Security Council members and the interested parties for the solution of this international aspect of the Cyprus issue. Cyprus, Greece, the socialist and many nonaligned countries accept this effective process. The proposal, however, met with the enmity of the imperialist powers and of Turkey because it frustrates their plans for Cyprus.

As a result of imperialist plotting in 1974, the Cyprus issue became a difficult and complicated international issue. Much effort and many struggles will still be required for its solution. If these struggles are to bear fruit, it is necessary to have unity and joint action by all the patriotic forces on the basis of a joint line and tacts. The fifth plenum of the AKEL CC plenum is an important contribution toward this great effort which will lead our people toward a just fulfillment and a better future.

NORTH'S DENKTAS CRITICIZES PAPANDREOU STATEMENT

TA040934 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in Turkish to Cyprus 0900 GMT 4 Nov 81

[Text] President Rauf Denktas has said that Greek Prime Minister Papandreou must some day understand the realities in Cyprus.

Replying to a question on Papandreou's statement made during his meeting with southern Cyprus Defense Minister Veniamin, referring to Cyprus as the great island and noting that he attaches great importance to the defense of Cyprus, Denktas recalled that the description of great island is the name attributed to Cyprus in the Megaloidea case. Pointing out that the defenders of Megaloidea always refer to Cyprus as the great island and thus want to contend that Cyprus is Greek, Denktas said: Actually, Papandreou has openly stated that he considers Cyprus as Greek soil and, in his words, he has claimed that this Greek soil is under occupation. There is very little possibility that the decisions to be made by a leader, who regards Cyprus from such an erroneous viewpoint, would be judicious and constructive. Denktas again noted that Papandreou must see the realities in Cyprus.

PAPANDREOU CONFERS WITH CYPRUS DEFENSE MINISTER

NC031330 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1230 GMT 3 Nov 81

[Text] Prime Minister Papandreou at 1030 today received Cyprus National Defense and Interior Minister Veniamin at the Pentagon for a private meeting. Later there was a meeting which was also attended by Deputy Ministers of National Defense Dhrosoyiannis and Petsos, Cyprus ambassador to Athens Khatzimiltis and chief of the National Defense General Staff General Gratsios.

KKE ISSUES RESOLUTION ON POLICY POSITION

NC042024 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1930 GMT 4 Nov 81

[Text] The resolution of the KKE Central Committee Presidium was published today which, among other things, stresses that the KKE will play a leading part in the struggle against the right and will determine its position toward the PASOK government in accordance with its positions and actions in relation to the problems of change. It will support in the chamber and among the people every government act that is aimed against the unaccountability of monopolies, reaction and foreign dependence, and any act which will serve national independence, democracy and people's interests. It will criticize shortcomings and will oppose any measure hindering the country's advance.

NEW DEMOCRACY ATTACKS CYPRIOT ARCHBISHOP'S VIEWS

NC041018 Athens I KATHIMERINI in Greek 3 Nov 81 p 1

[Text] "New Democracy" accused the Archbishop of Cyprus of resorting to undisguised party politicking, which is incompatible with his high office, because of his statement that Cyprus had been abandoned by the previous government and as a result dropped "into an abyss of hopelessness" out of which it was led by the voice of the new Greek prime minister.

In a relevant statement, "New Democracy" emphasized: "The statements of his beatitude the archbishop of Cyprus at the commemorative service for Fotis Pittas caused a painful surprise, to say the least. If the archbishop wants to get involved in party politics and take positions on Greek domestic developments, it is up to him to decide whether this is compatible with his high office. The fact, however, that he attempts to ignore the efforts and struggles which the "New Democracy" governments undertook from 1974 to 1981, is an unprecedented and deliberate distortion of our recent joint history. It is sufficient for him to reread what the Cyprus Government has maintained for the past 7 years -- through the Makarios statements earlier and through the statements of President Kiprianou more recently -- on the support of the Greek Government so that, if he has truly forgotten, he may recall that throughout all the repeated and difficult phases of the Cyprus issue, both within and outside the United Nations, the active and effective assistance of the "New Democracy" governments has been unstinted and absolute.

He ought not to forget that the line of approach on the Cyprus issue during the past 7 years was laid down by the responsible leadership of Cyprus -- at its own request -- by the president, the ministerial and the national councils, to the effect that the "New Democracy" governments always stood firmly by its side and supported this line faithfully and firmly with determination."

FRANCE'S MITTERRAND SENDS MESSAGE TO EVREN

TA051058 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Text] French President Francois Mitterrand has expressed the hope that the attacks directed by Armenian terrorists against Turkish representations in France will not damage the friendly relations between the two countries. Mitterrand replied to a message sent to him by Head of State Gen Kenan Evren last month. In his message, General Evren recalled that five murderous attacks had been directed against Turkish diplomats in France within less than a year and drew attention to the French radio and television corporation's broadcasts trying to justify Armenian claims in connection with the Armenian attacks. In his message, General Evren also expressed the belief that the French president will not allow these broadcasts to damage the traditional friendship between the two countries.

In his reply message to General Evren, Mitterrand said that the French Government denounces the recent Armenian attacks against the Turkish Consulate General in Paris which was carried out in September. Mitterrand added that the cooperation between the Turkish representations in France and the authorized French authorities will continue. Mitterrand noted that even in such a country as France the murderous plans of well-organized and trained organizations whose headquarters are abroad could not be thwarted despite the tightest security measures. Pointing out that the French public feels emotionally close to the Armenian community in France, Mitterrand added that this fact in no way diminishes the friendship felt toward Turkey and the Turkish community in France. Mitterrand concluded by saying that France is determined to continue its friendship with Turkey.

NAVAL COMMANDER TUMER DEPARTS FOR FRG VISIT

TA022002 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 2 Nov 81

[Text] The commander of the naval forces, Adm Nejat Tumer, left Istanbul for the FRG this morning as the guest of the FRG naval forces commander. In a statement at Yesilkoy Airport before his departure, Admiral Tumer said that he will hold talks on the part of the FRG military aid to Turkey which concerns the naval forces. He added that he will also observe a naval exercise there. During his visit to the FRG, Admiral Tumer will meet with the FRG chief of staff, the naval commander and other officials.

AFP: MILITARY HOLDS 29,929 POLITICAL PRISONERS

NC030936 Paris AFP in English 0912 GMT 3 Nov 81

[Text] Ankara, 3 Nov (AFP) -- Turkey is holding 29,929 political prisoners, according to a report issued by the siege command on the first year since the military seized power on September 12 last year.

A first report, issued in May, gave the number of political prisoners as 26,858 -- a rise of over 3,000 though the report notes an "80 to 85 percent drop in terrorism" under military rule. The latest report, issued yesterday, said that "282 people, including 174 terrorists" had died violently since the takeover.

The report blamed terrorism more on left than right-wing extremism, with 3,511 out of 5,289 incidents attributed to Marxist groups; 137 were blamed on separatist movements and 114 on right-wing groups.

The military authorities also charged that terrorists were receiving support from abroad, and insinuated that the pro-Soviet and pro-Albanian communist parties were cooperating with clandestine organizations, notably the outlawed Marxist-Leninist Turkish Communist Party and the revolutionary Dev-Sol.

The report charged that 662 organizations were working against Turkey from abroad, listing them as 286 on the left, 109 on the right, 27 separatist movements and 240 religious extremist groups. It said that of 43,140 people arrested over the period, 13,211 had been released, 3,731 were under (45-day) arrest without charges, 24,300 awaited trial and 1,898 had been sentenced. Eighty-five death sentences were passed, of which 16 have been confirmed by the Supreme Court so far; 10 were carried out. The report said that military authorities had received 342 complaints of torture, of which 40 were viewed as "serious"; 89 military men had been charged for these offences, with three officers convicted so far.

OUR RADIO CRITICIZES PROSECUTION OF ECEVIT

TA050829 (Clandestine) Our Radio in Turkish to Turkey 0700 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Commentary]

[Text] The court of the reactionary military junta has sentenced Bulent Ecevit to 4 months in prison. Thus, the expected has occurred. After having disbanded the political parties, the junta has again, as expected, directed the sharp point of its attacks toward the democratic forces and has stepped up these attacks. The junta tried to secretly prosecute Bulent Ecevit -- who opposed the disbanding of the political parties and who replied to the accusations leveled against him by the junta -- and hurriedly sentenced him. The junta, at the same time, banned the publication of Ecevit's defense. However, on the other hand, the reactionary junta is permitting the profuse publication of the lies told by NAP terrorists, primarily Turkes. It permits the reactionary press to openly defend the NAP fascists. The daily TERCUMAN was closed down indefinitely; but within a week it was permitted to publish again.

We would like to state that we are in favor of open trials. Dear listeners, let us now examine why Ecevit was prosecuted. What was it that Ecevit said that caused the junta to try to conceal it from the public? In short, he said: Democracy cannot be established by curbing freedom of speech. The junta was frightened even of this moderate opposition by Ecevit. On the other hand, the head of the junta, Evren, from time to time states that 90 percent of the population would cast their votes in favor of him if he called elections. However, he will never be able to take such a risk. The junta is in reality frightened of the reaction of 90 percent of the population. It is afraid of the unity of the democratic forces. It undertakes every move behind closed doors, concealing it from the public. However, realities cannot be concealed from the public, nor can the authoritarian regime to be imposed on the people gain its support.

Dear listeners, the prosecution and punishment of Bulent Ecevit has caused a reaction of a majority of the democratic forces. The junta is trying to conceal methods of oppression from the public. However, it can not prevent the people from hearing about what is going on. On the other hand, the conviction of Ecevit has also caused reaction abroad. Now the junta's relations with the imperialists is faced with the threat of a crisis because the government of these countries are facing increasing pressures of public opinion. They are forced to heed to this pressure within given limits.

Dear listeners, it is misleading to think that the junta will be destroyed and gone effortlessly in the aftermath of these developments. The dictatorship intends to remain in power for a long time. Only the determined struggle and unity of the worker and toiling classes and the democratic forces can remove it from power. Dear listeners, those who have observed in silence the developments since the Ecevit incident and who have been waiting with the hope that the junta will establish democracy have a lesson to learn. Each passing day shows us that the reactionary military junta is increasing its attacks and is expanding its sphere of influence. There are currently two alternatives facing those who have remained silent until now. They will either continue to wait -- and see that their turn has come -- or they will unite in a determined manner with the democratic forces and join the people's struggle against the junta. There is no other alternative.

MILLIYET DISCUSSES SETTLEMENT OF CYPRUS ISSUE

WC040924 Istanbul MILLIYET in Turkish 31 Oct 81 pp 2, 12

["Viewpoint" column by Professor Mumtaz Soysa: "The First Step"]

[Text] Turkey's theory for Cyprus has been expounded sincerely. Turkey does not wish to annex northern Cyprus to the Turkish mainland. It knows that Greece, in that case, will act likewise, settling in the south of Cyprus as Greece. This is the reason Turkey sincerely wishes to create an independent, nonaligned and evan a demilitarized bizonal Cyprus federation -- provided that the security of the Turkish Cypriot community is firmly assured.

This would be favored by all countries in the region, including the Soviet Union, which does not wish to see NATO extended to Cyprus.

Because of Turkey's desire to see a truly independent Cyprus federation it has done something unparalleled in the political history of the world: Instead of annexing northern Cyprus or establishing an independent state there, it has assisted in the formation of a "federation state."

The TFSC is in reality "a freak of nature," or to put it more explicitly, "a good will monstrosity," because talking of a federated state in the absence of a federation is definitely something unheard of. It should be either like the United States, where independent units get together and form a federation, or like the Soviet Union, where units decide to become "federated states" as parts of an established state. The Turkish Cypriot community, which has chosen to call itself "a federated state" in the north, wished to display its good will for the future and stress its desire to establish a federation with the Greek Cypriot community. In doing so, it has exposed itself to various disadvantages, because many people upon hearing the words "federated state" think that the northern part of the island is a federated part of Turkey. What is more, this status which, like an ostrich, is neither a bird nor a camel, gives rise to all sorts of difficulties in various fields, from trade to commuications, from passports to tourism. This is why the administrators in the north of the island grow impatient at times and talk of proclaiming "an independent state."

Now it looks as if a new element will render this step more inevitable. That new element is Papandreou. The new prime minister in Athens is, on the one hand, trying to arouse the world by alleging that "the Turks are preparing to proclaim independence in Cyprus," while on the other he is providing the strongest justification for such a step by saying "Hellenic territory in Cyprus is under occupation."

Apart from the Panhellenic meaning of these words which ignore the independence and identity of Cyprus, it is also a clear expression of the fact that with the present attitude no progress will be made and no solution will be achieved until the "occupied Hellenic territory in Cyprus" has been liberated.

The very large Turkish community of 140,000 trying to survive in the north of the island under a strange status cannot afford to wait until pigs have wings.

What can the first step to be taken under such circumstances be, if it is not annexation? Probably, this step toward independence will compel those who refuse to take any step at all to think again and, consequently, a bizonal, independent federation will come into being much earlier. The independence of the north could be the first step which, far from dividing Cyprus, would unite it.

DAILY REPORT

CONTENTS

Western Europe

Vol VII No 215 6 November 1981

BENELUX

NETHERLANDS

Parties Still Haggling Over Taxes, Spending [DE VOLKSKRANT 3 Nov] F 1

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Schmidt: Arms Control Policy Possible With USSR J 1
DIE ZEIT Critical of U.S. Foreign Policy Process [6 Nov] J 1
Paper Supports Haig on Nuclear Strategy [FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE 6 Nov] J 5
Briefs: PRC Agreement; Indian Envoy To Visit J 5

FRANCE

Group Claims Responsibility for Station Blast K 1
Submarine Incident Embarrassing to Both Countries [LE MONDE 4 Nov] K 1
Hungarian CP Delegation Visits on Culture Matters [L'HUMANITE 30 Oct] K 2
Marchais Views U.S., USSR, Internal Matters K 2
[Lisbon DIARIO DE NOTICIAS 30 Oct]
Fear of Libya Merger Prompted French Chad Action [LE MONDE 31 Oct] K 3
Situation Still in Balance [LE MONDE 5 Nov] K 4
Egypt's Butrus Ghali Meets With Mitterrand K 5
Somalia's President Meets With Mitterrand K 5
Benin President Kerekou Meets With Mitterrand [Cotonou] K 5

ITALY & THE VATICAN

Ministry Praises Libya's Withdrawal From Chad L 1
Government Ready for Debate on Sinai Role L 1
Brazilian CP Delegation Visits PCI Headquarters L 1
Gabonese President Arrives on Official Visit L 2
Talks With Pertini L 2

SPAIN

Calvo-Sotelo, Sahagun Meet, Call for Party Unity N 1
Army Wants to Deploy Medium-Range Nuclear Weapons [EL PAIS 21 Oct] N 1
Briefs: N. Korean Delegation N 1

NORDIC AFFAIRS

DENMARK

Scandilux Social Democrats Comment on East-West Talks [AKTUELT 31 Oct] P 1

NORWAY

Foreign Minister on Sub Intrusion in Sweden P 2

SWEDEN

Falldin Says Sub Carries Nuclear Torpedoes P 2
Protest to Moscow P 3
Soviet Ambassador Comments on Submarine Incident P 3
Army Chief Gives Probable Explanation for Grounding P 4
Falldin on Lessons From Soviet Submarine Incident P 4
Submarine Delivered Back to Soviets P 5

CYPRUS

CYPRUS WEEKLY Reports on Waldheim's 'Ideas' [6 Nov] R 1
Bulgarian National Education Minister Ends Visit R 3
North's Denktas Receives EEC Delegation [Bayrak Radio] R 4
New U.S. Ambassador Visits Denktas in North [Bayrak Radio] R 4
North Spokesman: National Guard Unconstitutional [Bayrak Radio] R 4

GREECE

Government: 'Positive' View of Ulusu Interview S 1
Yasir 'Arafat Lauds Papandreou Friendship [ELEVTHEROTIPIA 5 Nov] S 1
AFP: Greece Drops 'Veto' on EEC in Sinai Force S 1
Briefs: Ambassador to UAE S 1

TURKEY

FRG Foreign Minister Arrives in Ankara for Visit T 1
Meeting With Evren T 2
DPA Report T 2
Turkmen Addresses Dinner T 2
Genscher Statement at Dinner T 3
DPA Report T 3
Meeting With Bulent Ecevit [DPA] T 3
Genscher Concludes Visit, Departs T 4
VOTCP Criticism T 4
Soviet Diplomat Notes Record of Good Relations T 5
Prosecutor Asks Death Sentence for 10 Militants T 5
Correction to ARAYIS Views of Society, Parties T 5

NETHERLANDS

PARTIES STILL HAGGLING OVER TAXES, SPENDING

PM051435 Amsterdam DE VOLKSKRANT in Dutch 3 Nov 81 pp 1, 7

[Text] The Hague -- Informateurs De Galan and Halberstadt are attempting to make their proposals for repairing the split in the second Van Agt cabinet acceptable to the ministers most closely involved. They are doing so on the basis of new suggestions they received on Monday [2 November] from outgoing Prime Minister Van Agt, Minister Van der Stee (finance) and Democrats '66 [D'66] parliamentary group leader Brinkhorst.

The crux of the matter is now that Christian Democratic Appeal [CDA] ministers Van Agt and Van der Stee are now raising objections to the informateurs' idea of financing a job creation policy by means of a temporary tax measure. The informateurs are calling it a "solidarity levy," which would be raised in the last 9 months of next year and would precede the proposed investment levy.

Through the levy the national authorities would have 1 billion guilders to use to create a program for job creation. At the end of next year funds yielded by the investment levy, through which a small fraction of employees' wages would be withheld in order to pay for investments, would then be sufficient to pay also for the specific job creation program.

The CDA ministers had been considering an increase in the value added tax to bring in more money, rather than the arrangement proposed by the informateurs. The solidarity levy would come to the government via taxation on wages and income, whereas value added tax increases would be paid by the consumer in higher prices for food and consumer goods.

Labor Party [PVDA] circles are pointing out that there now seems to be political agreement on the necessity of a job creation program, for which at least 1 billion guilders will be necessary next year. This is seen as a gain. Today Minister den Uyl (Social Affairs and Employment) and Interior Minister van Thijn will again meet with their party colleagues, PVDA informateurs De Galan and Halberstadt. D'66 Economic Affairs Minister Terlouw will also have talks with the informateurs today.

D'66 parliamentary group leader Brinkhorst made the proposal to De Galan and Halberstadt on Monday that only half of the solidarity levy should be raised and that the other 500 million guilders should come from cutting some of the expenditure on the wet [as published] investment account and the remainder borrowed in the money markets. The government is already doing this in order to make up the difference between income and expenditure.

After his 2-hour talks with the informateurs, Brinkhorst said that "the chances that this cabinet will reach its full potential have grown." He expected that they would make final proposals either today or tomorrow. They had now received all the objections and counterproposals to their own plan, Brinkhorst said. The D'66 parliamentary group leader thought that the final proposals from De Galan and Halberstadt should first go to the ministers involved and that the parliamentary groups should be involved only if it seemed that the government accord was being "stretched."

The chance that the parliamentary parties of the government coalition would again be asked for their views has grown in the last few days, since at least two of the three coalition parties have adopted the position that the government accord is being changed. Some CDA members have already been insisting that this is the case. Today the parliamentary groups will be meeting again, after Monday's short consultations between informateurs, ministers and parliamentary group leaders. On Monday, People's Party for Freedom and Democracy parliamentary group leader Wiegel stressed in a reaction to the informateurs' proposals that the CDA and D'66 must stand their ground and must consign any tax increases to the waste basket.

SCHMIDT: ARMS CONTROL POLICY POSSIBLE WITH USSR

LD051606 Hamburg DPA in German 1526 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 5 Nov (DPA) -- Chancellor Helmut Schmidt is firmly convinced that a trustworthy arms control policy can be reached with the Soviet Union. In a German television interview today, the chancellor said the Soviets are not easy but rather crafty negotiating partners and would naturally exploit any loopholes in treaties and agreements. "But negotiations and results are possible." He said both the nuclear test-ban treaty and the nuclear weapon nonproliferation treaty had been carefully adhered to by the Soviet Union.

The chancellor, who will also speak with Leonid Brezhnev about disarmament matters in Bonn at the end of November, criticized Moscow for arming with SS-20 medium-range missiles and Backfire bombers. This arming posed a considerable threat to the balance and thus also a political threat. Schmidt added that the Soviet leaders knew this to be his standpoint.

Schmidt again called for cooperation and military balance between East and West as common factors for the safeguarding of peace. He was, and would remain, a supporter of the philosophy of military balance, which one could also call "the balance of mutual deterrence". In the area of medium-range missiles, Schmidt again urged renunciation by both sides on the lines of the zero option.

DIE ZEIT CRITICAL OF U.S. FOREIGN POLICY PROCESS

DW051429 Hamburg DIE ZEIT in German 6 Nov 81 p 3

[Theo Sommer article: "No Concept for Geneva Yet"]

[Text] Together with the autumn leaves, the first illusions of the new team in Washington are also falling 9 months after Ronald Reagan's inauguration. The colorfulness of the Indian summer is fading in nature and politics alike. Gusts of reality's wind are sweeping yellowed leaves and withered ideas through Pennsylvania Avenue.

The initial enthusiasm of the conservative economists has yielded to softer tones. Budget Director Stockman and Secretary of the Treasury Reagan have lately been putting strong doubts on record that the supreme goal of the administration -- a balanced budget by 1984 -- can really be attained. What continues to be valid in military policy is that the United States must become number one again in the world: the financial dilemma, however, has Reagan's procurement decisions not going dramatically beyond the plans left by Jimmy Carter. In foreign policy the election campaign rhetoric of strength and uncompromising attitude are still reverberating, yet flexible and much more undogmatic than anybody would have dreamed 6 months ago.

The European visitor looking around in the U.S. capital a year after Ronald Reagan's election vistory returns home with highly mixed feelings. There are three major impressions:

First and positive: The influence of the extreme right has declined and the weight of the center-right group is increasing.

Second and unpleasant: Europe is not particularly highly valued in Reagan's Washington. Nobody is particularly favorably disposed toward the overseas allies. The peace movement in the old world finds little understanding. Pacifism is equated with defeatism, and anybody advocating European interests is quickly suspected of neutralism.

Third and negative: The foreign policy decision-making mechanism in President Reagan's government apparatus is still the weakest link.

From the very beginning the Reagan administration had a dual spirit.

One side was that of the California conservatives, the other that of the internationalist conservatives.

The Californians wanted an America that was strong militarily; and they brought along with them a fear of negotiating with the Soviet Union. The reluctance to get involved in remote conflicts also extended to their own allies, who were supposed to submit or, if they refuse to do so, get lost. The United States would in any event survive in a strong fortress America.

This reflects a high-spirited and even arrogant isolationism, an attitude which today rather is referred to as unilateralism, though it is the same thing. To paraphrase Schiller -- both are rooted in the conviction that the might is strongest when all by himself. Thus no time-consuming consultations with the allies, and certainly no negotiations with the communist antagonist because one always is outsmarted -- as in Vietnam where Kissinger's diplomacy of negotiations procured international legitimacy for the infernal regime in Hanoi; or as in the SALT talks, which lulled both Nixon and Carter into feeling secure even though the Soviets simultaneously implemented the greatest armament program in their history.

The internationalists also believed that the United States must restore its military strength. But unlike the Californians, they were not convinced that the world-political problems could be solved by military means alone. But above all they were not afraid of negotiations with the Soviets. They wanted to talk with Moscow patiently, persistently and with determination so as to promote their own concepts of world political order.

During the past few months, a compromise gradually took shape; military strength -- yes (to the extent it can be financed), but at the same time negotiations with the Kremlin and coordination with the allies. Much of what sounded shrill in the beginning now sounds comparably moderate. The administration has proven that it is capable of learning. If this is not yet appreciated everywhere, then it is probably due to the fact that relapses into rhetoric and the language of absoluteness repeatedly drown out what has manifested itself in daily life regarding the readiness to assimilate and the ability for self-correction. The list of problems in which the Americans have done some relearning during the past year is long and impressive.

El Salvador, submitted at the beginning of the year as a test case for East-West relations and as the litmus paper of Atlantic solidarity, has disappeared from the list of priorities.

The initial statements of sympathy for the regime of white supremacy in the South African union threatened to stall the Namibia solution sought by the Western group of five. They have nearly died down by now, and Washington again fully backs the Western mediation attempt.

The original neglect of, and even disregard for, the Third World has yielded to new efforts toward understanding -- even if with a fundamental reserve. Reagan participated in the Cancun North-South summit meeting; he agreed to a continuation of the dialogue; and he has ceased to cast suspicious glances at the International Monetary Fund. In this respect, too, the Reagan administration has come closer to the European position -- perhaps only because of the irrefutable realization that the United States is dependent on the Third World for many important raw materials and this cannot just cold-shoulder the Third World. But even this is something.

The Reagan team originally wanted to agree to arms-control talks and disarmament negotiations only after the military strength of the United States was restored. Later they said after the measures necessary for restoring the military strength have been initiated. In the meantime the Americans have yielded to the European urging for an early opening of the negotiations on nuclear medium-range weapons in Europe. The U.S.-Soviet talks on this subject will start in Geneva on 30 November. Meanwhile, Washington is also seriously preparing for the resumption of the SALT talks. They are scheduled to begin in the spring of 1982 -- without any preconditions; without any linkage of Afghanistan or Soviet good behavior in Africa, Asia and Latin America; and also without any reluctance. Eugene Rostow, the head of the Disarmament Agency and a declared hawk, recently put it this way: The Soviet-American relationship currently is so tense that, if we wish to remain true to ourselves, we must seize every opportunity to negotiate in favor of peace, no matter how slight the chances might be.

For a time it looked as though Reagan did not want to talk with the Soviets at all. For 8 months the U.S. Eubassy in Moscow was deserted. Then the President began writing letters to Brezhnev, and last week Arthur Hartman, the new ambassador in Moscow, declared when presenting his credentials: We are against unproductive confrontation, against the arms race and against silence between our governments. We will work for a constructive East-West relationship, for true arms control and for the solution of disputes through negotiations. Granted, the Reagan people insist on strict mutuality, yet they no longer create the impression that they prefer confrontation to cooperation (this is why, despite resistance in the beginning, they ultimately did not place any obstacles in the way of the West Europe-Soviet barter deal of natural gas for pipes).

Reagan's people no longer talk so loudly about the Russian danger and about the great window of vulnerability through which the Soviets could move into world domination with one single, disarming surprise strike against U.S. intercontinental missiles. Nor do they like to talk about concepts that would have to be interpreted as meaning that the Pentagon is aiming at making nuclear wars wageable and ultimately even winnable. Lately they are plainly saying that what matters to them is the endurance and ability to survive of their nuclear weapons systems, their communications systems and their chains of command. We are not striving for strategic superiority, I was told in the Pentagon, and we do not want to catch up with the Russians weapon by weapon. We also do not want an arsenal with which nuclear wars could be waged, but rather we want to shift nuclear war into the sphere of our foreign policy. All we want is to prevent any conceivable Soviet option of a first strike against us; besides nobody is thinking of localizing nuclear arms conflicts to Europe. In that respect Reagan's feelings are in no way different from Brezhnev's -- or from those of Desmond Ball who just proved in a publication by the London International Institute for Strategic Studies that the limitableness or controllability of any conflict using nuclear weapons is pure illusion.

All this may calm the European visitor in Washington. He is bound to be alarmed, however, when he realizes how little Europe counts in the United States at the moment. The advocate of the European allies in Reagan's Washington is Secretary of State Alexander Haig. Nevertheless, one is told in no uncertain terms in the upper floors in the State Department that it is becoming increasingly difficult to stand as a champion of the trans-Atlantic allies.

A high-ranking U.S. diplomat told me that nobody in Washington is now influenced by the argument that this or that is not so popular in Europe, that this displeases the French, irritates the Germans and irks the Dutch. The argument rather had the opposite effect for some time now.

In what way?

Too many people here advocate the view that the Europeans want to gradually get out of their responsibility and out of the alliance. This applies above all to the Federal Republic. Isn't it moving away? Doesn't it dream of a new German nationalism? Does it not make itself believe that there is a German alternative, a German solution, to the European security problem?

I cannot help saying that what is sprouting here is the rotten seed sown time and again by correspondents like John Voncour of the New York TIMES in their reports, which naturally are carefully read in Washington. What the Americans feel is European and specifically German nagging has an additionally irritating effect; events such as Helmut Schmidt's talks in which he frankly explained to a dozen U.S. correspondents what he thinks is wrong with U.S. policy. We don't need any hectoring or lecturing, is what they say in Washington -- no sermons or reproof, please.

What about the peace movement in West Europe? Most Americans consider it to be staged by the communists. Only a few people consider it so profoundly as Henry Kissinger, who said the other day: Current strategies are so horrible that the evolvement of pacifism is not at all irrational. If your own defense is coupled with the chance of suicide, even if this theoretically involves a probability of a mere 10 percent, this causes despair and loss of confidence in the governments which base their policies on such probability ratings. Less complicated thinkers only see Soviet wirepullers and European cowardice. Their outrage quite often expresses itself in the pained cry: then they should go it alone.

Brilliant conservative columnist William Safire expressed these feelings in a startling way: A wave of isolationism is sweeping across Europe, he wrote. The idea is gaining a foothold that Europe can indeed manage along ...many Europeans do not want Europe to be defended in Europe. Safire bitterly asks: Can we defend a Europe which does not want to be defended? He recalls that about 332,000 U.S. soldiers are stationed in the Old World -- as the tripwire which is supposed to guarantee the automatic participation of the United States in the defense of Europe. His question: But is the Europeans do not wish any serious defense -- what do we need the tripwire for?

Unless the responsible people in Europe give signals to the contrary soon, William Safire says, people in the United States will soon consider ideas which hitherto had been absolutely inconceivable. The hint is clear that there is a possibility that the American right will now adopt the old idea of leftist-liberal Senator Mansfield of bringing the boys home from Europe.

Safire reports that a prominent senator was recently asked why a new motion a la Mansfield had not been submitted in the Senate long ago -- at least as a threat to the Europeans. The senator replied: This would not work as a threat. The damn motion probably would find a majority.

Question: Have the Europeans, including the Federal Government, done enough to convincingly counteract such notions?

The real question is much more difficult to answer. Can U.S. foreign policy be influenced at all from outside, considering its personnel staffing and administrative organization today.

Doubts are premissible. The foreign policy decision-making mechanism is the weakest link in Ronald Reagan's government apparatus. The National Security Council of the White House is weakly staffed intellectually. This begins with Richard Allen, the chief, and continues down the line to the lower echelons. The council has failed in the task of preparing clear options and alternatives for the President. Just as before, prior to the establishment of the National Security Council, Washington's foreign policy again has become a matter of conflict between the State Department and the Department of Defense.

The Pentagon -- Caspar Weinberger, his deputy Carlucci -- at the top is staffed with technicians who only gradually develop political tact. To go by the judgment of a U.S. diplomat, Weinberger is a simplistic unilaterialist. Allen is only playing a secondary role: His staff is rather hard up. Al Haig in the State Department is an Atlantic advocate but he is not considered a team player; either out of ambition or as a result of stress, he time and again shows vulnerable spots. His style does not earn him just friends. A crisis around him erupts every 4 weeks; because, when Reagan was shot and wounded he was stupid enough to cry "I'm giving the orders now"; because he publicly criticizes decisions of the President (such as the one on the production of neutron weapons); because he publicly laments the guerrilla campaign waged against him in the White House. The latter complaint, by the way, is just a few days old -- the reaction to the rumor that Weinberger was slated to become Secretary of State. Reagan denied it, fortunately enough; otherwise the Europeans would not have been very happy.

The upshot of it all: The gearwheels in the foreign policy decision-making mechanism are not meshing. This is particularly evident in the preparations for the U.S.-Soviet negotiations on the limitation of nuclear medium-range weapons in Europe. A clear and American concept was still nonexistent just 4 weeks prior to the opening of the Geneva talks.

The Pentagon supported the idea that an American draft treaty in favor of the zero solution be submitted right after the opening of negotiations -- suggesting the scrapping of all SS-20 missiles in exchange for reuniciation of the NATO decision. A clever consideration is behind it: In doing this, one would chime in with the European leftists, while being rather certain that the Soviets would immediately reject the suggestion as unacceptable; thus the deployment of 572 counterarmament weapons could go on unhindered. "We must keep the matter plain and simple", says the Pentagon. "We must keep the imagination of the broad public busy. We must help Schmidt, Van Agt, Spadolini and Maragaret Thatcher. If the Soviets will remove their entire potential, the SS-20 as well as the SS-22 short-range missile (which can hit 85 percent of the NATO targets also within reach of the SS-20), plus the SS-23 -- why not?"

The State Department is of a completely different opinion. It fears that such a suggestion about a zero solution will lead negotiations right away into a dead end street, condemning them to failure. Washington's diplomats would rather prefer a gradual or phased plan. They know that if they don't negotiate seriously, the counterarmament arms will never be deployed. They consider "seriously negotiating" not the making of a suggestion they consider it making a suggestion which would reduce the Soviet threat. They fear that the suggestion of a zero solution would not lead to such an agreement. The Soviets would say yes, but then they would begin the horse trading, zero for what systems? Or they could pretend to agree while extending negotiations -- how could Western counterparmament then make progress in 1983-84? Or they could say, zero, okay, but in such a case a European zone free of nuclear arms would be the better solution....

The State Department does not want to insist on any unfruitful zero solution. It would rather negotiate for a few weeks -- six weeks seem to be envisaged for the time being -- with the Russians on partial solutions; it wants to deal with the issue bit by bit so that successes will become visible bit by bit, thus forcing the Russians to take part in a serious dialogue.

The National Security Council has not considered this issue so far. It is still unclear what Ronald Reagan will decide in the end.

This is not a satisfactory situation. The Western alliance is one again lacking leadership. As always, it is now important that the November storms will not blow away long-term projects, ideas and suggestions of the Reagan administration together with the early spring dreams and the later leaves of autumn.

PAPER SUPPORTS HAIG ON NUCLEAR STRATEGY

DW061009 Frankfurt FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE in German 6 Nov 81 p 12

[Commentary signed R.M.: "Warning Shot"]

[Text] If Haig says something about nuclear strategy, the general knows what he is talking about. It ought to be basically welcomed by the Europeans when he points out some aspects of nuclear deterrence to the Foreign Relations Committee, thus stressing the doctrine of deterrence once again. The public realizes with interest that the "flexible response" concept contains a bottom step which was so far unknown: In the event of an overwhelming conventional attack, NATO is supposed to fire a nuclear warning shot -- such as letting the nuclear warhead of a medium-range weapon explode at a great altitude. You can imagine this to be a somewhat ghastly successor to the shot across the bow. Haig did not add what material effects this explosion should have, we could imagine a blackout of communications and electronic networks. The Secretary of State obviously wanted to use an extreme example to disprove the Soviet denial of the flexible response concept and the Soviet statement that once nuclear war has been opened, there will be no limitation of its escalation. However, this attempt by Haig could confuse Western opinion.

BRIEFS

PRC AGREEMENT -- Deutsche Welle and Beijing Radio intend to exchange journalists. An agreement to this effect was signed today by Klaus Schuetz, director of the Federal Republic's foreign broadcasting station, and Chinese ambassador in Bonn Zhang Tong, Deutsche Welle reports. The Cologne radio station has been broadcasting in Chinese since 1965, while Beijing Radio began its German program 5 years earlier. [Text] [Hamburg DPA in German 0938 GMT 4 Nov 81 LD]

INDIAN ENVOY TO VISIT -- Indian External Affairs Minister Narasimha Rao will pay an official visit to Bonn on 16 November to discuss bilateral and international questions with Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher and to attend the opening of the Nehru exhibition in Bonn, it was learned here today. [Excerpt] [Hamburg DPA in German 1814 GMT 3 Nov 81 LD]

GROUP CLAIMS RESPONSIBILITY FOR STATION BLAST

OW060553 Hong Kong AFP in English 0524 GMT 6 Nov 81

[Text] Paris, 6 Nov (AFP) -- An organization calling itself "Malheur a la Police" (roughly equivalent to "Damn the Police") claimed responsibility for a bomb explosion late yesterday in the Gare de Lyon railroad station here. The group had not been heard of before. A phone call to AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE [word indistinct] hours after the explosion also announced that the group had planted bombs at the Gare de L'Est and Gare d'Austevit stations, but there were no blasts in either. The bomb at the Gare de Lyon was in a coin-operated luggage locker. The explosion wrecked about 15 lockers and slightly injured one person.

The phone caller said "Damn the Police" was undertaking a dynamiting campaign to protest recent statements by Interior Minister Gaston Deferre. Mr Deferre recently denied that the new Socialist administration wanted police to be lax about fighting juvenile delinquency and he urged police to keep arresting young toughs who have been stealing and burning cars in factory suburbs.

SUBMARINE INCIDENT EMBARRASSING TO BOTH COUNTRIES

PM060947 Paris LE MONDE in French 4 Nov 81 p 1

[Editorial: "Blunder in the Baltic"]

[Text] The incident involving the Soviet submarine which has been aground near the Swedish base of Karlskrona since 27 October is fairly embarrassing for the governments concerned even though it is delighting cartoonists and lovers of spy stories. It is embarrassing first for Sweden, whose navy was not capable of detecting this submarine, which had ventured so far not only into its territorial but its military waters, and which is seeking a way of settling the incident in an honorable way.

But the incident is even more embarrassing for the Soviet authorities, who have been caught out by the rather excessive curiosity their naval forces have been showing in northern Europe for a long time. A mysterious submarine "strayed" into the Stockholm Archipelago for several days a year ago. A few years before that, a similar incident had happened deep in a Norwegian fjord. Each time the over-curious submarine succeeded in escaping without having to surface.

The "blunder" has now happened and Moscow can do nothing but accede to the conditions imposed by Stockholm: An official "apology," promise of compensation and above all authorization for the Swedes to inspect the submarine and interrogate its captain. The inquiry could last several days, but Stockholm has already given up the idea of bringing the culprits to trial; that should make a solution easier.

Nonetheless the incident is producing a bad impression at a time when a strong pacifist and neutralist campaign is taking place in Europe, including Scandanavia. The Kremlin, which is encouraging this campaign by condemning NATO's nuclear plans and protesting its good intentions, is thus involuntarily drawing attention to its own military presence in the region, which is by far the biggest.

Aside from the forces based in Murmansk and the Kola Peninsula, the Soviet Navy has 22 submarines in the Baltic which for around the past 4 years have included 6 Golf - class missile-launching submarines with nuclear warheads targeted at the entire European continent and which Mr Brezhnev does not seem to include for the time being in the list of Eurostrategic armaments which he drew up recently for DER SPIEGEL.

The recent Warsaw Pact maneuvers in the Baltic, involving landing exercises in particular, drew at least as much attention from Scandinavian observers as from the Poles.

It was to try to reduce tension on this rather highly-charged military scene that former Finnish President Kekkonen, followed recently by the Scandinavian governments, launched the idea of a nuclear-free zone in northern Europe. This plan has had better prospects since Mr Brezhnev promised that the Soviet side would, in this connection, take "some significant measures" whose nature he has hitherto refused to specify but which could consist of withdrawal from the Baltic zone of short-range weapons likely to be directed at Scandinavia.

It is true that several governments in the region, especially the ruling Conservative team in Oslo, are reluctant to go ahead on this path if the example is not quickly followed by other European regions.

HUNGARIAN CP DELEGATION VISITS ON CULTURE MATTERS

PM050939 Paris L'HUMANITE in French 30 Oct 81 p 10

[Text] A Hungarian Socialist Workers Party delegation visited France 26-30 October at the PCF's invitation. This delegation, headed by Central Committee Member Mihaly Kornidesz, examined the PCF's activity in cultural spheres.

MARCHAIS VIEWS U.S., USSR, INTERNAL MATTERS

PM060933 Lisbon DIARIO DE NOTICIAS in Portuguese 30 Oct 81 p 3

[Text] France does not form part of NATO's military bodies or consider itself party to the decision made recently in Brussels to increase U.S. nuclear strength in Europe. It adopts a stance of independence whose aim is peace and disarmament and the dissolution of both NATO and the Warsaw Pact. At least this is how Georges Marchais views French foreign policy. While recalling the Communist ministers' solidarity with the Socialist majority's government, he reminds Mitterrand of the agreement both signed on the need for both the U.S. Pershing II missiles and the Soviet Union's SS-20 missiles to be limited.

The PCF secretary general sees no inconsistency between this stance of independence and the statements published during Francois Mitterrand's recent visit to the United States. When we reminded him that George Bush said France is "an ally worthy of complete U.S. trust," Marchais retorted that the U.S. Vice President "is putting on a bold face," or ironically accepted the hypothesis that the Americans "are beginning to realize that they cannot wage war at the Europeans' expense."

On the second day of his visit to Portugal at the PCP's invitation, George Marchais held a press conference yesterday. He said little about relations between the two communist parties, all the more so since, as he emphasized, "there has as yet only been time for an exchange of information on the situation in the two countries," and the talks will continue "on specific issues of the international situation and of the struggle for peace." The PCF secretary general did not fail to congratulate Alvaro Cunhal "on the brilliant success in the Loures byelection," but at the meeting he held with journalists he talked especially about international policy and relations between the French communists and socialists, which "are proceeding in an atmosphere of complete solidarity."

It could be asked how the PCF analyzes the joint stance adopted during Mitterrand's visit to the United States on the deployment of medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe. Marchais argued that both parties are in favor of negotiations for peace, pointed out that at the Cancun conference Mitterrand asserted the need for the United States to begin talks on missiles immediately, recalled the demonstration in support of disarmament in Paris Sunday and broadened that movement to the whole of Europe, emphasizing the importance of the demonstration held in Bonn -- "the first on that scale since the thirties, and in which young people played an essential part."

At the press conference, [he discussed] the French Government's policy in the socioeconomic field, and in this sphere he did not fail to emphasize that his party had a more extensive program, especially concerning nationalization measures. "But if the electorate preffered the Socialist program, it is necessary to respect universal suffrage," Marchais continued, stressing that banking has essentially been nationalized. Marchais acknowledged that unemployment and inflation remain the new French Government's principal problems, and blamed employers for this situation, since employers, he said, "invest little and dismiss workers wrongly, and let it not be believed that the class struggle is over in France, despite the leftwing forces' victory."

Marchais reminded journalists that the French Government is preparing legislative proposals to boost major industry and lower the unemployment rate. Asked about immigrants, he said that "discrimination is over," and, without mentioning the manner in which he conducted his election campaign, asserted that he "will cause new laws to be approved" on immigrant workers' economic and social rights.

The PCF secretary general did not conceal the fact that his party is opposed to the entry of further immigrants, nor did he fail to emphasize that it is opposed to the enlargement of the EEC. "Although this may seem unpopular to the applicants, the entry of new members would be detrimental to the French people's interests, and it is for those interests that we are primarily responsible," he said.

The PCF's relations with the other communist parties were also analyzed by Georges Marchais. He had been asked to take stock of relations with the CPSU, but Marchais saw no reason "to give the CPSU special treatment," and preferred instead to talk "about relations with all the fraternal parties."

"The socialist world's richness lies in its diversity," he said, emphasizing that "there are similarities of viewpoint, differences and divergencies" both with the CPSU and the CCP or any other communist party. Asked about Eurocommunism, Marchais described it as "an outmoded formula which as time passes is going out of fashion." "Political paths are constantly being diversified, changed and enriched," he said, "and if socialism is not a uniform which can fit all peoples, without taking into account their past and their history, Eurocommunism too, as I have written previously, is beginning to be a suit too tight-fitting for what is happening in Europe. Even within the socialist countries there are changes. They are advancing, they have great victories and also difficulties and crises," he concluded, referring to Poland, "where there are new problems which must be resolved."

Georges Marchais is being received today by President Ramalho Eanes and by speaker of the Assembly of the Republic Oliveira Dias. He will also have contacts with representatives of several parliamentary groups, and in the evening will take part in a rally together with Alvaro Cunhal.

FEAR OF LIBYA MERGER PROMPTED FRANCE CHAD ACTION

PM060939 Paris LE MONDE in French 31 Oct 81 p 6

[Text] Cooperation and Development Minister Jean-Pierre Cot was given a hearing on his ministry's budget by the National Assembly Foreign Affairs Commission on Thursday. Mr Cot replied to several questions on the situation in Chad. He indicated that the OAU resolution which makes provision for the formation of an inter-African force and the rebuilding of the Chad army with a view to the withdrawal of Libyan troops is starting to be implemented.

Nigeria and Senegal have promised to supply contingents and the OAU president is seeking other help, he stressed. The United Nations is prepared to provide aid, and the withdrawal of the Libyan forces depends on a request from the Chad Government, which has so far not been made, he said.

According to Mr Cot, the development of the situation over the past few days is logical: As the inter-African force takes shape, Libya is tempted to step up its pressure with a view to the fusion of the two countries. Worrying indications came to the government's attention last week, the cooperation minister added. These were behind the message the president sent to the OAU chairman from Cancun in order to speed up the deployment of this inter-African force.

The press reports, which he regards as "alarmist" have not been confirmed. Mr Cot noted: France's objective is still the deployment of the inter-African force before the end of the year, which would make it possible to start the process of Libyan withdrawal during the following months. Should there be a merger between Libya and Chad, Mr Cot said France would have to condemn it if it did not have the people's consent and OAU approval. All the French Government's efforts are aimed at preventing such a development, Mr Cot asserted.

With regard to Algeria, the minister made it clear that that country does not want to send troops, for constitutional and probably political reasons, but is still prepared to provide financial and logistical support.

Situation Still in Balance

PM051307 Paris LE MONDE in French 5 Nov 81 p 1

[Editorial: "It Is Now Up to the OAU"]

[Text] Even before the end of the conference of French and African heads of state and government, most of the participants in that meeting were clearly showing their satisfaction. Despite their refusal to make startling public statements on Colonel al-Qadhdhafi's decision to withdraw his troops from Chad, all stressed inprivate that they regarded the decision announced in Tripoli on Tuesday afternoon as a success both for France and its African partners.

Indeed, while awaiting more detailed information on what is happening in the Chad capital, one is tempted to think that those who showed their skepticism about French policy in Chad last week have apparently been proved wrong. The same is true of those who were stepping up their criticism of National Unity Transition Government [GUNT] President Goukouni Oueddei, who was accused by some of weakness in dealing with the Libyans and by others of playing a double game.

When Mr Mitterrand decided a few days ago to end a long period of vacillation and accede to the various requests for aid made by the GUNT president, he was taking a bold gamble. He avoided any spectacular measures and tried to do nothing which might wound Colonel al-Qadhdhafi, whom he nonetheless carefully informed of his determination. The Libyans, however, are still just as anxious not to mince their words, and on Tuesday the Tripoli radio indulged in violent attacks on the Franco-African meeting in Paris.

For the time being the withdrawal of Libyan troops seems to be related solely to Ndjamena city. But under the terms of Goukouni Oueddei's own demands, the withdrawal of all the forces which came from Libya last year on his express request is not to be completed until 1 January 1982. Taking account of the numerous precedents which prompt the greatest caution, people in Paris and elsewhere are still wondering what the real reasons are for Colonel al-Qadhahfi's change of attitude and what his real intentions are.

There is in particular reason to wonder whether the Libyan initiative was taken at the request of the Soviet Union, which is playing a direct part in repatriating the Libyan forces. Tripoli had already shown unexpected moderation a few months ago during the Gulf of Sidra incident with the United States.

At all events, although the firm French line played a considerable role in the development of the Libyan diplomatic game, Colonel al-Qadhdhafi's concern to paint a reassuring picture of himself is still the determining factor. In a few months time the Libyan head of state will become OAU chairman, nad it is essential for him to give his peers the feeling that Libya is not a neoimperialist power anxious to impose its supremacy on certain sub-Saharan states. Moreover it is clear that the solution to the Chad crisis is still closely linked to the OAU's action. Unless the inter-African force is deployed rapidly with large amounts of arms and logistical resources, everything is likely to be jeopardized once again.

EGYPT'S BUTRUS GHALI MEETS WITH MITTERRAND

LD051600 Paris Domestic Service in French 1400 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Text] Butrus Ghali was at the Elysee. According to the Egyptian minister of foreign affairs, the French-African summit led to his country's making new contacts. He delivered a message to Mr Mitterrand from Husni Mubarak and also explained the diplomatic activity of his country in support of peace in the Middle East.

SOMALIA'S PRESIDENT MEETS WITH MITTERRAND

NC061150 Paris AFP in English 1126 GMT 6 Nov 81

[Text] Paris, 6 Nov (AFP) -- Somali President Mohamed Siad Barre had a one-hour meeting with French President Francois Mitterrand here today. Somali sources said later they discussed the situation in the Horn of Africa and bilateral issues.

General Siad Barre arrived here at the beginning of the week to attend the just-ended annual Franco-African summit conference as an observer.

BENIN PRESIDENT KEREKOU MEETS WITH MITTERRAND

AB052018 Cotonou Domestic Service in French 1930 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Excerpt] The Franco-African summit ended in Paris last night. The head of state, President Mathieu Kerekou, who attended the deliberations of the summit, was received this morning at the Elysee by President Francois Mitterrand.

In a statement to newsmen, President Kerekou announced that the Paris conference was a great success and that it has made it possible to establish dialogue in a new atmosphere. The head of state also confirmed that Benin was ready to supply troops along with other countries for the African neutral force designed to maintain peace in Chad.

MINISTRY PRAISES LIBYA'S WITHDRAWAL FROM CHAD

AU051600 Rome ANSA in English 1543 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Text] Rome, 5 Nov (ANSA) -- Italy's "great pleasure" in learning the news that Libyan troops started moving out of Chad, Tuesday in response to the N'djamena provisional regime's request was disclosed here today by Foreign Ministry sources.

Chad's provisional National Unity Government, set up by the August 1979 Lagos accords and headed by Goukouni Oueddei, asked Tripoli to call its troops home October 29.

The Italian Foreign Ministry viewed the withdrawal as setting a process into motion which should lead to the full restoration of Chad independence and the strengthening of the African state's institutions, a key factor for national stability.

The development was also praised for the good effects it could have on the area between the Mediterranean and the Sahara and between the Red Sea and Africa, an area fraught with strife lately between populations which otherwise would have an ample field for cooperation in their joint pursuit of progress.

The Libyan withdrawal will hopefully enable the N'djamena government to exercise its role in the community of African states once again, the Italian Foreign Ministry sources added.

Italy wished to particularly commend the Libyan Government for its prompt willingness to grant Chad's request and thereby meet the Organization of African Unity's (OAU) wishes.

GOVERNMENT READY FOR DEBATE ON SINAI ROLE

AU051552 Rome ANSA in English 1512 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Text] Rome, 5 Nov (ANSA) -- The Rome Government announced its willingness today to face a parliamentary debate on its October 30 decision to offer Italian troops to the multilateral peace-keeping force in the Sinai.

Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo sent letters today to the chairmen of the foreign relations commissions in the Senate and Lower House announcing his readiness to report to the two groupings on the government's ruling. The other West European countries sending troops to the Sinai to supervise the Israeli pull-out operation include France, Britain and the Netherlands.

The peace-keeping army will have the job of patrolling the area once Israel has returned the entire Sinai Peninsula it occupied in the 1967 six-day war to Egypt. The pull-out is scheduled to be completed by the end of next April.

BRAZILIAN CP DELEGATION VISITS PCI HEADQUARTERS

PM060931 Rome L'UNITA in Italian 29 Oct 81 p 19

[Text] Rome -- A Brazilian Communist Party [PCB] delegation composed of Comrades Salomao Molina, directorate member, and Francisco Correia met yesterday at PCI Directorate headquarters with Comrades Antonio Rubbi, PCI Central Committee member and foreign section chief; and Alessio Pasquini and Claudio Bernabei of the foreign section. During the cordial conversation, briefings were given on the situation in both countries; in particular emphasis was placed on the need for a fully democratic system in Brazil. On the same day, the PCB comrades also met with Comrades Armellino Milani of the PCI secretariat bureau; and Giuliano Pajetta, Central Committee member and emigration section chief.

GABONESE PRESIDENT ARRIVES ON OFFICIAL VISIT

AU051914 Rome ANSA in English 1900 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Text] Rome, 5 Nov (ANSA) -- Gabon's President Omar Bongo arrived in Rome this afternoon from Paris for a three-day state visit. He is accompanied by his wife Josephine and numerous ministers, including Foreign Minister Martin Bongo. Waiting for him at the Rome-Ciampino Airport were a group of Italian officials which included Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo. Bongo was then helicoptered to the Quirinale Palace where he was received by head of state Sandro Pertini.

Tomorrow, after his talks with Pertini, the African leader will go to Villa Madama where he will be hosted to a dinner by Premier Giovanni Spadolini. In the afternoon Bongo will visit city hall on the Capitoline Hill. On Saturday the official part of the state visit to Italy will be concluded and Bongo will be received by Pope John Paul II in Vatican City.

Saturday afternoon, Bongo will visit officials of the Sovereign Order of the Knights of Malta and then meet with Italian businessmen. He will leave for Libreville, Gabon's capital, on Sunday. Among those in Bongo's party are Economic and Finance Minister Jean Pierre Lemboumba-Lepandou, Industrial Development and Trade Minister Etienne Moussirou and aide Jean Francois Ntoutoume.

Talks With Pertini

AU060830 Rome ANSA in English 0827 GMT 6 Nov 81

[Excerpts] Rome, 6 Nov (ANSA) -- The concern and attention with which Italy follows developments on the African Continent and those events which indicate a bid to subvert the principle of "Africa for the Africans" were discussed by Italian head of state Sandro Pertini in remarks delivered last night at the official banquet for visiting Gabonese President Omar Bongo.

Pertini, in his banquet speech on "Africa for the Africans", insisted on this principle as the only viable foundation for "balance on your continent and, we can very well say, peace in the world."

The Italian president went on to warn of "serious trouble if Africa, after its bitter struggles and the torment of events connected to the decolonization process, were now or in the future confronted with those woeful conflicts which have hammered Europe during the centuries."

Pertini also pledged that "in the near future" Italy will organize an international conference to take concrete steps in the battle against hunger and malnutrition in the world".

Earlier in his statement, Pertini said that Italy would never forget "the personal and political commitment" behind President Bongo's contribution to saving the lives of 18 Italian technicians, working in Africa for the Ente Nazionale Indrocarburi, caught up in the Biafrian hostilities in 1969.

"So many years later", the Italian president said, "I would like once again to express to you the gratitude of the Italian people for the act of friendship and solidarity."

Earlier in the day, Bongo briefed Pertini on recent developments in Africa and the situation in Chad, the major topic on the agenda in Paris for the summit conference among France and 33 African states which ended Wednesday. The Gabonese president flew to Rome after attending the conference.

Another set of talks was begun in the afternoon between Foreign Minister Martin Bongo and the head of Italian diplomacy, Emilio Colombo.

CALVO-SOTELO, SAHAGUN MEET, CALL FOR PARTY UNITY

LD051520 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 0700 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Excerpts] Things in the Union of the Democratic Center [UCD] are clearer today; The Social Democrats, Fernandez Ordonez's dissidents, laid out their plans at a press conference. Rodriguez Sahagun, the centrist president, returned to the Cortes as president of the UOD after a 3-hour meeting at the Moncloa Palace with Calvo-Sotelo. There are not going to be any resignations and both of them, the president of the party and the prime minister, agreed to work together for a UCD which continues to approach the 1983 elections in unity. For the time being an extraordinary party congress was also ruled out -- or, at least, the president of the party, Rodriguez Sahagun, does not feel he is obliged to call one.

Yesterday 15 Social Democrat parliamentarians left the party; Fernandez Ordonez, Gonzalez Serara, Javier Moscose, Carmen Solano, Maria Dolores Pelayo, Carmela Garcia Moreno, Eduardo Moreno, Alfonso Quiros, Luis Berenguer and the senators Pedro Valdecantos, Carmen Pinedo, Ricardo Rodriguez Castanon, Jose Herrero Arcas, Jose Antonio Gonzalez Monterroso and Manuel Cerda. According to Fernandez Ordonez, others were not admitted to this emergent party embryo and some Social Democrat colleaugues have still not made a definite decision.

ARMY WANTS TO DEPLOY MEDIUM-RANGE NUCLEAR ARMS

PM051205 Madrid EL PAIS in Spanish 21 Oct 81 p 16

[Pablo Sebastian report: "Army Is Interested in Medium-Range Nuclear Weapons, According to Lieutenant Colonel Monzon"]

[Excerpt] Defense Ministry spokesman Lt Col Manuel Monzon stated yesterday in the course of a debate on "Spain and NATO," organized yesterday by the Foundation for Progress and Democracy, that the Spanish army is interested in medium-range, tactical, defensive nuclear weapons, although he pointed out that the United States appears unwilling to give them to Spain.

Lieutenant Colonel Monzon's speech in the debate on Spain and NATO constituted the most significant event in the discussion, because of the singular nature of his remarks, especially since the lieutenant colonel was speaking, so he stated, on behalf of the Defense Ministry's official stances. Although Manuel Monzon emphasized that the nuclear option is not imminent, because Spain was not signed the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty, the fact that he highlighted the idea that the deployment of missiles with nuclear warheads as a defense need is being considered at the Defense Ministry caused surprises.

The fact that Lieutenant Colonel Monzon commented on the existing bilateral treaty with the United States in very harsh terms with respect to the U.S. administration, describing this agreement as a "shameful adherence without any advantage," also constituted a certain novelty. The lieutenant colonel stated that, moreover, this treaty (which was renewed for so many years by the Francoist dictatorship's administration) included no guarantee of defense and that it "had never been satisfactory."

Monzon gave a methodical account of various defense alternatives, and said that Spain would always be a military target in any Western conflict. He then referred to the Spanish joint strategic plan, linking it with the government's NATO option, and stressed that the military chain of command regards entry into the military organization as technically good.

BRIEFS

N. KOREAN DELEGATION -- Felipe Gonzalez, general secretary of the Socialist Workers Party of Spain on 23 October met the delegation of the Workers Party of Korea headed by Comrade Yun Ki-pok, alternate member of the Political Bureau, and secretary, of the Central Committee of the Workers Party of Korea, on a visit to Spain to attend the 29th congress of the Socialist Workers Party of Spain, according to a report. [Excerpt] [Pyongyang KCNA in English 0403 GMT 29 Oct 81 SK]

DENMARK

SCANDILUX SOCIAL DEMOCRATS COMMENT ON EAST-WEST TALKS

PM050937 Copenhagen AKTUELT in Danish 31 Oct 81 p 2

[Danish Social Democratic Party Foreign and Defense Committee Chairman Lasse Budtz "Viewpoint" article: "Europe's NATO Members Must Do Everything for Real Disarmament"]

[Text] "Scandilux" has become the international term for the informal meetings on foreign and security policy between the Social Democratic parties in the small NATO nations. The group met again recently, this time in Amsterdam and The Hague, with British and West German observers, including Michael Foot and Egon Bahr, taking part.

There are differences between the attitudes of the seven participating parties, but it is possible to draw the following three conclusions from the meeting.

1. Even if some of the participating countries do not want to allow the deployment of European medium-range missiles on their territory, the forthcoming negotiations between the United States and the Soviet Union on limiting missile deployment are accepted as a fact.

This also means that the NATO decision on a so-called "response" to the 250 or more Soviet missiles carrying a total of 750 or more warheads is also accepted as a fact.

2. But since we are dealing with a two-track decision -- including a decision to negotiate limitations -- the principle of advising the United States to try to implement the so-called zero option was also adopted. This means that the West should make an offer to the Soviet Union to refrain completely from deploying its missiles, and in return the Soviet Union would remove its medium-range missiles. This would be the ideal solution.

The next best solution would simply be to end with the lowest possible number of missiles, which would mean that the more missiles the Soviet Union removes, the fewer the West would deploy. U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig has already given his support to the principle of such an approach, and West German Foreign Minister Genscher has now adopted the same stance.

3. It is not necessary to achieve absolute parity between East and West. The nuclear arsenals are already so enormous that it is of secondary significance whether the West has 300 or 400 missiles as a response to the Russian ones, and if it would lead to a positive course in the negotiations the West should announce immediately at the start of the negotiations that absolute parity is not absolutely necessary.

This principle is already built into the dual decision, in that it has already been agreed that 572 missiles will be deployed if agreement cannot be reached with the Russians — and the Soviet Union already has more missiles at its disposal than the West has plans to deploy.

The Scandilux group -- the Netherlands, Belgium, Luxembourg, Norway and Denmark together with Britain and West Germany as observers -- have from the very start rejected any notion of the possibility of a limited nuclear war in Europe and have thus dissociated themselves in advance from President Reagan's remarks on the possibility of such a limited war — although these have now been corrected.

But as far as we are concerned, the British NEW STANDARD was right when it wrote: "President Reagan has actually dealt a more damaging blow to his own cause than the Russians had hoped for in their wildest dreams."

It is of course a good thing -- and it was to be expected -- that the President immediately made it clear that he had been misunderstood, but unfortunately the "misunderstanding" will increase the distrust of U.S. intentions which still exists in various political circles.

Of course, the Soviet Union has always distrusted the U.S. Government's objectives, but the distrust is mutual. The likeable U.S. acting Assistant Secretary of State for European Affairs, Larry Eagleburger, said at a recent meeting in Munich, where I was also able to meet him, that he was convinced that the Soviet Union is not entering the negotiations with serious intentions.

Former Vice-President Walter F. Mondale, a Democrat, has spoken in the most critical terms of the Republicans' foreign policy and has stated that it looks as if it is the United States and not the Soviet Union that is unwilling to take part in the negotiations.

There can hardly be any excuse to harbor doubts about the desire of the U.S. State Department experts to reach some concrete arms reduction arrangements, but statements from other U.S. politicians and experts have, however, helped to blur the picture.

It is hardly surprising that the Scandilux group holds the view that the European member nations should use all their influence either to make sure of or to contribute to the real success of the negotiations and the achievement of reductions.

This is of course in complete accord with the Danish Government's policy, which is quite simply that we must exploit every opportunity to support disarmament endeavors.

Social Democrats must be opposed to any interruption of or delay in the East-West dialogue -- although we would have to admit that a Soviet invasion of Poland, for example, would have serious consequences for detente.

NORWAY

FOREIGN MINISTER ON SUB INTRUSION IN SWEDEN

LD052010 Stockholm International Service in Swedish 1900 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Text] Norwegian Foreign Minister Svenn Stray, in a comment about the Swedish disclosures concerning the grounded Soviet submarine, said that it is indefensible and flagrant to the highest degree that a submarine carrying nuclear weapons should enter so deeply into another country's archipelago. Stray also said in a Norwegian radio interview that it may now be time to revise security arrangements for Norwegian waters.

SWEDEN

FALLDIN SAYS SUB CARRIES NUCLEAR TORPEDOES

LD051630 Stockholm International Service in English 1600 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Text] Swedish Prime Minister Thorbjorn Falldin met with representatives of the press late today and released some sensational news. (Al Simon) has the story:

The prime minister told reporters from not only the Swedish radio but also the world press that Sweden's experts who examined the submarine that came to Sweden and foundered on the rocks on Tuesday of last week, contained uranium-238. [sentence as heard] There is uranium-238 aboard the conventional Whiskey class submarine and, according to the prime minister's statement, Sweden can only conclude that there are one or more nuclear torpedoes on board the vessel. Further questioning of the captain and crew, says Sweden's prime minister, would not provide any more information. But without doubt, he says, the Soviet submarine was in Sweden on some kind of spy mission.

Mr Falldin called this intrusion by the Soviet submarine the most flagrant violation of Sweden's integrity and sovereignty since the Second World War. During this time, by way of background, the Swedish military who were guarding it, for the first time since the war were seeing foreign military eye to eye.

The Swedish navy was supposed to be towing the submarine out of Swedish waters to the Soviet Baltic Fleet that has been gathered outside the boundary late Thursday, but it cannot do this until the weather improves. Otherwise, said the prime minister, the submarine would be on its way home.

The Russian answer to the Swedish charge that the submarine contains one or more nuclear weapons was simply that the U-boat 137, the Whiskey class U-boat, as it has been called, according to the Russian view is armed like all Soviet vessels, with arms and ammunition. They did not specify or did not want to discuss the details of what the arms and ammunition are aboard the submarine.

The Swedish Government still has one bit of unfinished business even after the submarine ultimately returns to the Soviet Union. The Swedes will send Moscow a bill for their trouble; some estimates now run as high as 41 million.

Protest to Moscow

NC051620 Paris AFP in English 1614 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Excerpt] Stockholm, 5 Nov (AFP) -- Mr Falldin added [at the press conference] that he had protested to Moscow "over the deliberate violation of Swedish territory for illegal intelligence aims."

"This violation," he added, "is all the more unacceptable as the submarine was in all likelihood equipped with nuclear charges." Investigation had shown, he said, that there was possibly uranium-238 aboard the vessel. Mr Falldin said that according to Swedish defence experts, the submarine did not endanger the Swedish population. If the weather had been suitable, he added, the submarine might have left Swedish waters sooner.

Mr Falldin's latest protest to Moscow follows a Swedish protest on October 28 over the "serious violation" of its sovereignty by the submarine.

SOVIET AMBASSADOR COMMENTS ON SUBMARINE INCIDENT

LD051802 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 1700 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Text] This afternoon, the Soviet ambassador, Mikhail Yakovlev, received a sharply-worded protest note formulated by the government. When the ambassador came out of the meeting he had with Foreign Minister Ola Ullsten he had this to say:

[Begin recording] [Yakovlev -- in Russian] In the interest of the further development of relations between our two countries. [as heard]

[Question -- in Russian] And how will this influence Soviet-Swedish relations?

[Yakovlev -- in Russian] I think that this will have no influence. This was an isolated event. It was just an episode. [end recording]

The settlement will benefit the further development of relations between our two countries, the Soviet ambassador said to our reporter Stig Fredriksson. The Soviet ambassador declared he is satisfied with Sweden's handling of the submarine affair and said he does not think it will have a negative effect on Swedish-Soviet relations. He described the affair as an isolated and unhappy incident and maintained that it was caused by faults in the submarine's navigation equipment. He expressed the hope that nothing similar will happen again.

ARMY CHIEF GIVES PROBABLE EXPLANATION FOR GROUNDING

LD051838 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 1700 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Excerpt] Following the press conference [with Falldin and Olof Palme] the commander in chief spoke of what has been found out in the questioning of the submarine commander. What then has been found out? He was interviewed for 7 hours on board the Swedish torpedo boat and questioning of other crewmembers also took place on board the submarine.

The result which the commander in chief, Lennart Ljung presented was rather discouraging. Nothing has been found out about the reasons, nor was any credible explanation given for the submarine's presence, Lennart Ljung said. And no preconditions exist about obtaining any credible information either. The only thing of significance that was clarified during the questioning and during the examination is that the submarine carried out a planned intrusion into Swedish waters and that in so doing it ran aground during a rapid and powerful swerving maneuver, as Lennart Ljung said at a press conference, and this could have been said rather early on in this affair.

The submarine captain actually maintained at the start of the questioning that he thought he was in Christiansoe, the little Danish island north of Bornholm. And everything evidently functioned badly [word indistinct] not at all on board, if one is to believe the explanations that the crew gave during the questioning, not just the [word indistinct] gyrocompass then. But the Swedish defense establishment does not believe these explanations. So much for the questioning of the submarine crew.

As for the sensational reports concerning nuclear arms on board, this is how it happened.

FDA [Reserach Institute of Swedish National Defense] officials have examined the ship from the outside and have been able to establish that there is uranium-238 on board, a radioactive isotope. What one could say is that that it has thus been established that nuclear-charged torpedoes are on board this vessel. [words indistinct] what the vessel was doing there as the inquiry yields the result that we have found out that there are nuclear arms on Swedish territory. The Swedish Government then demanded an answer from the Soviet Government whether this was really the case, and the reply was: Well, all Soviet vessels, the Soviet submarine [word indistinct] 137 and all there ships at sea carry necessary weapons, the Soviet Government said. The Swedish Government, with Ullsten at the head, has interpreted this as meaning that they did not want either to confirm or to deny this. Uranium-238, which is the substance found on board, is not a fissionable material which can be used in [words indistinct] directly, but it is believed that this substance lies like a capsule around another fissionable substance inside the torpedoes.

FALLDIN ON LESSONS FROM SOVIET SUBMARINE INCIDENT

LD052014 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 1700 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Excerpts] The submarine affair: In a press conference on its conclusion, Prime Minister Falldin had this to say: [begin recording]

[Question] In what way does the government intend to prevent Soviet submarines from entering Swedish territory in the future?

[Answer] Already, about a year ago, when we had submarine incidents close to Stockholm where we first fired warning shots and then depth charges and so forth, a committee of inquiry was set up to find out whether we could increase our preparedness. We shall probably receive the recommendations of that inquiry before the end of the year and then we shall have to assess them.

We shall, of course, make efforts but it is also worth noting that it will never be technically or financially possible to guard each square kilometer of our territorial waters 24 hours a day.

[Question] How has the incident changed the relations with the USSR?

[Answer] It is a matter of course that when we are the targets of such a violation and of an action of this kind it no longer seems as natural as before to have talks on various matters.

[Question] In what way has this violation become more serious because the submarine is equipped with nuclear arms?

[Answer] I do not think this necessitates any special reply. The fact is that the Soviet side is talking about the need for nuclear-free zones, about the Baltic as the sea of peace. It is not enough that they enter Swedish territory -- it cannot be a question of faulty navigation being the primary cause -- this is not enough, but they also do this with ships which, judging by everything, are equipped with nuclear arms. This lends quite a special dimension to this matter.

[Question] There have been many alerts over the years. Has the government's attitude to these alerts changed as a result of this inicident?

[Answer] Yes, already through the measures which have been set in motion, in other words the inquiries, we want to consider carefully in what way we can increase our preparedness, to assert our sovereignty also with regard to submarines. We should know that purely from the technical viewpoint it is really difficult. Ordinary radar, which we can have on board guard vessels, is not really much use against submarines, but one must have equipment involving helicopters and the like. But this is not what the defense establishment is now engaged in showing, how this could happen. [as heard]

[Question] Do you, for example, think that the navy should get more money?

[Answer] There is no possibility of doing such calculations here and now. We know that the defense committee is working on this matter. After that a bill is to be prepared. Of course, even without such a serious violation the balancing between the various branches of defense would have been a difficult job, and this has not made it any easier.

[Question] Is there any reassuring message that the government can give to the public about the possibility that Soviet submarines equipped with nuclear torpedoes may continue to enter the Swedish archipelago?

[Answer] We can, of course, not give any completely reassuring message, but I have already shown that measures have been taken so that we can look at how we can increase our preparedness further. I belive, as I said in a television program last night too, that it must always be our task to try to make illegal intelligence activity more difficult, and I belive that after this incident people will think several times before exposing themselves to a similar risk again. In this way, we have strengthened our preparedness and, moreover, if we seek the causes we draw certain lessons from this, from purely technical starting-points. I am sure the commander in chief can explain later.

[Question] Is the conclusion that arises that Sweden cannot, with its own strength, prevent submarines from coming too close to the coast?

[Answer] No one can ever give absolute guarantees. No state can do that, however sophisticated the equipment they have. But as Ola Ullsten and I have said several times, this naturally increases the urgency to want to see the proposals which the commander-in-chief is going to submit before the end of the year, and then the necessary measure will have to be compared with other necessary measures, first by the defense review committee and later in a bill concerning the defense reviewcommittee and later in a bill concerning the defense forces for the next 5-year period, which is coming in the spring. [end recording]

SUBMARINE DELIVERED BACK TO SOVIETS

LD060950 Stockholm International Service in French 0930 GMT 6 Nov 81

[Excerpts] The Swedish navy just handed the Soviet submarine over to a Soviet squadron off the Swedish coast. The towing of the Soviet submarine started today at 0700 GMT. One hour later the Swedish tug "Achilles" stopped towing operations and the submarine continued under its own power escorted by many Swedish navy ships.

CYPRUS WEEKLY REPORTS ON WALDHEIM'S 'IDEAS'

NC060902 Nicosia THE CYPRUS WEEKLY in English 6 Nov 81 pp 1, 4

[Text] Waldheim's guidelines envisage the establishment of a federal independent, sovereign, nonaligned republic made up of separate Greek and Turkish Cypriot "provinces" and a "federal district" that will be the seat of government. The guidelines state that "the executive authority of the republic shall be exercised by a federal council composed of six members, one from each administrative district (2 from the northern province and 4 from the southern province)." These six members of the Federal Council "shall be appointed," Waldheim says.

Waldheim states that "regarding the method of election of the members of the federal council, the president and vice-president, this will be the object of discussions during the intercommunal talks. "Regarding the safeguards of the northern province and other aspects of the executive, I will make the evaluation at a more advanced stage of the talks."

Waldheim says that giving guidelines on the questions of territory is extremely difficult, since the two sides do not agree on the 'criteria' for such a division. But he suggests "for illustrative purposes" a separation on the basis of a 70/30 ratio.

He does not make any recommendations concerning international guarantees at this stage. He says this is a political question that should be discussed after agreement on all other aspects has been reached. But he seems to go back on a previous commitment on Varosha contained in the ten-point agreement of May 1979. He says the implementation of the resettlement of Varosha should be a priority issue "if the negotiations are successful."

Waldheim makes clear in an introduction to his "guidelines" that "this evaluation of the intercommunal talks is in no way final." He adds: "On the contrary, it is only an analysis which emphasises the points of coincidence and those of equidistance which have as a goal to find middle ways or to establish bridges in order to close the existing gaps. Obviously, these preliminary considerations do not exhaust the subject in which some vacuums should be filled, through negotiations."

Waldheim pointed out that he did not "tackle some points of divergence, such as taxation, amendments to the constitution, and international guarantees."

"We believe the first two items are technical and can be solved by working groups of specialists. The last item is a political question that should be discussed at the appropriate level, after agreement on all other aspects has been reached." He also leaves unanswered the question of the return of the refugees to their homes and the right of citizens of the republic to move freely and own property throughout the state without any restrictions.

On this point, he states that as "a transitory provision, two commissions or working groups under the chairmanship of the interlocutors and consisting of six members, three from each province, shall be established to overcome the practical difficulties for the implementation of the rights established under articles 13 (1) and 23 of the 1960 constitution." (These are the articles covering the freedom of movement and to own property.)

The other main proposals made by the UN chief cover the following:

That the two provinces of the republic "shall draft their own constitutions in conformity with the federal constitution."

"The federal legislative power shall comprise two chambers: the Chamber of Provinces giving the Greek and Turkish Cypriot communities equal representation of ten members each, and a Popular Chamber "composed of representatives of the people of Cyprus on a ratio of one member for each 10,000 of the total population."

The guidelines do not provide procedures to be followed in case of disagreement.

In addition, each province shall elect its own provincial chamber "whose responsibilities shall include approval of necessary provincial legislation." Each province shall establish its own administration of justice and will control the provincial police, but will have no jurisdiction in federal matters.

Waldheim says the area of competence of each province will cover matters other than those allocated to the six-member Federal Council.

The Federal government or coundil will have six ministerial portfolios:

--foreign affairs.
--defense, citizenship, immigration, emigration, extradition and federal police.
--justice and higher education.
--coordination of international trade and tourism, postal and telecommunication services, international navigation (including authority over ports and airports in connection with international matters).
--federal finance, central bank, currency, customs, weights, measures and patents.
--coordination of environmental matter, natural resources and health, labour and social services.

Other powers of the Federal Council shall include the promulgation of federal statutes, and decisions and laws passed by both chambers, allocating the federal budget, and setting out the policies of the federal government.

The guidelines also make the following "transitional provisions."

"The provinces shall establish a joint board of claims to deal with compensation claims arising from the establishment of the republic. The federal supreme court shall act as a court of appeal for the decisions of the board."

"A fund for development of the northern province shall be established with a view to achieving an economic equilibrium between the two provinces. The federal government shall contribute to this fund. Foreign governments and international organisations shall be invited to contribute to this fund."

"A federal real estate bank shall be established to provide credit and economic assistance to displaced persons for the purpose of their permanent settlement."

The points of coincidence listed by the guidelines cover the following:

The establishment of a federal republic consisting of two provinces and a federal district that will be the seat of government. The division of the northern province into two administrative districts and the southern into four.

The exclusion of "secession integration or union of the republic in whole or in part with any other state."

"The state shall have an international personality and the federal government shall exercise sovereignty in respect to all the territory."

Single citizenship regulated by federal law.

Agreement to be reached by the two provinces for "a neutral federal flag and national anthem." Each province to create its own flag, using as far as possible elements of the federal flag.

Waldheim says that, regarding the question of territory, "it appears that the terms of reference provided by the interlocutors during the intercommunal talks cannot easily be reconciled."

He goes on: "Furthermore, qualitative and quantitative divergencies of views have also emerged with regard to the search for objective criteria. The two sides' estimates of natrual resources, land ownership, infrastructure, percentage of land under each side's control, number of displaced persons, differ. This of course has led both sides to suggest territorial arrangements which are hardly compatible, and consequently there is no easy basis for an objective suggestion.

"Nevertheless, during discussions at the intercommunal talks, two major concerns have emerged which should be taken into account when searching for a territorial solution: Resettlement of a large number of Greek Cypriot refugees in the territory comprising the Greek Cypriot province, and the economic viability and security of the Turkish Cypriot Community."

Waldheim suggests that a fund for developing the north could established "to deal with the socioeconomic consequences of the territorial adjustment and, at the same time, to represent an important element of the basis for a vigorous economy and ensure a balanced development in the republic."

The secretary-general says the lack of concurrent information on criteria makes it 'very difficult' to envisage concrete percentages of territorial areas. The real socioeconomic impact of any adjustment can only be properly measured once factors have been quantified. "In addition, the need for security of both communities should be taken into account."

Waldheim concludes: "Therefore, to facilitate a result-oriented negotiation in the question of territory, it may for practical reasons be useful to attempt to quantify these factors, section by section, in the area of demarcation.

"A first step, which would be only for illustrative purposes on the map, would be to work on the basis of a line drawn so that the area under Greek Cypriot jurisdiction was at least 70 percent, including the buffer zone, which is the minimum for the resettlement of a substantial number of refugees. This 70/30 ratio might be varied according to the characteristics of the area. This would be a method of establishing a firm basis for further discussions".

BULGARIAN NATIONAL EDUCATION MINISTER ENDS VISIT

NC051242 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1130 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Text] Bulgarian National Education Minister Fol departed this morning on his way back to his country after a short official visit to Cyprus. In a statement before his departure, the Bulgarian minister said his talks were useful and that he gathered much useful information on the education system used in Cyprus.

Fol reiterated his country's support for the struggle of the people of Cyprus for an independent, free, territorially integral and demilitarized Cyprus. He invited Konomis to visit Bulgaria.

On seeing Fol off, Cypriot Education Minister Konomis referred to the cordial relations between Bulgaria and Cyprus and expressed thanks for Bulgarian support in the struggle of the people of Cyprus. He also expressed the hope for continued close cooperation on matters of joint interest.

At Larnaca airport, Fol was also seen off by the Bulgarian ambassador and officials from both sides.

NORTH'S DENKTAS RECEIVES EEC DELEGATION

TA051601 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in Turkish to Cyprus 1300 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Text] An EEC delegation headed by External Relations Directorate European Affairs Director Pierre de Chateau has begun contacts in the TFSC. President Rauf Denktas this morning received the EEC delegation and conferred with the members for some time.

In a statement at the end of the meeting, Denktas said he held a sincere, realistic and profound meeting with the delegation. Denktas noted that he views as a primary condition for the aid that both communities on Cyprus benefit from the aid extended by the EEC. The EEC is seeking new ways whereby the Turkish Cypriot community can receive its share of the aid in line with current (?difficulties).

The EEC delegation also met with Prime Minister Mustafa Cagatay and Interior, Foreign Affairs and Defense Minister Kenan Atakol.

NEW U.S. AMBASSADOR VISITS DENKTAS IN NORTH

TA051800 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in Turkish to Cyprus 1530 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Text] President Rauf Denktas this afternoon received the new U.S. ambassador, Raymond Ewing, and conferred with him for some time. Minister of Interior, Foreign Affairs and Defense Kenan Atakol also attended the meeting. It was reported that the meeting was a courtesy visit.

NORTH SPOKESMAN: NATIONAL GUARD UNCONSTITUTIONAL

TA022008 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in English to Cyprus 1115 GMT 2 Nov 81

[Text] The Foreign Ministry spokesman has said that the Greek Cypriot National Guards is an unconstitutional body established with the aim of attacking the Turks, and that any Greek Cypriot attempt to expand it would be a sign of aggression. He was referring to reports that the Greek Cypriot administration is planning to reorganize the National Guard to comprise three armed services and that Greece would be sending military personnel to the south.

The spokesman, speaking to reporters this morning, said that such a development would hamper peace efforts concerning Cyprus and that the Turkish Cypriot side would have to take necessary measures. On the question of missing persons, the spokesman described the Greek Cypriot attack on the United Nations representative on the mixed committee as normal because, he said, the representative was someone from outside maintaining impartiality and refusing to approve the Greek Cypriot case on the matter.

The spokesman cited as an example the former president of the constitutional court, Prof (Foshtof), of West Germany, several UN officials and a number of foreign diplomats who were attacked by the Greek Cypriots for not supporting the Greek Cypriot case. The spokesman said that the so-called Committee of Solidarity with Cyprus which met in the south has made no contacts with the Turkish Cypriot side and that its resolutions would not be binding on the Turkish Cypriots. He stressed that if the aim of the so-called committee had been for solidarity with the entire Cypus, it should have been a body representing both communities on the island. It is clear that it had been formed by the Greek Cypriots and it should be called the Committee of Solidarity with the Greek Cypriots.

GOVERNMENT: 'POSITIVE' VIEW OF ULUSU INTERVIEW

NC052234 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1930 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Text] A government spokesman, in reply to a question concerning Turkish Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu's interview with the INTERNATIONAL HERALD TRIBUNE which was also published in a Greek evening newspaper, has stated that the government considers the Turkish prime minister's interview as positive.

YASIR 'ARAFAT LAUDS PAPANDREOU FRIENDSHIP

NC052132 Athens ELEVTHEROTIPIA in Greek 5 Nov 81 p 14

[Text] Thessaloniki, 5 Nov -- With the recognition of the Palestine liberation front, Greece now acquires "a front of allies in the Arab world, a front that extends from the Atlantic Ocean to the Indian Ocean" Yasir 'Arafat is said to have stated.

In an interview by the Palestinian leader, which is the first after PASOK's victory, published in the Thessaloniki newspaper EGNATIA, Yasir 'Arafat:

Refers to the Greek prime minister with the phrase "my friend, Andreas Papandreou," and gives the impression he cannot wait to meet with Papandreou.

-- Stresses that "my friend, Andreas Papandreou, supports us in Europe."

-- Points out that "Greece, which belongs to the EEC, is the only country which does not recognize Israel." (editor's note: Only out of the EEC countries)

-- Recalls that "the Greek people have always supported the rights of the Arabs."

-- Describes Greece as "the link between the Arab world and Europe."

-- Concludes with the following statement, which can be interpreted as an [illegible] that the Papandreou government, with the policy it is following, can [illegible]ely on financial support from the Arabs: "Now the Arabs will prove their friendship toward Greece with deeds."

AFP: GREECE DROPS 'VETO' ON EEC IN SINAI FORCE

NC051948 Paris AFP in English 1941 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Text] Athens, 5 Nov (AFP) -- Greece no longer has any objections to the setting up of a multi-national force involving troops from France, Britain, Italy and the Netherlands to help police the Sinai desert following next April's withdrawal of Israeli troops from the area, reliable sources said here today.

The lifting of the Greek "veto" will soon allow publication of a statement by the European Economic Community (EEC) on the Mideast peace process, the sources added.

BRIEFS

AMBASSADOR TO UAE -- The president of the United Arab Emirates Shaykh Sultan Al Nuhayyan received the credentials of the new Greek ambassador to his country, Mr Leonidhas Vrailas, yesterday in Abu Dhabi. [Text] [Athens NEWS in English 4 Nov 81 p 4 NC]

FRG FOREIGN MINISTER ARRIVES IN ANKARA FOR VISIT

TA051534 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1400 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Text] FRG Minister of Foreign Affairs Hans-Dietrich Genscher is currently in Turkey for a brief visit of 24 hours. He is the official guest of Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen. The visiting minister was received at Ankara's Esenboga airport by Turkmen.

[Begin Turkmen recording] We are very pleased to welcome Mr Genscher in our country. In evaluating this visit, it is necessary to take into account the existing historical and traditional friendship between Turkey and the FRG. In addition to this friendship, Turkey and the FRG are members of the same alliance and the FRG is the country with the most intense relations with Turkey among the EEC countries. There is wide-ranging economic and defense cooperation between Turkey and the FRG. Our relations are deep-rooted. Naturally, we also have some problems. Mr Genscher's visit will provide the opportunity to review the relations between the two countries. We will also seize this opportunity to exchange views on the international situation, which has recently been undergoing rapid developments. I hope Mr Genscher's brief stay in Turkey will be fruitful and pleasant and I welcome him. [end recording]

The FRG minister of foreign affairs made the following statement upon arrival in Turkey:

[Begin Genscher recording in German with superimposed Turkish translation] Relations between our two countries are very close. Numerous Turkish citizens are employed in our country and our citizens frequently visit your country. There is an old friendship between Turkey and the FRG. I cannot forget that during the dictatorship period in Germany, several democrats resided in Turkey as a second country. Our countries are members of the defense pact established to preserve freedom. The close relations between us constitute the [word indistinct] of the interest shown in the developments in Turkey. I expect that during our talks in Ankara, we will discuss the current problems concerning our countries. My government attaches great importance to these talks. [end recording]

The visiting foreign minister held a short meeting with Turkmen in his office in the afternoon and was then received by Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu.

[Begin Ulusu recording] The economic, social, military and cultural relations between the two countries are based on history and they derive their strength from that. We are specially pleased that we will discuss these relations together with Mr Genscher and on this occasion I extend to him my best wishes. [end recording]

Genscher responded: [Begin Genscher recording in German with superimposed Turkish translation] I thank you for enabling me to visit you as well during my stay in Ankara. As we both know, the cooperation based on sound foundations between our two countries has also caused mutual understanding between our peoples. We are also members of the same defense pact, which was established in a bid to preserve our freedom, our tranquil life and all our values. This is why it is necessary to understand the fact that one country is concerned about the events in the other country and follows developments closely. This can be achieved by openly discussing the problems between us. [end recording]

The statement by Genscher reveals that there are certain problems between the two countries and solutions will be sought to these problems. The statement issued by the Foreign Ministry on the subject also notes that the political, economic and social relations between the two countries will be dealt with and that various world issues will also be discussed.

The official talks between the two countries will soon begin at the Foreign Ministry. Genscher has also been received by Head of State Gen Kenan Evren. He will meet Consultative Assembly Speaker Sadi Irmak tomorrow morning.

Meeting With Evren

TA051811 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Excerpt] FRG Minister of Foreign Affairs Hans-Dietrich Genscher, who arrived in Ankara today, was received by Head of State Gen Kenan Evren at the Cankaya mansion at 1630. In a statement during the meeting, Evren pointed out that, both before and since the 12 September operation, there have been certain forces trying to break the existing historical ties between Turkey and the FRG. Noting the Turkey is exerting efforts to avoid such schemes, Evren expressed the belief that the FRG is doing the same. Evren said he is very pleased to have the opportunity to describe firsthand Turkey's current situation during this visit. He also expressed the conviction that the talks in Ankara will benefit both countries.

In his statement, Genscher noted that Turkey and the FRG are parts of a defense pact established in a bid to preserve democracy and that this further strengthened the relations between the two countries. Genscher also said that, as a friend, he will be pleased to express his views on Turkey.

After the meeting, the official talks between the two countries were begun. The Turkish delegation is headed by Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen and the FRG delegation by Genscher. The visiting FRG minister will be received by Consultative Assembly Speaker Sadi Irmak tomorrow morning and will depart Turkey at noon.

DPA Report

LD051634 Hamburg DPA in German 1547 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Excerpt] Ankara, 5 Nov (DPA) -- During his talk with Gen Kenan Everen today, Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher "expressed the German side's concern at internal political developments in Turkey." Well-informed sources also said that following the 1-hour talk, Genscher was pleased with the statements by the official Turkish side about the situation in the country.

Before his talk with President Evren, Genscher had a meeting with Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen. There was a thorough discussion of all aspects of German-Turkish relations, it was said later. Tomorrow, Genscher will meet the chairman of the Consultative Assembly, Sadi Irmak.

Turkmen Addresses Dinner

TA052049 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 2000 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Text] Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen has expressed the hope that Turkey's relations with European organizations and its allies would not be adversely affected during its current transition period.

In a speech at a dinner in honor of FRG Minister of Foreign Affairs Hans-Dietrich Genscher, who is currently on an official visit in Ankara, Turkmen noted that the visit is being held at a period when Turkey is experiencing an important phase in the transition to parliamentary democracy has a special significance. Turkmen explained that the determination displayed in Turkey in connection with the restoration of democracy originates from the importance attached to relations with NATO and European allies as well as from traditions. Reiterating that Turkey is in favor of strengthening unity and solidarity within the NATO alliance, Turkmen said this is why Turkey adopts a positive stance with regard to various subjects concerning the southeastern flank of the alliance.

Pointing out that the economic and military aid extended by the FRG to Turkey is welcome, Turkmen noted that Turkey is very sensititve toward proposals to secure the continuation of this aid. Turkmen expressed the belief that the talks in Ankara will further enhance the increasing economic, cultural and social ties between the two countries.

Genscher Statement at Dinner

TA060707 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 0430 GMT 6 Nov 81

[Excerpts] In a statement last night at a dinner in his honor by Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen, FRG Minister of Foreign Affairs Hans-Dietrich Genscher, who is currently on an official visit in Ankara, said that his country acknowledged efforts exerted by Turkey to settle its questions with Greece. The visiting minister recalled the historic friendship and links existing between Turks and Germans. Noting that some 1.5 million Turks lived in the FRG, Genscher said that they were strengthening, as the representatives of their country, the link between the two countries. After pointing out that NATO, to which both countries belonged, is an organization that defends the fundamental principles of a state of law as well as human rights, the visiting foreign minister said: The establishment of the Consultative Assembly, which will draft the constitution, as well as the political parties and election laws, is proof of steps taken in favor of the development of the democratic system in Turkey. We are convinced that such steps will have a strong effect in the establishment of a stable democratic system.

Genscher said that the settlement of problems between Turkey and Greece was of great importance for NATO. He added that his country supported Turkey's efforts to this effect. Stressing the importance for stability in the Mediterranean of continuing the intercommunal talks aimed at the solution of the Cyprus issue and achieving a final and satisfactory settlement on this issue, Genscher said that he is convinced that Turkey is doing its best on this subject.

Recalling Turkey's important location in Europe, between Asia and Africa, Genscher said that Turkey's efforts to develop its links with these continents in the future would be to the benefit of all Europe as well.

The visiting FRG foreign minister will conclude today his official visit to Turkey. He is expected to meet with Consultative Assembly Speaker Sadi Irmak before he departs Turkey.

DPA Report

LD052042 Hamburg DPA in German 1859 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn/Ankara, 5 Nov (DPA) -- Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher has urged the Turkish military government to restore democracy. He did so on Thursday evening during his visit to Turkey. "It is important to send convincing signals, visible to the Western friends of Turkey, indicating a speedy return to democracy," Genscher emphasized at a dinner given by his counterpart, Ilter Turkmen. The danger of misunderstanding could otherwise be great. "This should be prevented precisely because of the closeness of our interests and the interest of our people in your country," the minister said.

Genscher stressed that the Atlantic alliance, which unites Turkey and the FRG, is committed to the protection of the principles of the state under the rule of law and human rights. Bonn hopes that the assembly's adoption of a constitution will be a first step towards the development of democracy and that this step will lead to the establishment of a stable democratic order. Genscher's speech was published by the Foreign Office in Bonn.

Meeting with Bulent Ecevit

LD052140 Hamburg DPA in German 2033 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Excerpt] Ankara, 5 Nov (DPA) -- Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher met the former prime minister and former leader of the social democratic Republican People's Party, Bulent Ecevit, on Thursday evening within the framework of his 2-day visit to Turkey.

Ecevit is due to start a 4-month prison sentence next Tuesday if the responsible martial law commander does not question the sentence and thus cause the case to be referred to the next highest court. Ecevit was sentenced by a military court for criticizing the military government's order for the dissolution of political parties. He did this despite the fact that he had been forbidden to engage in any kind of political activity.

The meeting between Genscher and Ecevit, which took place in the private flat of the former deputy chairman of the Republican People's Party, Altan Oymen, was attended only by an interpreter. As was said afterwards, Genscher and Ecevit agreed on the necessity of reestablishing democratic conditions in Turkey. In the half-hour-long talk, Ecevit explained to the federal foreign minister that he had no opportunity to defend himself against the accusations leveled against him by the military regime. But he said that there continues to be "a connection on the basis of democracy" between the two countries.

Genscher Concludes Visit, Departs

TA061047 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 6 Nov 81

[Text] FRG Minister of Foreign Affairs Hans-Dietrich Genscher, who arrived in Ankara on an official visit yesterday, has concluded his contacts and has left Turkey.

In a statement at Esenboga Airport before his departure, Genscher said that he arrived in Turkey as the minister of foreign affairs of a friendly country and ally. He noted that this alliance was established with the aim of security, democracy and peace. Pointing out that, at the talks held in Ankara, international problems were discussed and that he had expressed the FRG's views on Turkey, Genscher added that he briefed his friends in Turkey on the joint views of all the parties within the FRG Bundestag, noting that this was connected to the importance attached to a speedy return to democracy. Genscher concluded by saying that a detailed exchange of views took place at the talks.

Before his departure from Turkey this morning, Genscher was received by the Consultative Assembly speaker, Sadi Irmak. In a statement after the meeting which was held at the Grand National Assembly, Irmak said that they reviewed the problems of two friendly countries.

VOTCP Criticism

TA060738 (Clandestine) Voice of Turkish Communist Party in Turkish to Europe and Turkey 0600 GMT 6 Nov 81

[Station commentary: "What Is Genscher Doing in Turkey?"]

[Text] Dear listeners, reaction to pressures and terror by the military and reactionary junta in Turkey is continuing in the West. Criticisms against the military junta in Turkey is being voiced in parliaments, in the Council of Europe and in the EEC. The ruling circles of these European countries are exerting efforts in a bid to muffle this reaction from the public.

It is under this climate that the FRG foreign minister, Genscher, is visiting Turkey officially. It was unfortunate, however, for the FRG Government circles that this visit coincided with the prison sentence of former RPP leader Ecevit by the junta administration. These same circles which supported and welcomed the emergence of the military rule in Turkey are now engaged in making excuses for the visit of their foreign minister, saying that the purpose is to supervise the restoration of democracy in Turkey.

Dear listeners, this is another instance of the two-faced policies being pursued by the FRG Government.

The reason for the visit by FRG Foreign Minister Genscher, the fervent supporter of the Reagan Policies of armaments, to Turkey is to discuss the armaments problems and the new NATO plans with the military junta. It is of no concern to Genscher whether democracy is restored in Turkey or not.

The followers of Schmidt and Genschers, who implement the policies in favor of the FRG monopolies, are not in favor of the struggle for peace and democracy in their country or abroad. They accuse the hundreds of thousands who marched for peace in the FRG, and implement the [word indistinct] antidemocratic laws against the communists and other progressives. Are those who banned the German Communist Party, those who tried to impede the peace demonstrations and those who launched the police against those who were protesting the building of a military airfield in Frankfurt entitled to supervise the restoration of democracy in Turkey?

Yes, dear listeners, this is what the hypocritical policies followed by those like Genscher are all about. However, within the Social Democratic party as well as other political parties in the FRG people do not trust the deceiving democratic stand of those like Genscher and Schmidt.

In our country, also, the followers of democracy must not trust such hypoicritical policies and advice by the socialist international to wait and see. It is true one must wait in order to see. However, what one will contemplate is not democracy but pressures and terrorism.

SOVIET DIPLOMAT NOTES RECORD OF GOOD RELATIONS

TA051746 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1605 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Text] Ankara, Nov 5 (AA) -- Undersecretary of the Soviet Embassy in Ankara, Michael Kovrigin, staged a press conference today to mark the 64th anniversary of the October Revolution. Turkey and the Soviet Union mark this year the 60th anniversary of the Ankara treaty of friendship dated March 16, 1921, the Soviet diplomat noted, adding that in Soviet foreign policy, Turkey had a significant place.

The Soviet Union is prepared to further develop the good relations between the two countries, (?as stated) by Soviet head of state Leonid Brezhnev in his message to Turkish leaders on the centenary of Ataturk (founder of Turkish Republic). Both sides wanted to develop goodneighbourly relations and cooperation to the benefit of both countries and world peace.

PROSECUTOR ASKS DEATH SENTENCE FOR 10 MILITANTS

TA041746 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 4 Nov 81

[Summary] Out of 25 militants belonging to an illegal association, the prosecutor at the 1st Military Court in Izmir asked the death sentence for 10 of them for subversive activities. In his indictment, the prosecutor said they were accused of killing 6 persons, one of them a security official, of wounding 10 others, and of engaging in numerous acts of violence. The prosecutor also requested heavy prison sentences raging from 2 to 20 years for the other 15 terrorists.

CORRECTION TO ARAYIS VIEWS OF SOCIETY, PARTIES

The following correction is made to the item entitled "ARAYIS discusses Society, Political Parties," published in the 4 November Western Europe DAILY REPORT on page T 5:

On page T 5, in the sixth line of the third paragraph, substitute the word "acts" for the word "atrocities."

DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 216 9 November 1981

CONTENTS

BENELUX

BELGIUM

Christian People's Party Loses 15 Seats in Election F 1

NETHERLANDS

Financing of Job Creation Program Creates Deadlock [DE VOLKSKRANT 4 Nov] F 1
CDA Split on Backing Antinuclear Demonstration [DE VOLKSKRANT 4 Nov] F 1

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

SPD: Brandt Call for Cabinet Reshuffle Untrue J 1
Schmidt Discusses Disarmament, Relations With U.S. J 1
Officials Comment on USSR, Brezhnev's Visit J 3
SPD Land Congress Rejects NATO Military Plan J 3
Congress Reelects Lafontaine J 4
Group Wants Bavaria as a Non-Nuclear Arms State J 4
Genscher on Cairo TV: Fahd Plan 'Very Realistic' J 4
Kohl Predicts End to SPD-FDP Coalition J 4
Baum Expresses Concern Over Rightwing Radicalism J 5

FRANCE

French, Soviet Officials Discuss Mideast, USSR Role K 1
Mitterrand Interviewed on African Policy [LE MONDE 4 Nov] K 1
Soviet Diplomat Gives Reasons for Defecting [LE MONDE 5 Nov] K 3
NATO Dependence Precludes Political Integration [LE FIGARO 4 Nov] K 4

ITALY & THE VATICAN

Spadolini Comments on Domestic, External Issues [LA REPUBBLICA 5 Nov] L 1
Talks Continue With Visiting Gabon President L 1
Defense Minister Receives Sudan's Vice President L 2
Lagorio Comments on PCI, Defense Policy L 2
PCI Secretariat on Sinai Force, Spain, NATO [L'UNITA 31 Oct] L 3
Press Comments on PCI Reform Proposals L 4
Radio, TV, Press To Strike 13 November L 4

NORDIC AFFAIRS

FINLAND

Koivisto Discusses Finno-Soviet Relations [HUFVUDSTADSBLADET 2 Nov] P 1
Holkeri Wins Party Presidential Nomination [HUFVUDSTADSBLADET 5 Nov] P 1
Kivisto-Saarinen Battle for Party Nomination [DAGENS NYHETER 4 Nov] P 2
Soviet Analyst Comments on Finnish Foreign Policy [HUFVUDSTADSBLADET 3 Nov] P 2

NORWAY

Government Struggles With Defense Budget Problems [ARBEIDERBLADET 29 Oct] P 3

SWEDEN

Nordic Reaction to Submarine Affair Noted P 4

UNITED KINGDOM

Carrington Hopeful for Peace After Saudi Visit Q 1

CYPRUS

Kiprianou Cable Congratulates Brezhnev R 1
Soviet Envoy Statement R 1
Papaioannou Urges UK Bases, U.S. Station Closings [KHARAVYI 8 Nov] R 1
UN To Receive Protest on Turkish Air Violation R 2
Lissaridhis on Publication of Waldheim Ideas R 2
Paper Hits Ulusu Turkish Cypriot Control Denial [I ELEVTHEROTIPIA 7 Nov] R 3
Party Leaders Express Solidarity With Cuba R 3
AKEL's Papaioannou [KHARAVYI 7 Nov] R 3
EDEK Chairman Lissaridhis [TA NEA 8 Nov] R 3
Paper on Former Official's Agreement With Libya [I SIMERINI 8 Nov] R 4

GREECE

Papandreou Meets Turkish Envoy, Makes Statement S 1
Further Comment S 1
NEWS Gives More Details on Ulusu Interview [6 Nov] S 1
Objection to EEC Sinai Force Plan Continues [NEWS 6 Nov] S 2
Chamber of Deputies To Open Session 16 November S 2
Netherlands Foreign Minister Arrives for Visit S 2
Meets With Papandreou S 2
Van der Stoel Departs S 3
Iraqi Deputy Premier Arrives on State Visit S 3

TURKEY

Ulusu Statement on Papandreou-Alacan Meeting T 1
European Parliament Rejects Aid Freeze Proposal T 1
Courts' Actions in Antidissidence Campaign T 1
Publisher Sentenced T 1
Writer Sentenced T 2
Actor Indicted T 2
Armenian Released T 2
Death Sentence Sought T 2
Loan Agreement With Netherlands Approved T 2

OTHER COUNTRIES

AUSTRIA

Briefs: Consulate Bombed; Tiroleans Protest U 1

SPAIN

Guard Injured in Bombing, ETA Suspected U 1

BELGIUM

CHRISTIAN PEOPLE'S PARTY LOSES 15 SEATS IN ELECTION

LD090140 [Editorial Report] Brussels Domestic Service in French at 2300 GMT on 8 November reports on the results, calculated in terms of parliamentary seats, of the 8 November elections. The following results are based on 73 percent of the votes:

Party	Seats Won	Notes
People's Union	20	Gain of 6 seats
Christian Social Party	18	Loss of 7 seats
Belgian Socialist Party	27	Gain of 1 seat
Party of Liberty and Progress	28	Gain of 6 seats
Democratic Front of Brussels French Speakers-Walloon Rally	8	Loss of 7 seats
Socialist Party	36	Gain of 4 seats
Party of Liberty and Walloon Reform	23	Gain of 8 seats
Christian People's Party	42	Loss of 15 seats
Flemish Bloc	1	No change
Democratic Union for the Respect of Labor	3	Gain of 2 seats
Ecologists	4	Gain of 4 seats

NETHERLANDS

FINANCING OF JOB CREATION PROGRAM CREATES DEADLOCK

PM061659 Amsterdam DE VOLKSKRANT in Dutch 4 Nov 81 p 1

[Excerpt] The Hague -- In the final phase of their attempt to repair the split in the cabinet the informateurs have run up against the refusal of Prime Minister van Agt and Christian Democratic Appeal [CDA] Minister van der Stee to accept their compromise proposal. Earlier in the evening the outgoing Labor Party [PVDA] and Democrats '66 ministers announced their agreement with the proposal.

Until late in the evening informateurs de Galan and Halberstadt tried to move Prime Minister van Agt and Minister van der Stee to agreement. Today the informateurs will present their definitive proposal to the five ministers most closely involved who must then reach a decision on the proposal within a short time. Initially the informateurs wanted a joint conversation with all the five ministers yesterday evening. They were unsuccessful because Van Agt and Van der Stee continued to adhere to their objections to the financing of the job creation program in particular.

The informateurs' compromise was described as "a hybrid of their own proposals and the compromise proposals from D'66." The central point in the proposal is the financing of the job creation program, which in the view of the informateurs should be paid for out of a solidarity levy, an interim tax measure.

CDA SPLIT ON BACKING ANTINUCLEAR DEMONSTRATION

PM061701 Amsterdam DE VOLKSKRANT in Dutch 4 Nov 81 p 3

[Excerpt] The Hague — The Christian Democratic Appeal [CDA] still has problems about the manner in which the party can take part in the big antinuclear demonstration in Amsterdam 21 November. The party's rightwing does not want to take part because it says that the demonstration's slogans go too far. The leftwing, especially the nuclear arms rebels in the second chamber group, want to take an active part. This has led to a situation in which the party is not taking an active part in the organizat on of the demonstration, but the party executive will send a speaker to the demonstration to express the party's concern over the nuclear arms race. The Labor Party and Democrats '66 joined the organization of the demonstration at an early stage. Up to now the CDA has been considering the invitation. The slogans which will be used during the demonstration go too far for the CDA, in particular the call that the government withdraw its agreement to the December 1979 NATO decision for the introduction of new nuclear weapons in West Europe.

SPD: BRANDT CALL FOR CABINET RESHUFFLE UNTRUE

LD081728 Hamburg DPA in German 1458 GMT 8 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 8 Nov (DPA) -- On Sunday the SPD denied press reports concerning the alleged proposals of SPD Chairman Willy Brandt on the reshuffling of the cabinet. A report in the Hamburg news magazine DER SPIEGEL said that Brandt had suggested such a reshuffle to the federal chancellor and had named names. The magazine reports that these considerations were brought about by the recent poll results which were unfavorable for the SPD.

"I cannot confirm such a conversation on this subject, the spokesman of the SPD Executive, Wolfgang Clement, said. He pointed out that cabinet changes were a matter for the federal chancellor alone. There is, after all, a coalition. Clement described as absurd the assumption that the SPD chairman had openly [auf dem offenen markt] named names to the federal chancellor.

According to SPIEGEL, Brandt would have liked to see Horst Ehmke being promoted into the cabinet again. Also the mayor of Bremen, Hans Koschnick, and the former senator in Hamburg and Berlin, Frank Dahrendorf, would be promoted to Bonn. Moreover, Brandt saw in the SPD Land government in Duesseldorf a storehouse of talent, especially Finance Minister Dieter Posser.

SCHMIDT DISCUSSES DISARMAMENT, RELATIONS WITH U.S.

DW061223 Hamburg ARD Television Network in German 1915 GMT 5 Nov 81

[Reporter Staich interview with Chancellor Helmut Schmidt; date and place not given -- recorded]

[Text] [Question] Mr Federal Chancellor, in your speech in London in 1977, you pointed to the armament lead of the Soviets -- the SS-20 missiles -- thus touching off a fierce counterarmament debate. Have you since come closer to the aim of disarmament or arms control?

[Answer] You cannot put in that way. I was a great advocate of the SALT talks between the Russians and the Americans. I regret very much that this treaty has so far not come about, although three American presidents negotiated on limiting the intercontinental missiles with which the Russians threaten the Americans in their homeland and vice versa. But I have always criticized the fact that both superpowers disregarded in this treaty the so-called medium-range weapons which threaten the existence of the Netherlanders, Belgians, Franch, Italians, British and Germans. These are strategic weapons for us because they can destroy us just as during the Thirty Years war when more than half the Germans were exterminated. I am very satisfied that finally negotiations are to begin this month on medium-range weapons and their numerical limitation. The SALT talks will resume next spring between both superpowers. We have not come closer to a solution since 1977, that is true. But as always there is a chance and hope for results. Mankind managed to eventually abandon slavery as well as colonialism: why shouldn't we be successful this time as well?

[Question] Are there moments when you sometimes think: If only I had not started all this in view of the disharmony in the alliance, in our populace and also in my party?

[Answer] No, there have been no such moments. I am firmly convinced that it was correct to point out the imbalance because a grave shift in the political balance in Europe could have developed. I am and remain a firm advocate of the philosophy of a balance in military forces or, if a may say so, a balance in defense potential -- you could also say of a balance in mutual deterrence. For me, military balance, which must be kept on as low a level as possible through arms limitation treaties -- and regarding medium-range weapons, I would prefer zero -- for me this balance belongs together with economic, political and cultural cooperation between the West and the East. This cooperation and balance together ensure peace.

[Question] You agreed on this balance -- that is, on parity -- with Mr Brezhnev in May 1978. He is coming again on 23 November. Parity doesn't exist. Do you feel that you have been deceived by him during these 3 years?

[Answer] I would not use such a sharp term. We both voiced the intention of achieving an approximate balance. In the meantime, however, I have told the Soviet leadership on several occasions -- the last time was when Minister Genscher and I were in Moscow together in 1980 -- that the Soviet Union's SS-20 missiles as well as the Backfire bomber represent for me a considerable threat to the balance and create political threats too. The Soviet leadership knows my views.

[Question] The Soviet Union exploited the detente decade somewhat to achieve its armament lead. I ask you in this connection: Can we confidently pursue arms control policy with the Soviet Union? Do you think it will work?

[Answer] I am firmly convinced that it will. The Soviets are not simple negotiation partners; they are refined negotiators and will naturally exploit any gaps and loopholes that may exist in the negotiations, treaties or agreements. However, negotiations and results will be possible. This is evident if you recall the Nuclear Test Ban Treaty or the nonproliferation treaty. As far as I can see, the Soviet Union has carefully adhered to both treaties.

[Question] Now the other superpower. There is obvious friction between the Germans and the Americans, at least regarding the tactics and ways in which we can achieve arms control. You treat the Soviets differently than President Reagan, also when talking about them. Isn't the Americans' security policy sometimes proclaimed too loudly to suit you?

[Answer] There certainly are differences in style and temperament -- and not just between America and Germany. Just compare American diplomacy with classic French diplomacy -- there are differences in style. The head of the German Federal Government, of a medium-sized state almost a direct neighbor of the enormous and powerful Soviet Union, must naturally use a businesslike tone with regard to the Soviet neighbor. He is interested in talks taking place between both world powers. He will not apply a rough tone with regard to the Soviet side, let alone the American side. This does not mean, however, a that he will abstain from very clearly and determinedly representing the interests of his country in talks with Mr Brezhnev or Mr Gromyko as well as with Presidents Ford, Carter, Reagan and their secretaries of state.

[Question] Do you find it helpful if under current conditions the U.S. President declares that nuclear war can be limited perhaps even in Europe?

[Answer] To begin with, I believe that an incidental statement was taken out of context by European as well as U.S. newspapers. Second, I think too much importance has been attributed to this remark. It is one of the essential components of deterrence that ultimately nobody can calculate how a war might develop to the nuclear level and that, therefore, everybody must be extremely careful, for God's sake, not to get even close to one of these pushbuttons. What concerns me is not so much the possibility of a madman pushing one of these buttons but politicians bringing political pressure to bear on others by pointing out the potentials at their disposal. What is bound to especially concern the government of a nonnuclear country like Germany is that political pressure can be exerted on us, possibly very strong pressure. This is why it is in our interests to have and keep out security interlinked with that of the Americans.

[Question] Allow me to proceed to the peace movement since this movement would not hold the same opinion about the technocratic suppositions regarding the military and balance. How do you assess this movement -- as a factor disturbing the arms control process or an impulse or impetus for thought?

[Answer] I must strongly object to the word technocratic. This has nothing in common with technocracy, rather, a strategy of balance is quite appropriate, irrespective of the level of military technology.

This strategy has been correct throughout the 20th century. Had it been applied we might perhaps have been spared two world wars. In retrospect the course of many conflicts in the 19th century could be visualized differently as well. At the moment we have an approximate balance; Europe is experiencing the greatest peace period of this century since 1945, and one of the longest peace periods since the Middle Ages.

The peace movement is a highly diversified one. There are total pacifists; they have my respect, just as the Quakers in the United States have always had my respect. There are many people like myself who say: We want peace, but to insure that it will be really preserved, we do not want one side to have an overpowering military might while the other is but a small, inferior, second-rate neighbor in comparison. What we want is balance, and we want to bring the balance to lower levels. We think the arms build-up is too big, too dangerous and it costs too much money and too much human strength is wasted there. There are some people who say: We want to disarm unilaterally. We leave success to God's discretion. There are many diversified trends in the peace movement, but on principle I consider myself to be one who has always advocated peace with all the strength I have been able to muster. And if there are some people now who muster the same strength and, hopefully, devote the same thought to ways of actually turning the will for peace into a stable peace, then I cannot be angry about this. I do have anxieties sometimes when others simplify the matter too much.

[Question] Regarding the dream goal of disarmament. You are an active politician with the image of a realist. Do you nevertheless have dreams of that nature sometimes, in which you say: If we could only return to the day when nuclear weapons systems and--this must not be forgotten--biological and chemical weapons were nonexistent?

[Answer] Dreams in which you return to the state of innocence are obviously dreams. I do not want to go into philosophy and religion here, but I do not consider it a dream or wishful thinking to consider limitation, the mutual limitation, of armaments in the world and in Europe possible. Thus, I work to this end with all the strength that can be mustered by our state and this government.

OFFICIALS COMMENT ON USSR, BREZHNEV'S VISIT

LD081354 Hamburg DPA in German 1228 GMT 8 Nov 81

[Text] Hamburg, 8 Nov (DPA)--No one in the West should underestimate the Soviet desire for power, Manfred Woener, CDU/CSU parliamentary group spokesman on defense policy, said on Saturday in Boeblingen. The Moscow leadership has not "renounced warlike means." Woerner also said that he is "unhappy" at Washington's "confusing utterances" on the nuclear strategy issue. He did, however, criticize the fact that such utterances are "well-nigh hysterically" commented upon in the FRG. It is absolutely clear that the United States by no means believes that a nuclear war could remain limited.

Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt will be concerned in the German-Soviet meeting on 23-24 November in Bonn with making a contribution to the East-West dialogue, Government Spokesman Becker said on the Sueddeutscher Rundfunk in an interview on Sunday evening. The exchange of views and assessments between statesmen is a "very decisive element in stabilization." Moreover, the meeting should not be seen solely from the perspective of security policy.

SPD LAND CONGRESS REJECTS NATO MILITARY PLAN

LD072024 Hamburg DPA in German 1859 GMT 7 Nov 81

[Text] Saarbruecken/Lindau, 7 Nov (DPA)--At its 14th Land party congress in Saarbruecken the Saarland SPD has given a definite "no" to the military portion of the NATO dual decision. The south Bavaria SPD conference had initially been in favor of deferring the section on deploying new nuclear medium-range missiles in Europe.

The 400 delegates in Saarbruecken voted for the Land Executive's policy resolution in which it rejects the stationing of American Pershing medium-range missiles only in the FRG.

Moreover, the Saarland SPD is in favor of extending the SALT II treaty's additional clause, valid until the end of 1981, with the aim of abandoning the stationing of land-based cruise missiles until a new SALT III treaty has been negotiated. The USSR is called upon to reduce the number of nuclear warheads aimed at Europe to the 1978 level. Moreover, the SPD rejects the production and stationing of the neutron weapon and the production and storage of chemical and biological weapons.

Before the resolution was passed, the SPD Land chairman, Oskar Lafontaine, had made it clear that the Saarland SPD did not wish to seek "a final decision on the stationing" at the SPD's federal party conference next spring. During the discussion on the draft resolution of the Land Executive, which lasted several hours, the proponents of the NATO dual decision in the Saarland SPD feared that rejecting the section on counterarming would weaken the FRG's negotiating position and endanger the military balance.

In the opinion of the south Bavaria SPD, the aim of disarmament talks must be the abandonment of the new Pershing II and cruise missile weapon systems. The precondition for canceling the "automatic rearming" was that the USSR did not station any further Eurostrategic weapons systems. A draft resolution calling on the federal government to cancel the NATO dual decision was rejected by a vote of 97 to 68.

Congress Reelects Lafontaine

LD082336 Hamburg DPA in German 1256 GMT 8 Nov 81

[Text] Saarbruecken, 8 Nov (DPA) -- The Saarland SPD Chairman, Oskar Lafontaine, was reelected on Sunday 8 November. At the regional SPD congress in Saarbruecken 299 of the 371 delegates voted for Lafontaine, 64 voted against him and 7 abstained. One vote was split.

GROUP WANTS BAVARIA AS A NON-NUCLEAR ARMS STATE

LD081800 Hamburg DPA in German 1624 GMT 8 Nov 81

[Excerpt] Schweinfurt, 8 Nov (DPA) -- Approximately 100 delegates at a regional congress of the German Peace Society-Union of Conscientious Objectors held here today have decided to organize a popular initiative with a view to making Bavaria a non-nuclear weapons state. Heinrich Haeberlein, the reelected regional chairman, said that his organization -- with its 2049 members -- wants to see the existing missile arsenal dismantled. Under the Bavarian constitution, the people, by way of a popular initiative, can propose new laws. To succeed, a popular initiative must be supported by 10 percent of the electorate.

GENSCHER ON CAIRO TV: FAHD PLAN 'VERY REALISTIC'

LD081334 Hamburg DPA in German 1252 GMT 8 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 8 Nov (DPA) -- Europe "wants to and must" play an active role in the Middle East, Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher said on Sunday in an interview on Egyptian television. In this context Genscher pointed to the similarities which exist "in many respects" between the EEC position and the eight-point peace plan of Saudi Arabian head of government Prince Fahd. This plan represents "a very realistic starting point," and the similarities offer the basis for European support. In the interview Genscher reiterated the principle that not only must the Palestinians achieve the right to self-determination, but that all states in the region, thus including Israel, must be granted the right to exist.

KOHL PREDICTS END TO SPD-FDP COALITION

LD071852 Hamburg DPA in German 1626 GMT 7 Nov 81

[Text] Duisburg, 7 Nov (DPA) -- The time for a change of government in Bonn is, according to CDU chief Helmut Kohl, "nearer than many think."

It could be "as early as tomorrow," Kohl said at the Rheinland CDU party conference on Saturday in Duisburg. He let it be known that he thinks it possible that the FDP will leave the Bonn coalition government during the legislative period, hence before 1984.

"The Schmidt era is de facto past," Kohl shouted amid the applause of the 500 delegates of the CDU Land organization with the most members. The argument that the CDU-CSU should be happy not to be responsible for governing now cannot be valid. The FRG is "not a fair-weather democracy" and the CDU-CSU is "not a fair-weather party." It is ready to take over the reins of government [words indistinct] "whenever that may be." At the end of 1982 the political landscape will have fundamentally changed following the next Land elections.

Kohl expressly rejected offering the FDP a place in a coalition. The interests of the country dictate that the CDU-CSU ensure "that this government goes as soon as possible." FDP Federal Chairman Hans-Dietrich Genscher must ask himself what he now thinks of the "turning-point" he announced in the summer in a letter to all party members. The union will make it clear to citizens that with the liberals the distance between promise and fulfillment has become ever greater. If the FDP recognizes that it is going under with the SPD, then it will change its course of its own accord.

Kohl accused the SPD of not having made peace any more secure, in contrast with its promises in the elections. Why had 250,000 people demonstrated for peace a month ago in Bonn if it has indeed become more secure? Kohl said of the demonstrators that they did "not want a different kind of republic." They demonstrated for peace full of idealism. If, however, the "so-called peace movement" acts as if there is a third course, then the union has to "hold to its course." It is the party of the alliance with the Free World "with no ifs and buts." U.S. President Reagan and his government are working hard at achieving real and worldwide controlled disarmament.

One has to encourage our American friends to continue along this path, considering that the United States under Reagan's predecessor Jimmy Carter went some way towards disarming while the Soviet Union continued to build up arms. The "entire cynicism" of Soviet peace propaganda has been unmasked by the submarine affair on the Swedish coast. It is just not possible to put Soviet and American policy on the same moral level, as SPD chief Willy Brandt is doing.

BAUM EXPRESSES CONCERN OVER RIGHTWING RADICALISM

LD081032 Hamburg DPA in German 0822 GMT 8 Nov 81

[Excerpts] Hamburg, 8 Nov (DPA) -- Just 2 weeks after the discovery of the biggest ever cache of weapons and explosives hidden by rightwing extremists on the Lueneburg heath near Uelzen, the investigating authorities have as yet no positive clues as to the men behind it.

Federal Minister of the Interior, Gerhard Baum, once again expressed his concern about the development of rightwing radicalism. In an interview [to NEUE WESTFAELISCHE ZEITUNG], he assessed "the potential" of neo-Nazism as involving about 22 action groups with about 800 members. An additional 600 were without any form of organizational tie. One hundred and fifty of these 1,400 activists were seen as violent or potentially violent. Sixty-eight percent of these neo-Nazis were under 30. The security authorities have assumed the existence of altogether 75 extreme rightwing organizations with some 19,000 members in the FRG.

Speaking of the state of the investigation, Defense Minister Hans Apel rejected suspicions of rightwing radical tendencies in the Federal Army in connection with the discovery of the weapons as premature and quite irresponsible. Publications of the Defense Ministry, Apel said in an interview [to NEUE OSNABRUECKER ZEITING] showed no rightwing extremist activity in the armed forces.

FRENCH, SOVIET OFFICIALS DISCUSS MIDEAST, USSR ROLE

NC062032 Paris AFP in English 2028 GMT 6 Nov 81

[Excerpt] Paris, 6 Nov (AFP) -- Ranking French and Soviet officials have been reviewing the Middle East situation here over the past two days with a view to a Soviet role in the peace process for the area, it was learned today from official French sources.

The discussions, described as "serious and thorough," follow suggestions by Saudi Arabian leaders during the recent Riyadh visit of British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington that the Soviets be associated to a peace process.

French Foreign Ministry sources took a similar line a few days ago and, in a general way, disclosed that the positions of Moscow and Paris on the Middle East conflict presented a certain number of convergences.

Meanwhile, an expected announcement on European participation in the multinational Sinai peace-keeping force was postponed today for the second time because of problems raised by Saudi Arabia and Israel over the implications of such a move.

France, Britain, Italy and Holland had been expected to announce participation last Monday, and then again today, at the same time as the European Community's ten were to detail the participation's wider meaning.

Last Monday the obstacle lay in Greek reservations, that have reportedly since been overcome.

MITTERRAND INTERVIEWED ON AFRICAN POLICY

PM061431 Paris LE MONDE in French 4 Nov 81 pp 1, 3

[Philippe Decraene interview with President Mitterrand: "France Is Fulfilling all its Obligations on the African Stage"; date and place not given]

[Text] [Question] Have French-African relations changed radically since you took office?

[Answer] The relations France has with all African states is based on respect for each country's sovereignty. The French position is clear: We do not interfere in other countries' internal affairs, but we are present on the African stage and we are fulfilling all our obligations there. It is up to you to judge whether that is different from the recent past....

[Question] Do you contemplate reforming all the structures concerned with African questions?

[Answer] Some African heads of state have asked me if they can deal directly with the External Relations Ministry alone out of a desire for prestige and equality with the non-French-speaking countries. But since most of them have expressed a different view, I have decided, in agreement with Pierre Mauroy, to keep the Cooperation Ministry and to place it under the External Relations Ministry's authority.

[Question] Nonetheless it is claimed from time to time that the Cooperation Ministry is doomed to vanish....

[Answer] It is an effective tool which produces fruitful contacts and it has an administration which is highly specialized in a sphere in which France has considerable activity. This tool will be maintained.... But the reason I created a Cooperation and Development Ministry was that I wanted to extend its sphere.

[Question] Do you maintain supreme control over African questions as a whole?

[Answer] Since I am responsible for France's defense and interests in the world, it would be surprising if I did not have direct contact with Africa. I do not intend to take over from the ministers concerned, whom I always take care to inform of my actions, but I do indeed exercise a special right of inspection on African affairs.

[Question] France seems to have put an end to vacillation over Chad and opted for a firm line. Why this change? How far will we go?

[Answer] The Libyan troops were occupying Chad long before my election. You know that country's unfortunate history, its divisions, its civil war and the dubious role France played at that time, standing aloof from Mr Goukouni's government which was nonetheless recognized by all the OAU countries -- in other words, just as much by Libya or Egypt as by Algeria, Cameroon, Nigeria, Central Africa or Morocco.... I agreed to help rebuild Ndjamena, to reconstruct its hospitals and reestablish communications, since I was asked to do so by that government. All that was done without any political conditions and especially without posing the precondition of withdrawal by the Libyan troops. We are giving aid in accordance with our means. It is humanitarian aid and is consistent with a history which has bound us to the Chadian population for 80 years.

[Question] Are you prepared to give military aid to the Chadian Government?

[Answer] There has never been any question of sending French soldiers to Chad. On the other hand we will give financial and technical aid to the Ndjamena authorities to rebuild their national army as, I repeat, they have asked us to do, and we will also give technical and financial support for the formation of the neutral OAU force the African countries have decided to send to Chad.

[Question] There are territorial disputes with various Indian Ocean countries, including Madagascar and the Comorros. Are you planning to settle them?

[Answer] The government's task is to take proper account of internal and international law.

[Question] Mali is apparently planning to rejoin the West African Monetary Union. Is this true or is it just a rumor?

[Answer] It is true, but there are problems because this return presupposes the remission of some Malian debts and is still drawing opposition from some of the UNIN's member states.

[Question] Is former French Africa destined to remain France's preferential partner or do you intend to treat all African states in the same way?

[Answer] I am opposed to excessively strict definitions. I do not like taboos, but I cannot help a cautious reaction. A common history, the use of the same language, many interwoven interests and the concern not to extend the circle of friends beyond our means so that we can honor all our pledges prompt me to take this attitude. But since I also want to develop cooperation ties with many other countries, English-speaking, Portuguese-speaking and non-French-speaking, I am at present examining ways of combining these two objectives together with the competent ministers. This will certainly be the subject of some of the talks held during the 2-day French-African conference.

[Question] What is your stance on the West Sahara affair?

[Answer] When I was PS first secretary the party and I took a stance in support of self-determination for the Saharan people. As president of the republic, whatever my personal opinions, I cannot disregard the positions of the states involved in the settlement of the conflict and I must take account of them. But what's right is right.

[Question] Do you think the Americans' attitude toward France in Africa is more that of rivals than of allies?

[Answer] I do not see any major conflict between our two countries on the African stage, where we frequently pursue different policies.

[Question] What about the obsession with the Cuban threat?

[Answer] I believe in the patriotic convictions of the African heads of state. I regard their alliances from that angle. Let's settle the Namibian affair and you will see the Cubans withdraw from southern Africa. I obviously follow competition between the superpowers in Africa very closely, but I think each is beginning to understand that the perpetuation of local conflict is a kind of invitation to intervention by the superpowers.

[Question] What are your personal views on the French-speaking community?

[Answer] Preserving and developing the French-speaking community is one of France's great designs. I hope to combine in one structure all the bodies concerned with the French-speaking community, but all in good time.

SOVIET DIPLOMAT GIVES REASONS FOR DEFECTING

PM061457 Paris LE MONDE in French 5 Nov 81 p 6

[Unattributed interview with Soviet defector Nikolay Polyanskiy: "When a Soviet Diplomat Goes Over to the West ...." -- date and place of interview not specified]

[Text] At the end of October Soviet diplomat Nikolay Polyanskiy was granted political asylum in France. After he joined the diplomatic service in 1969 he was stationed in Bern and Zabreb; in recent months he has worked on a provisional basis as translator with UNESCO. His wife and three children have been able to join him in France after staying in Yugoslavia for some time.

Mr Polyanskiy told us about the reasons for his decision:

"Whenever a Soviet diplomat goes over to the West it is often assumed either that he has had contacts with some intelligence services or that he has a liason abroad. Otherwise why would he give up a privileged position? This is not at all the case as far as I am concerned. I have made a very difficult decision -- I have had to give up certain material advantages and lay myself open to moral condemnation on the part of my friends. I have left my country because I am a diplomat with an inclination for writing. Now nothing of what I write could be published."

Like many of his fellow-countrymen Mr Polyanskiy believed in communism until he gauged the distance between a very noble very generous ideal and reality. He was subjected to a first shock at the age of 17 in 1956 when Krushchev submitted his report on Stalin's crimes to the 20th congress. He hoped in vain for a transformation. Some progress has certainly been achieved. "When you read Kravchenko," he says, "you realize what changes have taken place in the USSR since the Stalinist period. But nothing has been done that would make it possible to end totalitarianism. The regime is becoming bogged down in lies. On many occasions when listening to briefings by Central Committee secretaries I realized that the leaders are well aware of the real situation. But they believe that it would be dangerous to let the people become aware of reality. It is therefore necessary to conceal it from them and wallow in euphoria."

[Question] Are diplomats also aware of this?

[Answer] When I was stationed in Bern I once explained to a Swiss novelist that Solzhenitsyn had no talent, was of no importance and anyway was not a writer.

[Question] Did you believe this?

[Answer] Obviously not.

But a diplomat is under a kind of contract. He is paid and even enjoys certain privileges to defend abroad the state's position. This does not mean that he unquestioningly accepts all the arguments which he must put forward. Obviously, no diplomat will officially call into question his country's policy in Afghanistan. Now at the time the intervention in Kabul was initiated we freely discussed that even in the corridors of the Diplomatic Academy in Moscow. Why we asked should we become responsible for another country considering that we are already finding it so hard to fulfill our own needs? And, after all, why risk international complications? This freedom of tone and criticism contrasted with the complete silence maintaned in the same circles in 1968 following Czechoslovakia's invasion.

[Question] How do you explain this difference?

[Answer] Maybe by the fact that people were more frightened 13 years ago. Or simply because they believed that the country's vital interests were much more at stake in Prague than in Kabul.

NATO DEPENDENCE PRECLUDES POLITICAL INTEGRATION

PM061610 Paris LE FIGARO in French 4 Nov 81 pp 1, 5

[Part I of article by senior French officer under pseudonym "Brution": "Political Construction and Defense of Europe 1 -- The American Military Assistance"]

[Text] Did the men who thought after World War II that they could "create Europe" on the basis of a coalition of economic interests fail to recognize the importance of defense problems, or did they think that the world was going to move toward an era of peaceful competition? Unfortunately, while America was hurriedly demobilizing, the Soviet Union maintained considerable forces under the colors without any justification aside from its desire to impose the communist order on the territories liberated by the Red Army. Hitlerism had scarcely been defeated when it gave way to Stalinism, and West Europe, frightened and devoid of resources, placed itself under American protection to guard against this new totalitarianism.

More than 30 years have gone by and the Old World, which has rebuilt its economic strength, is still powerless to solve its security problems alone. Moreover many people proclaim urbi et orbi that it cannot do so and that it is, after all, a good deal to enjoy American support, agreeing, if necessary, to become more or less a European province of the United States.

In so doing the countries which accept the integration of their armed forces into NATO have lost the essential attribute of their international sovereignty. Nonetheless in 1956 President Adenauer condemned the American protectorate over Europe in these terms: "This cannot and must not become a permanent situation....The vital needs of the European states are not always necessarily the vital needs of the United States and vice versa."

This is precisely what General de Gualle said as soon as he returned to power in 1958. However, unlike Chancellor Adenauer, he took action. While remaining faithful to its alliances, France thus resumed control over its armed forces. At the time many people condemned the withdrawal of its forces from NATO. According to the advocates of the integrated system it was a decision which was bound to help weaken the Atlantic alliance.

What is the position now, and where are the signs of a weakening in the alliance? Are they in the United States, which is worried about the risks it would run in opening its strategic nuclear umbrella over Europe? Are they among our European allies, which are busy lapsing into pacifism, the prelude to "Finlandization?" Are they in France, where nuclear deterrence has finally won the consent of virtually all the citizens, to whom it gives an excessive feeling of security? The fact that these questions are being posed insistently shows that West Europe's place within the Atlantic alliance is not satisfactory.

The reason for this is simple: On the one hand the Europeans joined the alliance separately and Washington played on their disagreements and rivalries to impose its political and strategic views, and on the other hand the United States is refusing the European countries a share in decisions on the use of the nuclear weapons deployed by their armed forces. Hence our allies do not feel responsible for Europe's defense. Now lack of responsibility leads to indifference and hence to the citizens' demobilization.

Among the reasons which led General de Gaulle to oppose the integration of the French armed forces in NATO the determining one was the fear, if not the certainty, that the formula would sooner or later destroy the French people's defensive spirit.

General Fourquet, former chief of general staff, reported that General de Gaulle claimed that instead of being imaginative and designing a defense policy for France and Europe, the generals were accepting all the American theories.

Pierre Messmer reported that, according to the general, the military chiefs did not feel they bore responsibility for France's victory or defeat in case of conflict. And the former armed forces minister added: "Moreover that argument was the only one to which General Norstad never replied and which he described one day as unanswerable because he himself knew that he alone bore the responsibility and that the Europeans were merely agents."

Military Assistance

In the final analysis, despite its merits -- having guaranteed West European security for a generation -- NATO has, in return, gradually led to a virtually general desensitization of European political officials, and especially citizens, toward defense problems. For them U.S. military assistance has become such a normal part of American-European relations that they regard it as a due. They have reached the stage of no longer conceiving of any future for their countries outside the framework of that organization led by Washington.

This brings us to the relationship which has always existed between political goals and the military institution: The fact that NATO has destroyed the idea of a specifically European defense network has impeded and is still impeding the political building of Europe. The root of the problem is that the building of a European defense system cannot precede or follow the creation of a political community: It enters into that building process of which it is one of the major elements.

By the very fact that it provides -- less and less it is true -- a solution to the Europeans' defense, NATO conceals their need to seek a formula for the joint political organization of the Old World. Because it belongs to NATO Europe did not feel the need to provide itself with the means necessary for its defense. Therefore, despite the speeches and professions of faith, it has abandoned the attempt to organize itself politically and, hence, to play a role on the international scene independently of the United States.

The leanings or statements of individual statesmen will not change this situation at all: As long as the Old World begs for the American protectorate it will have to abandon its political freedom. There is nothing new in this world; did Pericles not state more than 2,000 years ago that Athens was not answerable to its allies as long as its fleet protected them from the Barbarians?

SPADOLINI COMMENTS ON DOMESTIC, EXTERNAL ISSUES

PM090909 Rome LA REPUBBLICA in Italian 5 Nov 81 pp 1-2

[Sebastiano Messina interview with Prime Minister Spadolini]

[Excerpts] Messina, 4 November -- [Question] Senator Spadolini, the head of state has recently been criticized by certain political forces for his remarks about the P-2 case. What is your position on this?

[Answer] I have clearly specified the government's position on the P-2 lodge issue. We introduced a legislative measure as the first point of our government program to be implemented. This measure involves the dissolution of the P-2 lodge. It was amplified and amended by the Senate and unanimously approved. It came before the lower house around 10 August. It is now 4 November and once again we urge the lower house to approve the measure -- even if modified, of course, because it is not a decree-law. I am convinced that if the government had an approved law to implement it could work better in all areas in which a polemic has emerged. We are in the position of having to apply the old and inadequate fascist laws to public employees belonging to the P-2 lodge. So on the government's behalf, I confirm the need for legislative discipline in this connection and I believe that this is the best way to take up President Pertini's appeal.

[Question] Following [PCI Secretariat member] Chiaromionte's remarks [endorsing Spadolini's analysis of Italy's economic situation], do you believe you are witnessing a change of stance on the PCI's part with respect to the government?

[Answer] In the discussion of the finance bill that has begun in the lower house committee, I am very pleased to note the opposition's willingness to conduct a dialogue with the majority on all proposed positive amendments. I have never put the finance bill forward as what theologians used to call an "inviolable" document. I am a follower of the religion of doubt and therefore acknowledge that it is always possible to improve.

[Question] D'Acquisto, chairman of the Sicilian regional government, has urged a turnabout by the government on EEC policy so that the south is not always penalized. What is your answer to that?

[Answer] On 9 November I am going to Paris to meet with Mitterrand, and obviously the fact that the wine dispute has been resolved was an indispendable precondition for my visit to France. Of course the time has come for a comprehensive reappraisal of EEC policy -- and it is not only a question of wine. To do this, however, a new thrust must be imparted to Europe. An Italian initative in this direction will be the central topic at the next cabinet meeting. I have already discussed it with the parties.

TALKS CONTINUE WITH VISITING GABON PRESIDENT

AU062011 Rome ANSA in English 1940 GMT 6 Nov 81

[Text] Rome, 6 Nov (ANSA) -- Railways, agriculture, fishing and technical cooperation have been identified as fields in which Italy can hope for fruitful openings in Gabon as the two countries move towards that strengthening of economic relations which formed the central topic in talks held here by Gabonese President Omar Bongo this morning, authoritative sources said later.

After talks with Italian head-of-state Sandro Pertini and Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo this morning, the sources said that the conversations had also confirmed the solidity of the political ties between the two countries, underscoring the similarity of their views on many major international problems.

The consultations, which were followed by a luncheon offered by Prime Minister Giovanni Spadolini, lasted about two hours in a climate which a spokesman described as one of "sincere friendship." According to reliable sources, it was this atmosphere which led Bongo to reverse the usual order of discussion and raise bilateral economic cooperation before the two sides discussed political premisses.

The sources reported Bongo as saying that Italo-Gabonese cooperation is "already fruitful, and above all is free of ulterior motives, political pressures or any form of temptation or interference." Gabon, whose mineral wealth includes uranium, manganese and oil and whose per-head income is second in Africa only to the Libyan Jamahiriyah, is currently trying to diversify its economic and commercial relations away from their present exclusive focus on France.

Italy and Gabon have a technical and scientific agreement dating back to 1966 and an agreement on the protection of investments signed in 1968.

In further talks with Gabonese diplomatic chief Martin Bongo in the afternoon Colombo said Italy is willing to "bring these agreements up to date" in the light of Gabon's interests.

In this context, an Italian Government mission will be dispatched to Libreville to lay the foundations for the creation of a joint commission to make a periodic examination of the trend of economic relations between the two countries.

Colombo also invited the Gabonese leaders to use the five million dollars remaining from a fifteen-million-dollar credit line opened up for the African state in 1977.

He also voiced an Italian commitment to offer further credits, to study the possibility of giving scholarships to the hundred or so Gabonese students studying in Italy, and to examine ways of ensuring that Gabon profits from Italian aid programs.

In Rome, Bongo's large entourage has been consulting privately with small and medium-sized Italian firms working in the fields of glass, wood-paste for paper, and tunafish canning.

DEFENSE MINISTER RECEIVES SUDAN'S VICE PRESIDENT

LD062214 Rome Domestic Service in Italian 1800 GMT 6 Nov 81

[Text] Defense Minister Lagorio has held a meeting with Sudanese Vice President Maj Gen 'Umar at-Tayyib. During the conversation, they examined the main problems of equilibrium and international stabilization which interest Italy and Sudan. They also discussed the present technical cooperation between the two countries and agreed to strengthen existing ties. As for trade relations, Lagorio and At-Tayyib expressed hope that they would be intensified.

LAGORIO COMMENTS ON PCI, DEFENSE POLICY

AU071803 Rome ANSA in English 1532 GMT 7 Nov 81

[Text] Rome, 7 Nov (ANSA) -- The foundations for the present Italian government's defense policy can be traced back to the period between 1975 and 1978 when the Italian Communist Party supported the government then in power, Italian defense Minister Lelio Lagorio, a socialist, said today in an interview to be published in the next issue of the weekly, L' EUROPEO.

Lagorio pointed out that this period, culminating in a government led by Christian Democrat veteran Giulio Andreotti, saw Parliament, including the Communists, voting approval for three bills boosting the navy, the army and the airforce.

Another measure, Lagorio pointed out, put into effect a pledge given by Andreotti in Washington to increase the Italian defense budget by three percent in real terms each year. In other points, Lagorio admitted that the Communist Party secretary has consistently made it clear he believes NATO serves to maintain peace. But he also hinted that Berlinguer's stance was mere electionering. "Maybe he will say it again if, against all my hopes, we have early general elections next spring," the minister asserted. "But between one election and the next, he seems to forget it".

Lagorio also told L'EUROPEO that the type of force Italy will be sending to help police the Sinai Peninsula still has to be decided.

PCI SECRETARIAT ON SINAI FORCE, SPAIN, NATO

PM051141 Rome L'UNITA in Italian 31 Oct 81 p 1

[PCI Secretariat 30 October statement pledging opposition]

[Text] The PCI considers very grave the Italian Government's decision to contribute military contingents of its own to the multinational force to be sent to Sinai. If implemented, this decision would mean that for the first time Italian soldiers would be working outside the geographical confines of the Atlantic alliance, in open violation of the alliance's institutional principles. Moreover, it would not be on behalf of the United Nations but in response to a request from the U.S., Israeli and Egyptian governments. Indeed, apart from extending the alliances' area of intervention, such an action would imply an endorsement of a unilateral and biased plan for a solution to the Middle East crisis -- the Camp David plan -- rejected by both the Palestinians and the majority of the Arab countries. This would conflict with the stances ratified in Venice in June 1980 by the 10 EC governments, designed to find another forum for negotiations to resolve the Middle East conflict, with the involvement of all the sides concerned and the fulfillment of the national rights of all the peoples of the area, starting with the Palestinian people. This lamentable decision will be seen as a hostile act with respect to the vast majority of the Arab countries and the Palestinian people and is therefore bound to nurture further tensions and exacerbations, with serious repercussions throughout the Middle East and Mediterranean area, and to harm the interests of Europe and our own country.

More generally, the Italian Government's decisions help to exacerbate an already dangerously tense international situation. They are being taken at the very moment when the Spanish Government's moderate and conservative forces have taken the first step toward Spain's NATO entry. This decision too is bound to dangerously disrupt the balances among the forces on our continent, with consequent risks and reactions. The PCI Secretariat urges the government to appear before Parliament, which cannot be deprived of the right to decide on a matter both delicate and full of implications for the security of Italian and European interests. The PCI declares its complete opposition to this initiative and will work in Parliament and throughout the country to counter it. In view of these actions and tendencies, which exacerbate the international situation, the PCI renews its appeal to its own organizations and members and to all forces that love detente and peace to step up to the utmost mass and unitary mobilization against the threats of war and the arms race; to set in motion initiatives that will lead to a political solution of the current conflicts, arms limitation and reduction measures and the resumption of the path of detente and cooperation among all states and peoples.

PRESS COMMENTS ON PCI REFORM PROPOSALS

AU071738 Rome ANSA in English 1540 GMT 7 Nov 81

[Text] Rome, 7 Nov (ANSA)--The Italian Communist Party's announcement that it is ready to meet with representatives of its major parliamentary rival, the Christian Democrat Party, on proposals for institutional reform grabbed the headlines in the Italian dailies this morning.

According to the wide-selling Rome daily, IL MESSAGGERO, an index of falling political tension between these two biggest parties in the Rome Parliament could be seen in the debate concluded in the lower house yesterday on reforms of parliamentary debating rules. The paper said that the debate had given the Communists' attitude to the ruling coalition led by Prime Minister Giovanni Spadolini "visible content". The coalition is a five-party partnership of the Christian Democrats with the Socialists', Social Democrats, Liberals, and Spadolini's own Republicans.

Noting that it had a few days ago described the Communist attitude to the Spadolini administration as "gentrified opposition" IL MESSAGGERO forecast that they would "strongly oppose" any attempt to exploit the ongoing debate on institutional reform to create a socialist-Christian Democrat pact in view of a government to follow Spadolini's.

The Milan daily, CORRIERE DELLA SERA, also noted that Communist Party Secretary Enrico Berlinguer's letter to his Christian Democrat counterpart, Flaminio Piccoli, accepting talks on institutional reform, showed the Communists as unwilling to "provide cover, and free cover too" for an operation that could lead to a "Christian Democrat-Socialist pact of iron, or even early general elections".

According to IL MANIFESTO, the major voice to the left of the Communists, Berlinguer's reply to Piccoli was, however, "cold". Berlinguer, the paper added, did not "cut short the chance of an understanding, but he fixed its boundaries," making it clear that it cannot be seen as "functional" to the ventilated Socialist-Christian Democratipact.

IL MANIFESTO added that the question is the subject of wide-ranging debate among the Communist Party's leaders who, to judge by their handling of the current budget debate in parliamentary, are "not giving much encouragement to the supporters of a return to less conflict-prone relations with the parties of the majority."

The Milanese daily, IL GIORNO, added that Berlinguer's acceptance of dialogue with the Christian Democrats has an "objective importance" in view of communist attitudes to this eventuality only a few months ago. This paper pointed out that, earlier this year, a leading member of the Communist Party of the calibre of Alessandro Natta even said, "and not so jokingly, that he would not even go and drink a coffee with Piccoli."

IL GIORNO forecast that the meeting between Communists and Christian Democrats will certainly take place, "but it is clear that everything will run around pretty quickly if the Communists do not obtain something on the 'discrimination' they complain about." [as received]

IL GIORNO also hinted that this demand could spark internal dissent in the Christian Democrat Party since its left wing may have ideas on this topic "different from those of other sectors."

RADIO, TV, PRESS TO STRIKE 13 NOVEMBER

LD080218 Rome Domestic Service in Italian 1800 GMT 7 Nov 81

[Summary] Italy will be without newspapers and without radio and TV news on Friday, 13 November. A national strike was called for that day today by the press federation.

FINLAND

KOIVISTO DISCUSSES FINNO-SOVIET RELATIONS

PM061013 Helsinki HUFVUDSTADSBLADET in Swedish 2 Nov 81 p 7

[Text] The West German Westdeutscher Rundfunk radio broadcast an interview with Finnish Prime Minister Mauno Koivisto over the weekend. Koivisto spoke about the friendship, cooperation and mutual assistance treaty between Finland and the Soviet Union, the position of the president in Finland and about a nuclear-free zone in the Nordic countries.

"On the basis of the treaty with the Soviet Union, Finland commits itself to defending its territory with all the resources at its disposal if Finland -- or the Soviet Union via Finland -- is attacked," Koivisto said in the interview. "Thus Finland only defends its own territory within its own borders. Finland would do this in any case as an independent state," Koivisto said.

"Possible Soviet aid to Finland would be decided between the two parties. The treaty makes such aid dependent on specific need. If, however, the Soviet Union were attacked from any direction other than via Finland, the treaty by no means requires us to take part in a war," Koivisto pointed out.

"We strive with all our might to remain outside the superpowers' conflicts of interest, and this is expressly stated in the preamble to the treaty," Koivisto said. In reply to the question of whether the president is able to force through his own political views against the will of the Riksdag and public opinion, Koivisto said that the power of the president had its clear limits.

"It is true that according to the constitution the president carries the final responsibility for relations with other states. In some stages of our history it has happened that public opinion has been negative toward an agreement which the president has considered to be necessary," Koivisto said. In Koivisto's view it is, however, clear that at least in the longer term the president cannot work against the Riksdag and a government which has the support of the Riksdag. "In such a case the constitution defines clear limits," he pointed out.

Koivisto also touched on President Kekkonen's proposal for a nuclear-free zone in the Nordic countries and said that the proposal has increasingly become a question of current interest. He stated that it would be in the interests both of the Nordic states as well as those of the whole of Europe for the plan to be realized.

"However, a precondition is that the Nordic states reach mutual agreement in the question from their individual points of departure with regard to their security policy, Koivisto stressed.

HOLKERI WINS PARTY PRESIDENTIAL NOMINATION

PM061519 Helsinki HUFVUDSTADSBLADET in Swedish 5 Nov 81 p 3

[Excerpt] Former party chairman Harri Holkeri, 44, yesterday accepted his party's candidacy in the forthcoming presidential election. His party is the National Coalition Party. Holkeri named four "points of departure" which in his view should form the foundation for the party's work in the election.

One of them aims at preventing all advance commitments to vote for a particular candidate in the decisive vote in the electoral college.

The official decision to ask Holkeri to run was made yesterday by the National Coalition Party's Party Executive. The party's parliamentary group had already given its unanimous approval to the party leadership's plans on Tuesday [3 November].

Immediately after the Party Executive's meeting yesterday at Skatudden Casino the whole executive and also representatives of constituency groups and the parliamentary group called on Holkeri. The delegation was headed by Party Chairman Ilkka Suominen, who said that the "party workers" had quickly and unanimously decided on Holkeri for its presidential candidate. According to Suominen the party needs a candidate who will "defend national unity, citizens' freedom and equality" and who also "has experience of the work for Finland's independence and security as well as of the consolidation of the Paasikivi-Kekkonon line."

KIVISTO-SAARINEN BATTLE FOR PARTY NOMINATION

PM061229 Stockholm DAGENS NYHETER in Swedish 4 Nov 81 p 15

[Text] Helsinki, 3 Nov -- Leftwing socialist Kalevi Kivisto, 40, was proposed Tuesday as the presidential candidate of the Finnish People's Democratic League and the Finnish Communist Party by a working group which had been looking into the question.

Minority communists Taisto Sinisalo and Seppo Toivianen expressed reservations at the decision and proposed Aarne Saarinen instead. The question will now be discussed by the Communist Party Central Committee, which will meet Saturday [7 November]. On Sunday the People's Democratic Council will meet to make a final dicision in the matter. The minority communists wanted Aarne Saarinen to be selected as presidential candidate. The matter was raised last week but a final decision was postponed. The intention had been to try to persuade Kivisto to withdraw.

The matter became a little sensitive when it became known that two representatives of the CPSU leadership had hinted that, for the sake of the unity of the Finnish party, it would be better to nominate a communist. The Russians were of the opinion Saarinen could run.

Once reports of the affair had surfaced, it was thought that it was no longer possible for Kivisto to withdraw. And Saarinen himself explained, when he was lobbied by a rank and file deputation, that he was not interested.

Kalevi Kivisto has been an active politician since 1972 and is a university teacher in Jyvaeskylae. He is now a minister for the second time. The first time he was in the Miettunen government in 1975. He is now second education minister in the Koivisto government. His area of competence is all cultural questions while Par Stenback (Swedish People's Party) deals with all education questions.

Kalevi Kivisto is not a member of the Communist Party. He is chairman of the Finnish People's Democratic League, the umbrella organization for communists and leftwing socialists.

Like former chairman Ele Alenius, Kivisto is a firm believer in the League's right to make independent decisions.

He does not want leftwing socialists to be forced to follow the communists' course. The rows in the Communist Party have meant that it is not always that easy to get along under the People's Democratic umbrealla. The minority communists do not like him. But among the majority of communists Kivisto enjoys a large amount of support.

SOVIET ANALYST COMMENTS ON FINNISH FOREIGN POLICY

PM061455 Helsinki HUFVUDSTADSBLADET in Swedish 3 Nov 81 p 7

[Text] The Soviet Union's confidence in Finland and its foreign policy was stressed by Soviet Professor Spartak Beglov in Helsinki Monday [2 November].

Beglov is a political observer with the APN News Bureau, and at a press conference Monday he was described as one of the Soviet Union's "best-known political commentators." The press conference was arranged at the Soviet Culture and Science Center in Helsinki. The title of Beglov's address was "Kekkonen's policy has stood the test of time."

According to Beglov the news of Kekkonen's resignation gave rise to two different emotions: first, regrets that "a man who has earned the greatest respect and recognition for his efforts for a fundamental stabilization of the international situation." [sentence as published]

"Second, it gave rise to hope and faith that the active and peace-loving Finnish foreign policy, known as the Passikivi-Kekkonen line, will be continued undisturbed and in the way it deserves," Beglov said.

According to Beglov the confidence which the Soviet Union has in Finland's foreign policy and the fact that Finland is seen as a reliable partner are the most important reasons why capitalist Finland's and socialist Russia's cooperation has been so remarkably dynamic.

On the subject of the Finnish presidential election Beglov said briefly that no one in the Soviet Union would want to say what attitude toward the presidential election should be adopted. However, he remarked that the Soviet Union reserves the right to speak about how it sees the legacy from the Paasikivi-Kekkonen line.

In his address Beglov reminded his audience that President Kekkonen had said that on the basis of the friendship, cooperation and mutual assistance treaty there had been success in creating a system of relations between the Soviet Union and Finland which, as well as being necessary, was also the best possible one, for which there is no acceptable or practicable alternative.

NORWAY

GOVERNMENT STRUGGLES WITH DEFENSE BUDGET PROBLEMS

PM051315 Oslo ARBEIDERBLADET in Norwegian 29 Oct 81 p 7

[Text] Additional funds of 120 million kroner are all the Willoch government will propose to add to the 1982 defense budget, according to information received by ARBEIDERBLADET.

The nonsocialist parties have promised a four-percent increase in the defense budget. But the Conservative Party will be more than satisfied if it even manages to achieve the Labor Party goal of 3 percent.

A serious hole in the present budget draft is that the Labor Party's proposal does not contain any compensation for price rises in the current year of 225 million kroner. For the proposed 10.4 billion kroner defense budget to have included a three percent increase in real terms, around 250 million would have had to be included.

Without this compensatory figure the defense budget would be close to zero percent growth rather than three percent. The government will have to return to this compensation figure later in the fall in connection with the so-called regrouping proposal.

The government will also have to tackle the problem of increased costs due to the introduction of the law on working conditions to the armed forces. Here at least a couple of hundred million kroner have yet to be found. The government has even committed itself to meeting the costs of implementing the law on working conditions from funds outside the defense budget.

Another problem -- the armed forces chief has asked for initial funds of 90 to 100 million kroner for contingency stockpiling for a combined regiment in northern Norway. In principle this has the support of the Storting.

When the government proposes additional funds for the defense budget of 120 million kroner the budget will in fact only be increased by 30 million kroner. This is because more than 90 million kroner will have to be used to offset the costs of UNIFIL forces which have been added to the defense budget.

The Conservative Party is trying to win the Christian People's Party's agreement to some horse-trading. It wants to transfer the cost of UNIFIL forces, which the Labor Party had added to the defense budget, over to the Foreign Ministry's development aid budget. By means of such a bookkeeping trick the purchasing power of the defense budget could be increased by almost one percent "for nothing." At the same time the transfer of the expenditure could be entered as an increase in development aid.

Today the cost of the Norwegian UNIFIL forces is shared equally between the defense budget and the Finance Ministry's reserve budget. The Christian People's Party has been opposed to such a 50/50 division and is naturally opposed to the Conservative wish to count all UNIFIL expenditure as development aid.

Thus the Willoch government is now putting the Christian People's Party in a difficult position.

Christian People's Party representative Jacob Aano told ARBEIDERBLADET that the Christian People's Party has not yet reached a decision in the matter.

"It is the Christian People's Party's view that the peace-keeping activities of the UN forces are not development aid. We look on these activities as valuable training in peace-keeping work, but we cannot accept in principle that this is like aid to developing countries," Aano said. Hitherto the Christian People's Party has been alone in its view that UN forces as a whole should be part of the defense budget. The party can support the Labor Party's 50/50 division, because this arrangement is closer to the party's wishes than the Conservative proposal.

But it is also possible that the Christian People's Party might admit defeat and support the Conservative proposal that the whole of the cost of UNIFIL forces be met from the development aid budget.

SWEDEN

NORDIC REACTION TO SUBMARINE AFFAIR NOTED

LD061936 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 1700 GMT 6 Nov 81

[Excerpt] For a considerable time in the future, no Swede holding an important position is to visit the Soviet Union nor is any Soviet leader to visit Sweden. According to the Foreign Ministry, this is one of the consequences of the submarine affair.

The Danish Foreign Minister, Kjeld Olesen, says that the submarine affair is an expression of the master race mentality which is wholly unacceptable. Olesen notes that the event has affected the relations between the Nordic countries and the Soviet Union and that it will take a long time to reestablish relations on the basis of trust.

The Finnish Foreign Ministry notes that the submarine affair is regrettable, but that it is an issue which solely concerns Sweden and the Soviet Union.

The governments of Denmark, Norway and Iceland have ordered their ambassadors in Moscow not to attend the annual parade in Red Square tomorrow. The reason for this is the fact that the Soviet submarine in the Karlskrona Archipelago was carrying nuclear weapons. The Swedish ambassador will not attend the parade either. Other a dozen countries had earlier decided to boycott the parade in Moscow as a protest against the Soviet military presence in Afghanistan.

CARRINGTON HOPEFUL FOR PEACE AFTER SAUDI VISIT

LD081458 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1415 GMT 8 Nov 81

[By Chris Moncrieff]

[Text] Lord Carrington, the foreign secretary, said today he would be prepared to meet Mr 'Arafat, leader of the Palestine Liberation Organisation, if it would help the peace process along in the Middle East. But he said he would not meet just for the sake of doing so. Lord Carrington was being interviewed by Brian Walden on the Independent Television programme Weekend World about his recent visit to Saudi Arabia, whose government have just prepared a new Middle East peace plan.

The foreign secretary said the plan marked a departure from previous Arab public thinking. "It shows a will on the part of the Saudis and the moderate Arabs to negotiate a peaceful settlement which 10 years ago was not really the case. It shows that there is a willingness to recognise the state of Israel after the peace process is completed. That is a very radical departure."

Referring to the PLO, Lord Carrington said that the Israelis had always asked how they could negotiate with an organisation which is on paper committed to their destruction. "If you could get that argument removed, one of the blocks which has made negotiations impossible would be removed too. I have always said that I would meet Mr 'Arafat if it would help the peace process along. But I would not meet just for the sake of meeting. I would have thought that the really useful thing that would come out of the meeting would be an acceptance by the PLO that the state of Israel does exist and that it has a right to exist with secure boundaries, in security and safety." Equally, he said, there would need to be a recognition on the part of the Israelis that the Palestinians too had rights.

Lord Carrington was asked whether Britain would ever recognise the PLO. He replied: "We never recognise organisations. I don't think that is a helpful thing to do. We recognise states, not organisations. What we have said is that in any settlement and in any negotiations the PLO must be involved, and that surely must be right. I know some people find that a very offensive remark, but it is no good ignoring reality. Just because you do not happen to like some aspects of the PLO, it is not going to go away. You have got to accept reality."

Later, on the BBC radio World This Weekend programme, Mr Denis Healey, the shadow foreign secretary, was asked what he thought about the public criticism by the U.S. Secretary of State, Alexander Haig, of Lord Carrington over his praise for the Saudi peace plan. Mr Healey said: "Mr Haig is under great strain now. He has his enemies in Washington and he is an impatient man. He has been upset that the European countries, for whom Britain is speaking on this question, have been trying to develop a situation in which we can get a solution to the Palestinian problem. He says that is interfering with the Camp David policies."

Mr Healey said he thought it was an exaggeration to say that relationships between Britain and America were at their lowest ebb since the 1956 Suez crisis. "I think the division in 1956 was very much more dangerous because the British Government of the time practically broke off negotiations with the United States for a period of weeks. The issue at the moment is one that can be got over. The real problem is the growing concern right over Europe that there is no consistency or clarity about American foreign policy."

KIPRIANOU CABLE CONGRATULATES BREZHNEV

NC071215 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1130 GMT 7 Nov 81

[Text] In a cable of greetings to Chairman of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet Brezhnev, on the occasion of the October Revolution anniversary, President Kiprianou gives the assurance that the Cyprus Government and he personally are ready to do everything they can to further develop the existing friendly relations and the cooperation between Cyprus and the Soviet Union.

In his cable, President Kiprianou conveys on behalf of the Cypriot people, the government and himself personally cordial congratulations and warmest wishes for President Brezhnev's personal happiness and for continuous progress, prosperity and happiness of the friendly people of the Soviet Union.

Soviet Envoy Statement

NC061922 Nicosia Domestic Television Service in Greek 1830 GMT 6 Nov 81

[Text] Speaking at a gathering held in Nicosia tonight to mark the great October Socialist Revolution anniversary, Soviet Ambassador Astavin reiterated his country's proposal for the convocation of an international representative conference on Cyprus within the UN framework. Mr Astavin said: The convening of such a conference would assist in the creation of favorable conditions for a constructive dialogue among Cypriots on matters pertaining to the structure of their state and for the finding by the Cypriots themselves of a jointly acceptable solution in the interest of restoring trust and cooperation between the two communities.

The Soviet ambassador said that the conference could contribute in the most effective manner to the consolidation of the independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of the Republic of Cyprus. Mr Astavin also said: The Soviet Union's position on the Cyprus issue is immutably based on the need to secure the true independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of the Republic of Cyprus, which is following a nonaligned policy, a policy of the island's demilitarization, which means the withdrawal of all foreign troops from its territory and abolition of the foreign military bases.

The Soviet ambassador added: The Soviet Union consistently supports the settlement of the internal structure of the Cypriot state by the Cypriots themselves, taking into consideration the interests and rights of the Greek and Turkish communities of the island. In conclusion, he stressed that the Soviet Union opposes any foreign interference in the affairs of Cyprus.

PAPAIOANNOU URGES UK BASE, U.S. STATION CLOSINGS

NC080838 Nicosia KHARAVYI in Greek 8 Nov 81 pp 1, 11

[Excerpts] Speaking last Friday evening in Nicosia at a festive gathering sponsored by the Cyprus-Soviet Friendship Association on the occasion of the October Revolution, AKEL Secretary General E. Papaioannou declared: With the Turkish Cypriots we can and must come to an understanding and arrive at a permissible compromise based on the summit agreements and the UN resolutions, but we cannot do so with imperialism and foreign occupation.

We are waging a struggle against occupation and imperialism. We are struggling for a really independent, sovereign, territorially integral, federal, nonaligned and demilitarized Cyprus, without foreign troops and foreign bases on our territory. We reject the faits accomplis of the invasion. We reject a solution outside the framework and the resolutions of the United Nations and of the summit agreements.

We firmly and steadfastly insist on the withdrawal of all the foreign troops and the dissolution of all the foreign bases and of the spy monitoring stations. With the Turkish Cypriots we can and must come to an understanding and an agreement on the structure of the independent federal state. We can arrive at a permissible compromise based on the summit agreements and the UN resolutions, but we cannot do so with imperialism and the foreign occupation. With the Turkish Cypriots we must exert every possible effort to come to an understanding and to arrive at an agreement, because, as of the moment we achieve this, we will considerably strengthen our anti-imperialist struggle for the abolition of the British "sovereign bases" and of the U.S. monitoring stations.

The presence of these bases and their use by the U.S. imperialists also constitutes a mortal danger for our people. And let the British imperialists not play blindman's bluff when they claim that these are not being used by their U.S. patrons. Besides, it is British Prime Minister Thatcher who has offered the U.S. imperialists the bases for use by their "Rapid Deployment Force," as they call it.

The Cypriot people's irrevocable decision and demand is the dismantling of the British bases and of the U.S. monitoring stations and the withdrawal of all foreign troops from Cyprus. The Cypriot people do not want to be the target of nuclear missiles or a base for imperialist aggression against the neighboring Arab people with whom we are linked by joining struggles and ideals for freedom. Out of Cyprus with the Americans-British and all the NATOite imperialists! Cyprus is for the Cypriots! Cyprus is for peace, a center of friendship and cooperation with all the people of the region. An independent, sovereign, territorially integral, federal, nonaligned and demilitarized Cyprus -- it is for this that the unsubdued Cypriot people have been struggling and will continue to struggle.

On the occasion of the 64th anniversary of the Great October Socialist Revolution, the harshly-tried Cypriot people address a message of friendship, love, peace and cooperation to the great and friendly Soviet people. We wish the Soviet people, the glorious party of Lenin, the CPSU and the Soviet Government still greater successes in the gigantic struggle which they are waging for peace and socialism-communism.

Long live Lenin's most glorious party, the stimulator and leader of the great October Socialist Revolution!

Long live the 64th anniversary of the October Revolution!

Long live the friendship and cooperation between the Cypriot people and the great Soviet people!

Long live peace and socialism-communism!

UN TO RECEIVE PROTEST ON TURKISH AIR VIOLATION

NC071206 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1130 GMT 7 Nov 81

[Text] Foreign Minister Rolandhis has instructed Cypriot permanent delegate to the United Nations Ambassador Mavrommatis to report to the UN secretary general the violations of the airspace of the Republic of Cyprus by Turkish fighter planes last Thursday.

LISSARIDHIS ON PUBLICATION OF WALDHEIM IDEAS

NC081953 Nicosia Domestic Television Service in Greek 1830 GMT 8 Nov 81

[Text] In a speech at Xylophaghou, the chairman of the socialist party EDEK asked for the publication of the official text of the UN secretary general's evaluation of the intercommunal talks so that the people may be informed about the full context and philosophy which underlie Waldheim's ideas.

Lissaridhis said the correct tactics would be to reply to Waldheim in an honorable, scientific and documented analysis of the ideas, which would prove, as he said, their contrary character to the UN resolutions and the summit agreements. Such a reply, he added, would force Waldheim to withdraw his evaluation. If the initiative were to be continued, Lissaridhis concluded, Waldheim would be forced to adjust it to the framework of the UN resolutions.

PAPER HITS ULUSU TURKISH CYPRIOT CONTROL DENIAL

NC070838 Nicosia I ELEVTHEROTIPIA in Greek 7 Nov 81 p 5

[From the "Positions" column: "Ostrich-Like Behavior"]

[Text] Ankara does not give orders to the Denktas regime. This allegation has come from Turkish Prime Minister Ulusu, who is vainly trying to describe Ankara as not being involved in the Cyprus problem. But, unfortunately for Mr Ulusu, the mere presence of numerous Turkish occupation troops in Cyprus proves entirely the opposite. We also know quite well that the decisions on the Turkish side's policy on the Cyprus problem are made in Ankara. Therefore, the Turkish prime minister's allegation is unfounded.

What we would like to stress on this occasion is that so long as the Ankara regime continues to view the Cyprus problem from the angle it is viewing it today -- the divisive philosophy -- it will not be possible to have any progress in the way of finding a fair and permanent Cyprus solution. The ostrich-like behavior and the misleading allegations do not contribute to anything. There can be progress in the question only through a genuine change in mentality, in political approach and philosophy.

PARTY LEADERS EXPRESS SOLIDARITY WITH CUBA

AKEL's Papaioannou

NC070845 Nicosia KHARAVYI in Greek 7 Nov 81 p 8

[Text] AKEL Secretary General E. Papaioannou has sent to Fidel Castro, secretary general of the Cuban Communist Party and president of the Council of State of the Cuban Socialist Republic, the following cable:

"Dear Comrade Castro: The AKEL Central Committee strongly condemns the U.S. imperialist threats and its preparations for direct aggression against heroic Cuba. "It reaffirms full solidarity for the brother party, the government and the heroic people of Cuba and calls the Cypriot people to mobilization to prevent the horrible crime against Cuba and against world peace."

EDEK Chairman Lissaridhis

NC080843 Nicosia TA NEA in Greek 8 Nov 81 p 1

[Text] EDEK Chairman Vasos Lissaridhis has sent to Fidel Castro, first secretary of the Cuban Communist Party and president of the Council of State of the Cuban Socialist Republic, the following message:

"We are disturbed at the news that the Reagan administration is machinating and preparing for intervention in Cuba. It is obvious that their goal is to prevent real independence and democracy in Latin America. All the progressive and honest people are in full solidarity on your side, on the side of the party, the government and your people. We condemn the plans and the threats for intervention against the friendly Cuban people whose struggle constitutes an example of patriotic and anti-imperialist struggle. The people of Cyprus, who draw inspiration from the example of the heroic Cuban people, stand by your side and will actively work to mobilize the world public against the aggressive intentions of the Reagan administration."

PAPER ON FORMER OFFICIAL'S AGREEMENT WITH LIBYA

NC090849 Nicosia I SIMERINI in Greek 8 Nov 81 p 16

[Text] Acting in an inadmissible manner, Mr Miltiadhis Khristodhoulou, former director of the Public Information Office and government spokesman, has put the Foreign Ministry in a difficult position after concluding an agreement for the exchange of information with Libya at a time when an agreement covering the above sector had already been approved.

This serious problem for the ministry was created in the summer of last year when Mr Khristodhoulou proceeded with concluding the agreement without any authorization from the executive branch and without informing anyone. According to our reliable information, the agreement was concluded in August of last year when the Libyan information minister visited Cyprus as the official guest of the Cypriot Government. During his stay here, the Libyan minister held consultations with Mr Miltiadhis Khristodhoulou, who concluded the agreement.

The Foreign Ministry reacted to the agreement, because Mr Khristodhoulou failed to keep those concerned informed and acted in an inadmissible manner. The ministry had covered the sector of exchange of information with the signing, last August, of the agreement for cultural, technical and educational cooperation between Cyprus and Libya. Mr Miltiadhis' [as published] agreement does not offer anything new to the relations between the two countries.

Mr Khristodhoulou's action prevented the Foreign Ministry from adopting the agreement and submitting it to the House of Representatives. Thus, the agreement was referred to the Ministry to the President which submitted it to the House of Representatives for ratification. The agreement was submitted to the house at its first meeting of the present session, on 2 October. Then, Democratic Rally Chairman Glavkos Kliridhis raised the question of unconstitutionality for the Ministry to the President and reserved the right to outline the party's views at the debate of the agreement by the plenary meeting. The agreement is pending on the house agenda.

In the meantime, the house unanimously approved in June of last year an agreement for cultural, scientific and technical cooperation between Cyprus and Libya. The agreement was signed on 8 August 1980 and approved by the Council of Ministers on 11 December 1980.

The covenant states will exchange between them and within their capabilities, scientific and educational equipment, artistic and educational programs, technical exhibitions, educational scholarships in various technical and vocational sectors and public officials in the sector of general information and culture for the purpose of mutual briefing on the progress achieved by each of the two countries.

The sector on the exchange of information is covered by article 8 of the approved agreement and, therefore, well-informed relevant circles observe, the signing of the new agreement concluded by Mr Miltiadhis Khristodhoulou not only serves no purpose, but diminishes the weight of the state in interstate relations and, in a wider sense, the house from which approval is requested.

Mr Khristodhoulou acted in contravention of article 169 of the constitution which provides that every international agreement with other states or an international organization is concluded following a decision of the Council of Ministers. In this case, the Council of Ministers was informed after the fact.

PAPANDREOU MEETS TURKISH ENVOY, MAKES STATEMENT

NC061934 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 1900 GMT 6 Nov 81

[Text] Today at noon, Prime Minister Papandreou had a meeting at his political office with Turkish ambassador in Athens Alacam. At the conclusion of their 45-minute meeting, Prime Minister Papandreou made the following statement. As is well known, some days ago I met with Trukish Ambassador Alacam and, through the ambassador, I sent the Turkish Government an olive branch basically aiming at the creation of an Aegean that will be a sea of peace and good neighborliness. Today, the Turkish ambassador in Athens conveyed a message to me from Turkish Prime Minister Ulusu which is also an olive branch.

Despite the fact that in any case great issues exist in the Aegean area, issues whose course is well known to the Greek people, I believe without perforce wishing to be optimistic that perhaps we are starting a new period in relations between the two countries, and I hope everything that may happen in the future will confirm this optimism. In addition, Turkish Ambassador Alacam said: As you have said, Mr Prime Minister, today I have reciprocated with an olive branch from the Turkish Government. I have the impression, following our talks, that we can be optimistic regarding the solution of problems between our two countries and the improvement of relations between our two peoples and countries.

In reply to a question by reporters to Papandreou about whether a meeting is being envisaged between him and the Turkish leadership, the prime minister said: Today I have no statement to make on procedural issues, nor has the ambassador.

Further Comment

NC071336 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 1200 GMT 7 Nov 81

[Text] The government spokesman made a statement on foreign agency reports regarding a statement by Turkish Prime Minister Ulusu making reference to Prime Minister Papandreou's recent meeting with Turkish Ambassador Alacam. The spokesman said: It must be noted that during this meeting neither Prime Minister Papandreou nor the Turkish prime minister's message, which was hand-delivered by Mr Alacam, made any reference to the principle of clemency. The spokesman added: It is also noted that Turkish Ambassador Alacam did not raise such a question either.

NEWS GIVES MORE DETAILS ON ULUSU INTERVIEW

NC061826 Athens NEWS in English 6 Nov 81 p 4

[Text] Turkey is extending the olive branch to the new Greek Government and is seeking top-level talks, Turkish Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu said in an interview published in yesterday's issue of Athens daily ETHNOS. Mr Ulusu also called for efforts to avoid fanning the flames of hatred between the two countries.

"The sea that lies between us should not be a sea of separation, but a sea of friendship, a bridge uniting out two countries," Mr Ulusu stressed. He went on to say that relations between Greece and Turkey should be steeled even stronger, children mustn't be taught that the other nation is the enemy, nor must hostility be preached in churches or mosques.

Mr Ulusu denied that Turkey was giving orders to the Turkish Cypriots and insisted on the creation of a federal state on the island. Finally, he said Turkey had no territorial claims to make on any of her neighbours and that problems could be solved through negotiations.

A government spokesman yesterday described as "positive" the views expressed by Turkish Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu.

OBJECTION TO EEC SINAI FORCE PLAN CONTINUES

NC061830 Athens NEWS in English 6 Nov 81 p 4

[Text] The EEC has recognized the soundness of Greek objections to the decision to send a European Community peacekeeping force in the Sinai Peninsula. According to authoritative sources, the plan is being reappraised and the logical possibility of adverse reactions from Arab countries has been admitted. Now the reformulation of the plan has been assigned to the Greek side.

Meanwhile, Communist Party of the Interior Eurodeputy Leonidhas Kirkos made a statement in Strasbourg on Wednesday according to which his party categorically opposes the dispatch of such a force to Sinai.

According to Mr Kirkos, such an action would bring the EEC into conflict with the Arab world. He expressed his wish that Greece should block such an eventual decision which would bind the community to military interventions and adventures beyond her boundaries, and goes against hopes for an autonomous role vis-a-vis the Third World and the Arab states.

CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES TO OPEN SESSION 16 NOVEMBER

NC062144 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 2100 GMT 6 Nov 81

[Text] According to press reports, a consecration ceremony will be held in the Chamber of Deputies on 16 November to mark the opening of the new parliamentary session. In the afternoon of the same day, the president of the body will be elected. Members of the presidency and sergeants at arms will be elected on 18 and 19 November.

Prime Minister Papandreou will deliver the government policy statement on 20 November, and the next day speeches will be made by official opposition leader Rallis and KKE Secretary General Florakis. Immediately afterward, debate will open on the policy statement and will continue on the next day. If this is not enough time, it is likely the debate will continue until 23 November.

NETHERLANDS FOREIGN MINISTER ARRIVES FOR VISIT

NC071201 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1100 GMT 7 Nov 81

[Excerpts] Netherlands Foreign Minister van der Stoel, who arrived in Athens this morning for a short working visit, will have talks today with Prime Minister Papandreou.

The Netherlands foreign minister was met at the airport by Deputy Foreign Minister Fotilas, Netherlands ambassador in Athens Calkoen and by other officials. Welcoming Mr van der Stoel, Mr Fotilas described him as an old friend of Greece and expressed the belief that his talks in Athens will be useful and constructive. Mr van der Stoel will leave tonight for the Netherlands.

Meets With Papandreou

NC071321 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1230 GMT 7 Nov 81

[Text] Netherlands Foreign Minister van der Stoel is paying a short working visit to Athens today. At noon Mr van der Stoel met with Prime Minister Papandreou. The meeting took place during a working luncheon at the prime minister's residence at Kastri which began at 1330. Welcoming Mr van der Stoel at Kastri, Prime Minister Papandreou said: I am particularly pleased at the fact that I am meeting the Netherlands foreign minister who has created militant history in the struggle against the 21 April dictatorial regime. And, therefore, his devotion to democratic principles and his love for Greece are taken for granted.

In his reply, Mr van der Stoel said that it is a great honor and pleasure for him to be in Greece with which the Netherlands has very close ties.

Taking part in the talks -- in addition to Mr Papandreou and to Mr Van der Stoel -- were Foreign Minister Kharalambopoulos and the prime minister's diplomatic adviser Makhairitsas. The talks referred to questions on the relations between the two countries as well as to international questions.

Van der Stoel Departs

NC072226 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1800 GMT 7 Nov 81

[Aris Xipolitidhis report on 7 November visit of Netherlands Foreign Minister Van der Stoel to Athens]

[Excerpts] Van der Stoel arrived in Athens by air at 1030 today and departed late this afternoon.

Earlier, he made the following statement to representatives of the press following his arrival at the airport: [Begin recording; Van der Stoel statement in English with Greek translation superimposed] It is a joy for me to visit Greece. But this time I feel even greater happiness because I will have talks with the new prime minister of Greece, Andreas Papandreou. I knew Papandreou from the time of the dictatorship when he was exiled in Europe. I also feel special emotions because people who were in prison or in exile during the dictatorship are today members of the new Greek Government.

During the talks I will have with Papandreou and with the foreign minister we will discuss a variety of subjects. As you know, Greece and the Netherlands are members of international organizations such as the EEC, NATO and the Council of Europe and the governments of our two countries share common goals and aspirations. Within the framework of these common goals we will exchange views which I believe will prove constructive. [end recording]

Deputy Foreign Minister Fotilas, in welcoming Van der Stoel at the airport, described him as an old friend of Greece. After expressing the happiness of the Greek Government in welcoming him to Athens, he underlined that the aims of the Greek and Netherlands Governments are joint aims.

In reply, Van der Stoel agreed with Fotilas' view and repeated the two countries have common principles, goals and aspirations which aim at guaranteeing stability and peace in Europe and social justice for its peoples.

IRAQI DEPUTY PREMIER ARRIVES ON STATE VISIT

NC091115 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1100 GMT 9 Nov 81

[Text] Iraqi Deputy Prime Minister Tariq 'Aziz has arrived in Athens on an official visit. According to press reports, the purpose of Mr 'Aziz' visit to Greece is to exchange views on bilateral and international issues with Prime Minister Papandreou, with whom he has old links of friendship.

At 1400 today, Mr Papandreou will give a luncheon in honor of the Iraqi deputy prime minister at the Foreign Ministry. The luncheon will be attended by Foreign Minister Kharalambopoulos, Deputy Foreign Ministers Fotilas and Papoulias, as well as other officials.

ULUSU STATEMENT ON PAPANDREOU-ALACAM MEETING

TA061649 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 6 Nov 81

[Text] Turkish ambassador to Athens Tahir Alacam today again met with Greek Prime Minister Papandreou, who had previously received Alacam in Athens on 30 October and explained his views on Turkish-Greek relations. Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu, who assessed Alacam's report on the meeting, instructed Alacam to visit the Greek prime minister again, and transmit the counterviews of the Turkish Government.

In a statement he made following the Papandreou-Alacam meeting, Ulusu said the following: In his meeting with the Greek prime minister today, our ambassador conveyed our satisfaction with the fact that Mr Papandreou expressed the wish to solve the problems between the two countries and establish close cooperation. Our ambassador also stressed again that the Turkish Government always wants to resolve its problems with Greece through peaceful means and within the framework of a balance of interests respecting equality and justice. He also submitted an evaluation of the stands adopted by the two sides in discussions held so far in a bid to resolve the problems. Our ambassador also noted the importance of an atmosphere of mutual trust in order to continue these discussions in a constructive manner.

Addressing reporters following his meeting with Alacam, Papandreou said that the message he sent to the Turkish Government is an olive branch aimed at transforming the Aegean Sea into a sea of peace and goodneighborliness. Pointing out that he also considers Ulusu's message of today an olive branch, Papandreou said: I believe that a new period has begun in the relations between the two countries and I hope that future developments will enhance and confirm this optimism.

EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT REJECTS AID FREEZE PROPOSAL

TA061130 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 6 Nov 81

[Text] The motions submitted envisaging a freeze of aid to be extended to Turkey from the EEC 1982 budget within the framework of the third financial protocol has been rejected by the European Parliament. A decision has been made to freeze a section of the Turkish-EEC fourth financial protocol involving some $90 million. This decision has no economic validity because the fourth financial protocol has not yet been approved by the community's Ministerial Council.

COURTS' ACTIONS IN ANTIDISSIDENCE CAMPAIGN

Publisher Sentenced

NC061500 Paris AFP in English 1440 GMT 6 Nov 81

[Text] Ankara, 6 Nov (AFP) -- Turkish publisher-journalist Leyla Yurdakul, owner of the left-wing Aydinlik publishing house, was yesterday sentenced by an Istanbul martial law court to two years in jail for "insulting the military." Mrs Yurdakul was acquitted of a second charge of "disclosing state secrets" in a book she published, the anonymously-penned "Documents on Counterguerrilla and the Nationalist Action Party (NAP)".

The NAP, a right-wing extremist group led by former Vice-Premier Alpaslan Turkes, has been abolished by Turkey's military rulers and some 220 militants and cadres of the party are on trial for their lives before an Ankara martial law court. The "counterguerrilla" organization was a mysterious group accused of torturing political prisoners and having links with the NAP in the 1970's.

Writer Sentenced

TA071523 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1515 GMT 7 Nov 81

[Text] Istanbul, 7 Nov (AA) -- A military tribunal in Istanbul Friday sentenced to seven years and six months in jail a writer who was being accussed of disseminating communist propaganda in violation of Article 142 of the Turkish penal code. The indictment said that the defendant, Mr Ali Riza Tura, preached the hegemony of class struggle in his book titled "The Books of Socialist Struggle-2."

Actor Indicted

TA071555 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1533 GMT 7 Nov 81

[Text] Istanbul, 7 Nov (AA) -- One of Turkey's leading actors is facing a jail sentence of up to 6 years if convicted on charges of damaging national interests in a series of speeches he made in West Germany early this year. The defendant is Mr Tarik Akan, who was voted actor of the year by a popular Istanbul daily early this year and sent to West Germany for a prize presentation ceremony. The military prosecutor charged that Mr Akan criticized the regime in speeches he made in Frankfurt. He is claimed to have defamed the Turkish state by derogatory statements. The trial of Akan starts on December 9.

Armenian Released

TA071524 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1510 GMT 7 Nov 81

[Text] Istanbul, 7 Nov (AA) -- A Turkish Armenian, who was standing trial on charges of engaging in subversive propaganda against the Turkish state, was released from jail Friday after the presiding judge ruled that his trial could continue while he was free.

Mr Hirani Kucukguzelyan, whom the Armenian terrorists demanded to be turned over to them a month ago when they seized the Turkish Consulate in Paris may face a jail sentence of up to three years if convicted on the specified charges.

The judge ordered his release after taking into consideration the time he served in jail. The defendant is being tried on several charges, one of which is that he disseminated religious propaganda and deliberately attempted to weaken national-sentiments.

Death Sentence Sought

TA071553 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1540 GMT 7 Nov 81

[Text] Istanbul, 7 Nov (AA) -- Four alleged members of the notorious Turkish Peoples Liberation Party-Front [THKP-C] went on trial in Instanbul Friday before a military tribunal on charges of murder, attempted murder and being members of an outlawed organization. The military prosecutor is demanding death penalty for two of the defendants. The trial resumes on December 7.

LOAN AGREEMENT WITH NETHERLANDS APPROVED

TA071653 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1558 GMT 7 Nov 81

[Text] Ankara, 7 Nov (AA) -- The Turkish Government has approved a loan agreement between Turkey and the Netherlands under which the Hague government will be extending a 43-million-guilder line of credit to Turkey within the framework of the aid to Turkey consortium, the (?second) part of the assistance package of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD). The loan will be repaid in 21 semi-annual installments starting in 1986.

AUSTRIA

BRIEFS

CONSULATE BOMBED -- The Austrian consulate in Frankfurt was damaged by a bomb this morning. No one was injured. The front wall of the building, the door and the fence were slightly damaged and several windowpanes on the first floor were broken. What exploded was a small, obviously home-made tube bomb. Nothing is known about who is behind the bomb attack, but the authorities assume that there might be some connection with the conflict surrounding the construction of a new runway for Frankfurt airport. Austrian lumberjacks are employed in cutting trees in a forest that has to be cleared to make room for the runway. In addition to the explosion in front of the Austrian consulate building, there have been another two bomb attacks: one against a savings bank branch office, the other against a car. [Text] [Vienna Domestic Service in German 1100 GMT 6 Nov 81 AU]

TIROLEANS PROTEST -- South Tirolean Governor Magnago will officially ask Austria for diplomatic intervention in Rome. The minimum the South Tirolean People's Party Regional Assembly must demand to induce him to run for office again is "that we now quite officially appeal to Austria urging a diplomatic intervention," Magnago declared in an interview with the weekly DIE FURCHE. Magnago recalled that the South Tirolean People's Party Regional Assembly in 1969 consented to the South Tirol package agreement [on regional autonomy] only with a narrow majority of 52.9 percent. "At that time I declared that our consent would be null and void if as much as a comma were to be altered in the text of the agreement," the South Tirolean People's Party chairman told DIE FURCHE, adding that parts of the package agreement have still not been fulfilled. [Text] [Vienna ARBEITER-ZEITUNG in German 5 Nov 81 p 5 AU]

SPAIN

GUARD INJURED IN BOMBING, ETA SUSPECTED

NC081456 Paris AFP in English 1451 GMT 8 Nov 81

[Text] Vitoria, northern Spain, 8 Nov (AFP) -- A Civil Guard sergeant was seriously wounded in an overnight bomb explosion near an electrical transformer station at Labastida, Alava Province, police sources said here today. The explosion occurred when one of several guards patrolling the perimeter found an electric torch which exploded as he handled it.

Nobody has yet claimed responsibility for the blast. The transformer station which belongs to a subsidiary of the Iberguero company was recently the target of a bomb attack. The company, which is building a central nuclear station at Lemona, near Bilbao, has been the target of more than 70 attacks so far this year. Most of them have been claimed by the Basque separatist ETA military wing which says the nuclear station represents a danger for the residents of Bilbao.

Meanwhile, Spanish feminist Jimena Alonson, suspected of collaborating with the military wing of ETA, has claimed she was maltreated by police after her recent arrest, the Madrid newspaper EL PAIS reported today.

The newspaper cited a letter sent by Miss Alonso to the judge investigating the affair, in which she also denied any contact with Basque separatists and demanded to be set free. Mis Alonso was arrested on 20 October along with four other members of intellectual circles, who were also accused of having contacts with the ETA military wing.

Centrist sources at Bilbao said today that fear of separatist terrorism had slashed by half the number of militants belonging to the Union for a Democratic Centre (UDC), a Basque country governmental coalition. The loss of UDC prestige in Basque country, caused by internal conflicts within the government, had helped send UDC membership plunging from 1,000 to 500 since March. Sources said the 500 remaining UDC members were going to some lengths to conceal their party membership. They had, for example, asked the government to send them no mail bearing the UDC insignia. Four centrist militants have been killed in Basque country in 1979 and 1980. All the attacks were claimed by the military wing of ETA.

DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 217 10 November 1981

CONTENTS

AUSTRIA

Polish Foreign Minister Comments on Coal Deliveries E 1
Press Reports on Vienna Peace March of 6 Nov E 1
Briefs: Synagogue Terrorist; Grain to Poland; Grain Exports; Ships for USSR; Ambassador to Peru; Outgoing Iraqi Ambassador; New Chief of Staff E 2

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Genscher Cites Significance of Brezhnev Visit J 1
Brezhnev To Meet With Kohl, Strauss During Visit J 1
SPD Defense Official on Need for U.S. Nuclear Arms J 2
Genscher Stresses Need for European Political Union J 2
North Korea Ready To Establish Diplomatic Relations J 2
Gaus Urges Rejection of 'One Nation' Policy J 3
U.S. Middle East Policy 'In Motion,' Writes Paper [FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE 10 Nov] J 3
Briefs: Polish Immigrants J 3

FRANCE

France-Niger Commission Ends Meetings in Paris [Niamey] K 1
Talks Yield Closer French-Algerian Relations K 1
Official on 'Tense' Situation in New Caledonia K 2
Cabinet To Define Policy K 2
Cubans Urge More Imports To Redress Trade Balance [LE MONDE 23 Oct] K 3
Cuba's Armando Hart Arrives in Paris for Talks [Havana] K 3
Mitterrand Praises Sudan's 'Prudent' Policy [SUNA] K 3
Briefs: Rocket Launch K 3

ITALY & THE VATICAN

India's Gandhi Arrives for Visit, Meets Spadolini L 1
Gandhi Interview L 1
Spadolini Schedules Visits to London, Paris L 2
PCI's Berlinguer on U.S. War Plans, Poland [LA REPUBBLICA 24 Oct] L 2

PORTUGAL

Eanes, PSP Aides Meet With PCF Secretary General [L'HUMANITE 31 Oct] M 1

SPAIN

Basque Left Divided; Carrillo's Views Noted [LA VANGUARDIA 3 Nov] N 1
PSUC Executive Calls For Special Party Congress [LA VANGUARDIA 1 Nov] N 1
Nation Capable of Producing 10 Atomic Bombs a Year N 2

NORDIC AFFAIRS

FINLAND

Virolainen on Foreign Policy, Nuclear-Free Zone [HUFVUDSTADSBLADET 5 Nov] P 1
USSR Places 'Significant' Order for Ships [HUFVUDSTADSBLADET 24 Oct] P 1
Briefs: Visit to USSR P 2

NORWAY

Evensen Stripped of Foreign Ministry Duties [ARBEIDERBLADET 28 Oct] P 2
Defense Minister Comments on Soviet Sub Incident [AFTENPOSTEN 6 Nov] P 2
Nordic Defense Ministers Confer in Oslo [AFTENPOSTEN 29 Oct] P 3

SWEDEN

Soviet Official Comments on Submarine Incident P 3
Papers Comment on Submarine Affair P 4

UNITED KINGDOM

Thatcher Rejects Israeli Condition for Sinai Force Q 1
Nott Discusses Nuclear Warning Shot Controversy Q 1
Carrington 'Endangers' Mideast Peace Plan Q 2
[THE DAILY TELEGRAPH 9 Nov]
Briefs: Indian Foreign Minister Q 2

CYPRUS

Soviet Delegation Signs Economic Protocol 9 Nov R 1
Parliamentary Delegation Leaves for SFRY 10 Nov R 1
Council Ends Deliberation on Waldheim Ideas R 1
Archbishop Answers New Democracy Criticism [I ELEVTHEROTIPIA 7 Nov] R 2
Denktas Criticizes Publication of Waldheim Views R 2

GREECE

Papandreou, Tariq 'Aziz Hold Talks 9 November S 1
Papandreou To Attend EEC London Summit 25 Nov S 1
U.S. Bases Question To Be Raised After Christmas S 1
RIZOSPASTIS Discusses New U.S. Bases Tactics [8 Nov] S 2
Government Announces Policy Statement Debate S 3
Paper Comments on Cypriot Archbishop's Attitude [EXORMISI 8 Nov] S 3
KKE Supports Cuba in Facing U.S. Provocations [RIZOSPASTIS 8 Nov] S 3

TURKEY

Syrian Territorial Waters Claim Raises Objection [TERCUMAN 7 Nov] T 1
Papers React to Developments in Greek Affairs T 1
MILLIYET Column [2 Nov] T 1
HURRIYET Report [3 Nov] T 3
GUNAYDIN Article [6 Nov] T 3
HURRIYET Editorial on Genscher Visit [6 Nov] T 4

OTHER COUNTRIES

BELGIUM

'Full Results' of 8 November Elections Reported U 1
Nothomb Entreats Haig, Gromyko on Euromissiles [LE SOIR 6 Nov] U 1

CANADA

Emigration Measures for Poles Being Eased U 1

MALTA

Parliament Dissolved; 12 Dec General Elections Set U 1

POLISH FOREIGN MINISTER COMMENTS ON COAL DELIVERIES

AU100935 Vierna Domestic Television Service in German 2050 GMT 9 Nov 81

[Barbara Coudenhove-Kalergi interview with Polish Foreign Minister Josef Czyrek in Vienna 9 November -- recorded, in German]

[Text] [Czyrek] We believe this visit will be of great importance because Austria is our important political, economic partner with whom we have excellent relations -- relations that are based on the principles of trust, mutual respect or better yet, on esteem. I believe our relations are even exemplary in the implementation of all decisions and recommendations of the Helsinki Final Act. So, in other words, we will certainly speak about all problems of interest to us, about international, bilateral questions -- [Coudenhove-Kalergi interrupts]

[Question] Mr Minister, what interests Austrians above all are the coal deliveries from Poland. Austria has an agreement with Poland which provides for our getting nearly 1 million tons of coal this year. How much are we actually going to get?

[Answer] We understand the concern of our Austrian partners. We signed these agreements in the firm conviction and with the firm intention to fulfill them. Unfortunately developments in our country have not gone sufficiently back to normal to permit me to tell you how much specifically it will be this year. At any rate, I can assure you that the Polish Government -- and I believe not only the Polish Government -- will do everything to meet our commitments.

[Question] It has been said that it will be about 60 percent.

[Answer] I believe it already is 60 percent -- I hope it will be more than that.

[Question] Mr Minister, in Poland it is widely argued that it will be necessary to incorporate the "Solidarity" trade union into a front of national understanding to give it a share in responsibility. In which form could you conceive of that?

[Answer] Well, the forms have already been outlined, basically, by the governing party and the government. That is, first, the idea of a Council of National Understanding; second, an idea or a concept of a consultative body attached to the government that is to examine all bills or decisions of the government -- in all these bodies there is of course also room for all patriotic forces of our country, there is also room for representatives of "Solidarity." I believe a solution can be found only on the basis of joint endeavors and joint responsibility.

PRESS REPORTS ON VIENNA PEACE MARCH OF 6 NOV

AU091407 [Editorial Report] All Vienna dailies on 7 November carry reports on a peace demonstration held in Vienna in the late afternoon of 6 November. The participants -- 10,000 according to the Socialist ARBEITER-ZEITUNG and the Communist VOLKSSTIMME, and 5,000 according to the independent DIE PRESSE -- marched from Vienna's seventh district to the "Amerikahaus" near the city hall in the first district, where a concluding rally was held. WIENER ZEITUNG (page 1) reports that the participants "called for a nuclear-free zone in Europe, a ban on the production and deployment of hydrogen bombs," rejected the "rearmament of the Austrian army and arms exports to Fascist dictatorships" and demanded a conversion of arms production to civilian goods production. According to the paper, the demonstrators called for the disbandment of NATO and of the Warsaw Pact as their ultimate goal.

ARBEITER-ZEITUNG (page 3) notes that a large percentage of the demonstrators were young people and that "the demonstrators made it quite unequivocally clear that they consider Soviet nuclear missiles just as dangerous as American ones."

The paper draws attention to such slogans displayed by the marchers as "We do not want to perish either through U.S. or through S.U. [Soviet] missiles." The paper quotes a "Young Generation" spokesman, Michael Haeupl, as having said in his speech that "even though the main danger to Europe today comes from U.S. armament, the Soviet peace overtures must not cause one to overlook that there are Soviet troops in Afghanistan, that Soviet submarines with nuclear weapons are cruising the North and Baltic seas, and that there is the Polish problem. Peace can only be achieved through general disarmament and dentente," he said.

VOLKSSTIMME (pages 1 and 2), in addition to covering speeches by representatives of communist or cryptocommunist organizations, notes that a "Maoist" named Kohlmaier, who "misused" the permission to briefly address the rally for "massive, one-sided attacks on the Soviet Union," was booed by the demonstrators. The paper also notes that some other speakers displayed "some criticism of the Soviet Union" but cites them as having admitted that "it is Western capital which is attacking the existence of noncapitalist countries and stepping up armament," or that "the main threat [to peace] comes from the United States." The paper plays up a message of U.S. entertainer Harry Belafonte to the demontrators, read by his wife at the concluding rally, highlighting his statement that "to even think of developing the neutron bomb is a disease."

BRIEFS

SYNAGOGUE TERRORIST -- In addition to the confession that he assassinated Vienna City Councilman Heinz Nittel, synagogue attacker Husham Radjih has now also confessed to participation in another crime -- the bomb attack against the Salzburg Pitter hotel in November 1969. The explosion of the bomb in the toilet of this hotel at a time when a lecture on Israel was being given there had inflicted serious injuries on three FRG lady tourists. According to Radjih's confession, he helped prepare this bomb. [Vienna ARBEITER-ZEITUNG in German 6 Nov 81 p 9 AU]

GRAIN TO POLAND -- By the end of this year, 50,000 tons of grain will be exported to Poland. This was announced by Minister of Agriculture Haiden. For this quota, the financing and the required government guarantees have been ensured. [Text] [Vienna Domestic Service in German 1100 GMT 5 Nov 81 AU]

GRAIN EXPORTS -- This year, 280,000 tons of grain are available in Austria for export. For the time being, only 50,000 tons of grain are to be exported to Poland although a skeleton agreement with Poland would enable Austria to export up to 300,000 tons to this country. However, there are difficulties regarding the financing of such exports. According to Minister of Agriculture Haiden, there will be no difficulty in exporting the grain to other markets. Potential customers will primarily be East European countries. Thus 100,000 tons are already earmarked for the GDR, which is known to pay cash promptly for grain deliveries. [Vienna ARBEITER-ZEITUNG in German 6 Nov 81 p 7 AU]

SHIPS FOR USSR -- The Linz-Korneuburg Austrian shipyard company has at present USSR orders for 50 river vessels worth about 1.9 billion schillings. This was announced by the company management on Thursday on the occasion of the launching of the motor freighter "Konstantin Bozhenko" in Linz on Thursday -- the 115th ship built in Austria for the Soviet Union. [Vienna VOLKSSTIMME in German 6 Nov 81 p 4 AU]

AMBASSADOR TO PERU -- Carl Rauscher, who had been Austrian ambassador to Peru for 9 years, died after a long illness in Lima on 30 October 1981. [Vienna DIE PRESSE in German 2 Nov 81 p 2 AU]

OUTGOING IRAQI AMBASSADOR -- Muhammad Sadiq al-Mashshat, who has been Iraqi ambassador to Austria for 3 years, will leave his post and become Iraqi ambassador to Paris. His successor in Vienna will also be a university professor: Ibrahim Ahman ash-Shawi. At a farewell party given by Foreign Minister Pahr for Al-Mashshat, the Iraqi diplomat stressed that his country's relations with Austria were of a special kind, and paid tribute to Chancellor Kreisky and Foreign Minister Pahr's deep understanding for the fate of the Palestinians. [Vienna WIENER ZEITUNG in German 5 Nov 81 p 2 AU]

NEW CHIEF OF STAFF -- Viktor Fortunat, 51-year-old two-star general, has been appointed new chief of staff in the Austrian army command. He succeeds General Bernadiner, who as of 1 October is the new chief of the Austrian army command. [Vienna DIE PRESSE in German 5 Nov 81 p 2 AU]

GENSCHER CITES SIGNIFICANCE OF BREZHNEV VISIT

LD091240 Hamburg DPA in German 1140 GMT 9 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 9 Nov (DPA) -- Chairman of the Free Democratic Party [FDP], Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, expects the forthcoming visit to Bonn by Soviet party chief Leonid Brezhnev to provide some indication of Moscow's readiness to accept the Western offer of bilateral abandonment of the stationing of medium-range missiles (zero option). Genscher told the FDP Presidium today -- according to party spokesman Herbert Schmoelling -- that if the Soviet Union no longer insists on its SS-20 missiles, then this could be a signal for efforts toward disarmament in other spheres, too. Genscher said the visit is an important element of the East-West dialogue, which has to be continued with the aim of intensifying economic cooperation.

Schmoelling said the FDP Presidium expressed the hope that the Madrid follow-up Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe (CSCE) would initiate a European disarmament conference.

In the view of the Presidium, the Soviet submarine affair off the coast of Sweden has dealt a serious blow to efforts at building trust in Europe. The Soviet Union must make every effort to recreate the necessary basis of trust for the disarmament negotiations.

BREZHNEV TO MEET WITH KOHL, STRAUSS DURING VISIT

LD092148 Hamburg DPA in German 2008 GMT 9 Nov 81

[Text] Berlin, 9 Nov (DPA) -- During his visit to Bonn at the end of November, Soviet state and party leader Leonid Brezhnev, as during his 1978 visit, also wants to have meetings with the CDU chairman, Helmut Kohl, and CSU chairman and Bavarian premier, Franz-Josef Strauss. This was communicated to the Union, according to CDU/CSU foreign policy spokesman Alois Mertes, by the Soviet embassy. In the Free Berlin Broadcasting television program "Kontraste" today, Mertes rejected the idea that Moscow's leadership was avoiding the opposition leadership and leading Union politicians in Bonn. This was untrue. Brezhnev knew that the Union, "in view of the Soviet Union's importance for peace and also to our national interests, attributed very great importance in German foreign policy" to German-Soviet dialogue.

According to Mertes, the Union expects there to be "an honest balance between the two sides' during the Brezhnev visit. There must be open discussion, for example, about the fact "that the use of force in Afghanistan and the threats of force against Poland" were not compatible with the German-Soviet treaty renouncing the use of force, or the Helsinki Final Act. The handling of the deportation of Germans from the Soviet Union was also a test for German-Soviet relations.

SPD disarmament expert Egon Bahr said in the same program that humanitarian issues were very important but the most important issue in the humanitarian field was to prevent war. "That is why what would normally be understood by humanitarian issues would not be enough, as far as I am concerned, for a label of success to be attached to the visit." He was therefore hoping for a serious discussion about whether the basis for an approximate balance, agreed during the 1978 visit, will be confirmed and whether both sides, particularly the Soviet Union, were prepared to return to the situation at that time, "in other words, to remove the SS-20's which have been stationed since 1978. This would also be a possibility of the zero option."

SPD DEFENSE OFFICIAL ON NEED FOR U.S. NUCLEAR ARMS

LD071850 Hamburg DPA in German 1713 GMT 7 Nov 81

[Text] Kassel, 7 Nov (DPA) -- According to Wilfried Penner, parliamentary secretary of state in the Federal Ministry of Defense, the SPD favors deterrence against war, not making war. At an SPD parliamentary working group meeting on security questions held in Kassel today, Penner said that within this concept, U.S. nuclear weapons are an essential precondition for deterrence against war. Concessions by one side do not make peace any more secure.

Bonn's defense policy is only possible within the Western alliance, the secretary of state said. The thought of a European defense community is unrealistic and is as unworthy of consideration as the neutralization of the Federal Republic. This would infringe on "our vital security interests. Detaching ourselves from the United States is out of the question," Penner stressed.

GENSCHER STRESSES NEED FOR EUROPEAN POLITICAL UNION

LD062140 Hamburg DPA in German 1938 GMT 6 Nov 81

[Text] Vienna, 6 Nov (DPA) -- In the opinion of FDP Chairman Hans-Dietrich Genscher, Europe must move closer together politically, economically and for the purposes of safeguarding peace in Europe. For the Liberals this means above all the development of the European Community into a European union, as well as increased cooperation between the EEC states and European countries that are not members of the community, Genscher said in Vienna on Friday evening.

At a meeting of the Austrian Liberal Party [EFP], the foreign minister mentioned as the third objective of Liberal policy more intensive cooperation with East Europe "with the great objective of a European peace order." This includes the development of concepts of how "an East-West security partnership can be made possible politically and economically."

The EEC is facing the question of whether to undertake a new attempt at European union or to regress into a "customs union," fighting over the common funds according to the principle of national egotisms, Genscher said. He warned against a "cost-benefit analysis" which is also occasionally mooted in the Federal Republic.

Genscher, who arrived from Ankara, also met his Austrian counterpart Willibald Pahr for a talk on the international situation. He will return to Bonn on Saturday.

NORTH KOREA READY TO ESTABLISH DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS

LD061322 Hamburg DPA in German 1125 GMT 6 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 7 Nov (DPA) -- The Communist leadership of North Korea is interested in expanding contacts and cooperation with the FRG and is also prepared in principle to establish diplomatic relations between Pyongyang and Bonn. After the North Korean party delegation's 1 week of talks in the FRG, the North Korean Politburo member Kim Yong-nam told journalists in Bonn that the delegation and all its partners in the talks agreed on the need to further the political, economic, cultural and scientific cooperation between the two countries.

The delegation was pleased with the great interest in extending contacts shown by all the German partners in the talks. Nam, who is chairman of the North Korean parliament's Presidium and Foreign Affairs Committee, said on the question of diplomatic relations that his country is always ready to establish normal relations with all the countries of the world on the basis of mutual respect, noninterference, and mutual advantage.

The establishment of relations with Bonn does not depend on North Korea alone, but it is ready any time to deal with this question in a manner which corresponds to its people's interest.

The North Korean party politicians, who are the first representative political delegation from Pyongyang to visit the FRG, spoke in Bonn with leading politicians of the major parties, the German Chamber of Industry and Commerce [DIHT] and the Confederation of German Industry [BDI]. At the press conference FDP deputy Juergen Moellemann who, like SPD politician Erhard Eppler, has recently visited North Korea, also supported expanding cultural, scientific, economic and political cooperation. One would then see whether this led to diplomatic relations. Moellemann took up [aufgreifen] North Korea's wish for reunification with the south of the country which Nam had emphasized. This might be a good basis for joint consideration of bilateral cooperation.

GAUS URGES REJECTION OF 'ONE NATION' POLICY

LD092252 Hamburg DPA in German 1937 GMT 9 Nov 81

[Text] Berlin, 9 Nov (DPA) -- The Federal Republic's former permanent representative in East Berlin, Guenter Gaus (SPD), has once again spoken out in favor of doing away with the habit of speaking about the idea of one nation in 'state' overtones [entstaatlichung der nationen-idee] in intra-German policy. In the Free Berlin television program "Kontraste", Gaus said there should be no illusions in this respect. In policy on Germany, "we should exploit every possibility without constantly tripping ourselves with a state nation-idea." In his view Germans in the Federal Republic are very disinterested with the German question "unlike their compatriots in the GDR." He believes that most West Germans "no longer even share" these illusions "because they basically don't care at all about the reunification issue and the German question."

In reply to the remark that the regular German-German summits urged by Gaus might be regarded in a different way by the respective allies in East and West than, for example, regular consultations between Bonn and Paris, Gaus said he believes "that if this is the case the acid test will now really have to be made." The Western allies have contractually given assurances of their agreement on solving the German question. He also believes that such summit meetings are a process to which people become accustomed. "I am not so pessimistic on that score."

U.S. MIDDLE EAST POLICY 'IN MOTION' WRITES PAPER

DW100955 Frankurt FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE in German 10 Nov 81 p 12

[Commentary signed Ein.: "Preference: Middle East"]

[Text] The Middle East policy of the United States is in motion. After the success of the President who made Congress agree to the supply of five AWACS planes to Saudi Arabia, the White House and the Department of State are engaged in setting up the "Sinai Group." It is supposed to separate Egypt from Israel in the third withdrawal phase as some sort of international military buffer. The Pentagon is also active. Reports are being denied that the American Rapid Deployment Force could soon have depots and bases in Saudi Arabia. It is certain, however, that the "Leathernecks," the U.S. Marine Corps, will be permitted to have exercises on the coast of Oman. Cooperation with the Sudanese army is also in preparation. Action by the American engineer and medical units in Somalia is also planned. The big-size maneuver is mostly of symbolic significance. Many things are limited with regard to time and space. But the signals have been set indicating that America attributes great strategic importance to the Middle East.

BRIEFS

POLISH IMMIGRANTS -- Goettingen 9 Nov (DPA) -- The stream of immigrants from Poland continues. At the Friedland border transit camp there were 992 arrivals in the past week -- 836 of these were from Poland alone. According to the Ministry of Federal Affairs of Lower Saxony on Monday, 42 came from the USSR and 4 from other East European countries. [Text] [Hamburg DPA in German 0838 GMT 9 Nov 81 LD]

FRANCE-NIGER COMMISSION ENDS MEETINGS IN PARIS

AB070616 Niamey Domestic Service in French 1900 GMT 6 Nov 81

[Excerpts] President Seyni Kountche's stay in Paris is coming to an end. The head of state attended the French-African summit which has ended in the capital. Today, the chairman of the Supreme Military Council had a luncheon followed by private talks with President Francois Mitterrand. Apart from the visit of the head of state, the meeting of the French-Niger Joint Commission of Cooperation is taking place in Paris. According to our special envoy to Paris, Mamadou Mahoumane, the meeting of the joint commission has ended; he gives details: The closing ceremony was presided over by our minister of foreign affairs and cooperation, Daouda Diallo, in the presence of his counterpart, Jean-Pierre Cot. Mr Diallo expressed satisfaction over the seriousness with which the meeting was approached. He also underscored the great interest France has in our problems. Your government's policy, Mr Diallo told Mr Cot, is in line with our aspirations.

[Begin Diallo recording] We have noted this friendship with pleasure but we were not surprised in fact. This is because Niger has never lacked friendship and availability. Now we are observing your government's policy and I can say that it accords with our own beliefs and concerns: development in cooperation and cooperation in friendship and in the mutual respect of partners. The Paris appeal by President Mitterrand on the occasion of the French-African summit, which has just ended, demonstrates all his generosity and also his clear conception of the problems of this world as well as the future of humanity. We are happy to hear President Mitterrand reaffirm on several occasions these convictions on behalf of France. I wish to express our satisfaction about the exchange of views we have had during the last 2 days with the French delegation within a framework of cooperation and we are convinced that the friendship between France and Niger will be further strengthened. [end recording]

In reply to Mr Diallo, Minister for Cooperation Mr Cot stated that priority will be given to transport and telecommunications problems:

[Begin Cot recording] Fellow ministers for foreign affairs and for planning, I would first of all, on behalf of the French delegation, like to express our satisfaction with the work (?we have done) with you during the last few days within the framework of this joint commission, so I was able to participate fully in its meeting. What I mean is that it seems to me that the two delegations viewed the cooperation between Niger and France not only with all seriousness but I will rather say with a political awareness. This is because friendship and solidarity between our two countries has always existed and has been further strengthened during the summit of French and African heads of state held earlier. I also noted the concern of the two delegations to adhere to these priorities. I am happy that our cooperation in the field of rural development is not only efficient but has further been strengthened following this meeting, especially as this was the main topic on which agreements were reached. We also gave priority to transport and telecommunications. These are priority development projects which are essential for Niger, a vast "land-locked" country [words indistinct]. [end recording] Minister of Planning Brah Mamane also attended the meeting. The next meeting of the commission will be held in Niamey.

TALKS YIELD CLOSER FRENCH-ALGERIAN RELATIONS

LD081632 Paris Domestic Service in French 1600 GMT 8 Nov 81

[Text] Talks between the Socialist Party [PS] and the Algerian National Liberation Front [FLN] have come to an end. Three weeks prior to Francois Mitterrand's official visit to Algiers, French-Algerian relations have become closer. The two sides reaffirmed their wish to contribute to the building of a harmonious Mediterranean ensemble freed of any relations of domination and exploitation. On the Western Sahara issue, the PS and the FLN called for the opening of negotiations between Morocco and the Polisario Front.

OFFICIAL ON 'TENSE' SITUATION IN NEW CALEDONIA

LD081036 Paris Domestic Service in French 0800 GMT 8 Nov 81

[Text] Calm has returned to New Caledonia following yesterday's violent demonstrations. No one was injured, but a few dozen shop windows were broken in Noumea's streets. And then the day ended with a bomb attack at the foot of the high Lorraine cross monument in the town. This attack has shocked public opinion, and tension remains high in this French overseas territory.

In Paris the secretary of state for overseas departments and territories has condemned the provocations, recalling that the government is ready to introduce important reforms on the island. Henri Emmanualli has spoken to (Sylvain Augier):

[Begin Emmanualli recording] This kind of trouble occurred 2 years ago in Noumea on the occasion of police controls at that time, and this time has been a demonstration of dislike for the police chief. As I have already told you, the situation is tense and in this situation some people have found it expedient to organize provocations. I'll give you a detail that may have escaped the observers' attention, which is that young people who took part in this kind of trouble-making have been very, very young.

[Augier] Does this not mean that a more serious crisis is simmering beneath these events?

[Emmanuelli] My reply to this is clear: The crisis is not simmering; the crisis is open and has been open for some time already. I do not say that everything is going well, that there is no problem, but what happened yesterday came as a very big surprise.

I have already warned the communities living in New Caledonia of the fact that there would probably be people who would try to organize provocations, and I believe that I have pointed out to all concerned that these provocations would be harmful, whatever their objective. [end recording]

Cabinet To Define Policy

LD101102 Paris Domestic Service in French 0700 GMT 10 Nov 81

[Text] The two main political leaders of New Caledonia were received at the Elysee yesterday. The vice president of the Government Council and the president of the Territorial Assembly have requested that the government quickly define its policy regarding this overseas territory. A restricted cabinet meeting will be held, by the way, later today on this subject.

Following the troubles over the weekend 8 demonstrators have been sentenced in Noumea to prison terms of 1-3 months, and 10 other people have been charged.

Noumea is preparing its own 11 November celebration, and our special correspondent Alain Menargue reports from there:

[Menargue] Here there is expectation in a calm and determined mood. Expectation with the preparation of the 11 November demonstration, a peaceful and fraternal demonstration of those who want to remain attached to France. On the same day at the other end of the town there will be another demonstration, this by advocates of independence. Both movements are focusing on Paris. One side, in the person of the mayor of French Noumea, has denounced, I quote, the authorities' lack of firmness in connection with the weekend's events and asks the government to implement the law of the republic. The other side, relying on certain statements emanating from ministries, wants the government to start proceedings leading to independence. Their representatives were received at the Elysee last week, and it is from there that the decisions of this afternoon's meeting of ministers are awaited. Because of the time differences, they will be known here tomorrow morning, just before the demonstrations.

CUBANS URGE MORE IMPORTS TO REDRESS TRADE BALANCE

PM090959 Paris LE MONDE in French 23 Oct 81 p 30

[Text] Hector Rodriguez Llompart, Cuban minister president of the State Committee for Economic Cooperation (equivalent of the Foreign Trade Ministry), had a meeting with Prime Minister Mauroy recently. Mr Llompart, who headed the Cuban delegation to the sixth joint French-Cuban Commission meeting in Paris on 13 and 14 October, discussed with the Prime Minister the size of the trade deficit between France and Cuba (Fr852 million in 1980 to Havana's detriment). He asked France to increase its imports of Cuban products, especially sugar. Trade between the two countries remains at a modest level, while producing a growing deficit to the Caribbean island's disadvantage, Fr20 million in 1979, Fr852 million in 1980 and Fr502 million for the first 6 months of 1981. This result is due to the execution of several industrial projects entrusted to French enterprises like the Jatibonico Pulp and Paper Mill (Creusot-Loire Enterprises) and the Matanzas Thermal Power Station (Alsthom-Atlantique).

The Cuban authorities are worried about this deficit, the Quai Branly ministry notes. They want to see it compensated for by greater credit facilities, more readiness to accept their traditional products (rum, money, tuna fish and textiles) and by a more open French attitude to the international sugar agreements. On this point France "at present reserves its position and will continue to do so while this convention fails to work toward establishing a real system of regulatory stocking, which alone can meet the exporting countries' need for stable prices."

CUBA'S ARMANDO HART ARRIVES IN PARIS FOR TALKS

FL070289 Havana Domestic Service in Spanish 2230 GMT 6 Nov 81

[Text] Paris -- Armando Hart Davalos, minister of culture and member of the Politburo of the Communist Party of Cuba, arrived in the capital today by invitation of his counterpart Jack Lang.

The Cuban officer will open a Cuban book exposition of some 800 titles this coming Monday. Hart was greeted at Orly Airport by Jean Paul Gelabaire, in charge of the mission attached to the Ministry of Culture, who welcomed him to France on Lang's behalf.

He was also met at the terminal by Cuban Ambassador Gregorio Ortega and other officers of the Cuban Embassy in Paris. The Cuban Minister of Culture will proceed with planned visits to different places of cultural interest, it was reported.

MITTERRAND PRAISES SUDAN'S 'PRUDENT' POLICY

JN061603 Khartoum SUNA in Arabic 1455 GMT 6 Nov 81

[Text] Paris, 6 Nov (SUNA) — President Francois Mitterrand has praised Sudan's prudent policy, which calls for renouncing wars and solving problems politically for the sake of security and stability in the African continent. He stated this upon receiving Foreign Minister Muhammad Mirghani Mubarak yesterday evening.

The foreign minister conveyed to the president a message from President Ja'far Muhammad Numayri on bilateral relations and all current African issues. President Mitterrand asked the foreign minister to convey a special message to President Numayri.

BRIEFS

ROCKET LAUNCH -- The fourth test launching of the Ariane rocket has been postponed by 4 days. It will now take place on 18 December. All of this is because of a strike at the Toulouse Space Center which has lasted 10 days. [Text] [Paris Domestic Service in French 1300 GMT 9 Nov 81 LD]

INDIA'S GANDHI ARRIVES FOR VISIT, MEETS SPADOLINI

AU091734 Rome ANSA in French 1623 GMT 9 Nov 81

[Text] Rome, 9 Nov (ANSA) -- Indian Prime Minister Mrs Indira Gandhi arrived in Rome this morning on a 4-day official visit to Italy. The Indian prime minister was met on arrival at the airport by Italian Prime Minister Giovanni Spadolini and Minister of Foreign Affairs Emilio Colombo. Mrs Gandhi and Mr Spadolini had a first exchange of views on the international situation in one of the airport's reception rooms.

Half an hour later, Mr Spadolini and Mr Colombo had to take their leave of Mrs Gandhi in order to fly to London for the Italian-British summit. The Italian-Indian talks with Mrs Indira Gandhi -- who today will be received by the pope and immediately afterwards will make a speech at the opening of the 21st FAO conference -- will resume tomorrow afternoon and continue on Wednesday morning.

During her stay, Mrs Gandhi will also be received by Italian head of state Sandro Pertini. Next Thursday, she leaves Rome for Paris. It is worth mentioning that this is the first official visit to Italy by an Indian prime minister.

During their brief talk at Fiumicino Airport, Mrs Gandhi and Mr Spadolini mainly discussed the difficult dialogue between the industrial and developing countries, which has become particularly topical after the Cancun summit and the Italian initiative to fight hunger in the world. The Indian prime minister expressed her government's warm appreciation for this Italian initiative.

During their meetings tomorrow and Wednesday, Mrs Gandhi and Mr Spadolini and Mr Colombo will also discuss -- aside from the great issues of international life -- issues concerning bilateral economic cooperation. This is a field in which, following the complementary nature of the two economies, relations between India and Italy are on the point of developing at a steady rate.

The trade exchange between the two countries recorded a $16.8 million deficit for Italy in 1980. During the first 6 months of this year, the trend was in the opposite direction; compared to the same period in 1980, the balance was positive for Italy and recorded a $18.3 million surplus.

Gandhi Interview

AU090913 Rome ANSA in English 0815 GMT 9 Nov 81

[Text] Rome, 9 Nov (ANSA) -- The recent North-South summit conference in Cancun, Mexico, called to coordinate relations between the world's rich and poor nations already attained the first result through "the simple fact that it was able to keep the door open" Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi stated in an interview published here by the daily "LOTTA CONTINUA" a newspaper [words indistinct]. She also spoke in reference to current conflicts in her area of the world and noted that "personally I am convinced that the Soviet Union would prefer to withdraw from Afghanistan. The Soviets surely are not content to remain trapped in that country," Gandhi observed.

Concerning India's non-aligned position, the New Delhi government leader stated that she did not believe that "(this position) has been weakened or in any way altered by the friendship treaty signed with the Soviet Union last August."

Speaking on conditions inside India, Gandhi affirmed that democracy "is not in danger" in India and, on the development level, she maintained that much has been done for the nation since its independence, even if "looking at what must be accomplished, the road still seems long and difficult."

On Italian-Indian relations, Gandhi confirmed that "trade exchanges, while remaining insufficient, have been intensified and can still grow. India has 212 industrial cooperation projects with Italy, and many of the recent offers by Italian companies will be taken into consideration and evaluated by our government" Gandhi said.

SPADOLINI SCHEDULES VISITS TO LONDON, PARIS

NC071709 Paris AFP in English 1657 GMT 7 Nov 81

[Text] Rome, 7 Nov (AFP) -- Italian Premier Giovanni Spadolini will have talks with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher in London on Monday, and will visit Paris on Friday, official sources announced here today. The two trips are part of a series of bilateral meetings between European heads of state prior to the European Council in London on November 26 and 27. Informed sources said Mr Spadolini would be testing the British reaction to an Italian initiative, backed by West Germany, for increased European political cooperation, particularly in the fields of [word indistinct] and culture.

They said the two leaders would also discuss the U.S.-Soviet Euro-missile talks scheduled for November 30 in Geneva, as well as East-West relations, the Middle East, the North-South summit and Poland, which Mr Spadolini will visit soon.

They said Mr Spadolini would also raise the Italian initiative for an international campaign against hunger, which he will discuss during a meeting Indian Premier Indira Gandhi on Monday before leaving for London. Mr Spadolini will be accompanied on the trip by Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo, who will meet British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington.

PCI'S BERLINGUER ON U.S. WAR PLANS, POLAND

PM091213 Rome LA REPUBBLICA in Italian 24 Oct 81 p 3

[Rudolfo Brancoli 23 October interview in Managua with PCI Secretary General Enrico Berlinguer: "Neither Reagan nor Brezhnev; PCI for a Europe Fighting for Peace"]

[Excerpts] [Question] The superpowers express their anxieties regarding security in the face of any change. Do you not believe that this increases the need for the protagonists of change on the scale of the one that has taken place in Nicaragua to demonstrate their ability to properly safeguard their own autonomy?

[Answer] The increasing tension between the two major powers is leading to an extension of conflicts even in areas hitherto unaffected. I believe that the underlying reasons for the U.S. interventionist policy in Central and South America are different, that the U.S. administration in fact wants to prevent the development of democratic processes of social change because it believes that they could obstruct U.S. economic and political interests. Of course, a more sensible policy -- and I believe that there are forces in the United States that want this -- could turn the liberation movements developing in Latin Awerica away from the temptation to closer relations of alignment with the USSR and toward maintaining their own autonomous development stance. This would facilitate the emergence of more open-minded and far-sighted stances in the United States.

Obviously, there are security problems both for the United States and for the Soviet Union, and for the other major powers too. These requirements must be taken into account in resolving any interstate conflict. I repeat, however, that unless moderating forces intervene and thus help to reduce the tension between the two major powers, these anxieties regarding their own security threaten to prompt an uncontrolled arms race, uncontrollable because of the very strength of the new military technology.

[Question] But according to Reagan it should even be possible to control a nuclear conflict, that is, limit it to the European theater....

[Answer] Despite belated denials during the past few hours, it seems to me that the alarm prompted such irresponsible statements is entirely justified. Personally, I do not believe in the possibility of nuclear wars remaining limited -- still less in Europe -- but in any case what I cannot understand is how it is possible to consider reassuring the Europeans, who should live rather than die in this theater of limited nuclear war, by airing such a possibility. Moreover, I am not sure why such a theory has been put forward, because if the aim is to reassure, then there has been no reassurance and indeed the causes for concern are increased and rendered well founded. Furthermore, if this is an eventuality that is starting to be taken into consideration, clearly things are even more serious and distrubing.

[Question] In Poland there has been another change in the communist party leadership. What significance do you attach to this development?

[Answer] It is a little difficult for me to make an assessment from so far away and without a detailed knowledge of the situation and of the actual nature of the changes that have taken place. I am still convinced that a political solution must be found in Poland, that any solution based on force -- not only foreign but even domestic -- would be disastrous for Poland and would have grievous consequences not only in Europe but also in other parts of the world and that a political solution can only be found by establishing cooperation among the fundamental forces active within Polish society, namely the communist party, the trade unions and the church. An understanding of this kind, which develops a process of renewal and isolates the extremist tendencies that exist in the various sectors that I mentioned can, I believe, represent a hope of a start to a solution -- which will undoubtedly be arduous, because we are all aware of the economic difficulties.

For this very reason, it is necessary to avoid a clash between opposing extremes, to use an expression used in Italy with a connotation that we rejected at the time.

[Question] Do you not believe that here too the West European democratic forces have a role to play basically not unlike the one that you mentioned in relation to the other areas of the world?

[Answer] Yes. I believe that in the United States and some West European countries there are reactionary forces that want a disaster to occur in Poland. Not only to gain further material for anticommunist propaganda but also as a basis for dangerous initiatives in other parts of the world. Nevertheless, I believe that on the whole, West European government action has been fairly responsible, in other words, the majority of European political forces -- apart from particular reactionary groups -- have not acted to exacerbate the situation in Poland.

I also believe that this need is fairly broadly recognized in the United States too. But clearly particular importance in this direction is invested in the action of the leftwing and democratic forces, which are additionally anxious to see a start made on a positive solution in Poland. A process of socialist renewal could also proceed from that country, and this could clearly benefit the struggle of socialism in Europe and the world. On the other hand, obviously, a disaster in Poland would create very major difficulties for all the forces in Europe and throughout the world aiming at a transformation in a socialist direction.

EANES, PSP AIDES MEET WITH PCF SECRETARY GENERAL

PM090859 Paris L'HUMANITE in French 31 Oct 81 p 6

[Excerpts] Lisbon, 30 Oct -- Portuguese President General Eanes received Georges Marchais for over an hour late Friday morning. On his way out of the Belem Palace the PCF secretary general described the meeting as "very important" and noted in particular that the two speakers "expressed mutual satisfaction" with their relations. Beforehand, Georges Marchais had met with the speaker of the assembly of the republic, Mr Oliveira Dias, a member of the Social Democratic Center Party (rightist), and several parliamentary groups including those of the Communist Party and Socialist Party. Friday evening a meeting was held in the center of the Portuguese capital. Alvaro Cunhal and Georges Marchais delivered speeches there. We will report this demonstration and the PCF delegation's trip to Alentejo in forthcoming issues.

The Eanes-Marchais tete-a-tete was not supposed to last more than 30 minutes, it was announced at noon from within the president's entourage. It lasted slightly over an hour, which is not customary at Belem Palace. On his way out the PCF secretary general stated: "It was a very important meeting. We discussed the situation in France and Portugal. President Eanes displayed great interest in our domestic and foreign policy prospects. The questions he asked attest to a deep knowledge of French life. Of course, I answered all these questions and reaffirmed to him the desire of the new majority to contribute to the development of French-Portuguese immigrants in France. The president was kind enough to tell me about the situation in his country. Finally, we expressed mutual satisfaction with our relations based on the two peoples' mutual interests." Finally Georges Marchais met with the Socialist parliamentary group. Portuguese journalists wondered who would take part in this meeting: Salgado Zenha, the group's president, in disagreement with Mario Soares' political line and removed from the leading bodies at the recent congress, or Almeida Santos, the group's vice president and a member of the Socialist Party Political Commission? To everyone's great surprise, it appears, these two parliamentarians, surrounded by other Socialist deputies, received the PCF delegation together.

After Georges Marchais had informed his interlocutors of developments in the French political situation and cooperation between the Socialists and Communists in the government, Salgado Zenha stated:

"We wish you great success. We cannot copy French solutions, but what is happening in your country is causing repercussions in Portugal. Your successes will be very important for us. Your setbacks too. With regard to Portugal," Salgado Zenha continued, "Let's say that the Socialist Party's position has not been defined. French-style solutions do not seem applicable to Portugal. But I personally am opposed to the idea that the Portuguese Communist Party should be kept in a ghetto. I am in favor of dialogue with the communists to handle solutions together."

BASQUE LEFT DIVIDED, CARRILLO'S VIEWS NOTED

PM091527 Barcelona LA VANGUARDIA in Spanish 3 Nov 81 p 9

[Excerpt] Bilbao, 2 Nov -- The "Ormazabal sector" of the Communist Party of the Basque Country [EPK/PCE], which is opposed to the current process of convergence with the Basque Revolutionary Party [EIA], will hold a congress 22 November to elect the party's new leadership bodies, according to what was decided yesterday at a meeting held by this current, which was attended by Carrillo, Sartorius and Ballesteros of the PCE.

This congress' aims will be to confirm the resolutions of the fourth regional congress and of the 10th national PCE congress, while at the same time the rules will be amended. In his speech Carrillo said that the PCE fully supports the EPK's Provisional Committee. He played down the "Lertxundi sector's" secession, and criticized the process of convergence conducted by the EPK secretary general. "What Lertxundi has contrived is a poorly effected merger which has thwarted the possible unity of the left. All the slanders and insults which have beenhurled over the last few days come from those who until recently were flattering us."

He stated that those who have promoted the current merger with EIA "are brilliant people but remote from the grassroots, who have prepared that convergence form their offices."

At a subsequent press conference Carrillo said that the PCE is in favor of a merger with the Basque left but disagrees totally with the method employed by Lertxundi, which has excluded the grassroots. The PCE secretary general said that Lertxundi is responsible for having thwarted a very important historic opportunity for achieving the unity of the Basque left. He recalled that as long ago as 1968 the EPK/PCE proposed a merger among revolutionary sectors of Basque Fatherland and Liberty [ETA], and so "we understand the process of convergence better than Lertxundi." With respect to what is going to happen in the Workers Commissions, Tomas Tueros -- secretary general of that trade union in the Basque Country -- said that "Everybody who works against the decisions and resolutions adopted at the last congress will be immediately expelled from the trade union." Ramon Ormazabal stated that unity of the left has been thwarted by Lertxundi's separatist sector. The "Carrilloist" leader asserted that about 3,000 out of 4,500 party members have declared themselves in favor of the Provisional Central Committee appointed by the PCE from Madrid.

Lertxundi Replies

For his part, Roberto Lertxundi has described as slanderous Carrillo's statements on the negotiations with EIA. "For Carrillo to say that we have negotiated with the Basque left behind the Communist Party's back is, to say the least, a slander." "We talked with Carrillo in June and informed him of our inentions, which he categorically opposed, asserting that he would give the Ormazabal sector his full support. After that, Carrillo would not expect us to inform him of all our actions." Rebutting Ormazabal, Lertxundi said that, according to his estimates, only 30 percent of members support the Provisional Central Committee.

The Central Committee of the Lertxundi sector of the EPK has called a special congress in two stages, which will take place 15 November and 8 December.

PSUC EXECUTIVE CALLS FOR SPECIAL PARTY CONGRESS

PM061151 Barcelona LA VANGUARDIA in Spanish 1 Nov 81 p 26

[Excerpts] The Unified Socialist Party of Catalonia [PSUC] special congress will be held in 3 months, according to the communique issued by the party's Executive Committee at the conclusion of tis meeting Friday. The "Eurocommunists" believe that the congress will serve to clarify finally the situation in the party and win back lost members.

The communique states that the Executive Committee will submit to the Central Committee meeting scheduled for 7-8 November a proposal for calling a special congress, to be held as soon as the party rules allow, which according to them, would be in about 3 months. The new special congress will therefore take place a year after the fifth ordinary congress, which involved the abandonment of Eurocommunism.

Only Way

The Executive Committee believes that the situation in the party, "exacerbated recently by various internal confrontations and by individual and collective stances contrary to leadership bodies' decisions, renders unavoidable and necessary the calling of the congress. "At present," it adds, "only a congress can end the current situation, restoring the democratic and organizational functioning characteristic of a communist party, in order to clarify our Eurocommunist strategy and fully reaffirm our identity as a national and class party."

To this effect the communique adds that the Executive Committee will submit to the Central Committee a political report, "based on the decisions of the fifth congress and the fourth conference, which will make it possible to achieve this clarification and represent a proposal of mass and institutional political action for the workers and people of Catalonia."

Firmness

The Executive Committee will also make a proposal concerning the rules and another concerning the composition of the leadership bodies which the congress must elect. It also fully reaffirms the 27 October resolution and will request the Central Committee to take opportune measures for its implementation. To this effect it reiterates "its most determined intention to counter over the coming period any individual or collective action or statement that violates the party rules."

Lose 2,000 to win back 5,000

According to "Eurocommunist" sources consulted by EUROPA PRESS, "the PSUC should lose 2,000 pro-Soviet members, because in this way it will win back 5,000 Eurocommunists who have left the party." Members of that sector of the PSUC believe that the holding of a special congress will be positive because it will finally clarify the current situation.

For their part, sectors which describe themselves as "hardline" because they reject being called "pro-Soviet" have stated that "these Eurocommunists have clearly broken the rules of democratic centralism. They have been plotting since the holding of the fifth congress, at which they lost their positions. Now, with the holding of the Baix Llobregat conference, they have withdrawn from meetings because they disagreed with the majority vote, which was contrary to their viewpoints."

Both the Eurocommunist sectors and the "hardliners" are convinced that they will win at a special party congress.

NATION CAPABLE OF PRODUCING 10 ATOMIC BOMBS A YEAR

LD091631 Madrid in Spanish to Europe 1400 GMT 9 Nov 81

[Text] Spain has the technology and sufficient capability to make 10 atomic bombs a year, according to a report published today in the daily DIARIO 16 in Madrid. The paper, quoting sources in the Nuclear Energy Council, stresses that such production would presuppose the political will for undertaking a military program of this kind. More than a year ago, the then minister of defense, Agustin Rodriguez Sahagun, said in Paris that Spain could manufacture its own bomb and recalled that our country had refused to sign the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty. Last September, the present minister, Alberto Oliart, told a group of foreign newsmen that Spain did not sign the treaty and that this would allow us to develop our own atomic bombs on our territory if it became necessary.

FINLAND

VIROLAINEN ON FOREIGN POLICY, NUCLEAR-FREE ZONE

PM091549 Helsinki HUFVUDSTADSBLADET in Swedish 5 Nov 81 p 9

[Excerpt] In the future too the makers of foreign policy will continue to follow the Paasikivi-Kekkonen line exactly as before. Our position with regard to foreign policy has been stabilized thanks chiefly to the friendship, cooperation and mutual assistance treaty with the Soviet Union, and the fact that the pact has twice been renewed -- in 1955 and 1970 -- shows that it expresses the interests of both parties.

Parliamentary speaker Johannes Virolainen made these assertions in a major foreign policy speech to the Paasikivi Society in Vantaa on Wednesday [4 November]. Virolainen, who together with Dr Ahti Karjalainen is fighting to become the Center Party's presidential candidate, concentrated solely on foreign policy and related questions, such as foreign trade, cooperation with the developing countries and defense policy.

Virolainen said that the pact with the Soviet Union has the aim of keeping Finland and its geopolitical environs outside the major powers' strategic plans and outside international conflicts. Through changing situations the pact's fundamental commitments have fully retained their importance, Virolainen said, and pointed especially to the fact that neither of the parties has ever wanted to change even a comma or a period in the text.

Virolainen also drew his audience's attention to the fact that in all respects the pact forms a support for Finland's relations with the Soviet Union and that it gives these relations continuity and a stability.

Good and close relations with the Soviet Union do not of course exclude good relations with other countries too, Virolainen stated further, and pointed in particular to Finland's relations with the other Nordic countries.

"Nordicism, the feeling of Nordic kinship, is an inseparable part of our history, background, culture, our social system, our economic system, our customs, laws and our religion," he said.

In this connection Virolainen also noted the various security policy solutions which the Nordic countries had chosen, and stressed that it is of the utmost importance for Finland that both Norway and Denmark still insist on their own conditions regarding certain limits to their NATO membership.

According to Virolainen, it is also of vital importance for Finland that the situation in the Nordic countries remain stable and calm despite the worsening international situation.

"Here President Kekkonen's proposal for a nuclear-free zone in the Nordic countries plays a decisive role," Virolainen said. In his view this zone is one of the main objectives of Finnish security policy. "We have accpeted that it is our task to promote the idea of a Nordic nuclear-free zone with all the means at our disposal," he said.

USSR PLACES 'SIGNIFICANT' ORDER FOR SHIPS

PM091349 Helsinki HUFVUDSTADSBLADET in Swedish 24 Oct 81 p 17

[Excerpts] Turku -- Raumo-Repola's Nystad Shipyard has received a significant order from the Soviet Union's Sudoimports for two large 7,800-horsepower oceangoing salvage tugs for delivery in 1984. The order will mean that the shipyard will have full employment for the whole intervening period and will even need to take on more workers.

The ships are intended for operations under ocean conditions and will also be strongly reinforced for use in ice. Since they will have to work effectively as salvage vessels they will have a full complement of equipment for diving, pumping and firefighting. They will be able to get very close to burning ships because they will themselves be protected by an effective curtain of water. They will have four efficient water cannons on board, one positioned on top of a telescopic mast.

The diving equipment will facilitate diving to a depth of 60 meters. The pumping out of disabled vessels will be possible through the use of efficient floating pumps, to which [illegible] will be able to supply electricity [illegible].

BRIEFS

VISIT TO USSR -- A Social Democratic Party delegation left today for the Soviet Union at the invitation of the CPSU. It is headed by Party Secretary Erkki Liikanen. The delegation's visit will last a week and is expected to include political discussions with CPSU officials. [Text] [Helsinki Domestic service in Finnish 1700 GMT 8 Nov 81 LD]

NORWAY

EVENSEN STRIPPED OF FOREIGN MINISTRY DUTIES

PM061537 Oslo ARBEIDERBLADET in Norwegian 28 Oct 81 p 3

[Excerpt] The Conservative government's political leadership has deprived Ambassador Jens Evensen of the possibiility of continuing as leader of the various bilateral negotiations in which he has been involved on behalf of the Foreign Ministry. On Tuesday [26 October] Foreign Minister Svenn Stray informed Ambassador Evensen of the government's position, which also means that Evensen is excluded from the work on the question of nuclear-free zones.

Minister Stray did not want to say why the former Labor Party minister will not be allowed to continue as the leader of Norway's delegation in bilateral negotiations covering territorial waters demarcation and fishing disputes, but pointed out that it is an internal matter for the Foreign Minister and the government.

Stray told ARBEIDERBLADET that Evensen will no longer lead the bilateral negotiations on territorial waters demarcation questions, but he can continue his work at the International Law of the Sea Conference, which is of a multilateral nature.

DEFENSE MINISTER COMMENTS ON SOVIET SUB INCIDENT

PM091607 Oslo AFTENPOSTEN in Norwegian 6 Nov 81 p 8

[Text] "My first reactions to the announcement that the Soviet submarine had nuclear arms on board were surprise and shock," Defense Minister Anders C. Sjaastad said in a comment to AFTENPOSTEN. "This makes the violation of Swedish territory much more serious than had been thought at first."

"What is also surprising," Sjaastad went on, "is that older submarines like this on voyages like this would seem to have torpedoes with nuclear warheads on board, which must indicate that nuclear arms form part of the standard equipment on the majority of Soviet submarines.

"My next reaction is that episodes like this help to further undermine the value of Soviet guarantees could have, both with regard to the proposal for a nuclear-free zone in the Nordic countries and to the old Soviet proposal for the Baltic as a sea of peace.

"Third, I ask myself what this will mean for Norwegian security," Sjaastad said. "For many years we have had reports of foreign submarines in Norwegian waters. Some of these reports have very probably meant that submarines have in fact violated Norwegian territorial boundaries. After the episode in the Sognefjord a few years ago, when a foreign submarine was very probably 'visiting' there, the Norwegian instructions for dealing with such violations were revised. The rules which are now in force are more stringent that the older ones and call for resolute behavior from Norway."

"According to these instructions Norwegian waters are divided into an outer and an inner zone. In the outer zone Norwegian forces will behave with greater restraint, since violations in this zone could be the result of navigational error. In the inner zone close to the coast, where navigational errors can be dismissed as an explanation, the rules provide for forcing submarines to the surface by direct attack," Defense Minister Sjaastad said.

NORDIC DEFENSE MINISTERS CONFER IN OSLO

PM100945 Oslo AFTENPOSTEN in Norwegian 29 Oct 81 p 5

[Text] "The UN 'debt' to the Nordic countries for their participation in peacekeeping operations will soon excede $100 million," Danish Defense Minister Anders C. Sjaastad said -- as did his Nordic colleagues -- that the point has not yet been reached at which for economic reasons the Nordic countries would refrain from taking part in this important peacekeeping work.

The Nordic countries -- with the exception of Iceland -- are involved in the form of either troops or observers in UN operations in the Middle East, Kashmir and Cyprus. The economic situation is particularly worrying for the latter forces, which are based on voluntary financial contributions from UN member states.

In a communique after yesterday's talks the Nordic defense ministers expressed their satisfaction with the ceasefire arrangement for southern Lebanon reached in July, with the support of both Israel and the PLO. The defense ministers think that it is particularly important that the UN forces there -- which involve both Norway and Sweden -- be equipped to take control over the whole of their area of operation right up to the international border between Israel and Lebanon.

Defense Minister Suaastad told AFTENPOSTEN that the government will look further into the question of what can be done by Norway to bring about such control.

The four defense ministers were yesterday briefed on a number of concrete cooperation issues, including the work of the Nordic group for UN military questions.

Today the Nordic defense ministers will visit first the defense forces school in Droebak and then a demonstration at the Oscarsborg fortress in Oslo Fjord.

SWEDEN

SOVIET OFFICIAL COMMENTS ON SUBMARINE INCIDENT

LD091854 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 1700 GMT 9 Nov 81

[Excerpt] [Announcer] Today came the first Soviet comment from official quarters to the developments in the submarine affair.

A high Soviet military official has declared that the stranding in the Blekinge Archipelago was due to a navigational error. The allegation that the submarine was engaged in espionage is laughable, and the reports about nuclear weapons on board seem to have invented by some ill-disposed person, it resembles the work of the U.S. intelligence service, the CIA.

This has been stated by Daniil Protektor, a Soviet military expert and head of research at the Institute of World Economics and International Relations in Moscow. [name and title as heard] Our Oslo correspondent, Lisa Karlsson, met him today.

[Karlsson] Like the Soviet authorities, Colonel Protektor stressed that it was due to navigational errors and faults with the instruments onboard that the submarine came right into a military restricted area in Blekinge. Accidents happen both to people and submarines, and especially when a vessel is as old as this one. Many peculiar things can happen. To talk about espionage in this connection is laughable, Daniil Protektor thinks. Satellites provide all the information that the Soviet Union needs today. The fact that the Soviet authorities did not deny the reports that the submarine probably had nuclear weapons onboard was clearly a piece of news for the military expert, but he declared that the reports about nuclear weapons are so absurd and meaningless that they are probably not considered worth a denial:

[Begin Protektor recording in Russian] I would say that this accusation is so absurd that it is simply not worth denying. [end recording]

[Karlsson] Daniil Protektor dismissed the fact that the measurements by Swedish experts showed that there was uranium-238 onboard the submarine. Faulty measurements or false information may be behind it, he thinks. Moreover, all the attention devoted to the affair in the West indicates deliberate false information. Someone who wants to harm detente is behind the rumors about nuclear weapons onboard the submarine, according to Daniil Protektor.

PAPERS COMMENT ON SUBMARINE AFFAIR

PM041153 [Editorial Report] Stockholm's SVENSKA DAGBLADET and DAGENS NYHETER of 29 October both carry short page 2 editorials on the grounded Soviet submarine in the restricted military area in the Belkinge Archipelago outside Karlskrona. Both dismiss the Soviet claims that the submarine was where it was through radar failure or navigational error, because it is not the first time foreign submarines have been sighted in Swedish territorial waters. Although it is the first time one has been caught. SVENSKA DAGBLADET concludes its editorial:

"From the Swedish viewpoint the situation is undeniably a little embarrassing. We have been given an indication of the effectiveness of the Swedish coastguard. The submarine had to run aground and sit there for 12 hours before the Swedish defense forces discovered that a foreign military unit was not only on Swedish territory but actually in the middle of fortified installations in a restricted military area.

"We should draw some conclusions. It goes without saying that other nations are doing so.

"In the spontaneous anger one feels in the fact of the Soviet Union's behavior one must nevertheless feel some satisfaction about the improved knowledge of this superpower's activities along the inside of Sweden's borders. Perhaps the incident gives some cause for reconsideration among those who more or less ignore the Soviet Union in order to make their security policy equations balance."

And DAGENS NYHETER, in its Olof Santesson editorial, states:

"There is no reason to exaggerate what has happened. Things are serious enough already without speculating in advance about possible complications. In principle "national vessels" enjoy immunity, but this can hardly exclude the possibility that the Soviet commander must be interrogated.

"Sweden has absolutely no reason to give in to possible strong language from the Soviet Union. How well we deal with such a remarkable case as this, is of greater importance for the credibility of the Swedish defense forces than a lot of what has been discussed in recent months."

THATCHER REJECTS ISRAELI CONDITION FOR SINAI FORCE

LD092028 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1950 GMT 9 Nov 81

[Text] Western Europe's contribution to a Sinai peacekeeping force after the Israelis withdraw next year may be in doubt.

Plans for a joint European force in the peninsula seemed to have hit a snag tonight when Mrs Thatcher appeared to reject a condition laid down by Israeli Prime Minister Mr Menachem Begin.

This was that no country should link its decision to send troops with the Common Market Venice Declaration of June 1980. That advocated that the Palestine Liberation Organization should be involved in the Middle East peace process.

At a press conference in London tonight after talks at Downing Street with Italian Prime Minister Signor Giovanni Spadolini, Mrs Thatcher said: "The Venice Declaration is our position. We made it clear that the declaration would be complementary to the Camp David process."

Mrs Thatcher indicated the problem was serious. Talks are going on now in Washington to try to agree a basis for participation by Britain, France, Italy and the Netherlands. The peacekeeping force does not have to be in position, however, until March next year. It is being assembled at the request of the U.S. and will be part of the Camp David process under which Israel will hand back the final portion of the Sinai it holds to the Egyptians.

Separate talks took place today at the Foreign Office between Lord Carrington and Italian Foreign Minister Signor Columbo. They are thought to have discussed the peacekeeping difficulties in more detail. A reflection of developments was provided with the announcement that Mr Douglas Hurd, the Foreign Office minister responsible for the Middle East, would be flying to Washington on Wednesday to discuss the Sinai force with U.S. officials. He might also have a meeting with U.S. Secretary of State Mr Alexander Haig.

Mr Haig last week summoned British Ambassador Sir Nicholas Henderson and, according to reports in Washington, told Lord Carrington to "cool it" in his approach to the Middle East. This has not been confirmed in Whitehall, though Sir Nicholas is returning to London for consultations.

Mrs Thatcher, meanwhile, played down reported differences between the European powers and the U.S. over defence and the use of nuclear weapons. She said: "We are great friends with our trans-Atlantic allies. We do not see the differences. We wish to reaffirm the great friendship which does exist between Europe and the United States."

Europe, she said, was aiming for greater understanding, not division, with the Americans. Mrs Thatcher and Signor Spadolini also discussed the prospects for the Common Market summit due to be held in London at the end of November.

NOTT DISCUSSES NUCLEAR WARNING SHOT CONTROVERSY

LD091642 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1555 GMT 9 Nov 81

[Text] NATO has no plan to fire a nuclear warning shot to prevent an increase in the level of a war, Defence Secretary Mr John Nott said today. But there was a range of contingencies and a "thousand options" and a demonstration shot might be one of them, if Soviet aggression occurred. He was commenting on the controversy which last week followed statement by the American secretary of state, Mr Alexander Haig, to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that there were NATO contingency plans for firing a nuclear weapon as a warning.

This would be done if the other side was exceeding the limits of toleration in a conventional battle. The aim was to minimise violence. Mr Haig's statement was denied shortly afterwards by the U.S. defence secretary, Caspar Weinberger.

Speaking on today's BBC Radio Four's World at One programme, Mr Nott said: "I know of no plan to use nuclear weapons at all; such plans do not exist. We have no plan to fire a demonstration shot, but, of course, it's equally true to say there is a range of contingencies that have to be considered in the event of aggression by the Soviet Union." To maintain credibility, the number of contingencies was vast and it was impossible to say what they would be. A demonstration shot might well be one of a thousand options open to NATO, Mr Nott said. He added: "The idea of even a first glimpse of nuclear weapons is so horrific that none of us in the West could even contemplate such a thing."

He attacked the media for their treatment of this type of nuclear weapons story. "The highlighting of particular circumstances of this sort does nothing more than demoralise the West, and this is what concerns me," he said. "In debating these matters as we do all of us have a responsiblity to realise that the problems of democracy and all the glories of democracy and freedom which we're trying to defend are not problems which face the Soviets in their propaganda. "So my problem is that we all show the maximum degree of responsibility in supporting the freedom which NATO is trying to defend."

CARRINGTON 'ENDANGERS' MIDEAST PEACE PLAN

PM091615 London THE DAILY TELEGRAPH in English 9 Nov 81 p 16

[Editorial: "Carrington's Straddle"]

[Text] Lord Carrington is in danger of trying to be too clever over the Middle East. In his anxiety to boost the Saudi Arabian so-called "peace plan," he is endangering the prospects for successful completion of the Camp David peace process between Israel and Egypt. This has naturally upset the Americans, who are reported to have asked Lord Carrington to "cool it." The foreign secretary seems to be straddling both ways. He supports the proposal for troops from EEC countries (Britain, France, Italy and the Netherlands) to take part in the Sinai peace-keeping force, to be established after Israel's final withdrawal. But he wants to make it clear that this would not imply EEC approval for the whole Camp David agreements. Israel has said that any country which did not fully support the Camp David agreements would be disqualified from participating in the Sinai force. This worries Washington and Cairo, because they want European countries to participate, even though only with token forces (the total force will number only 2,500, of which nearly half will be American.) Lord Carrington's efforts to please the Saudis and the Palestine Liberation Organisation by maintaining that the EEC does not support Camp David -- while at the same time providing troops for Sinai -- has had the effect of throwing a shadow over the programme for Israel's final evacuation of Sinai by next April. This programme would be given absolute priority. Nothing else, for the time being, should be allowed to impede it.

BRIEFS

INDIAN FOREIGN MINISTER -- External Affairs Minister P.V. Narasimha Rao, now in London on a 3-day official visit, called on British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington. Reports quoting both British and Indian officials say it was a courtesy call and substantive talks between the two ministers would take place on Wednesday [11 November]. [Text] [Delhi Domestic Service in English 1530 GMT 9 Nov 81 BK]

SOVIET DELEGATION SIGNS ECONOMIC PROTOCOL 9 NOV

NC091858 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1730 GMT 9 Nov 81

[Text] Cyprus and the Soviet Union signed a protocol in Nicosia today within the framework of the existing agreement for economic and technical cooperation between the two countries. Mr Aristidhou, director general of the planning bureau, signed on behalf of Cyprus, and Mr (Dralo), first deputy director of the Department of Economic Cooperation of the State Committee for Foreign Economic Relations, signed on behalf of the Soviet Union.

Speaking during the signing ceremony, Mr (Dralo) stressed that with the signing of the protocol another step has been made to further develop the economic relations between the two countries, and expressed the belief that further development of economic cooperation will also contribute to closer friendly relations.

Mr Aristidhou said that the protocol includes all elements which, through suitable handling and the willingness existing on both sides for cooperation, will further promote the economic relations between the two countries.

PARLIAMENTARY DELEGATION LEAVES FOR SFRY 10 NOV

NC101102 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1000 GMT 10 Nov 81

[Text] An interparty parliamentary delegation, headed by House President Ladhas, left for Yugoslavia today on a 4-day official visit at the invitation of Dragoslav Markovic, President of the Federal Assembly of the Socialist Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. The delegation includes deputies Kourtelaris, Anastassiadhis, Galanos and Omirou.

In a statement before the delegation's departure, Mr Ladhas praised the two countries' friendly relations and stressed that these relations do not spring from common interests but from the two countries' devotion to the principles of the UN Charter and the nonaligned group, of which both countries are founding members.

In Yugoslavia the delegation will have talks with the president of the Federal Assembly and other parliamentarians on parliamentary issues as well as bilateral and international issues. The delegation will also brief the Yugoslav officials on all aspects of the Cyprus issue.

The delegation will also visit the Socialist Republic of Croatia, where it will hold talks with the president of the Croatian Republic Assembly and other Croatian officials.

COUNCIL ENDS DELIBERATION ON WALDHEIM IDEAS

NC091930 Nicosia Domestic Television Service in Greek 1830 GMT 9 Nov 81

[Text] The National Council met this afternoon under President of the Republic Kiprianou. The National Council continued and concluded the in-depth deliberations on the evaluation of the UN secretary general on the intercommunal talks. The deliberations started last Tuesday.

Today's meeting was attended by Chairman of the House of Representatives Ladhas; AKEL Secretary General Papaioannou and Assistant Secretary General Fandis; Chairman of the Democratic Rally [DISI] Kliridhis and Deputy Chairman Matsis; Chairman of the socialist party EDEK Lissaridhis and Secretary General Khatsidhimitriou; Secretary General of the Democratic Party [DIKO] Poskotis and Parliamentary representative Galanos. Also attending were Foreign Minister Rolandhis and interlocutor Ioannidhis. The advisers to the intercommunal talks did not attend today's meeting because Triandafillidhis is indisposed and Mrs Soulioti is overseas.

A statement issued after the National Council meeting mentions that during today's meeting the deliberations on the evaluation of the UN secretary general were concluded. The leaders of the parties, the statement adds, expressed their views and observations on the draft of a document of reply to the Waldheim evaluation. Waldheim's evaluation will be presented at the negotiations table. The statement concludes that the socialist party EDEK expressed the view that any reply ought to be given to the UN secretary general before the evaluation is presented.

ARCHBISHOP ANSWERS NEW DEMOCRACY CRITICISM

NC071003 Nicosia I ELEVTHEROTIPIA in Greek 7 Nov 81 p 1

[Excerpts] Archbishop Khrisostomos made a statement yesterday answering a recent statement from Mr Rallis' New Democracy Party which criticized the archbishop's sermon last Sunday.

Specifically, in his fresh statement, Archbishop Khrisostomos reiterates his position that "the church cannot ignore or be indifferent toward the dangers to the national existence of our congregation, that is of the people, and therefore," as the archbishop says, "the national issue is an issue which must concern the church." The archbishop then says that "it is natural that due to the dangers threatening Cyprus we turn our eyes to the motherland and particularly to its government for assistance." The archbishop adds that "unfortunately we do not think that official Greece has done so far what it should have done, or at least what the Greek Cypriots think that it should have done for this purpose." Therefore, it is not our mistake if official Greece failed to convince the Greek Cypriots that it was actually struggling alongside them, but on the contrary it has been convincing that it was working for a compromise that would free it from the troubles of the Cyprus problem.

"Of couse, we cannot say that the leadership of Greece has not given us any support. From 1974 to 1981 we were offered both economic and other aid that has substantively contributed to help the Greek Cypriots stand on their feet immediately after those tragic days which followed the Turkish invasion." In his statement, the archbishop also says that "the support which Cyprus is seeking from Greece is not economic but national in order to free its enslaved territories, to recover its ancestral homes and to consolidate on a permanent basis freedom and justice for all Cyprus."

The archbishop concludes: "Within a few days time the new prime minister, Mr Andreas Papandreou, succeeded in convincing the Greek Cypriots that not only the people but also Greece's responsible leadership will be struggling with them as of today -- in a dynamic and substantive way until vindication -- by placing the solution of the Cyprus problem as the first goal of their national policy. This is truth, and we must accept it regardless that many times truth is bitter. In any case, we have not spoken truth in order to embitter anyone. We have spoken it in order to help many. We love Greece and we want to make it again a beloved motherland for every Greek Cypriot."

DENKTAS CRITICIZES PUBLICATION OF WALDHEIM VIEWS

TA091252 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 9 Nov 81

[Text] TFSC President Rauf Denktas has said that by revealing UN Secretary General Kurt Waldheim's views regarding the Cyprus issue, the Greek Cypriot side aimed to deal a blow to the intercommuncal talks.

Denktas replied to reporters' questions in connection with the publication of Waldheim's views in the Greek Cypriot press. He said this was a sad development. Denktas said: However, despite all these developments, our practice has been and will be to continue the negotiations in a cool-headed manner.

PAPANDREOU, TARIQ 'AZIZ HOLD TALKS 9 NOVEMBER

NC092250 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 2200 GMT 9 Nov 81

[Text] Iraqi Deputy Prime Minister Tariq 'Aziz has been in Athens since noon today. He had talks with Prime Minister Papandreou during a working luncheon given in his honor by the prime minister at the Foreign Ministry. Welcoming the Iraqi official, the prime minister expressed his special joy because the Iraqi Deputy Prime Minister Tariq 'Aziz is in Greece. I had the happy opportunity of meeting him and exchanging thoughts with him, and I must truly emphasize that his struggle for the national independence of his country is something which, apart from the desire and goals, has been implemented with great steps and with practical means.

Tariq 'Aziz is a great personality in Iraq. I am glad not only because we are friends but also because we will have the opportunity, through this meeting, to further promote relations between our two peoples and our two countries. Iraq is a country which has opened up new avenues in economic development and progress. It is a country friendly to ours. I believe that we will truly have the opportunity to forge new avenues in our relations.

Replying to Papandreou, the Iraqi official expressed his sincere happiness for his meeting with the prime minister of Greece and very good friend, Papandreou, and congratulations on his taking over the country's government. I am also glad, 'Aziz said, because I have been given the opportunity to meet a man who fights for peace, progress and liberty, principles for which my party and PASOK are always devoted to.

I am happy to be in this historic country which has made vast contributions to the civilization of humanity. The historic ties between the Arab countries and Greece are great, and we believe that under the leadership and guidance of my dear friend Andreas Papandreou here in Greece and President Saddam Husayn in Iraq, our two countries will further strengthen their ties in all sectors -- economic, cultural and others.

I also express the desire of the Iraqi leadership and of our party to strengthen our biparite relations, to expand them, and to work together for the realization of the humanitarian goals in which our countries and our parties believe.

In reply to Tariq 'Aziz, the prime minister stated: I consider it a great honor because I met with President Saddam Husayn, a wise man of strong character who represents all the hopes of the Arab nation at a time which is extremely critical, but which, in my opinion, incorporates optimistic prospects.

Tomorrow morning Tariq 'Aziz will have a private meeting with Prime Minister Papandreou. It is expected that the Iraqi official will leave for his country tomorrow evening.

PAPANDREOU TO ATTEND EEC LONDON SUMMIT 25 NOV

NC092102 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1930 GMT 9 Nov 81

[Text] Prime Minister Papandreou will leave for London on 25 November to attend the EEC summit conference.

U.S. BASES QUESTION TO BE RAISED AFTER CHRISTMAS

NC092107 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1939 GMT 9 Nov 81

[Text] Asked about press reports on the existence of a Greek counterplan on the U.S. bases in Greece, the government spokesman stated that there is no advance preparation on this question. He added: The government will deal with the question of the bases after Christmas.

RIZOSPASTIS DISCUSSED NEW U.S. BASES TACTICS

NC082109 Athens RIZOSPASTIS in Greek 8 Nov 81 p 1

[Text] Greek-U.S. negotiations on the status of the bases are expected to start, at the latest, by mid-January 1982. The U.S. side views the possible outcome of these negotiations with controlled optimism, believing that the new Greek Government will appear as "a hard negotiator" over the disputed points of the entire issue rather than as prepared to proceed with the abolition of the bases. On the basis of these evaluations, which also reflect the views of the U.S. Embassy here, the Pentagon and the State Department are already preparing their negotiation tactics adjusted to the new Greek conditions.

With this context, it appears they have already defined the limits of certain "concessions" which are going to be used as "bait" for the Greek side without, naturally, abandoning the "classic" method of extortion, undermining, and the different forms of political and economic pressure. According to the same reports,these U.S. "concessions" -- should it be considered necessary to implement them, naturally -- will fall within a more general updating of the U.S. military presence in the area. More specifically, mention is made of the following possibilities:

-- Abolition of certain bases of secondary importance but only under the prerequisite that there will be guarantees on the strengthening of those bases which play a more important role.

-- Acceptance of a certain amount of control over the movement of U.S. war material within the territory of Greece.

-- Grant of loans to the local armaments industry which today is under the virtual control of U.S. and French companies.

At the same time, Washington does not rule out some form of "guarantee" of Greece's eastern frontiers under the condition that it will, at the same time, get some equivalent political "privileges."

Laying down the general limits of its negotiating moves, the U.S. side hopes, primarily, to strengthen the status of the bases and the other military and political-economic supports of its overlordship under a new agreement. Its goal is to define the new government's policy within the framework of the country's traditional Atlantic orientation through using every available opportunity. From this viewpoint, the comments of certain rightwing circles are indicative. These circles observe, with bitterness, that the United States had refused to offer to the previous "New Democracy" government what it appears prepared "to give" today.

The "soft" side of Washington's negotiating position is only one aspect, and not the primary one, of its policy toward Greece. The basic "weapon" always remains extortion and undermining. As reported and toward this end Washington:

-- Plans to utilize economic pressure in addition to political pressure which could reach a climax with a simple refusal to invest and going as far as open economic war.

-- Is already preparing the ground for new intervention in Greece's international relations, particularly in the Balkans.

There are recent efforts to revive the so-called "North Ipiros" issue in order to create a question of "North Ipiros self-determination." Such moves are noticed in the United States and in Canada, where "brotherhoods of North Ipirotes" operate in cooperation with Greek church and other personalities. Their goal is to create the conditions of "a permanent headache" for the new government -- in essence an additional lever of pressure in order to help promote U.S. positions in every given eventuality.

Today's preparations by Washington, which are also expected to appear in the field of practical politics, leave no doubt about the certain outcome of any negotiation process which might move in the direction of "changing the status" of the U.S. overlordship even on the basis of the new conditions in Greece. The withdrawal of the bases and the destruction of the dependence complex, as confirmed by the latest developments, are the only realistic way toward restoring equality in Greek-U.S. relations and toward the enforcement of respect for our national sovereignty and dignity.

GOVERNMENT ANNOUNCES POLICY STATEMENT DEBATE

NC092058 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1930 GMT 9 Nov 81

[Text] It has been announced that the government's policy statement will be debated at the chamber of deputies on Sunday, 22 November. Pertinent consultations have been held with the official opposition. The debate on the policy statement will be continued on Monday and Tuesday, 23 and 24 November, and will end at midnight of the last day when the voting will take place.

PAPER COMMENTS ON CYPRIOT ARCHBISHOP'S ATTITUDE

NC082057 Athens EXORMISI in Greek 8 Nov 81 p 12

[From the "Political Affairs" column: "Why Do They Protest?"]

[Text] It is not the first time the Archbishop of Cyprus used hard language to express the bitterness of Cypriot Hellenism toward the stand of the rightwing governments on the big drama that is going on in Cyprus. During last year's visit to Nicosia by 70 representatives of local Greek self-government bodies, he also said the same thing. New Democracy did not get disturbed then, but it is disturbed now that it is no longer a government and, in a statement, has described the statement by the revered prelate as... "interference in the internal political developments of Greece!" Naturally, the accusation is unfounded, and if New Democracy is disturbed, this is caused by the fact that the PASOK government, from the first day of its life, has opened its arms of wholehearted support for the drama of our Cypriot brothers. The change is also tangible in this sector. Of course, it is not ruled out that the indignation of New Democracy may have other motives "emanating from outside." Because what the New Democracy succeeded in perfidiously and silently doing to the detriment of Cypriot Hellenism -- that is, to disengage the Cypriot problem from Greek-Turkish relations -- is now threatened to be reversed. In order to make it more clear, the abandoning of Cypriots to their fate, to the altar of the friendly relations with the Evren junta, now stands the danger of being upset.

KKE SUPPORTS CUBA IN FACING U.S. PROVOCATIONS

NC082128 Athens RIZOSPASTIS in Greek 8 Nov 81 p 1

[Text] The determined support of Greek Communists and the country's workers for the Communist Party and the Government of Cuba in their effort to deal with imperialist provocations and attacks is expressed in the following message of the Central Committee of the KKE:

"Once again, by resorting to provocative arguments of lies and dangermongering, U.S. imperialism reveals its true face: The face of the arsonist of peace and the calm of nations. The threats and plans for 'punitive action' directed against the peace-loving people of Cuba raised severe protests and caused the indignation and wrath of the peace-loving and democratic forces throughout the world. The communists of Greece, the workers of Greece, expressing their indignation, place themselves on the side of the peoples of Cuba and the other countries of Central and Latin America and the Caribbean area. The Central Committee of the Greek Communist Party emphatically declares its determined support for the Communist Party and the Government of Cuba in dealing with the imperialist threats and acts of aggression. Hands off socialist Cuba."

SYRIAN TERRITORIAL WATERS CLAIM RAISES OBJECTION

NC100945 Istanbul TERCUMAN in Turkish 7 Nov 81 pp 1, 14

[Sedat Sertoglu report]

[Text] Turkey has officially notified Damascus that it will not recognize Syria's decision to extend its territorial waters to 35 miles. Competent officials of the Foreign Ministry have stated that from Turkey's standpoint, Syria's territorial waters are 12 miles and that their extension to 35 miles will not be recognized. High-ranking Foreign Ministry officials, who wanted to remain anonymous, have stated that Turkey will continue to consider waters outside the 12 miles as international waters. They have expressed the hope that the Syrian authorities will not interfere with Turkish ships sailing these waters.

In the views officially communicated to Damascus by the Foreign Ministry, it is stated that Turkey is ready to "participate in talks which will define the fishing areas of both countries." The Foreign Ministry officials have also stated that Syrian allegations that the "extension of the territorial waters to 35 miles is not intended to be against Turkey are invalid" and that they will not concur with this "fait accompli."

As is known, some time ago Syria announced that it had extended its territorial waters to 35 miles. Under these circumstances, there is only a distance of 10 miles between this country's territorial waters and the territorial waters of the Turkish Cypriot sector of Cyprus.

Relations between Turkey and Syria, which have been strained for some time, have worsened even more following the extension of the Syria territorial waters to 35 miles. Recalling that Syria, which enjoys the support of the Soviet Union, has been adopting adverse attitudes toward Turkey on all platforms, the Foreign Ministry officials stated that this state has also rejected all calls by Turkey to negotiate the Syrian-Turkish frontiers.

On the other hand, Syrian head of state Hafiz al-Asad delivered a speech during his visit to Bulgaria as the guest of Bulgarian head of state Zhivkov, in which, without naming Turkey, he uttered words which run counter to all diplomatic rules of etiquette. The Turkish Foreign Ministry has established that in a speech he gave in honor of the Bulgarian head of state, Hafiz al-Asad said that "before winning their indepedence, both Syria and Bulgaria were under the yoke of the same despotic country." Following this speech by Hafiz al-Asad, the Foreign Ministry officials requested information from the Turkish Embassy in Sofia. The text of this speech, to which high-ranking Trukish diplomats have reacted strongly, is going to be carefully studied in Ankara. When the text has been carefully examined, Turkey is expected to issue a tough warning to Syria.

On his way to Bulgaria, Syrian head of state Hafiz al-Asad had flown over Turkey and had sent Ankara a good will message. In return, Ankara had sent Hafiz al-Asad its best wishes.

PAPERS REACT TO DEVELOPMENTS IN GREEK AFFAIRS

MILLIYET Column

NC060803 Istanbul MILLIYET in Turkish 2 Nov 81 p 8

["Telex" column by Teoman Erel: "What About the Letter Sent to Bitsios?"

[Excerpts] The statement made by U.S. Under Secretary of State Stoessel on the question of guarantees demanded by Papandreou from the United States against Turkey is not very clear....whereas the question put to him by Sami Kohen [MILLIYET correspondent] was crystal clear: "Will the United States or will it not give Greece the assurance which Papanadreou has asked for?"

The answer to this question was a little evasive: "We are not prepared to do anything more than has been done in the past in this respect."

Above all, the verb in the sentence has an evil connotation. "We are not prepared," does not mean: "No, we are not going to provide the demanded guarantees." This statement does not even mean: "We have no such intention." What is more, the validity of certain guarantees given to Greece is very cleverly expressed in this sentence. It is said that the United States is not prepared to give Greece more guarantees than have been given in the past....Under these circumstance, it is an historic duty for us, the Turks, to remember the past and "remind the United States of it."

First of all, let us ask ourselves: "Did the United States or didn't it give Greece guarantees in the past against Turkey?"

Let us leave [Lyndon] Johnson's letter aside. This rudely expressed threatening letter, which was sent by the U.S. President with the purpose of tying Turkey's hands while the Turkish Cypriots were being massacred by the Greek Cypriots in Cyprus, is now in the archives. Nor do we need to refer to the economic and military embargo imposed on Turkey in order to compel it to make concessions in Cyprus. Even the Americans themselves admit that this was a blunder. But we won't have to wait long to see how sincere they are in this matter. For, through Papandreou's adminstration, Greece has now clearly manifested its intention to blackmail the West in order to squeeze Turkey. Greece has in fact expedited its maneuvers. The policy which Karamanlis and Rallis were trying to implement in a disguised manner is being implemented quite noisily by Papandreou now. His statement, therefore, that "I am extending an olive branch to Turkey" is not at all convincing.

However, let us again turn to the attitude of the United States and its deeds in the past. For the United States is playing the most important role in the development of this problem: Hasn't the United States indulged in pro-Greek gestures apart from Johnson's letter and the imposition of the military embargo on Turkey? Hasn't it given Greece assurances? Isn't the letter sent to former Greek Foreign Minister Bitsios by Former Secretary of State Kissinger as valid, as important and as significant today? Particularly now that the U.S. under secretary of state has reminded us of "what the United States has done for Greece in the past."

With the letter Kissinger sent to Bitsios the United States gave Greece guarantees, particularly on the question of the Aegean. Kissinger had implied "should a dispute arise between Turkey and Greece which inclined to take the form of a hot conflict between Turkey and Greece over its rights -- as far as we are concerned its arguments -- then the United States would twist Turkey's arm and defend Greece.

Undoubtedly, the Americans are capable of explaining this situation. They could, for instance, say that it is a duty for the United States to prevent a conflict between two allies. But it is also felt that in its private conversations the United States is interpreting the letter to Bitsios differently.

Uncle Sam has been whispering into Greece's ears for years: "There is the letter from Kissinger to Bitsios. What else do you want? But Greece has always furthered its demands. It has never been content with what it has got; it has always wanted more. We, on the other hand, are in the position of a proud and docile child. The spoiled child will always want and it will always get, while we shall suffice by occasionally expressing some anger and thus prove our maturity. We wonder how much longer Turkey can pursue such a policy? How much more patience can it show? How can it explain to its public the fact that the more maturity it shows and the more responsibly it acts the more it comes out the loser?

In reality, it is Turkey that should have demands on the Aegean issue. It is Turkey that is being subjected to injustice. For instance, why don't we take up the question of Greece's militarization of the islands, right under our nose?

At the negotiating table, every time the Greeks open their mouths they give utterance to the argument that our Aegean army poses a threat to them. What about the fortifications as well as military designs and military airfields on the islands? Whom are these threatening: the Warsaw Pact countries or Turkey which is a NATO ally like Greece? Naturally, these questions should be put not to Papandreou, who appears to be far from seriousness and responsibility, but to the United States, on which Papandreou is trying to depend.

The United States which, through the mouth of an under secretary of state, reminds Greece of the past, guarantees and winks at it for the future, will continue to pursue this policy so long as it does not feel the serious reaction of Turkey.

HURRIYET Report

NC060958 Istanbul HURRIYET in Turkish 3 Nov 81 p 3

[Ziya Akcapar Report]

[Excerpts] Lefkosa [Nicosia] -- Work has begun following the decision taken at the Papandreou-Kiprianou talks "for reorganizing and fortifying the defense strength of the Greek Cypriot administration." The Greek Cypriot National Guard, which is a land force, will be reinforced by air and naval forces. Meanwhile, upon orders from Greek Prime Minister and Defense Minister Papandreou, the Greek defense system is being reorganized to include Cyprus as well.

It has been learned that Greece will donate to the Greek Cypriot air force 2 squadrons of F-84 jetplanes. It has also been learned that the airport, which is under construction in Paphos, will be converted into an "airbase."

Upon these developments in the Greek Cypriot side, the TFSC Foreign Ministry spokesman issued a statement yesterday in which he said: "If they resort to such measures, we will take countermeasures without delay."

GUNAYDIN Article

NC100818 Istanbul GUNAYDIN in Turkish 6 Nov 81 p 3

[Resat Akar Report]

[Text] Lefkosa [Nicosia] -- Following the tough attitude which Greek Prime Minister Papandreou has begun to adopt toward the Cypriot issue, and his announcement that he is going to provide the southern sector of the island with weapons, the Greek Cypriots have begun to display a "warlike attitude." The military exercises and displays, which began during the days when Greek Cypriot Defense Minister Veniamin was discussing "the defense of Cyprus" with Prime Minister Papandreou in Athens, changed form after the completion of talks in Athens.

On their return from Athens, Greek Cypriot Defense Minister Veniamin and Greek Cypriot [National] Guard Commander General Papanayiotou stated that they were very gratified with their contacts in Athens and that the Greek Cypriot defense would be strengthened. They then called on the people to share the joy of the exercises and displays of the Greek Cypriot army.

Commenting on the war displays of the Greek Cypriot army, which have been continuing since the beginning of the week, political circles said that if the Greek Cypriots resort to a crazy act, they will meet with a sharp response. These circles added: "They have forgotten the 1974 operation too soon. As a matter of fact, we know that they are a people with an aptitude for doing crazy things. However, a new insanity can only bring them calamity."

HURRIYET EDITORIAL ON GENSCHER VISIT

NC100801 Istanbul HURRIYET in Turkish 6 Nov 81 p 3

[Editorial by Oktay Eksi: "In a Friendly Manner..."]

[Text] Federal German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher will probably have left our country by the time you read these lines. But Mr Genscher has paid a noteworthy visit even though a rather short one. We are certain that during this visit he is communicating to us messages not only from the German Government but from the West as well. This message is clear: The return of our country to a freedom-loving democratic system as soon as possible is a desire that is shared by all Westerners who wish to see Turkey among them; and, naturally, it is also the desire of millions of people in our country.

Unfortunately, shortly before the arrival of the FRG foreign minister in our country, Former leader of the Republican People's Party Bulent Ecevit was put on trial for making a statement to the foreign press which contravened decision 52 [of the National Security Council.] As is known, Ecevit has been sentenced to 4 months imprisonment -- an event which has caused repercussions among our friends.

It is obvious that this was one of the issues which Mr Genscher considered worth taking up. As a matter of fact, the suggestion made by Mr Genscher's secretary general, Peter Corterier, that "the aid extended to Turkey by Germany and the EEC countries should be suspended," is the outcome of the concern shown in this event.

In reality, we should be aware of this fact: The European Community sees two kinds of communities. The first are communities like itself, administered within the framework of a freedom-loving democratic system. It looks upon such communities as its "equal" and it accepts that those reaching such a level are "civilized."

Communities whose respect for human rights has not been adequately developed are not deemed members of the 20th century civilization, however advanced they may be in technology. The Soviet Union may be cited as an example. Such communities are considered to be second class communities in the eyes of the Europeans.

When this fact is evaluated in the light of great Ataturk's ardent desire to render the Turkish nation a part of Western civilization, it assumes an extraordinary significance. For, it is obvious that Ataturk's desire was the establishment of a state system respectful of "human rights," that is, a "freedom-loving democracy." Ataturk experimented with multiparty political life as early as 1925, during the early stages of his reforms. This indicates Ataturk's ambition to see the Turkish society in such circumstances struggling to achieve contemporary civilization. When he realized that this initiative was launched prematurely, he tried again 5 years later, in 1930, an effort which proves his determination to establish a freedom-loving democratic system.

In that case, we should realize that we do not stand to gain anything by giving our European friends a wrong image. A wrong image creates the impression that we are turning our backs on a democratic system. For instance, Consultative Assembly President Professor Sadi Irmak's remarks that "it will take at least 2 years to draft a new constitution," create the impression that the present administration is dragging its feet.

Those who wish to see our country achieve a freedom-loving democratic system are our friends wherever they happen to be in the world. Seeing this truth is in the interests of all of us.

BELGIUM

'FULL RESULTS' OF 8 NOVEMBER ELECTIONS REPORTED

LD090950 [Editorial Report] Brussels Domestic Service in French at 0700 GMT on 9 November carries the "full results" of the 8 November elections. The figures given are the same as those reported on p F1 of the 9 November Western Europe DAILY REPORT, except for the following changes:

Party	Seats Won	Notes
Belgian Socialist Party	26	No Change
Christian People's Party	43	Loss of 14 seats

NOTHOMB ENTREATS HAIG, GROMYKO ON EUROMISSILES

PM091447 Brussels LE SOIR in French 6 Nov 81 p 3

[Text] Foreign Minister Nothomb has sent letters to U.S. Secretary of State Haig and Soviet Foreign Minister Gromyko expressing the hope that the forthcoming U.S.-Soviet negotiations on the Euromissiles will make it possible to "protect the European peoples from a nuclear arms race." Referring to the pacifist demonstration in Brussels on 25 October, Mr Nothomb writes in his letter to Mr Gromyko that this led him to renew his appeal regarding the negotiations in Geneva on 30 November. "Only a precise and verifiable arms limitation agreement, involving the disarming of the 250 SS-20 missiles, or 750 nuclear warheads, threatening Western Europe, will make it possible to restore the balance at the lowest possible level and remove the need to deploy corresponding weapons in Western Europe."

In his letter to Mr Haig, Mr Nothomb recalls the "Belgian Government's very clear preference for an agreement making it possible to eliminate the Soviet medium-range weapons threatening Europe, thus removing the need to deploy corresponding weapons on the Western side. The minister reaffirms that "on 19 September 1980 the Belgian Government declared its readiness to accept in advance the outcome of these negotiations and shoulder the resulting responsibilities."

CANADA

EMIGRATION MEASURES FOR POLES BEING EASED

NC280806 Paris AFP in English 0638 GMT 28 Oct 81

[Text] Ottawa, 27 Oct (AFP) -- Special measures are being taken to make it easier for Poles to emigrate to Canada, Canadian Immigration Minister Lloyd Axworthy told the House of Commons here. He said that some 1,500 Polish citizens now in Canada could take advantage of the softening in regulations, which normally require that a demand to immigrate be made before entry into the country.

Mr Axworthy also said that several passengers from the ocean liner Stefan Batory would ask to be declared "voluntary exiles" when the ship lands in Montreal from Poland later this morning with more than 190 passengers aboard. Another 40 Polish refugees coming by way of Austria are expected on Friday at Montreal's Mirabel International Airport.

MALTA

PARLIAMENT DISSOLVED; 12 DEC GENERAL ELECTIONS SET

NC092027 Paris AFP in English 2018 GMT 9 Nov 81

[Text] Valleta, 9 Nov (AFP) -- General elections have been called in Malta for December 12, President Anton Buttigieg announced here tonight. He also issued a proclamation dissolving parliament.

FBIS DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 218 12 November 1981

CONTENTS

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Schmidt Outlines Positions for Talks With Brezhnev J 1
Protest Planned in Bonn During Brezhnev Visit J 2
Kohl Expects USSR To Prove its Good Faith J 2
Mischnik Reaffirms FDP Stance on Military Blocs J 3
Aid to Turkey Depends on Restoration of Democracy J 3
Brandt Denies Accusations in Washington POST J 4
NATO Leader Warns of 'Offensive Soviet Posture' J 4
Government Takes Steps To Halt Influx of Foreigners J 4
Bahr, Gaus Differ on German Unity, Reunification J 5

FRANCE

Cabinet Meets on New Caledonian Situation K 1
French-African Conference Document Published [LE MONDE 6 Nov] K 1
Cot Discusses French African Policy, Chad [LE MATIN 3 Nov] K 2
Cooling of Relations With PRC Noted K 5
Swiss Foreign Minister's Paris Talks Reported [LE MONDE 8-9 Nov] K 5

ITALY & THE VATICAN

Indian Prime Minister Gandhi's Official Visit L 1
Meeting With Pope L 1
Evening Reception Speeches L 1
Joint Ventures Negotiated [Delhi] L 2
Official Talks Concluded L 3
Gandhi, Spadolini News Conference L 3
Spadolini Comments on UK Talks on Sinai Force L 4
Colombo Scheduled To Visit Yugoslavia 13 Nov L 4

SPAIN

Calvo-Sotelo, Sahagun Continue Talks To Heal Split [ABC 8 Nov] N 1
Sahagun Comments [EL PAIS 5 Nov] N 1
Social Democrat Leader Defends Defection From UCD [LA VANGUARIDA 5 Nov] N 2

NORDIC AFFAIRS

SWEDEN

Reactions to TASS Allegations of Espionage P 1
TASS 'Distortions' Asserted P 1
NATO Links Denied P 1
Defense Minister Statement P 2
Navy Searches Karlskrona Area for Soviet Beacons P 2
Foreign Minister on Aftermath of Sub Incident P 3
Ullsten Comments on Official Soviet Reply P 4
CSCE Delegate: Sub Incident 'Helsinki Violation' P 4

UNITED KINGDOM

Italy's Spadolini, Colombo End Consultations [ANSA] Q 1

CYPRUS

Cabinet Examines Reply to Waldheim on Talks R 1
Kiprianou Refers Waldheim Plan to Talks Table R 1
Archbishop Objects to Waldheim Ideas Acceptance R 2
UN Suggests Missing Persons Committee Meeting R 2

GREECE

Student Union Sets 15 Nov March on U.S. Embassy S 1
Government To Seek Removal of Nuclear Warheads S 1
Papandreou, Iraq's 'Aziz Talk to Newsmen 10 Nov S 1
Trade Increase Discussed S 2
Official Denies AFP Cyprus Waldheim Paper Claim S 2
Paper Seeks Answer on Karamanlis Health Rumor [AVRIANI 10 Nov] S 2
KKE Central Committee Plenum Resolution [RIZOSPASTIS 5 Nov] S 3

SCHMIDT OUTLINES POSITIONS FOR TALKS WITH BREZHNEV

LD101312 Hamburg DPA in German 1142 GMT 10 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 10 Nov (DPA) -- In his forthcoming talks with Soviet state and party leader Leonid Brezhnev Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt intends to be an "honest interpreter of Western policy." In a speech to newspaper publishers on Tuesday in Bonn Schmidt said that Brezhnev would certainly not cherish the illusion that the FRG could be manipulated out of the Western camp.

The federal chancellor used this speech to the Federal Association of German Newspaper Publishers to define the starting positions of the Federal Government for the forthcoming talks with Brezhnev and furthermore to give an initial reply to the severe criticism by the trade unions of the Federal Government's economic policy.

In the chancellor's opinion it is important that the dialogue between the superpowers is not broken off. He added: "We have an important role to play in this, both toward our friends in the United States and toward the Soviet Union. It is no coincidence that Brezhnev is coming here rather than elsewhere." An ideal outcome of the planned American-Soviet negotiations on the reduction of medium-range missiles would be a zero solution. He does not, however, wish to spread optimism prematurely.

The Federal Government is entering the talks with the Soviet state and party leader in "complete accord with Mr Reagan and with the other Western governments," Schmidt stressed. Bonn is engaged in preparing for the meeting with Brezhnev along with the Western allies and will inform the United States about the talks on the same day and the other partners on the following day."

The chancellor left his listeners in no doubt that the fundamental attitude of the German people and of the "political class" -- both right and left -- is pro-American and in favor of the alliance with America. According to the results of a poll in October 1981 four-fifths of all Germans are in favor of NATO. Only 6 percent voted for a withdrawal. Schmidt added, speaking directly to the publishers: "Don't be persuaded by anything you read in the headlines of the newspapers you publish yourselves."

Schmidt argued for a more differentiated evaluation of the groups and minorities who are committed to peace and disarmament. "Minorities are the salt in the soup of a democracy. Yet we do not have to apologise for ourselves to these minorities." We have to resist the tempration to accuse these groups of opportunism, just because it suits us. Schmidt argued for a "rational zeal," both in public and published opinion. Nor should we let ourselves be forced into an emotive attitude, even when faced with such phenomena as terroism and extremism.

On the criticism by the German trade unions of the government's economic policy Schmidt said: "The trade unions are becoming disquieted at the moment. I can understand that perfectly well. I am disquieted too, it is can understandable for each sector and various sections of the people to submit particular reasons for concern. "But the common good has to stand above all this," the chancellor said.

In the chancellor's view the world economic situation in the coming winter does not look good anywhere. To date Japan has been the only country to emerge from it relatively well. Schmidt warned of the danger that the world recession might become a world depression. As the two main causes of the present economic slump he named the repeated leaps in the price of oil and the fact that a number of states are taking the inflationary way out, that is, printing the money they needed. "We are suffering not from too little money but from too much."

Schmidt spoke in favor of not overdoing the cutbacks in the federal budget, in the Laender and in the local authorities.

Nowhere have deflationary measures alone resulted in more jobs. The chancellor warned against endangering social peace. "The social peace is the most precious gift that we have." The Federal Government will try to take a middle course between deflation and stimulating demand. It believes neither in global expenditure programs nor in saving at any price. It is necessary to leave some leeway for reducing interest rates and thus boosting investment, increasing the number of jobs and improving the balance of trade. However, Schmidt added, "there is a difficult path before us into next year."

Amid the applause of his listeners the chancellor praised the German unified trade unions and said to the publishers: "Don't wish for French and Italian trade unions, for example."

In his speech the chancellor paid tribute to the role of the newspapers. He said: "The newspapers -- even in the electronic age -- make an indispensable contribution to reading culture, to culture of all kinds, moreover to political culture." On the role of the publisher, Schmidt said: "Even today the personal responsibility of the publisher is needed."

PROTEST PLANNED IN BONN DURING BREZHNEV VISIT

LD111328 Hamburg DPA in German 1211 GMT 11 Nov 81

[Excerpts] Bonn, 11 Nov (DPA) -- According to the organizers, so far 15,000 people have announced their participation in the demonstration for the implementation of human rights and against the war in Afghanistan to be held on 22 November during Brezhnev's visit. A spokesman for the "Action for Peace and Human Rights" group said at a press conference in Bonn that the concluding rally in Bonn's market square would be addressed by exiled Soviet writer Vladimir Maximov and Bundestag deputies Mathias Wissmann (CDU) and Juergen Moellemann (FDP).

Wissmann, the Youth Union and the CDU, together with Action for Peace and Human Rights, have jointly issued an appeal calling for the immediate withdrawal of the Red Army from Afghanistan, recognition of peoples' right to self-determination, including that of the whole German people, equal and balanced disarmament in East and West and the implementation of the CSCE Final Act. Moellemann, who in an appeal of his own calls for freedom for Afghanistan and who appeals to the Soviet Government "to end its suppression of a small nonaligned state" and thus contribute to safeguarding peace, also shares the demands of the other appeal.

KOHL EXPECTS USSR TO PROVE ITS GOOD FAITH

LD101518 Hamburg DPA in German 1445 GMT 10 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 10 Nov (DPA) -- In the view of opposition leader Helmut Kohl the Soviet Union must finally prove its readiness to reduce its arms potential. On Tuesday Kohl told the CDU/CSU parliamentary group that the opposition expects from the visit of the Soviet state and party leader Leonid Brezhnev in 2 weeks "specific proposals which give proof of the desire of the Soviet Union for peace and mutual understanding, for disarmament and arms control." Kohl, who together with CSU Chairman Franz-Josef Strauss will be received by Brezhnev for a talk at the end of the visit which begins on 22 November, appealed to Moscow to cut back "prearming" in the area of nuclear medium-range missiles entirely by 1983.

Kohl accused the Soviet Union of infringing on the Helsinki Final Act by the penetration of a submarine bearing nuclear arms into the military security area of Sweden. The basis of mutual trust in Europe as a decisive prerequisite for a policy of arms control and disarmament has been put under pressure by the Soviet leadership because of this. In his speech Kohl once again made sharp criticisms of the SPD. There is a continuing campaign in the SPD against the NATO dual decision and thus a clear majority against the security policy of Chancellor Helmut Schmidt. This development places a strain on the Soviet-American talks beginning at the end of the month on the reduction of Euro-strategic weapons. Apparently the SPD long ago "disregarded its federal chancellor and the feeble objections of SPD Chairman Willy Brandt."

MISCHNIK REAFFIRMS FDP STANCE ON MILITARY BLOCS

LD101414 Hamburg DPA in German 1136 GMT 10 Nov 81

[Text] Berlin, 10 Nov (DPA) -- The transformation of the system of military blocs in East and West into a pan-European peace system was described by Chairman of the FDP parliamentary group Wolfgang Mischnick as the aim of the Free Democrats. In a declaration of principle of peace policy Mischnick said on Tuesday in the Berlin Reichstag building that it is the FDP's long-term aim to guarantee peace in Europe by cooperation across the blocs, gradual European security agreements, balanced disarmament measures and finally the transformation of the blocs -- NATO and the Warsaw Pact -- into a European peace system.

Helmut Schaefer, foreign policy spokesman of the FDP parliamentary group, which met in Berlin on Tuesday, stressed to DPA that with this "Berlin declaration" Mischnick has given a signal, it should not be allowed "that the discussion on security policy gets more and more into the dead-end of military thinking." People have to get away from a policy determined by the defense minister's thinking, the traditional notions of alliance in East and West are "corroded." Now different models for the safeguarding of peace have to be found. In the long term Europeans should dispense with the military presence of the major powers.

Mischnick reaffirmed a party resolution adopted 6 years ago, which states that the existence of the opposing military blocs in the past prevented with the aid of the balance of terror violent conflicts and changes in Europe, but that in the long term security and peace cannot be guaranteed by a balance of massive arms stockpiles, which also cause considerable security risks.

"We will not give up" the aim of a pan-European peace system on a new basis "no matter how difficult it is to approach it," Mischnick said. It is important "especially in the very emotive discussion now in progress not to let the bases and resolves of our practical policy be covered up." The NATO dual decision on the stationing of new medium-range missiles in Europe with a simultaneous offer of negotiations to the East on a reduction of these weapons is not an end in itself, but a means to achieve definitive steps toward disarmament.

The FDP wants cooperation not confrontation. It supports the continuation of the policy of detente. The more cooperation there is between East and West, the more secure peace in Europe and Germany for the people in the two different political and social systems.

Mischnick emphatically welcomed the peace document of the Evangelical Church in Germany [EKD], which has thus made a contribution to bringing the discussion on peace on to a peaceful course, "to free it from entrenched attitudes," a contribution which provokes thought and is helpful. In this matter he sees broad agreement between the principles formulated by the EKD and the political efforts and perspectives of the FDP "above all in the view that comprehensive political safeguarding of peace must have priority over views dominated by military considerations."

AID TO TURKEY DEPENDS ON RESTORATION OF DEMOCRACY

LD101435 Hamburg DPA in German 1228 GMT 10 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 10 Nov (DPA) -- Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher has expressed understanding of efforts in the Bundestag to make further aid to Turkey in 1982 dependent on the military men who govern in Ankara taking steps to restore democracy. In an interview with the FRANKFURTER RUNDSCHAU (Wednesday's edition), Genscher said that putting a temporary embargo on aid does not mean a final decision, but the possibility of waiting for further developments in Turkey and evaluating them. "This is my view."

Genscher stressed that in his visit to Ankara at the end of last week he repeatedly stressed that the Western defensive alliance serves the safeguarding of peace and of freedom and democracy "and that, without interfering in Turkey's internal affairs, we thus hold the firm expectation that Turkey will return as soon as possible to democracy."

Statements were made to him on this matter. Now it has to be seen whether there is any justification for the confident belief that Turkey will in fact return to democracy within an acceptable time, a time shorter than the 2 years mentioned recently.

The developments which would necessitate the Bundestag finally cutting off aid to Turkey are, according to Genscher, in Turkey's interests, not ours or in those of the alliance. So everything should be done in Turkey in order to prevent such a situation ever arising.

The interview was prereleased by the Foreign Ministry.

BRANDT DENIES ACCUSATIONS IN WASHINGTON POST

LD111948 Hamburg DPA in German 1532 GMT 11 Nov 81

[Excerpt] Washington/Bonn, 11 Nov (DPA) -- The SPD Executive has most strongly denied a report in today's WASHINGTON POST claiming that the SPD chairman and former federal chancellor, Willy Brandt, was in the pay of the CIA in the 1950's and that he also possibly had contacts with the KGB. SPD Executive spokesman Wolfgang Clement described the article by the journalist Jack Anderson, an exposure story specialist, as an evil fabrication. He said that the newspaper had spread similar allegations in 1977 and these had been rejected at the time by Brandt as false.

Brandt stated then that at no time had he received such payments, "neither for the benefit of my party nor for any other purpose." The SPD statement adds that the U.S. President at that time, Jimmy Carter, had regretted "the reckless accusations" and expressed the certainty that Brandt's "outstanding reputation as a statesman cannot be tarnished by such baseless rumors."

Anderson, who quotes American intelligence community sources in his report, mentions in a footnote to the article that Brandt had strongly denied, through one of his staff, ever having received money from the CIA or the KGB. Commenting on the revival of these reports in the United States, Brandt stated:

"I find it shameful that corrupt dealers in news are in a position to publish their lies in a respected American newspaper. Such wheelings and dealings also do not benefit trust in the United States."

NATO LEADER WARNS OF 'OFFENSIVE SOVIET POSTURE'

LD102214 Hamburg DPA in German 2044 GMT 10 Nov 81

[Text] Kiel, 10 Nov (DPA) -- General Sir Anthony Farrar-Hockley, commander in chief of NATO forces in northern Europe, in a lecture at the "Hermann-Ehlers" academy in Kiel tonight, warned his audience about an offensive Soviet posture in northern Europe. This was particularly true of the navy, he said. NATO's northern flank was far from being offensively arrayed, he added, and rejected Eastern charges to the contrary as "brazen propaganda." But NATO modernization was proceeding apace so that offensive operations by an adversary could be successfully resisted.

Sir Anthony asked whether NATO was not lagging behind in chemical weapons since the Soviet Union had a great preponderance in this field.

GOVERNMENT TAKES STEPS TO HALT INFLUX OF FOREIGNERS

LD111602 Hamburg DPA in German 1429 GMT 11 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 11 Nov (DPA) -- The Federal Republic should not become a land of immigrants. The Federal Government made fundamental decisions on this today. Government Spokesman Kurt Becker announced that the government still adheres to its aim of fully integrating foreigners permanently living in the country if they earnestly desire it.

A foreign population, currently amounting to 4.6 million, was "just about acceptable" but any further influx should be restricted.

Under the government's decisions, young foreigners aged between 18 and 21 who have lived here for 8 years and who wish to remain and are prepared to accept the duties of German citizenship, including military service, have a right to citizenship. A bill has been drafted on this.

All foreigners illegally living in the FRG are to be deported. The government is to use its influence on the individual Lands in this respect, according to Becker. There is also to be a strict campaign against foreigners working illegally. The influx of people and sending for relatives from countries which are not members of the EEC must be stopped by every means available in law. All ministries concerned have been instructed to work together to turn the government's fundamental decisions into law. The government will take further decisions at the beginning of December, said Becker.

BAHR, GAUS DIFFER ON GERMAN UNITY, REUNIFICATION

LD101644 Hamburg DPA in German 1503 GMT 10 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 10 Nov (DPA) -- Wide differences have emerged in the views of SPD politicians Egon Bahr and Guenter Gaus on the question of the unity of Germany. Gaus argues against using the hitherto usual concepts of the German nation and reunification, while Bahr reaffirms both claims.

"Of course the German nation is not dead," Bahr wrote in an article in the SPD weekly VORWAERTS, prereleased today. SED leader Erich Honecker recently confirmed this in his own way, nor is there any reason that the Germans, of all people, should suppress, give up and forget, their wishes and hopes at a time when the notion of self-determination has begun an irreversible victorious progress throughout the world. Bahr wrote this in an "open letter" to our French neighbors.

There is a discussion about a rapid growth in pacifism and neutralism in the FRG, with the possibility that these tendencies could link up with a renewed longing for unity. This debate frightened him, wrote Bahr. "Forty-five years ago there was concern that Germany was war-hungry. Does it worry people now, if Germany is hungry for peace?"

Also in VORWAERTS, Gaus reaffirms his view that we have to assume there will be no reunification; "So that we can use every opportunity for our divided country." Gaus said it is a contradiction that, on the one hand the FRG signs contracts with the GDR, but on the other hand wishes to abolish the GDR in favor of reunification. "We must then say goodbye to the old ideas in order not to miss our opportunity," Gaus said. "Perhaps in 15 years we can reach the stage of a federal structure if we begin now with cooperative talks, and in 30 years this structure could perhaps become a confederation."

CABINET MEETS ON NEW CALEDONIAN SITUATION

NC102036 Paris AFP in English 2022 GMT 10 Nov 81

[Text] Paris, 10 Nov (AFP) -- President Francois Mitterrand today led a meeting of several cabinet ministers to discuss the situation in the troubled French Pacific territory of New Caledonia, where weekend riots left 24 injured, 102 arrested and 140,000 dollars in property damages.

Participating in the meeting were Prime Minister Pierre Mauroy, and the ministers of the interior, defense, external relations, cooperation, overseas departments and territories, and transportation. No statement was issued after the discussion.

Also today, members of the opposition Rally for the Republic [RPR] neo-Gaullist party called in parliament for "all measures to be taken" to remedy the "grave" situation in New Caledonia.

RPR President Claude Labbe expressed his determination to show "very great firmness on maintaining the French presence" in New Caledonia.

"France must no longer be allowed to be accused of colonialist and imperialist actions in this territory, for this is without foundation," he said, adding that "the attempt of certain powers -- the United States, Australia and the USSR -- to give reality to certain micro-states is a trap."

Authorities meanwhile expressed fears that new trouble could break out in New Caledonia tomorrow during the traditioanl armistice day ceremonies.

FRENCH-AFRICAN CONFERENCE DOCUMENT PUBLISHED

PM091007 Paris LE MONDE in French 6 Nov 81 p 28

[Text] Here is the introduction to the Paris appeal read out at the end of the conference:

The African chiefs of state and delegation heads, having followed with lively interest the speech delivered by the president, note with satisfaction that the concerns expressed for justice, international peace, respect for countries' independence and peoples' sovereignty and international cooperation with a view to development link up with the concerns which have always moved them in all international bodies, particularly in the elaboration of the Lagos action plan; they are pleased with the political solidarity France is displaying with regard to the Third World countries and want to assure the French Government of their active support in its attempt to pursue successfully this international policy directed toward peace, cooperation and development.

Here is the text of the appeal:

The 33 countries represented at the Paris conference recall once more the great importance of introducing order in the price of raw materials. Observation directs us toward the primary products exported by the developing countries -- an essential source of financing for their existence and development, like the essential primary products imported by these same countries, whose interruption or slowing down would impede progress and frequently condemn us to regression. For lack of security and predictability in price setting, the Third World countries are prevented from planning their future. This very future may be threatened: Populations run the risk of having their daily lives, if not their very survival, affected, and peace and international security could be seriously affected.

The chiefs of state and delegation heads gathered in Paris consider it essential and urgent to condemn this situation and to seek an improvement along all possible avenues:

1. The stabilization of prices must be obtained at world level through the conclusion of a sufficient number of international agreements on products. It is in this perspective that we must continue the effort undertaken within the framework of UNCTAD and thus allow the joint raw materials fund to operate at full efficiency.

2. Negotiation should also be extended to other essential raw materials not at present included in the UNCTAD program.

3. Beyond the stabilization of prices, we must reach the point of taking into account the actual evolution of the cost of products, as is already the case for certain products in some industrialized countries.

4. Producers must be protected against the consequences of climatic and other hazards which weigh heavily on export revenue.

STABEX (mechanism for stabilizing the prices of agricultural products) and SYSMIN (mining products) put into operation by the EEC within the framework of the Lome convention, are aimed at giving such an assurance.

It is to be hoped that other industrialized countries will take the same path. Initially the 34 countries present in Paris deem it particularly desirable that all the less developed countries should be covered by a mechanism of this nature. They also recommend that the measures enshrined in the second Lome convention should be adjusted as needed with a view to improving the guarantee provided by existing instruments.

5. By embarking on the processing of their raw materials the developing countries make up in part for fluctuations in prices. That is a way of stating the importance of local processing, which should therefore be given priority in the development programs and should be encouraged in every way by the industrialized countries. Sometimes it may also be in the interest of the producer of raw materials to be involved in processing in the actual market country. This on the spot processing implies the training of cadres and transfers of manufacturing processes and resources.

Will the world impose for much longer on peasants, miners, fishermen and producers in the Third World an existence constantly threatened by the uncontrolled and senseless flunction of prices for raw materials?

In addition the 33 chiefs of state and delegation heads:

1. Welcome the Cancun conference's conclusions with regard to the food security, agricultural development and technical and financial assistance which the industrialized countries can provide for the developing countries;

2. Issue an urgent appeal to the world that the stricken populations of the least developed countries should benefit from international solidarity according with the specific measures outlined by the UN conference on the least developed countries held in Paris in September 1981 to help these populations surmount the numerous handicaps which are destroying their development efforts;

3. Call on the community of nations to bring to bear on the daily more distressing problem of refugees in Africa -- most particularly the Horn of Africa -- rapid, efficient and generous solutions in the spirit of the 1981 Geneva conference.

COT DISCUSSES FRENCH AFRICAN POLICY, CHAD

PM111125 Paris LE MATIN in French 3 Nov 81 p 8

[Interview with Jean-Pierre Cot. minister of cooperation and development -- date and place not given]

[Text] LE MATIN: Is not the French-African summit which is being held in Paris this year in the tradition of "Giscardian" diplomacy, not the sign that continuity prevails over change in African policy? In other words: How does Francois Mitterrand's African policy differ from that of Valery Giscard d'Estaing?

Jean-Pierre Cot: "There are two different questions: The holding of the summit on the one hand and the change in African policy since 10 May on the other. As regards the holding of the summit, it is true that it may seem to be an element of continuity by the very fact that it exists. Nonetheless it is important to look more closely. First, the fact that it is being held in Paris instead of Kinshasa is a clear indication of the desire to change it, and primarily to turn it into the opportunity for Francois Mitterrand and his African colleagues to establish contact at the start of a new 7-year term, in order to define new relations between France and Africa. Hence it is not simply the summit of continuity.

In addition, if you take the list of invitations and the list of participants you will see that there are relatively significant changes in the fact that men like Benin President Kerekou, Congo President Sassou-Nguesso and Egyptian Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Butrus Ghali have come.

LE MATIN: What political significance do you attach to these changes?

Jean-Pierre Cot: "It is a desire to decolonize relations between Africa and France. This desire is characterized by an overall concern: To take Africa for what it is, in other words a whole, a unit, and hence to establish and strengthen ties with English-speaking and Portuguese-speaking Africa as well as with French-speaking Africa, since it is a fact that the economic problems are not fundamentally different in Lagos or Douala, in Accra or Abidjan. Therefore there is this desire, which is a change. But there is also the threefold solidarity which France shows toward Africa:

First, political solidarity, and when I say first I mean that it is primarily solidarity with the African states in their struggle against apartheid and more precisely on the Namibian problem today, the fact that we have adopted a clear stance and that we became involved right from the first days of the government installed by Francois Mitterrand and the action we are taking in the Namibian affair have all been a clear signal to the Africans.

The second kind of solidarity, which is also new if not in what it says at least in the effects it has, is economic solidarity, it is true that people talked about raw materials and the common fund, but the specific intention to draw the obvious consequences from this when it came to the new international economic order was strangely absent.

Now you will notice that for each stance adopted by the government since 21 May there has been a corresponding action. For instance in the EEC we advocated new funds for STABEX to effectively cover the drop in export revenue, it was largely thanks to France's effort that it was possible to sign and implement the agreement on cocoa; and at the Paris conference on the least developed countries France asserted its intention to double its public aid for development in real terms during the 7-year term, increasing it from 0.35 percent to 0.7 percent of GNP outside the overseas departments and territories and within this increase to double in real terms our public aid for development to the least developed countries between now and 1985.

Finally, the third type of solidarity is in the security sphere, in which we have shown our intention to stand by the African countries in face of the threats hanging over them.

With regard to this third point you may say that this is nothing new and that in this case we are in the same situation as the previous goverment. I would like to draw a distinction here too, because at the same time we clearly told our partners that France's pledge on the African states' external security was accompanied by a strict intention not to interfere in internal affairs. This strict intention not to interfere was seen in the way in which the French military advisers and troops stationed in the Central African Republic behaved last spring when many people were urging us to launch a "leftwing barracuda" (Note : from the name of the operation in which French soldiers intervened in the Central African Republic to overthrow Bokassa) to follow the "rightwing barracuda." We refused to do so. And the French troops stationed in Africa received new instructions enjoining them to keep out of states' internal affairs.

Thus there is a change of attitude here too. It is true that there is probably some continuity in African policy, as in any policy, but there is nonetheless more than just a slight change along these three lines.

LE MATIN: Let's return to the Paris summit. What is the purpose of a French-African summit? Is it just the pleasure of meeting each other?

Jean-Pierre Cot: Aside from the pleasure of meeting each other I think that the main purpose is the usefulness of meeting each other. I think that for the heads of state the main point is that they can meet and discuss the essential points, in other words political questions, without keeping the company amused with a technical or economic agenda like those at past summits. The main point is being able to have direct discussions on the way in which problems are posed and on acute and important problems (I am thinking of the Sahara: it is not pointless for the Moroccans and Mauritanians to meet) as well as on Chad or the Horn of Africa. I think it not only pleasant but useful for the African heads of state to have an opportunity to discuss things with Francois Mitterrand, and from this viewpoint I think that the lack of an agenda makes things more effective.

Nonetheless a summit meeting has both advantages and limitations. It is certainly not possible to draw up a common policy or reach practical decisions in 48 hours. The very nature of this type of meeting is to give a political thrust to a number of issues and do as much as possible to settle some major or minor problems which may exist.

LE MATIN: People are, of course, thinking about Chad.

Jean-Pierre Cot: Chad will certainly be one of the topics of conversation among the heads of state owing to its importance and also owing to the fact that the OAU will be widely represented by a large number of its members. There is no doubt that the support the summit may be able to give to the policy adopted by the Chad National Unity Transition Government and to the implementation of the Nairobi resolution will be a very valuable factor at a decisive point, because with the Goukouni government's call for the withdrawal of the Libyan troops we have reached a key point, and this new impetus may be particularly welcome.

LE MATIN: What is France seeking in Chad?

Jean-Pierre Cot: The French policy is one of support for the OAU in implementing the Nairobi resolution. When we came to power we observed that there was a Chad government which seemed to be the authentic expression of all the component parts of Chadian unity, that that government had received support from or, I would venture to say, reinvestiture by the OAU in Nairobi. In addition we observed that that summit had established a procedure for asserting Chad's unity, territorial integrity and sovereignty which depended on the constitution of an inter-African force intended to replace the Libyan troops.

We felt obliged to support that resolution: We have duties toward Chad, if only because we behaved badly there in the past. All French diplomacy's efforts have been aimed at the implementation of the Nairobi resolution, helping the Africans and primarily the Chad Government itself to secure the implementation of this resolution. That is why we tried this summer to encourage, through diplomatic action, the formation of the inter-African force. That is why we have tried to speed up the process over the past few weeks, seeing that the inter-African force was being set up rather slowly.

Owing to the deterioration in Chad's internal situation which was brought to his knowledge by the Chad Government, Francois Mitterrand felt it necessary to announce in Cancun the French intention to aid the formation of the inter-African force by providing financial, material and logistical support for the states which, if necessary, would provide the contingents. In addition, since the Chad Government requested modest material aid for the integrated national army, we thought it necessary to meet the request in view of the emergency. But in this affair we want to act within the framework of the OAU efforts and help the Africans take responsibility for their own security problem in Chad and elsewhere, and this will always be our doctrine.

We do not want France to seem to be interfering in African affairs. We want as little presence in Africa as possible. But, as I told you before, we think that there are external security problems which the African states present to us as such, and we will not shirk our responsibilities in this sphere.

COOLING OF RELATIONS WITH PRC NOTED

LD110956 Paris Domestic Service in French 0700 GMT 11 Nov 81

[Excerpts] It was a game of ping-pong which brought Beijing and Washington closer together; it is a love story which is causing a serious cooling of relations between Paris and China. The affair of the Chinese fiancee sentenced to 2 years in a camp for wanting to marry a French diplomat has caused a minor diplomatic crisis. I would add that in Paris Claude Cheysson himself, the minister of external relations, has said that this sentencing of the young Chinese woman has affected relations between Paris and Beijing.

SWISS FOREIGN MINISTER'S PARIS TALKS REPORTED

PM111157 Paris LE MONDE in French 8-9 Nov 81 p 2

[Text] "We discussed the French nationalizations. I am happy to see that the French Government is in no way involving the Swiss Government in these transactions because they come under private law," Mr Aubert said after a meeting with Mr Mitterrand this Friday which ended the Swiss foreign minister's 2-day visit to Paris. The Swiss Government "bears no responsibility" in the PARIBAS [Bank of Paris and the Netherlands] affair, Mr Aubert also said, and his interlocutors do not dispute it. "It is not a French-Swiss problem but a French-French problem," Mr Mitterrand told the Swiss minister.

The question of the flight of capital abroad was not raised. In short, Mr Aubert concluded, "We note that there are no disputes between France and Switzerland. We have been greatly touched by the warmth, hospitality and cordiality with which we have been received." Moreover it is a coincidence that the Swiss head of the Swiss Federal Political Department of Foreign Affairs has come to Paris for annual political consultations at a time when Switzerland is implicated in the repercussions of the nationalizations, but, of course, this matter was discussed.

When he met with Mr Aubert Thursday, External Relations Minister Cheysson stressed that the nationalizations should in no way "undermine the friendly intimate and serene nature of French-Swiss relations," the Quai d'Orsay stated. The French minister explained the philosophy of French economic policy and stressed that France's economic system is still one of a market open to the outside world. He added that the PARIBAS affair is an attack on the national heritage while admitting that the Bern government was not involved, but during the talks between experts held on Friday morning it was decided that the two governments will increase their exchange of information on financial affairs.

A Deadline in Madrid

The talks between the ministers related principally to major international problems (a great similarity of intention emerged) and particularly to the Madrid CSCE conference. The two governments apparently think that the Madrid meeting will inevitably be suspended on the 28 December deadline and that the suspension will be short or long -- 1 year or more -- depending on the possibility for progress which has or has not emerged. Switzerland is apparently prepared to take initiatives, individually or within the neutral group, to break the deadlock on the main outstanding question: the definition of a geographical zone in which "confidence-building measures" could be taken between East and West.

At a meeting with Mr Chandernagor, minister responsible for European affairs, Mr Aubert stressed in particular his interest in the Council of Europe, the only political forum, together with the CSCE, in which Switzerland participates. He also discussed the possibility and appropriateness of involving his country in the measures to revive and extend community activities proposed by France.

INDIAN PRIME MINISTER GANDHI'S OFFICIAL VISIT

Meeting With Pope

AU101021 Rome ANSA in English 0822 GMT 10 Nov 81

[Excerpts] Vatican City, 10 Nov (ANSA) -- The possibility that Pope John Paul II might visit India was reportedly one of the items discussed by the pontiff Monday in a talk with visiting Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi. However, such a project could only come to pass if present ties between India and the Vatican were improved, according to leaks from those in Gandhi's delegation here. Relations between the two sides have recently been disturbed by India's laws against proselytizing.

As is usual with private audiences with the pope, Vatican sources disclosed no details on what was said between John Paul and the Indian leader yesterday. Gandhi arrived in Italy Monday for a four-day official visit with Italian leaders.

Altogether, there are today around 10 million Catholics in India, most of them following the Latin rite. 40 percent of all Indian Catholics are to be found in Kerala. Pope Paul the Sixth was the first pope ever to visit India when he attended the international eucharistic congress in Bombay in 1964. Diplomatic ties have existed between India and the Holy See for some time. However a couple of years ago tensions built up between Indian Catholics and the New Delhi government with the approval of laws that sharply limit the presence in the country of foriegn missionaries and, according to the bishops, curtail the number of conversions. These laws against proselytization have provoked harsh polemics between the Catholic hierarchy and Gandhi herself.

The meeting Monday between the Indian leader and the pope was in part prompted by the wish to overcome these problems in the spirit of India's traditional tolerance observers claimed. Apart from the recent legislative difficulties, Christians in India have always found it hard to integrate themselves positively in a world which is almost entirely permeated by the Hindu mentality. Pope John Paul II, who in Asia has already visited the Philippines and Japan, is said to be eager to visit India, a country that if tradition is true was first evangelized by one of the original twelve disciples.

Evening Reception Speeches

AU111910 Rome ANSA in English 1503 GMT 11 Nov 81

[Excerpts] Rome, 11 Nov (ANSA) -- Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi, midway through her official four-day visit to Italy today, was the guest of honor last evening at a reception hosted by the Italian prime minister, Giovanni Spadolini, who praised her contribution to "the development and industrialization of India and this nation's role in affirming the conditions of justice, stability and peace in the world."

Picking up the leitmotif of the battle against hunger in the world and underdevelopment which ran through Mrs Gandhi's consultations with Italian leaders Tuesday, Spadolini declared that the fight against poverty and underdevelopment is one of the cardinal areas in Rome government foreign policy. In this connection, he recalled Italy's commitment to boost development aid to back the efforts underway in developing countries to complete their social and economic emancipation.

Referring to relations between the industrialized northern hemisphere and the developing countries of the southern half of the world, the Italian head of government affirmed that Italy favors the creation of a lasting and more equitable world economic order and a "united south capable of enacting comprehensive expansion projects....participating in the basic choices which touch on the destiny of all mankind."

The prime minister also had worlds of praise for Mrs Gandhi's part in India's leadership role in the movement of "genuinely non-aligned countries."

In her response, the Indian prime minister echoed her remarks delivered earlier in the day in a statement ot the 21st biennial session of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) in Rome in which she denounced military spending.

Last night, she declared that, "one of the major causes of the present world crisis is the fact that so much of the world's income is spent on armaments. The excalation of confrontation cannot fail to touch on all areas of the world," she argued and then appealed: "let us make certain that the warning Dante placed over the gates of hell, 'leave all hope behind those who enter here,' does not come to pass on this earth."

The first Indian head of government to visit Italy went on to say that she was aware that, "Italy would like peace to prevail in Europe and all around the world. It is time for all the governments to recognize the profound sense of insecurity and fear afflicting the minds of people beyond all national boundaries and political system," she declared and added, "sooner or later democratic peoples' desire for peace must be reflected in the acts of their government."

Referring to relations between her country and Italy, Mrs Gandhi voiced appreciation for Italy's assistance to Indian enterprises and noted, "facts deny the ideas advanced by some rich countries which have erected trade barriers against the imports from developing countries and maintain that these imports can cause unemployment."

The Indian prime minister opened the second day of her visit here yesterday by meeting with Senate Speaker Amintore Fanfani for what was described in a communique as a friendly discussion which followed talks they have had in the past in Rome and New Delhi. In the afternoon, Mrs Gandhi addressed the 21st FAO biennial conference, which opened here Saturday, on the inroads made by massive military spending in outlays to reduce hunger in the world.

The prime minister, who also holds the Indian portfolio for defense, met later with the Italian defense chief, Lelio Lagorio, for a survey of issues of mutual interest for India and Italy. Accompanied by Lagorio, Mrs Gandhi laid a wreath on the tomb of Italy's unknown soldier and was then taken to Rome's Capitoline Hill for a meeting with the Communist mayor of thè city, Ugo Vetere, and members of the City Council. In her statement on this historic ground, the prime minister drew analogies between India and Italy and recalled that both countries with such ancient orgins achieved political independence and unity relatively recently.

Also on Tuesday, the Indian prime minister met with a delegation from Italy's state-owned Ente Nazionale Idrocarburi, led by ENI chief of international affairs Giuseppe Ratti, for an examination of the prospects for tightening relations between the Indian state energy agency and ENI. Mrs Gandhi also met yesterday with officials of the Italian Instituto per la Ricostruzione Industriale (IRI), the huge state-controlled holding and Europe's largest single employer.

Joint Ventures Negotiated

BK110959 Delhi Domestic Service in English 0830 GMT 11 Nov 81

[Text] India and Italy have decided to set up joint industrial ventures in third countries for export purposes. A high power Italian economic delegation will visit India shortly to follow up the proposal already agreed upon. The agreement for this was reached in Rome after extensive 3-day talks between officials of the two countries. The talks began immediately after the first meeting of Prime Minister Mrs Gandhi and Italian Prime Minister Giovanni Spadolini on Monday in which both the leaders emphasized the need for expanding the existing economic ties.

Meanwhile, Italy has shown keenness toward enlarging the areas of cooperation in several fields including petroleum, chemicals, agriculture, ship building and leather goods. The agreement envisages cooperation in turn key projects, technical assistance in areas where India is in a position to develop it further and provision of consultancy services and exports. The agreement provides for the best possible use of Italian technology and India's technical and industrial infrastructure.

Official Talks Concluded

LD111832 Rome Domestic Service in Italian 1600 GMT 11 Nov 81

[Text] The official visit to Italy by Indian Primer Minister Indira Gandhi concluded with a lunch at the Quirinal given by President Pertini. The Indian prime minister is leaving for France, the last stage of her trip to Europe, tomorrow morning. This morning's talks with Premier Spadolini and Foreign Minister Colombo noted the identity of views on problems of bilateral relations and the common willingness to increase trade and cultural exchanges between Italy and India. Differences clearly emerged as regards the evaluation of some international problems, such as the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan. India is a member of the Nonaligned Movement while Italy is an integral part of the Western world and NATO. Pertini and Spadolini have been officially invited by Indira Gandhi to visit India.

Gandhi, Spadolini News Conference

AU112046 Rome ANSA in English 1935 GMT 11 Nov 81

[Text] Rome, 11 Nov (ANSA) -- Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi met Italian head of state Sandro Pertini today and later appeared Premier Giovanni Spadolini and Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo [words indistinct]. Mrs Gandhi will fly to Paris tomorrow where she will conclude her series of official visits in Europe which began in Bulgaria.

The Indian minister's talk with Pertini, [words indistinct] included a survey of a number of problems of mutual interest to the two nations in international affairs and prospects for the two countries' commitments towards peace and economic progress of all peoples. During the meeting, the prime minister invited Pertini and Spadolini to India for an official visit and the Italian heads of state and government accepted their invitations. Mrs Gandhi was then the guest of honor at a luncheon hosted by the Italian president. Spadolini, addressing the [word indistinct] press conference [words indistinct].

In her statement to newsmen, Mrs Indira Gandhi reiterated the New Delhi government [words indistinct] and continue to do so, the prime minister said in reference to the situation in Afghanistan. "With this said," she continued, "judgements cannot (?vary) according to class stances. The West must act consistently." Replying to a question on the European [words indistinct] on Afghanistan, Mrs Gandhi [words indistinct] would have little value without the agreement of all the sides involved.

In another remark to the press, the prime minister [word indistinct] the military build-up in [word indistinct] by affirming that, "we have been the target of aggression more than once. How could we take care of the solutions to our problems if we stopped (?being) free?" she asked.

When questioned about her friendship treaty linking her country and the Soviet Union, Mrs Gandhi remarked that the document "contains no secret clauses and respects our status as a non-aligned country." On the problem of (?underdevelopment), the Indian prime minister said there was no [words indistinct] combatting it (?and indeed) "the peace of poverty is constantly changing in India and differing approaches are required."

In his opening remarks to the press conference, the Italian premier dwelt at length on the matter of North-South relations, also covered in his conversations with Mrs Gandhi, and reported that both sides agreed on the need for cooperation and a spirit of conciliation as emerged at the end of the [words indistinct] summit held in October in Cancun, Mexico. Enlarging the issue, Spadolini said he was convinced that "real peace cannot be [word indistinct] without the conditions of justice" and that there "can be lasting economic expansion so long as there is a deep gap between health and [?inequitable] conditions of development." The Italian head of government [words indistinct] on the battle against hunger in the world emerging in the European Community.

Earlier in the day, in the meeting between Spadolini and Mrs Gandhi, the Italian premier announced Italy's intentions of considerably stepping up technical cooperation programs with India and beef up Italy's credit line to the sub-continent. The chief of government discussed this development in the context of India's sixth five-year development program. Spadolini also disclosed plans made by Italian agencies such as the Ente Nationale Indrocarburi to send delegations to India in the near future.

SPADOLINI COMMENTS ON UN TALKS ON SINAI FORCE

AU101546 Rome ANSA in English 1535 GMT 10 Nov 81

[Text] Rome, 10 Nov (ANSA) -- Italy and Great Britain hold perfectly identical viewpoints on participation in the multinational peacekeeping forces for the Sinai, Italian Prime Minister Giovanni Spadolini confirmed today to members of the press on his return from London and a day of bilateral discussions with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

Defining the gist of their conversations, Spadolini said that "we acted with the same caution, the same concern, the same intentions.

"We are now in contact with the various allied chancelleries, in view of agreeing on a solution to the problems still pending," Spadolini continued "which corresponds to the will of the four nations participating in the multinational forces (Great Britain, Italy, France and Holland) to perform a fully European function and to bring an effective contribution to the cause of peace and co-existence in that region, beginning with the actualization of the Camp David agreements but expanding (those accords) to all of the protagonists on the Mideast scene," the prime minister concluded.

COLOMBO SCHEDULED TO VISIT YUGOSLAVIA 13 NOV

AU112048 Rome ANSA in English 1953 GMT 11 Nov 81

[Text] Rome, 11 Nov (ANSA) -- Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo will fly to Belgrade Friday to begin two days of consultations with the head of Yugoslav diplomacy, Josip Vrhovec [words indistinct] President Sergej Kraigher.

On the agenda for Colombo's talks in Belgrade, Foreign Ministry sources disclosed [words indistinct] the Soviet-United States negotiations opening November 30 in Geneva on cruise missiles, the denuclearization of the Balkans and other matters of mutual interest to the two nations.

The Italian and Yugoslav foreign ministers are expected to cover the situation in the Middle East, the Madrid Conference on European Cooperation and Security, tensions in the Mediterranean region and the Italian-Maltese treaty on the neutrality of Malta.

Colombo and (Vrhovec?) met three weeks ago in Gorizia, in Italy, and are likely to continue a discussion of bilateral relations, including the Italo-Yugoslav Osimo border agreement.

CALVO-SOTELO, SAHAGUN CONTINUE TALKS TO HEAL SPLIT

PM111543 Madrid ABC in Spanish 8 Nov 81 p 5

[Excerpt] Madrid -- The Union of the Democratic Center [UCD] press bureau released the following communique yesterday evening concerning UCD Chairman Agustin Rodriguez Sahagun's meeting today with Prime Minister Leopoldo Calvo-Sotelo:

"According to UCD leadership sources, party Chairman Agustin Rodriguez Sahagun met this morning with Prime Minister Leopoldo Calvo-Sotelo, with a view to continuing an examination, in an atmosphere of shared reflection, of solutions to the various aspects of the present situation in the parliamentary group, the party and government activity, which they agreed to submit soon to the party bodies concerned.

"These talks will continue in the next few days within a comprehensive framework, which will make it possible to reach real and effective solutions to the problems that exist in various fields.

"Following yesterday's talks, which will be continued in the next few days, both the prime minister and the party chairman considered it advisable to make no statements until specific solutions are reached and presented to the party bodies concerned, which must then approve them."

Sahagun Comments

PM111659 Madrid EL PAIS in Spanish 5 Nov 81 p 12

[Excerpt] Prime Minister Leopoldo Calvo-Sotelo talked for over 2 hours yesterday with Union of the Democratic Center [UCD] Chairman Agustin Rodriguez Sahagun about the situation in the ruling party and the circumstances of current Spanish political life.

Rodriguez Sahagun, who described some of those circumstances as "really worrying," asserted following the meeting that the taking over of the party chairmanship by Calvo-Sotelo had not even been discussed, and added that some "misunderstandings" which arose following the meeting Calvo-Sotelo held with several ministers Tuesday evening had been dispelled.

Rodriguez Sahagun was referring to the comments made by a government spokesman following the inner cabinet meeting, according to which the most likely solution to the situation was the taking over the UCD chairmanship by Calvo-Sotelo. The Centrist chairman said that these statements had perhaps not been interpreted correctly.

Centrist sources believed yesterday that in view of the "Suarezists'" opposition, Calvo-Sotelo could have reconsidered his plans, which he would confine to replacing UCD Secretary General Rafael Calvo. According to other sources, this could be connected with comprehensive negotiations concerning the electoral committee, which decides on the drawing up of electoral lists and which will comprise, together with the party's chairman and secretary general, three members chosen by the Executive Committee from among its members. The meeting held by the prime minister and party chairman yesterday proceeded, again according to Rodriguez Sahagun, in a warm, understanding and calm atmosphere, and dealt mainly with four groups of issues. First of all, the statements in favor of a special congress at which alliances should be studied -- made specifically by "moderate platform" leader Oscar Alzaga -- were analyzed.

The prime minister and party chairman both believe that a special congress is inadvisable, because it could even increase tensions in the party, although it is not ruled out either, if it is really necessary because of a need for clarification -- although the party bodies have repeatedly reaffirmed "our status as the UCD and our intention to run in the next general election as such."

Second, the possibility of calling an election for the post of parliamentary group spokesman in the congress [of deputies] was discussed. Rodriguez Sahagun said that the pros and cons of such an election had been assessed and that he would speak today with current spokesman Miguel Herrero, as well as with the spokesman in the senate in due course.

The departure of some of the party's parliamentarians was also discussed: The Centrist chairman said he had informed Calvo-Sotelo about the meeting he had held in the morning with some of them and about their pledge to support the UCD in parliament.

There was also analysis "in depth of the general circumstances of Spanish political life at present, some of them really worrying, which have arisen over the last few days," Sahagun said. When he explained next his meeting at the Congress of Deputies, the UCD chairman did not specify the facts which enabled him to make that assessment, and when it was pointed out to him that Felipe Gonzalez had described the situation as objectively good a few minutes earlier, he said that it is necessary to contribute to psychological stability and to the consolidation of the democratic and party system.

Efforts To Find Formulas for Solution

Last, Rodriguez Sahagun said that over the next few days he will hold further meetings with the prime minister and possibly with other party leaders in order to submit to a coming Executive Committee meeting specific proposals for resolving the situation and "securing a strong UCD capable of winning the next election." Once the Executive Committee has studied these formulas "we will assess the advisability ot taking the matter to the Political Council," the Centrist chairman explained.

SOCIAL DEMOCRAT LEADER DEFENDS DEFECTION FROM UCD

PM101615 Barcelona LA VANGUARDIA in Spanish 5 Nov 81 p 9

[Text] Madrid, 4 November -- "Our departure from the Union of the Democratic Center [UCD] is an extremely important and well-pondered decision, motivated by Spain's interests at this very difficult time." This is how Francisco Fernandez Ordonez opened a press conference given to explain the Social Democratic sector's reasons for leaving the ruling party.

Fernandez Ordonez explained that the parliamentarians leaving the party met this morning with [UCD chairman] Rodriguez Sahagun, to whom they expressed their desire to cancel their membership as of today but to remain within the parliamentary group until they can formally establish their own group. "We gave our word that we would provide loyal support in parliament for the center group and prevent parliamentary instability."

The press conference was also attended by Carmela Garcia Moreno, who resigned today from her post as director general of the youth section, Carmen Solano, Gonzalez Seara and Rodriguez Castanon. Fernandez Ordonez denied that this decision constitutes a destabilizing maneuver. "We reject any suggestion of destabilization. We believe that our stance will clarify the nature of the UCD and of our group. We therefore believe that other ideological sections of the Center party should follow our example. We will do nothing to force early elections to be held because we believe that it would not be good for the country. If we are leaving the UCD it is because of a profound feeling of patriotism."

Forming Parliamentary Group

Fernandez Ordonez said that meanwhile they would not join the mixed group but would await approval of the new Congress of Deputies regulations so as to form their own group. With regard to the group's future, he said that "We have established an independent political platform with aspirations as a political party. We are convinced that Spain needs the political blueprint that we are advocating. Among the hypotheses put forward, perhaps the most viable is the creation of a party to be called Democratic Action."

No to "Pivotal" Party

He said that this new political group would not constitute a "pivotal" party -- "at least for the time being." He declined to specify the future party's political objectives, since he was not there to present a program, but he did say that "the present political map will change profoundly; the dualism between a conservative party and a socialist bloc will be broken. Our party is situated to the left of the UCD and to the right of the Spanish Socialist Workers Party [PSOE]. But it remains to be seen how events will evolve, before we shall know whether or not we will consitute a "pivotal" party. We believe it will be something different."

Asked about the Social Democratic ministers' stance, he said that "they are remaining in the government for reasons which we respect Adolfo Suarez, but it is not we who must make pronouncements about this sectors' intentions or motives." He also said that some rightwing sectors had insisted that the Social Democrats had no place within the UCD and that they had been told the same within the party.

Huge Electoral Gamble

At another juncture he acknowledged that the new party to be formed represents a huge electoral gamble and that it is not helped by the present electoral law, but said that they had been forced to take it. "We will try to do what hitherto we have been unable to do. We believe that there is a gap in the political spectrum and we will fight for it."

With regard to the possibility of forming electoral coalitions with other groups or running on PSOE tickets Fernandez Ordonez said that such decisions would be taken when the time comes, but that "our idea is to provide an autonomous and independent option. If this proves impossible we shall see what kind of political camp is formed and on the basis of that analysis we will set ourselves the option that seems to us most viable and consistent."

Socialist Alternative

He said that the traditional right regarded the UCD as its party "and exerted pressure for us to leave. We therefore felt an obligation to provide a credible alternative for nonsocialist change." He said that some entrepreneurial sectors had also exerted pressure for them to leave and he insisted repeatedly that the most important thing was not to jeopardize democracy. "This is why we will support the government on the fundamental issue, such as the budgets. Nevertheless, we will meticulously study other bills that conflict with our political outlook and will vote against them if we are not satisfied."

Fernandez Ordonez stressed that NATO entry did not influence his decision, "since we too voted for membership."

Broad Right

He denied any share of responsibility for the UCD's decline. "We have defended our positions because we believe that it was ethical to do so, because our voters were of the center and they elected us to bring about a political reform and a Spain different from the one that was being shaped. Our departure gives the UCD a chance to become a consistent right, which is preferable to an inconsistent right, which is what it was before. We too will have a chance to advocate real, undisguised change."

He said that other parliamentarians had said that they would have liked to join them but declined to do so because they wanted to form a homogeneous group. Others have not yet adopted a final stance. "Be that as it may, we are not worried about numbers, since when the British Social Democratic Party split from the Labor Party it comprised only three deputies. The same happened with Sa Carneiro and Giscard. What is important is the political blueprint which we are advocating, which we believe enjoys a large following in our society."

SWEDEN

REACTIONS TO TASS ALLEGATIONS OF ESPIONAGE

TASS 'Distortions' Asserted

LD102206 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 2100 GMT 10 Nov 81

[Text] The Soviet news agency TASS has accused Sweden of espionage against the Soviet Union. TASS quoted the Swedish publication PAX, published by the Swedish Peace and Arbitration Association. According to TASS, the espionage is carried out electronically and Sweden is alleged to be in close cooperation with spy organizations in several NATO countries.

According to Lars (Aangstrom), who is one of the authors of the article in PAX, TASS has distorted the information in the article to serve its own interests.

The accusations by TASS come only 5 days after the Soviet submarine grounded in Karlskrona Archipelago left Swedish waters. Permanent Under Secretary of State Leif Leifland said this evening that the accusation by TASS is probably the first step in a Soviet campaign against Sweden. He also said that official Soviet action [as heard] could be expected within a week or two.

NATO Links Denied

LD111146 Stockholm International Service in Swedish 1000 GMT 11 Nov 81

[Text] TASS writes that Sweden is conducting electronic espionage against the Soviet Union via the monitoring station on Lovo outside Stockholm. (Sven Wrang) asked the chief of the Swedish Armed Forces Radio Institute [Lars Lunggren] to comment on the report:

[Lunggren] It is no secret that we are engaged in radio intelligence as many other countries are.

[Question] What about the information you gather?
[Answer] I beg your pardon?

[Question] How do you use the information?
[Answer] We supply to our consumers information [words indistinct] of radio intelligence.

[Question] Who are these consumers?
[Answer] They are the commander in chief of the armed forces, the Ministry of Foreign Affairs and the National Police Board.

[Question] Is this information which you gather also conveyed to other countries?
[Answer] I cannot answer that question except to say that the Swedish Intelligence Service has contacts with foreign intelligence services. This [word indistinct] from the intelligence committee (?report) of 1974.

[Question] But you can't specify which countries they are?
[Answer] I do not want to reply to that.

[Question] It now appears from this that the monitoring station is linked to NATO's monitoring...
[Answer] That I can deny. That is not the case.

[Question] Thus that can be denied?
[Answer] Yes.

Defense Minister Statement

LD111206 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 1130 GMT 11 Nov 81

[Text] Defense Minister Torsten Gustafsson has said in a statement that Sweden has long been engaged in radio intelligence in order to observe military activities in our vicinity.

He also said that Sweden exchanges information with other countries when it is considered to be in our interests. But this takes place with each individual country. There is naturally no cooperation with NATO or other military alliances, it is noted in the defense minister's statement.

The statement is a reply to the accusations leveled by the Soviet news agency, TASS, to the effect that Sweden is conducting espionage through its monitoring of the areas in the Soviet Union.

NAVY SEARCHES KARLSKRONA AREA FOR SOVIET BEACONS

LD111308 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 1130 GMT 11 Nov 81

[Text] Today the Swedish Navy confirms to us that the crew on board the Soviet submarine presumably altered the navigation notes in order to mislead the Swedish Armed Forces. Commander Karl Andersson, who himself saw the notes, says that this was presumably done -- they were altered -- to make the Swedish Armed Forces believe that the submarine had taken a different route.

At the same time, the thorough examination of the waters off Karlskrona continues. There navy personnel are investigating whether the submarine has left behind anything of interest to the Swedes.

[Lars Adaktersson] The so-called vacuum-cleaning following the Soviet submarine affair continues. But the secrecy surrounding the work is great and it is difficult to obtain exact information. Today, however, Commander Karl Andersson confirmed in Karlskrona for our editorial staff that there are now, as he says, well-founded suspicions that the navigation notes onboard submarine 137 were cooked. That means that when Karl Andersson had the opportunity of examining the log book and the navigation notes onboard, he saw that certain information had been altered by the crew. These items of information are essential as the purpose is to establish how submarine 137 entered Swedish waters and why it was here.

Karl Andersson says today that they now have a fairly clear picture of the route of the submarine, but that it will be kept secret for the time being. No handwriting expert was ever used to establish whether the figures in the navigation notes were altered. Karl Andersson says that the crew's impatience prevented this, but he also said that with the naked eye it was possible to see that the notes had been altered.

The investigation committee, which is engaged in the continued charting of the submarine affair, is now directing its work on a search of the area outside Karlskrona, where the submarine was lying. Among other things, they want to check that the crew of submarine 137 has not placed any electronic beacons there which may be used later to navigate in Swedish waters. Approximately 50 men from the navy are busy on the task, using both divers and reconnaissance vessels, but they do not want to say whether they have found anything yet.

Reports from yesterday saying that a fisherman had found objects which might be thought to be a Soviet beacon were described today by Karl Andersson as insignificant. The fisherman has been questioned, but his discovery is not considered interesting. The so-called vacuum-cleaning will, however, continue with undiminished vigor for all next week too, Karl Andersson says.

FOREIGN MINISTER ON AFTERMATH OF SUB INCIDENT

LD111836 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 1700 GMT 11 Nov 81

[Text] We shall start with the first official reaction from the Soviet Union following the submarine affair. A commentator from the TASS news agency writes about the affair and maintains that there were no nuclear weapons onboard the Soviet submarine in Blekinge Archipelago. TASS also rejects the talk about a deliberate violation of Swedish territory and accuses the United States of leading the storm of opinion against the USSR. We asked Foreign Minister Ola Ullsten what he thinks about the Soviet comment today, and he is not satisfied:

[Begin recording] [Ullsten] It adds nothing new. We received neither a confirmation nor any denial that there were nuclear weapons onboard, so the suspicion remains, and in addition it is difficult for the Soviet Union now, after they refused to permit us to board, to have a look for ourselves to see how matters stood, to have any credibility regarding any information.

[Question] There are many sensational claims here. It is said, for example, that NATO experts examined the submarine.

[Answer] Yes, that is very sensational since it was our own experts from the Research Institute for National Defense who carried out the examination. We have not involved any foreign authorities at all or other authorities in this -- that goes without saying.

[Question] So the only people who have carried out examinations of the submarine as regards the radiation are Swedes? You can definitely confirm this?

[Answer] The only ones who did that are Swedes. I myself have met them and and discussed the result with them.

[Question] It is also claimed that uranium-238, this type of uranium, has nothing to do with nuclear weapons.

[Answer] Yes, that is both correct and wrong. What is correct is that measurements have shown that there is uranium-238 onboard, and other experts have said that there is no other sensible use for such material than a nuclear weapons charge, a nuclear charge. That is why we said that we suspect that there is such a thing, and that is also why we asked to go down to check the torpedoes to obtain confirmation on that point, but as you know we were not allowed to.

[Question] You have also heard that Swedish experts in such contexts can exchange information with experts in other countries, even though it is not organized within NATO. What kind of exchange is this and what kind of information do we exchange?

[Answer] It is clear that there is an exchange of information between various research institutes in this sphere as well as in other areas. There is nothing unusual about that.

[Question] Does it mean, for example, that you have already divulged some information to other countries about the observations you made on the submarine?

[Answer] The government has not had anything to do with such activity.

[Question] (?It is with) Swedish authorities, for example, defense experts?

[Answer] I assume that there is a customary exchange of experiences in technical matters with other institutions. Whether there is such an exchange concerning this material I do not know. What there is to say about this we have said publicly so there is not much to add.

[Question] Do you intend to protest in any way to the Russians or indicate to the Russians in any way that you are displeased about this way of interpreting information and material?

[Answer] We have no reason to protest against a comment which is very imprecisely worded and which essentially concerns reaction to comments by others, not the Swedish. It would perhaps have been more to the point if we had received a comment directed at us, to what we said to the Soviet Government. We have not yet received anything like that. [end recording]

ULLSTEN COMMENTS ON OFFICIAL SOVIET REPLY

LD112222 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 2130 GMT 11 Nov 81

[Excerpts] We start with the official Soviet comment to the submarine issue, which came late today. The Soviet Government has replied officially to the Swedish statement following the conclusion of the submarine drama. The reply is, above all, a rejection of the Swedish claim that the intrusion into Swedish waters was deliberate. The Swedish Government is accused of distorting facts. The question of nuclear weapons is not raised at all in the Soviet reply, which concludes with an appeal for mutual respect, cooperation and good neighborliness.

[Begin recording] [Unidentified correspondent] Ola Ullsten, what do you say about this Russian note, the reply to the Swedish protest?

[Answer] It is surprising that they do not touch on the question of whether the vessel was armed with nuclear weapons or not. In our note to the Soviet Government, we expressed a strongly founded suspicion that the vessel carried nuclear weapons. We are thus getting no response to that.

[Question] What might be the explanation for that?

[Answer] I cannot answer that. They touch on other aspects of the course of events to quite an extensive degree, but they say nothing about this matter. I do not know whether the reason is that they have something to hide or whether there is some other cause.

[Question] They say that the government -- the Swedish Government -- has "taken the path of distorting facts." These are rather tough words (?by them).

[Answer] There are no grounds for such a claim. We have protested against an unusually gross violation of Swedish neutrality and Swedish internal waters -- even a Swedish restricted military area -- and we have every reason to do that. And we further sharpened the protest when we had reason to believe that there were nuclear weapons onboard. We were also denied the opportunity of checking that information, which they should have given us, particularly if they wanted to maintain that they did not have such weapons.

[Question] The Soviet note ends in a rather moderate and conciliatory tone. What is one to say about that?

[Answer] Yes, it is conspicously moderate language, despite everything contained in this note; we shall take note of that.

CSCE DELEGATE: SUB INCIDENT 'HELSINKI VIOLATION'

LD101928 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 1700 GMT 10 Nov 81

[Text] The Soviet Union violated the Helsinki Act of 1975 when the Soviet submarine carrying nuclear weapons ran aground in Swedish waters. This was stated today by the Swedish chief delegate, Carl Johan Rappe, at the security conference in Madrid. A Soviet military expert at the conference reiterated the official Soviet explanation that the submarine had run aground following a fault in its navigation equipment.

ITALY'S SPADOLINI, COLOMBO END CONSULTATIONS

AU101103 Rome ANSA in English 0800 GMT 10 Nov 81

[Text] London, 10 Nov (ANSA) -- Italian Premier Giovanni Spadolini and Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo are due to leave London for home today at the end of talks with their British counterparts that ranged from the multinational peacekeeping force for the Sinai to the most urgent problems facing the European Economic Community. The talks the Italian leaders had with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington on Monday were to be seen in the framework of regular bilateral consultations between London and Rome.

In a press conference held last night the two heads of government said that Britain and Italy agreed on the question of participation in the Sinai force. Britain, Italy, Holland and France, in fact, are the four EEC nations which have declared their readiness to take part in the peacekeeping venture, whose backbone will come from the United States. Thatcher said that negotiations were underway between the U.S. and the EEC to formulate a declaration acceptable to both Egypt and Israel.

Sunday Israeli Premier Menachem Begin said that Israel will veto participation in the force from any European country which links its support to backing for the Venice Declaration.

An EEC summit in Venice in June 1980 European moves for a Middle Eastern peace by asserting that an overall and final settlement in the region could only be achieved if all parties, including the Palestinian Liberation Organization, are involved in the solution. (sentence as received)

Thatcher said that the EEC states consider the Venice Declaration as complementary to the Camp David accords.

Both the British and the Italian heads of government said that the document currently being debated in Washington was not yet ready.

Spadolini stressed that the multinational force for the Sinai was conceived of as a peace force, it is a part of the Camp David agreements but does not preclude a further evolution in the direction of indications to emerge in Venice where the European Community urged broader perspectives which would involve all the countries involved.

With regard to the eight point peace plan submitted by Saudi Arabia, both Spadolini and Thatcher saw it as a positive initiative. Point seven of the plan which in practice recognizes the right of Israel to exist within secure borders, is already a big step forward with regard to past Arab positions, the two leaders aaid. Spadolini saw it as a factor that could be integrated into a global peace process.

Yesterdays' talks also had an eye on the upcoming European Council of heads of state and government scheduled to take place here from November 26 - 27. The two sides touched on various community problems as well as the situations in Poland and Afghanistan.

In reply to a question, Thatcher denied that there was any disagreement among the Western European nations and the United States over relations between the West and the Soviet Union.

For his part, Spadolini said that, Italy attaches great importance to the upcoming US-USSR negotiations in Geneva on nuclear armaments. He added the implementation of 1979 agreements to modernize NATO missiles was essential to any viable relaunching of a dialogue between the two superpowers.

CABINET EXAMINES REPLY TO WALDHEIM ON TALKS

NC101805 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1730 GMT 10 Nov 81

[Text] At a special meeting today under President of the Republic Kiprianou, the Ministerial Council continued and concluded its discussion on the UN secretary general's evaluation of the intercommunal talks. The Ministerial Council also studied the draft document of reply to the Waldheim evaluation.

KIPRIANOU REFERS WALDHEIM PLAN TO TALKS TABLE

NC111345 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1130 GMT 11 Nov 81

[Text] Speaking today at a press conference in Nicosia, President of the Republic Spiros Kiprianou stressed that the correct way to deal with Waldheim's evaluation of the inter-Cypriot talks is to state our views on the text of the evaluation at the table of negotiations. The correct way to deal, Kiprianou stressed -- and this is what was finally decided upon -- is to state what elements we consider negative and why we consider them so; state what elements we consider positive and why; state where in our opinion there are gaps and why; state where in our opinion there is an error of assessment and explain why.

I have absolutely no doubt, President Kiprianou stressed,that this is the only correct tactic because our dispute is not with the UN secretary general; our dispute and essential disagreements are with the other side, even though we may disagree with the evaluation.

Kiprianou mentioned that after the submission of the Turkish proposals -- which were completely unacceptable -- the dialogue was heading toward a deadlock and he added that in light of this reality Waldheim submitted an evaluation, which in the viewpoint of the secretary general could help in the continuation of the dialogue in a fruitful manner. He said: I frimly believe that accepting the text of the evaluation as it is would be a mistake. It is not possible to accept it as it is because it contains negative elements. Rejecting it or following a tactic which would result in discouraging the secretary general would create a different state of affairs and a situation of dispute between the Greek Cypriot side, the Cyprus Government, on the one hand and the UN secretary general on the other, in addition to the fact that such a situation would cause unfavorable repercussions internationally, which in turn could have consequences in case of a new discussion of the Cyprus problem at the UN General Assembly. It should not elude our attention that this evaluation did not originate in any country, but with the UN secretary.

In order to stress my argument even more, President Kiprianou continued, I would say that even if this document had contained twice as many negative elements, the secretary general should not be discouraged nor should we reject the evaluation, but rather we should state our views at the table of negotiations.

If, President Kiprianou observed, this text were not to be tabled at the talks we would never have the opportunity to ascertain whether there is any change in the Turkish positions, that is -- the Turkish stance on those points of the text which are positive for us. Furthermore we would have denied the other side the opportunity to state its views -- if we were to discourage the secretary general -- and we would be under permanent and constant accusation that we disputed with the secretary general and rejected his evaluation. The other side could always claim that it would have accepted to discuss [the evaluation] and that it would have been willing to be conciliatory but that it had not been afforded the opportunity because of the Greek Cypriot side's completely negative stance.

Our responsibility, he stressed, is to constantly exert efforts to guarantee progress toward an honest solution of the Cyprus problem on the basis of the UN resolution and the summit agreements. Most certainly, whatever is outside the framework of the UN resolutions and the summit agreements cannot possibly be accepted. President Kiprianou stressed that what is of significance is that without abandoning our goals we should be positive toward all efforts emanating from within the UN framework.

Our goal, he reiterated, is to guarantee all the prerequisites for Cyprus' complete and true independence, sovereignty, territorial integrity and unity of the Cypriot state in a federal system. Our goal, President Kiprianou said, is to safeguard the people's inalienable rights, guarantee a nonaligned and demilitarized Cyprus and create conditions for political and economic unity.

Our goals, he stressed, are firm. However, tactics for guaranteeing and promoting them vary in accordance with developments. Kiprianou expressed the conviction that, with the policy which it has been decided to follow, we shall be able to see whether there will be a change in the Turkish stance so that substantive progress can be made. He added: Should these margins be exhausted and no progress be made, the next step will be the UN General Assembly.

Referring to his last visit to Athens, the president of the republic stressed again that there is unanimity in dealing with the problem.

ARCHBISHOP OBJECTS TO WALDHEIM IDEAS ACCEPTANCE

NC112039 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1730 GMT 11 Nov 81

[Text] In a cable addressed to President Kiprianou and Greek Prime Minister Papandreou, Archbishop Khrisostomos expresses strong disagreement over acceptance, as he puts it, of the ideas of UN Secretary General Waldheim as a basis for negotiations. The cable adds: With the acceptance of the Waldheim ideas, we actually render useless the UN resolutions, we become entagled in a labyrinth of procedures and we contribute to the derailment of the Cyprus issue from its correct basis by converting it from a question of invasion and occupation to an issue of bicommunal dispute.

The government spokesman has stated that President Kiprianou's statements at today's press conference fully answer all that the archbishop touches upon in his cable to the president of the republic. The spokesman said: It is particularly stressed that there has not been a question of accepting the Waldheim ideas as a basis for negotiation nor is there any danger of entanglement or derailment of the issue because the president, who spoke at length both on this point and on many other points, has explicitly stated that we will not accept solutions contrary to the UN resolutions and the summit agreements.

UN SUGGESTS MISSING PERSONS COMMITTEE MEETING

NC101639 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1400 GMT 10 Nov 81

[Text] Foreign Minister Rolandhis and UN Secretary General Special Envoy Gobbi met today and discussed the problem of the investigatory committee for the tracing of missing persons.

During the meeting a UN suggestion was made that the committee meet on 20 November to settle procedural difficulties through the submission of fresh proposals.

With the consent of the Committee of Relatives of Missing Persons and of the other Cypriot representatives attending the meeting, Mr Rolandhis reserved the expression of the Cypriot Government's position on this suggestion and the future actions on the whole question until there is a full briefing on the contents of the new proposals during the next few days.

The meeting, which was held at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, was also attended by Mr Mihailidhis, representative of the Greek Cypriot side on the committee; Reverend Khristoforos, chairman of the Committee of Relatives of Missing Persons; members of the committee and Foreign Ministry officials. Mr Gobbi was accompanied by senior political adviser Thorn Berry.

In the meantime, the UN press spokesman in Cyprus issued a statement today saying that substantive progress has been made, thus making the committee on missing persons able to resume its important mission by clarifying and settling the pending procedural issues. The statement adds that Mr Illioud, the UN secretary general's representative on the committee, has called a committee meeting for 20 November to submit to it general proposals in connection with the procudure and the way of functioning of the committee.

STUDENT UNION SETS 15 NOV MARCH ON U.S. EMBASSY

NC102241 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 2200 GMT 10 Nov 81

[Text] A 3-day celebration of the Polytechnic anniversary, from 13 to 15 November, was decided by the Central Council of the National Student Union of Greece [EFEE]. The observances will end with a gathering Sunday afternoon at the Polytechnic and a march to the U.S. Embassy. An EFEE statement calls upon youths and workers to take part in these observances.

GOVERNMENT TO SEEK REMOVAL OF NUCLEAR WARHEADS

NC112237 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 2200 GMT 11 Nov 81

[Text] Deputy Minister to the Prime Minister Maroudhas has stated that, regardless of any other possible Balkan plans, Greece will proceed with its efforts to remove nuclear warheads from its territory. This statement was made at the foreign press center and has been reported by international agencies. The deputy minister said: The government will act unilaterally in pursuing the removal of nuclear arms and hopes the creation of a nuclear-free Balkan zone will become possible. Furthermore, the deputy minister said that the negotiations for the future of U.S. military bases in Greece, which are expected to open at the beginning of next year, will be a separate question from the issue of Greece's participation in NATO.

Reporting the relevant information, ASSOCIATED PRESS recalls that Prime Minister Papandreou had noted that this country is in the unique position of a state which is threatened by another state of the same alliance which, moreover, does not grant guarantees for Greece's eastern borders.

PAPANDREOU, IRAQ'S 'AZIZ TALK TO NEWSMEN 10 NOV

NC101534 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1230 GMT 10 Nov 81

[Text] Also today, Prime Minister Papandreou had talks with Iraqi Deputy Prime Minister Tariq 'Aziz who arrived in Athens yesterday. The talks began at the political office at 1200. After the 1 and 1/2 hour talk, Prime Minister Papandreou spoke to journalists and said the following:

I would like to repeat how pleased I am to have received Mr 'Aziz. We had the opportunity to exchange views on a very wide spectrum of issues. The conclusion is that we will have close cooperation and exchange of views, products and ideas in all sectors. Mr Papandreou concluded: On the occasion of Mr 'Aziz's departure, I send warm greetings to Iraqi President Saddam Husayn and I hope to have the pleasure to welcome him here also.

Iraqi Deputy Prime Minister Tariq 'Aziz said the following: At the beginning of my meeting with Mr Papandreou, I conveyed to him President Saddam Husayn's greetings and his great wish, as well as that of the Iraqi people, to strengthen our bilateral relations. We pay great importance to our cooperation with Greece for historical reasons and because both our countries are in the same region. Mr 'Aziz continued: We have common views and principles with the friendly Greek people and with our great friend Mr Andreas Papandreou, PASOK leader and your country's prime minister. We had sincere and friendly talks on all issues of joint interest, bilateral relations, the development of the situation in our area and international problems. I can say that both of us have fully understood the other's positions. Mr 'Aziz added: There are many issues on which our views are identical, which is an important prerequisite for our cooperation, present and future. We, Iraq and the Arab Socialist Party, consider Mr Andreas Papandreou as a brilliant socialist leader and a brilliant leader of independence. The Iraqi deputy prime minister concluded: I am happy over my visit which, unfortunately, is short but so successful. I am satisfied with its outcome.

In reply to journalists who asked him to be more specific about the bilateral economic exchanges, Mr Papandreou said:

I think it is too early to say anything particular on this. We have joint programs and we look forward to joint investments in certain sectors.

To another question if the Iraqi-Iranian dispute was discussed, Mr Papandreou replied:

I was briefed accordingly and I can say that life in Iraq is normal in all respects. Basically, Iraq protects its integrity from the Iranian regime's aggressive actions.

The Iraqi official is expected to leave for Baghdad tonight.

Trade Increase Discussed

NC102033 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1930 GMT 10 Nov 81

[Text] During their meeting today, Prime Minister Papandreou and Iraqi Deputy Prime Minister Tariq 'Aziz discussed the increase in trade exchanges between Greece and Iraq. The Papandreou-'Aziz talks have created the framework for the conclusion of many agreements which are expected to be implemented during December. Along with this, Iraq made a proposal for repairs by and purchases from the Greek war industry. Decisions on this question will be announced later.

OFFICIAL DENIES AFP CYPRUS WALDHEIM PAPER CLAIM

NC102253 Athens Domestic in Greek 2200 GMT 10 Nov 81

[Text] In reference to an AFP report from Nicosia that the Cyprus Government has accepted the Waldheim ideas, a government spokesman stated: The Greek Government is in a position to know that the Cyprus Government reserved its right to present its evaluation on the ideas of the UN secretary general's plan if and when this is presented as a document at the negotiations table.

PAPER SEEKS ANSWER ON KARAMANLIS HEALTH RUMOR

NC111716 Athens AVRIANI in Greek 10 Nov 81 pp 1, 7

[Excerpt] Rumors that the health of the president of the republic has deteriorated have circulated widely of late. We do not know the origin of these rumors. However, according to the "disseminators" of this "news," the "deterioration" in Mr Karamanlis' health has been apparent from changes in his behavior and looks at public appearances since spring. This view is being strengthened by his frequent "sudden" absences from official gatherings such as the dinner the mayor of Thessaloniki gave in his honor and the celebrations of the city's liberation.

What is being said about Mr Karamanlis' illness creates very bitter public comment and burning questions. This is why AVRIANI -- which has promised "to feel the public's pulse" and not hide any news -- has decided (by going beyond the delicate, human side) to bring the rumor to light today and express the opinion that the issue of "the president's health" is not a personal matter but a composite problem which concern all the people. AVRIANI sincerely wishes -- putting aside the known differences that it has with the Karamanlis family and circle -- the rumors to be simply...rumors!...

Beyond the wishes, however, a sincere statement is imperative. Those who issue the statement should see to it that it will responsibly brief the people and not merely confine itself to a simple denial of the news...

KKE CENTRAL COMMITTEE PLENUM RESOLUTION

NC060649 Athens RIZOSPASTIS in Greek 5 Nov 81 p 3

["Text" of resolution issued by the KKE Central Committee plenum 4 November -- date of plenum not given]

[Text] 1. The election phase of the showdown between the forces of change and the rightwing has closed with a big victory by the democratic forces. The parliamentary majority was taken away from the rightwing and passed to the forces that in one way or another are for change. The KKE has reinforced its strength. PASOK has wrested a self-contained parliamentary majority and formed a government.

With its long-term struggles against foreign dependency and oligarchy; with its steadfast, unwavering front against the rightwing; with the working out and distribution of the targets for a true change; with its united struggling policy in the people's movement, the KKE contributed decisively to the shaping of the big wave of change and the rightwing's defeat.

The elections were held under a complicated international situation; in a period of tension and cold war agression by U.S. imperialism, as well as its military provocations in the Middle East and the Mediterranean; in a period when NATO and the Americans, in particular, were increasing their pressure to foil democratic developments in Greece; under conditions of heightening anticommunism and dangermongering.

Under this state of affairs, the increase in the KKE's parliamentary strength constituted a praiseworthy success, all the more so since it was accomplished despite the efforts of the established and sections of the urban press to give the election battle the character of a showdown between two parties. The oligarchy's plans to isolate the KKE have failed. The KKE has confirmed that it constitutes a solid force that can withstand and develop even in difficult showdowns.

The KKE has emerged from the election battle stronger among the people, has developed links with broader levels and increased its political influence to a much greater extent than indicated by its parliamentary strength.

In the elections for the European Parliament, the KKE has emerged with more strength despite the weaknesses of its election work in this sector.

2. The Central Committee's appraisal is that the party was correct in bringing forward the slogan that the KKE must participate in the second distribution of votes despite the big difficulties to attain it.

There were two particular ways of wresting the parliamentary majority from the rightwing under the existence of the gangsterite electoral law. One way was the overwhelming vote for PASOK, something that the KKE could not achieve. The other was for the KKE to participate in the second distribution, which demanded 17 percent of the votes. The latter way certainly secured the taking of the parliamentary majority away from the rightwing and more prerequisites for postelection developments toward a true change.

Our party brought forward the second way. For a series of reasons, despite the tremendous work done, it was not possible for our party's true strength to be expressed through the elections to the corresponding degree. The main reason was that the attitude "let the rightwing leave and then we will see" prevailed, a fact that greatly strengthened the trend of the overwhelming vote for PASOK. This trend was, moreover, strengthened by PASOK's declarations for self-existence in combination with its negative stand on the question of cooperation among all the forces of change. This stand by PASOK created uncertainty about the formation of a democratic government that would be based on all the forces of change. Thus, to a considerable extent, the erroneous theory of the "stepping stone" succeeded.

Certain weaknesses that appeared during the election battle, mainly in understanding and promoting the essence of the second distribution slogan, affected the election results to a certain extent, but they were not determining factors. The slogan calling for the party to participate in the second distribution helped in not limiting the whole issue to a political showdown between PASOK and New Democracy; it alerted the members and followers of the party and of KNE [Greek Communist youth]; it decisively helped the opening toward the broad masses of the people and, to a considerable extent, in confronting the psychology of the "lost vote"; and it contributed to the party's successful waging of this difficult election battle.

3. The election battle has generally been waged properly. All the party organizations, despite their specific weaknesses, have generally responded to the commitments and requirements of this great battle.

4. With the victory of the democratic forces, the removal of the rightwing from the administration of the country, and the election of PASOK to the government, a new state of affairs is created.

The rightwing has lost the parliamentary majority but it has considerable parliamentary forces. What is more important, it has strong positions within the state machinery and it enjoys the support of the economic oligarchy and of its foreign patrons. Basic centers of power actually remain within the hands of the rightwing. The monopolies, the Americans, and the NATO imperialists still have great possibilities for actively influencing the course of the country with the goal to foil the change.

The front of the people's struggle and the forces of change against the rightwing, the oligarchy and the Americanocracy stays put but it is also imperative to further strengthen it by stepping up vigilance and by properly utilizing the fresh possibilities that have been created. The mass movement will be the determinative factor for opening the road toward change.

Circles of international democratic socialism as well as of the local established -- particularly the bourgeois press groups -- have been pressuring the present government to confine its policy to a mere "improvement" of the terms of dependence on NATO and U.S. imperialism and by improving domestic reforms of the country which would be painless for the ruling class. Such reforms would actually fail to lead Greece away from the policy which was condemned by the vote of the vast majority of the people. Any retreat as a result of such pressuring would undermine the country's course toward change.

5. The KKE stressed that vindicating the people's expectations and opening the road toward real change necessitate a program of substantive measures. An escalation of this plan must not lead to undermining the goals for change but must contribute toward leading the country into an anti-imperialist and antimonopolistic direction:

First: Promotion of national independence and of an independent peaceful foreign policy through the immediate removal of nuclear arms from our country; the decisive strengthening of initiative for a missile-free Balkan Peninsula; for the removal of foreign bases and for Greece's withdrawal from NATO.

Greece's active participation in the efforts of the peace-loving forces to foil both the installation of "Pershing" and "cruise" missiles in Europe and the production of the neutron bomb; to reduce tension and the arms race for the sake of peace and disarmament; strengthening of the drive to internationalize the Cyprus problem with the aim to secure a united, independent, sovereign and demilitarized Cyprus.

Second: Confrontation of the crisis by rescinding immunity to monopolies and the planned development of the country for the sake of the people. This primarily requires price and profit control and the abolition of privileges, tax exemptions, tax evasion, inadmissible incentives and gratuitous loans to big capital; the promotion of productive investments -- primarily by the state -- in basic fields of the national economy; the cleansing, effective management and democratization of public enterprises with the active participation of the working people; the revision of the gangster-like agreements with foreign monopolies and actual control on their activities; the nationalization of basic monopolistic enterprises which remain necessary for the promotion of an economic policy which will lead out of the crisis; the combating of the consequences from the country's accession to the EEC and the country's disassociation from it; the development of Greece's trade and in general of economic relations with all countries, including the EEC countries, on the basis of mutual benefit; the substantive increase in salaries, wages and pensions and their automatic adjustment to the cost of living index; concrete measures to put an end to dismissals, to reduce unemployment and to give relief to the unemployed; improvement of the position of farmers, of artisans and craftsmen by taking approprate measures, immediate measures for the people's health and housing, for communications and for the protection of the environment; measures for the equality of women and improving the future for the young as well as measures to solve the problems of quake victims.

Third: Actual democratization of the whole social structure, democratization of the trade union movement by safeguarding trade union freedom and rights at places of work, and through the abolition of antilabor legislation and government trade unionism; democratization of the legislation on cooperatives; the ceding of actual authority and of economic resources to the municipalities and the village councils, as well as carrying out the constitutional provisions for the establishment of a second level of self-government as a first step toward actual democratic decentralization; actual democratization of the armed forces and security bodies as well as of the entire state machinery; adoption of the simple proportional representation system as a permanent election system, introduction of the right to vote from the age of 18; real recognition of national resistance [to Nazi occupation of Greece and immediate legislative settlement of the free and unconditional repatriation of all political refugees; abolition of discrimination by the state mass media, democratic functioning of these mass media and ensuring objective reporting; development of a new charter for education that will secure the democratic functioning and the modernization of the education system.

6. Under the new conditions the main KKE direction is organizing the people's struggle for real change. It will work out and project expedient solutions for the country's various problems. It will contribute to the development of the popular movement and its correct orientation on defending the people's and national interests as well as the promotion of real change.

It will play a leading role in the struggle against the rightwing.

It will exert special effort for unity and joint action by the forces of change. Under the present conditions it will concentrate its effort even more on the people's unity at its roots.

Being firmly devoted to the program for change and to opening the road toward socialism, our party will assess its attitude toward the PASOK government in step with the government's positions and deeds in relation with the problems of change. It will support in Parliament and among the people every government action which will be directed against the immunity of monopolies, against reaction and foreign dependence, and which will serve national independence, democracy and the people's interests. It will criticize inefficiencies and will oppose every measure by the government that will impede the country's course to go ahead.

7. The removal of the rightwing from the administration creates favorable conditions and fresh possibilities for the further development of the popular movement.

The KKE Central Committee stresses that if change is to go ahead it must depend on the active role of the mass popular movement. The people must take chance into their hands through their unity and their stuggle at the trade unions, their mass organizations, self-government and so forth.

Therefore, it is necessary to have further mass struggle in order to develop the functioning of the mass organizations in a democratic and united way, to secure their independence from the state, to raise concrete economic and institutional demands according to priority and to claim participation in making decisions that concern them.

Some dangers of reformist tendencies developing within the working people's mass movement must be particularly faced. The KKE will struggle against reformism, and for the class orientation of the struggle by the workers movement and for spreading out the mass movement in an anti-imperialistic, antimonopolistic direction.

The struggle against reformism will have to be continued.

8. The KKE undertakes fresh responsibilities during the new situation. Its role in the course of the parliamentary struggle -- being one of the three parties in Parliament -- as well as in the course of the struggle outside Parliament becomes more compound under the new conditions. It is imperative that there should be a creative and concrete working out of problems, contribution to solving them, undertaking substantive initiatives on a political level and within the mass movement of the people, and strengthening the ideological work.

It is also necessary to have a fresh quality of work within the Central Committee framework and at all the leading organs.

The new state of affairs raises increased demands in connection with the activities of the party organizations. The party organizations have a duty to particularly study their activities during the elections, to note their weak points and to draw the necessary conclusions for their further work so that they may increase their initiative and responsibility for the ideological-political work within their area, for the stabilization and broadening of the party's major opening to the masses during the election period, for an increase in recruitment especially from the working class, and for the suitable utilization of the cadres who distinguished themselves during the difficult election battle.

The Central Committee commends the cadres, the members, the supporters and the friends of the party and of the communist youth organization for their tireless work -- which has been full of the revolutionary spirit -- for the defeat of the rightwing and for strengthening the party. It calls on them to play a leading role -- with the same enthusiasm and determination -- in the struggles, to forge popular unity for the promotion of real change and for the vindication of our people's wishes and expectations. 4 November 1981

FBIS DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 219 13 November 1981

CONTENTS

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Soviet Officials Discuss Gas Deliveries J 1
Paper Reports GDR Church Stance on Arms [FRANKFURTER RUNDSCHAU 10 Oct] J 1
FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE: Massive Retaliation Dead [10 Nov] J 2
Reagan Defense 'Choir' Sings Out of Tune [HANDELSBLATT 12 Nov] J 3
HANDELSBLATT on 'The Haig Problem' [11 Nov] J 4
Paper Critical of U.S. 'Happy-go-Lucky' Attitude J 5
[SUEDDEUTSCHE ZEITUNG 7-8 Nov]
DIE WELT Views Forthcoming Brezhnev Visit [11 Nov] J 5
Paper Criticizes Confused U.S. Nuclear Strategy J 6
[FRANKFURTER RUNDSCHAU 7 Nov]

FRANCE

Indira Gandhi, Mitterrand Hold Talks 12 Nov [Delhi] K 1
Discuss Asian Situation [Delhi] K 1
Gandhi Satisfied With Talks K 1
Trade Minister Returns From China Visit K 2
Denies Relations Cool K 2
'Insulted' by PRC Attitude K 2
Quebec 'Betrayed' in Canadian Constitution Move [LE MONDE 7 Nov] K 2
Cuba's Hart Explains U.S. Threats to Country [Havana] K 3
Army Chief of Staff Outlines N-Strategy Factors [LE MONDE 4 Nov] K 4

ITALY & THE VATICAN

Colombo on Joining Sinai Peacekeeping Force L 1
Defense Official Begins Visit to Israel L 1
Spadolini, Malta's Mintoff Hold Talks in Rome L 2
Chief of Staff Hits Soviet Aims in Europe [LA REPUBBLICA 7 Nov] L 2
PCI's Boffa Links Hungary 1956, Today's Poland [L'UNITA 4 Nov] L 3
PCI's Reichlin on Relations With Government, PSI [LA REPUBBLICA 4 Nov] L 5
Pope Agrees To Visit Poland in August 1982 L 7
Briefs: Technical Agreement With PRC L 7

SPAIN

Calvo-Sotelo Reiterates No Election Until 1983 [ABC 10 Nov] N 1
Government Denies Rumors of Military Restlessness N 1
UCD's Sahagun Urges 'Truce' Within Party [ABC 10 Nov] N 1
Communist Party Expels Six CC Members 12 Nov N 2
PSOE's Gonzalez Surveys Political Crisis [LA VANGUARDIA 7 Nov] N 2
Gonzalez: Government Must Govern, Not PSOE [LA VANGUARDIA 5 Nov] N 4
PSUC Cites Goals of Special February Congress [LA VANGUARDIA 10 Nov] N 5
PCE Secretariat Discusses PSUC Congress Plan [EL PAIS 3 Nov] N 5

NORDIC AFFAIRS

DENMARK

Olesen, Stray Condemn Soviet Violation [BERLINGSKE TIDENDE 7 Nov] P 1
Olesen Notes 'Great Strain' [BERLINGSKE TIDENDE 7 Nov] P 1

Parties Urge More Submarines for Baltic [BERLINGSKE TIDENDE 9 Nov] P 2
Defense Chief of Staff on N-Armed Subs in Baltic [BERLINGSKE TIDENDE 7 Nov] P 2
Paper Queries 'Discreet' Handling of USSR Spy [AKTUELT 5 Nov] P 3

FINLAND

Electoral College Enlarged Slightly by Parliament [HUFVUDSTADSBLADET 7 Nov] P 3
Paper: Nuclear Threshold is Being Lowered [HUFVUDSTADSBLADET 9 Nov] P 4

NORWAY

Stray Replaces Boundary Negotiators [AFTENPOSTEN 29 Oct] P 5
Frydenlund: Sub Incident Adds Urgency to N-Free Zone [ARBEIDERBLADET 7 Nov] P 5
Sub Incident Seen Devaluing Nuclear-Free Zone [AFTENPOSTEN 7 Nov] P 5
Paper Considers Airfield Defense Issue [AFTENPOSTEN 28 Oct] P 6

SWEDEN

Nuclear Failure Could Have Worldwide Implications [SVENSKA DAGBLADET 3 Nov] P 7
Biggest Military Exercise Since War Scheduled P 7
Navy Chief on Defense Needs After Sub Incident [SVENSKA DAGBLADET 5 Nov] P 8
Scientist: Soviet Sub May Have Had Uranium-235 P 10
USSR Sought Guarantees of Sub Captain's Loyalty [SVENKSA DAGBLADET 9 Nov] P 10
Nuclear 'Nonchalance' Fuels European Fears [SVENSKA DAGBLADET 7 Nov] P 11

CYPRUS

Iraqi Embassy Protests Arms to Iran Via Larnaca [HALKIN SESI 10 Nov] R 1
Cultural Cooperation Program Signed With Poland R 1
Spokesman Denies Military Reinforcement Reports R 1
Rolandhis: No Comment on Missing Person Proposal R 1
Lissaridhis Denounces Waldheim Evaluation R 2
More Lissaridhis Comments [TA NEA 13 Nov] R 2
DHIKO 'Unanimously' Supports Kiprianou Stance R 3
Kiprianou To Visit Hungary, Bulgaria, U.S. [I ELEVTHEROTIPIA 12 Nov] R 3
OLAY Reports on 'Citizenship Law' Changes [9 Nov] R 4
North's Spokesman Denies Disagreement With Turkey [Bayrak Radio] R 4
Denktas Replies To Kiprianou Stand on Guarantees [Bayrak Radio] R 5
North Paper on Radio Transmitter Sale [HALKIN SESI 12 Nov] R 5

GREECE

Papandreou Meets With Iranian Charge 12 Nov S 1
Papandreou To Attend NATO Meeting in December S 1
Romanian Deputy Foreign Minister Arrives 12 Nov S 1
Briefs: Transfer of Envoys S 1

TURKEY

Evren To Begin Pakistan Visit on 22 Nov	T 1
Economic Delegation Leaves for Pakistan Talks	T 1
Turkmen To Meet Greek Foreign Minister in Dec	T 1
GUNAYDIN Says Papandreou Following Hitler Model [4 Nov]	T 1
Ozal Addresses Economic Congress in Izmir	T 2
Security Council Ratifies Higher Education Code	T 2
Courts Impose Death Penalty in Terrorist Trials	T 3
Adana Military Court	T 3
Army 9th Corps Court	T 3
AFP: Government Changes Job Assignments in TRT	T 3
Failures in Power Transmission From USSR, Bulgaria	T 3
VOTCP on Security Operations in Kurdish Areas	T 3
VOTCP: General Ersin Hails Relations With USSR	T 4
VOTCP Calls for Consistent Policies Toward USSR	T 4
VOTCP Challenges TERCUMAN Campaign Against TCP	T 5

SOVIET OFFICIALS DISCUSS GAS DELIVERIES

LD122016 Hamburg DPA in German 1610 GMT 12 Nov 81

[Text] Essen, 12 Nov (DPA) -- Nikolay Osipov, deputy Soviet minister for the gas industry [name and title as received], and Soyuzgazeksport chief Yuriy Baranovskiy are currently negotiating with Ruhrgas AG about Soviet gas deliveries to the FRG.

It was learned today that the primary issue is the still open question of the gas price in the largest planned natural gas pipeline deal with the Soviet Union. In the course of this deal the USSR wants to deliver 40 billion cubic meters of natural gas from western Siberia to West Europe annually on a long-term basis -- of this, 12 billion cubic meters to the FRG. Ruhrgas wants to agree only to a competitive price. A Ruhrgas spokesman did not want to commit himself on the prospects for a conclusion and to whether the deal would come about before the visit of the Soviet head of state and party, Leonid Brezhnev, on 22 November.

PAPER REPORTS GDR CHURCH STANCE ON ARMS

DW101309 Frankfurt FRANKFURTER RUNDSCHAU in German 10 Oct 81 pp 1, 2

[Article on synod meetings of the GDR protestant churches: "GDR Churches Suggest Arms Reduction"]

[Text] Berlin, 9 November (ZBA/EPD) -- The initiative of the protestant church in the GDR for an arms reduction in the Warsaw Pact as well is broader than has been discernible in the West to date. This goes as far as demands for contribution toward a new building of confidence in Europe through the reduction of the numerical armor superiority and a reduction of the Soviet SS-20 missiles.

Discussions at the regional synod meetings of five protestant Land churches in the GDR over the weekend were focused on questions concerning militarization of the GDR society, the belittling of nuclear warfare and the social peace service. To the extent the synods adopted statements of their own on the threat to peace and on the demand for the introduction of a social service as an alternative to military service, they were agreed in voicing concern over the continued arms race.

The synod participants of the Saxon ecclesiastical province in Halle came out with particular emphasis against the concept of safeguarding peace militarily. In their peace resolution they advocated "calculated advance concessions in disarmament coordinated with the allies (for instance, the reduction of the SS-20 missiles)" and "defensive security systems with low threatening potential (for example, the mitigation of the numerical tank superiority) and thus a new building of confidence in Europe from our side."

They said the synod hears with concern that the U.S. Government pursues the strategy of attaining nuclear superiority and of economically ruining the Socialist camp through an intensified arms race. The synod thanked the Council of U.S. Churches for the profound and clear criticism of this policy. It also thanked the Reformed Church in the Netherlands for its advocacy of the building of confidence between East and West through the renunciation of any further arms buildup and through advance concessions in disarmament whereby the dynamics of the arms race would be reversed.

Erfurt Prior Heino Flacke, the spokesman of the special committee which had prepared the declaration of the synod, said that the committee did not succeed in phrasing "a credo-type rejection of the deterrence system" or defining a clear definition of stance of the Christian toward military service. This definition of stance would have contained the finding, among others, that "owing to our theological cognition and our analysis of the situation the course of military service" could no longer be encouraged "with arguments of the Gospel or of reason," Flacke said.

The committee was afraid that the required unanimity on the issues could not be obtained either in the synod or in the churches affiliated with the League of Churches, or ultimately with the sister churches in the Federal Republic. But as long as such unanimity does not exist this decision might evoke the suspicion "that we do not mean peace but the refusal of our military service to a certain social system, to a certain state." This is why the committee was unable in this particular instance to speak with the clarity "with which we, in our opinion, ought to."

Flacke asked the churches in the Federal Republic not to interpret this as a pressure "but definitely as an urgent request and question" to consider in their discussions and decisions not only their own situation but also the "mandate of testimony which we have in common."

The synod of the Mecklenburg Land Church asked the church management in Schwerin to attribute more attention to tendencies regarding militarization of social life. The church management should point out the resulting anxiety of the population to state authorities. The synod stressed in Schwerin particularly "the dangers of playing matters down", as demonstrated in GDR civil defense exercises. It says literally: "We know today that no effective protection exists for life in a war fought with nuclear means."

The reason for this decision was a report of a Rostock synod member about such an exercise. He termed it particularly alarming that even first-grade children are taking part and that self-protection measures with plastic hoods and handerchiefs are being discussed and exercised.

The synod of the Saxonian church province was also dealing with militarization and civil defense exercises. A motion reads literally: "We understand, approve and represent the interests of our state. But we must utter our concern about the fact that military matters more and more penetrate our entire social life. It ranges from military parades to kindergarten, from off limits woods to criteria for training admission, from war toys for children to civil defense exercises."

The Land synods were also dealing with motions concerning the introduction of social peace service as one more alternative for youths of conscript age and conscientious objectors to work as construction soldiers. It was learned in Berlin that more than 4,000 mostly young applicants have approached the synod. It was stated in Halle that Klaus Gysi, GDR state secretary for church problems, did not assume that the applicants had "impure motives." He admitted "that this was a possibility to show a peaceful attitude." In a response letter of the Magdeburg synod the young applicants are urged not to give up hope. "Show that your peace will goes farther than the respective possibility to implement it." The youths are urged to demonstrate this will by working voluntarily for half a year in the social field for as little as army pay.

FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE: MASSIVE RETALIATION DEAD

DW100925 Frankfurt FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE in German 10 Nov 81 p 1

[Adelbert Weinstein editorial: "Massive Retailation Is Dead"]

[Text] The history of nuclear strategy does not repeat itself. Gaus' suggestion that NATO should return to the strategy of massive retalitation is absurd. The current Atlantic security policy no doubt has weaknesses. But the so-called flexible response strategy (a security concept where an enemy attack will be answered with the respective necessary strength) has been invented by the Americans and introduced in the alliance. It contains commitments which the United States contractually agreed to carry out. Contractual agreement in the nuclear age does not eliminate the risk of destruction. But the American engagement in Europe based on flexible response represents an acceptable security guarantee.

Massive retaliation, however, is dead as a political idea. It has been technically overtaken by reality. Psychologically it has no chance. Those betting on a strategic revival of "everything or nothing" work against our security. Who can assume that the President of the United States will punish every local violation with a nuclear strike at the Soviet Union? Such a rough security policy would lead directly into chaos.

Gaus knows it too. He himself was partaking in the sixties in the publicistic campaign which was passionately led in the transition period from massive retaliation strategy to flexible response strategy by analytics on both sides of the Atlantic. If he brings up ideas which have been thoroughly discussed long ago, he exposes himself to the suspicion of wanting something completely different than he says. In massive retaliation times Europe was not very much inclined to set up classic divisions. European inclination was not great either to support the Americans. Is this material and spiritual state of military abstinence to be reinstalled?

It is simple to factually explain our rejection of a new issue of massive retaliation. At that time the United States was the leading nuclear power. The predominance of strategic weapons was such that Europe could also be included in the defense circle. American long-range bombers and the first submarines with nuclear arms were considered a sufficient counterbalance to the numerous Russian divisions threatening Europe. The class Western troops available were supposed to take over only the function of a trip wire.

That belongs to the military past. Gaus himself termed the Soviet Union as a "militarily equal world power." The situation has also changed spiritually. If both sides are equally strong strategically, the threat to destroy the other becomes not credible as an isolated strategic element, particularly if military action and political aims do not stand in the right proportion. If the divisions were still "just a trip wire" which would touch off automatically an absolutely destructive nuclear war if the wire was crossed by the enemy, nobody could be calmed down by that. In the roughly 20 years which have passed since the introduction of flexible response it has become obvious that neither the West nor the East want to have the great nuclear war.

Washington and Moscow agreed quietly almost like accomplices to preserve the military status quo in matters of nuclear strategy. Mutual destruction cannot be a strategic aim. Variants exist, however, in the strategy of the atomic status quo. One can construct an offensive and a defensive atomic strategy. The deterrence of the Americans is defensive. They consider the setup and safeguarding of a strategic retaliation force as the core of the policy aimed at preventing war. They make preparations to stand the first strike of an adversary in order to destroy him with a counterstrike. The Soviets are rather offensive because their deterrence is linked with the threat of political "compulsion" -- as Raymond Aron, the French sociologist and nuclear analyst, formulated it. One can term it an attempt of blackmail with nuclear arms. Both sides agree, however, that one must avoid the atomic holocaust.

Nuclear policy, however, is an art which has to work with numerous unknown quantities. Nothing can be proved. Reason is the starting point. Reason says that nobody wants destruction. But strategically it is not a fact but a hope. That caused American analysts to map out numerous models of a possible war. The aim of these drafts is to keep the power of nuclear strength within limits, to use nuclear arms only as political arms and to possibly give preference to partial destruction instead of total destruction. Flexible response is one of these models, although it is full of mistakes, hypotheses and fictions. But this strategy is aimed at keeping within limits. Massive retaliation, however, is without limits and therefore not credible at all.

REAGAN DEFENSE 'CHOIR' SINGS OUT OF TUNE

DW121403 Duesseldorf HANDELSBLATT in German 12 Nov 81 p 2

[Ewald Stein commentary: "No Sandbox Game"]

[Text] Hardly a day passes without the European NATO member states being confronted with reports of important U.S. government officials interpreting current nuclear strategies. Such terms as limited nuclear war, massive first strike or nuclear warning shot create more than merely amazement on our side of the Atlantic. We are confused here not just because the choir of interpreters contains almost every top political leader in Washington, but also because the singers -- such as Secretary of State Haig, Secretary of Defense Weinberger, security adviser Allen as well as President Reagan -- obviously have different scores and are obviously singing out of tune with each other.

It is certainly known in European capitals and command centers what the background of these dissonant concerts is. Facts are not so much involved: rather it is a jealous quarrel among the artists over the role of soloist under conductor Reagan.

The American tones sound shrill to the citizens of the European partner states and fan the already existing wide-spread fear of a nuclear security which is incomprehensible to them. This is especially true because the so-called peace movements exploit the arguments supplied free of charge from Washington.

It is therefore necessary for competent pragmatists such as Christoph Bertram, director of the London Institute of Strategic Studies, to take the floor. He is of the opinion that nuclear war can be limited only if the opposing side guarantees it as well. And there is no indication of this. So as before nuclear weapons can serve only as a deterrence. Nuclear strategy is not a sandbox game.

HANDELSBLATT ON 'THE HAIG PROBLEM'

DW111141 Duesseldorf HANDELSBLATT in German 11 Nov 81 p 2

[Viola Herms Drath commentary: "Haig's Self-Dismantling"]

[Text] U.S. Secretary of State Haig may understand the European mentality, as European political experts and sometimes also Washington experts say, but he seems to be lacking insight into the Reagan team's way of thinking and the Washington elite consisting of critical persons of former administrations. Otherwise the former NATO general, who smartly announced 11 months ago to be the "vicar" of U.S. foreign policy, must have known that too much sensitivity handicaps winning a round in the fight for weight and authority with security adviser Richard V. Allen, Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger and the triumvirate of presidential advisers.

The fact that Haig publicly insinuated that an unnamed White House aide was staging a "guerilla campaign" against him, practically involving the U.S. President as a witness in his private quarrels, demonstrates an attitude which -- as the Washington POST put it -- is more devastating for his reputation and official authority than the rumors of the competitors saying that he tops Reagan's disappointment list.

The problem of the Reagan team is not caused by ideological disagreement but by petty competence quarrels. One does not quarrel on East-West strategy, but on who is supposed to make preparations for the President's Ottawa visit or who is supposed to inform the press on Cancun. Once Haig has loudly uttered criticism in the U.S. Congress about the nomination of Vice President George Bush as the administration's crisis manager, a job he wanted to get himself, he is considered at least in this circle as unpredictable. Tensions have been aggravated by the fact that Haig deliberately ignores Richard Allen, whose abilities are being called in question by other insiders as well, contacting the Oval Office through presidential adviser Edwin Meese.

At a time when the Geneva negotiations with the Soviets on the limitation of medium-range missiles in Europe are in the offing and nuclear arms control talks as a continuation of SALT II are slated for March, the Haig debacle achieves a disquieting dimension because it signals disagreement in the Reagan camp.

The argument over the NATO option of a "nuclear warning shot" to be fired above the sea, with which Haig surprised the U.S. Senate and the allies, and Weinberger's statement that such a plan is unknown to him and not very desirable, is still being clearly remembered. In doing this, Haig demonstrated that his sympathetic understanding for the situation of the Europeans who were once more shocked by the consideration of a warning shot, is as insufficient as his talent to play in a team.

Ronald Reagan stopped the quarrel among his secretaries and advisers by praising all involved. But that does not mean a final solution of the Haig problem.

With his recent outbreak of temper the U.S. secretary of state has not so much strengthened his own power position as that of his antagonists. Allen has reappeared again after having been pushed into the background by Reagan's closest circle of advisers in connection with insufficient AWACS analyses, an affair that has cost the President a lot politically. Ed Meese will now probably play a prominent role in harmonizing domestic and foreign political perspectives.

PAPER CRITICAL OF U.S. 'HAPPY-GO-LUCKY ATTITUDE'

DW091133 Munich SUEDDEUTSCHE ZEITUNG in German 7/8 Nov 81 p 4

[Commentary signed A.: "At the Table for Regulars in Washington"]

[Text] Reagan's off-the-cuff remark about the possibility of a nuclear conflict between the United States and Russia being limited to foreign territory is having bad aftereffects: Discussions on the eventualities of nuclear war are now being held in Washington with the character of talk among regulars in a bar.

The horrors of even a conventional war, which many people have personally experienced, have largely placed a taboo for all Europeans on the apocalyptic topic of details and chances of nuclear war. This is not so in the United States where the general public knows wars only from television. What Reagan, Haig and Winberger actually did was merely talk about old facts. NATO's strategy of a flexible response to a Russian attack in Europe dates back to the sixties, and this strategy, with the intentional inclusion of the option of a nuclear first strike by the West against overpowering conventional superiority, had been planned jointly with the European allies. But even the carefully phrased government statement from Washington has not succeeded in completely eliminating all doubts about the actual existence of "plans" or "options" for a nuclear warning strike in such an event. The West European NATO governments, however, cannot be spared the criticism that they have kept their people in the dark for years about basic plans in the event of hostilities. These plans are hair-raising, yet not so secret that they could not be discussed in public hearings by Senate committees.

What is alarming, however, is the happy-go-lucky improvisation in Washington, the contradictions in the remarks by the secretaries of defense and state, and above all the tone of businesslike calm about the affair. There is no need to withhold the truth -- yet the suggestion to Washington to show more bewilderment about the potential death of several hundred million Europeans would be in order. Reagan's permanent cheerfulness is out of place here.

DIE WELT VIEWS FORTHCOMING BREZHNEV VISIT

DW110951 Bonn DIE WELT in German 11 Nov 81 p 1

[Bernt Conrad commentary: "Schmidt Remains Firm"]

[Text] The chancellor has set the switches correctly for the Brezhnev visit. That was demonstrated by the statement he made yesterday at a meeting with press publishers, saying that the West will begin in late 1983 to deploy Pershing II and cruise missiles if no removal of Soviet SS-20 missiles has been achieved up to then. If Schmidt succeeds in convincing the Soviet general secretary of this determination, the visit from Moscow could enter the historic annals as a gain.

But there are considerable handicaps obstructing such a result. Not just the "peace movement" but also growing SPD forces loudly utter doubts regarding NATO's dual decision, thus nourishing Kremlin hopes that the FRG could detach itself from the United States. Schmidt's statement that the Soviets are aware of Bonn's "linkage" with the U.S. alliance sounds therefore somewhat exaggerated. His intention must be the more welcomed to clearly point out to the Soviet guest that Bonn fully supports the Western negotiation strategy regarding medium-range missiles.

Clarity regarding Western aims, NATO's will to negotiate as well as the determination to reestablish military balance in one way or the other -- that is important prior to Brezhnev's visit and during the talks with the Soviet leader. Neutralist thoughts such as those of Gaus are detrimental to this aim. The Free Democrats must also ask themselves why they think they ought to voice in the current critical situation visions regarding the Europeans' long-term renunciation of the world powers' military presence. What Mischnick said yesterday in Berlin about a future all-European peace system is certainly most attractive -- such as the wish for paradisical life. But Moscow could draw wrong conclusions from this regarding the hoped-for weariness of the alliance.

PAPER CRITICIZES CONFUSED U.S. NUCLEAR STRATEGY

DW091149 Frankfurt FRANKFURTER RUNDSCHAU in German 7 Nov 81 p 3

[Commentary signed HHG: "Confusion"]

[Text] Since the "catch the Americans" game has become popular, here is a contribution: Some of the wildest anti-Americans seem to hold top positions in the U.S. Government; and in order to pursue the logic of this silly way of passing time, we must add that they are controlled by Moscow.

An endless stream of contradicting principles regarding nuclear might is flowing from the White House, the Department of State and the Pentagon, confusing friends even more than enemies. It is difficult to find factual substance because struggles for position and rivalries among the American leadership crew seem to be involved. The same applies to the recent exchange of nuclear blows between Secretary of State Haig and Secretary of Defense Weinberger on whether there could be or should be something like NATO's nuclear warning strike.

This way of handling explosive material cannot be excused by saying that the United States is an open society where there is constant sparring in public and idle talk. The weak public statement that everyone involved was right is also of no use. Since the truly most important matter is involved, there can be no understanding for the nonchalant or rather careless actions by a world power's top-ranking politicians.

The Europeans have frequently complained in the past about the lack of U.S. leadership. Now this leadership allegedly exists. Is this confusion dressed up with powerful phrases really evidence of powerful leadersip? Is European mistrust pathological if the masters over life and death of the world create the impression they don't know themselves exactly what has or has not been planned and thought?

INDIRA GANDHI, MITTERAND HOLD TALKS 12 NOV

BK121619 Delhi Domestic Service in English 1530 GMT 12 Nov 81

[Text] Prime Minister Mrs Gandhi and President Mitterand of France have had detailed discussions in Paris today on the world scene in the context of growing tensions in many regions and superpower rivalry. They had no fixed agenda for their talks. East-West relations also came up for discussions. Later, Mrs Gandhi told waiting newsmen that they considered a number of international problems during their discussions. They also exchanged views on strengthening bilateral relations.

All India Radio special correspondent Bimala Bhalla, covering the prime minister's visit says the first round of talks lasted for 2 and 1/2 hours. Soon after her arrival in Paris from Rome, Mrs Gandhi called on President Mitterand at the Elysee Palace. In a rare gesture, Mitterand came down the steps of the palace to receive her.

Discuss Asian Situation

BK131000 Delhi Domestic Service in English 0240 GMT 13 Nov 81

[Text] Prime Minister Mrs Gandhi and French President Mitterand have had detailed discussions on India's security matters and the political situation in Asia in Paris. The two leaders reviewed the situation in Afghanistan and West Asia and exchanged views on their assessment of the situation in Poland. Mrs Gandhi and Mr Mitterand exphasized the need for a followup action on the Cancun summit and avoidance of a confrontation.

It was felt that steps toward global negotiations should be intensified and a dialogue between North and South continued. Ways and means for enlarging mutual and economic exchanges between the two countries also came up for discussion. All India Radio's special correspondent Bimala Bhalla reports that hard core of economic exchanges will be discussed at the official-level talks today.

Speaking at a reception hosted in her honor by President of French National Assembly, Mrs Gandhi reiterated India's commitment to democracy, peace and socialism. She said we are deeply committed to the rights of the individual for a fuller development of his personality. She reciprocated the sentiments of the assembly president suggesting that there is great scope for promoting closer cooperation between India and France at various levels and said, "It is in this hope that I have come to Paris."

She thanked the French parliament for the reception and described it as a tribute from one of the oldest parliaments in the world. She said the future will witness more such contacts between parliaments of India and France. She referred to the visit of Lok Sabha Speaker Jhakar to France and a French delegation led by Couve de Murville to India. She said these visits have provided a stimulus to interparliamentary relations.

Gandhi Satisfied With Talks

LD121522 Paris Domestic Service in French 1500 GMT 12 Nov 81

[Text] Mrs Gandhi said at the Elysee Palace that she is satisfied with the talks she has just had with Francois Mitterrand. When she came out, she pointed out that the sale of the Mirage-2000's was not discussed. The Indian prime minister described her meeting as very friendly and stressed that there are no areas of contention between the two countries.

TRADE MINISTER RETURNS FROM CHINA VISIT

LD111128 Paris Domestic Service in French 1100 GMT 11 Nov 81

[Text] Michel Jobert returned from China this morning. The minister of external trade was immediately questioned by journalists about the case of Li Shuang, the young Chinese fiancee of French diplomat Emmanuel Bellefroid. Jobert stated that he is not angry or even bitter, but grieved. The sentencing of Li Shuang represents an unfortunate coincidence with my stay, he said. Well, if it is an unfortunate coincidence, let us accept it as such, Jobert added. Jobert added that there was no cooling in French-Chinese relations despite this affair of crossed love. The minister concluded by saying that he is satisfied with his trip on the economic level.

Denies Relations Cool

NC110957 Paris AFP in English 0938 GMT 11 Nov 81

[Excerpts] Paris, 11 Nov (AFP) -- Speaking to journalists at the airport, Mr Jobert denied that relations between the two countries had been jolted by the sentencing to a labour camp of the Chinese fiancee of a French diplomat. The minister described the sentence as an "annoying coincidence" with his visit, adding, "I was not surprised by the firmness of the Chinse position, and hope you were not by mine."

In Peking yesterday, Mr Jobert called off a round of technical meetings and said that "if I had known I would not have come," after discussing the case with top Chinese leaders, including Premier Zhao Ziyang and Party Vice-Chairman Deng Xiaoping.

'Insulted' by PRC Attitude

NC121205 Paris AFP in English 1154 GMT 12 Nov 81

[Text] Paris, 12 Nov (AFP) -- External Trade Minister Michel Jobert said today that he was "absolutely insulted by China's attitude" over the way that Li Shuang, the Chinese fiancee of French diplomat Emmanuel Bellefroid, had been sent to a labour camp for two years. The news that she had been sent to a "reeducation camp" broke during Mr Jobert's five-day official visit to Beijing (Nov 6-10).

He told the daily newspaper QUOTIDIEN today that: "When one invites somebody, it is not to insult him." He added: "I never thought that the Chinese would have been both so clumsy and off-handed as to take this measure (sending Li Shuang to a labour camp) at the very moment that I arrived in China."

He made it clear that the "Li Shuang affair" had not taken priority over economic talks he held in Beijing, as he had not learned of the decision until after holding the main talks. But he believed that the affair might well have damaging consequences for Sino-French trade.

Miss Li, a 25-year-old artist, was arrested on September 9 a few weeks before her planned wedding with Mr Bellefroid, 39, whom she had met last year in Beijing.

QUEBEC 'BETRAYED' IN CANADIAN CONSTITUTION MOVE

PM111521 Paris LE MONDE in French 7 Nov 81 p 1

[Editorial: "Disputed 'Repatriation'"]

[Text] Pierre-Elliott Trudeau and the prime ministers of Canada's nine English-speaking provinces could celebrate success at last on Thursday in reaching agreement on "repatriating" the Canadian constitution, which has hitherto remained under the authority of the parliament of the former colonial power.

In fact it was in 1867 that the confederation's "founding fathers" got London to pass the British North America Act, which since then has served as Canada's basic law. Mr Trudeau was able to say Thursday that "after 114 years Canada will technically and legally become an independent country once and for all."

For the federal prime minister this is the culmination of an exceptionally lengthy career full of vicissitudes. Indeed Mr Trudeau set himself the target of finally resolving the constitutional issue before retiring from public life. Along this path he clashed with all kinds of obstacles due to the provinces' fear of having all their traditional prerogatives eroded by central government in favor of the "repatriation." Moreover, the intellectual arrogance which -- together with the desire to seduce and the taste for astonishing -- characterizes the federal prime minister's paradoxical personality, did not facilitate matters, to say the least.

As far as the English-speaking provinces are concerned, they have every reason to be satisfied with the compromise reached Thursday. They no longer risk having their rights over natural resources on their own territory -- especially oil -- challenged. The formula chosen for constitutional revision also guarantees them against an attempted power coup by the central government. In fact, for an amendment to be made, it will have to be accepted by seven provinces, but any provinces that challenge it will not be obliged to implement it....

The only loser in this matter in Quebec. Mr Levesque was literally betrayed by the seven English-speaking prime ministers, who hitherto pretended to side with him against a central government regarded as threatening and a federal prime minister a little too self-confident. For the first time in its history Quebec is thus becoming "a province like the rest." The editorial writer of the Montreal daily LE DEVOIR was right to stress that the Ottawa agreement "puts an end to a concept of the nation, that made Quebec's consent a legally and politically indispensable condition for any reorganization, even minimal of the federal system."

So several more steps have to be taken before Canada has its new constitution. Not all the difficulties have yet been resolved, as Conservative Party leader Joseph Clark pointed out. Though Mr Trudeau seems on the point of realizing his old dream, the fact remains that the country's unity is more threatened than ever. The Quebec separatists will find in what happened Thursday in Ottawa excellent arguments to advance their cause.

CUBA'S HART EXPLAINS U.S. THREATS TO COUNTRY

FL120051 Havana Domestic Service in Spanish 0000 GMT 12 Nov 81

[Text] The French Government does not agree with any type of U.S. aggression against Cuba and Nicaragua, Armando Hart, member of Cuba's Communist Party Politburo and minister of culture, stated today in Paris. The Socialist Party and the Communist Party, which make up the governmental majority in France, have expressed their solidarity with Cuba and their readiness to help the Cuban Government in the case of an attack on our country, Hart added.

The Cuban minister held talks with French Culture Minister Jack Lang as well as Socialist and Communist leaders during his 4-day visit to France.

Hart referred to a report published by the New York TIMES revealing the establishment of a U.S. working group to study eventual military actions against Cuba and Nicaragua under the pretext of the support they lend to the Salvadoran guerrillas. The minister stressed that the Cuban Government has challenged Washington to prove that there are 500 Cuban military in El Salvador, as charged by U.S. leaders. This is a lie, a pretext to intervene in Cuba and Nicaragua, Hart stated. That is why we are preparing to resist and respond to a military attack, Hart added.

The Cuban minister noted that the Santa Fe report, which was prepared by several advisers of President Reagan and which was published as a result of leaks, states that a liberation war should be launched against Cuba if the propaganda campaign is not sufficient. Hart stressed that the danger is not limited to Latin America, and recalled recent U.S. statements on a limited nuclear war in Europe.

Finally, he warned that the events in Latin America could have serious consequences in Europe, and there is the possibility of a chain reaction.

ARMY CHIEF OF STAFF OUTLINES N-STRATEGY FACTORS

PM120941 Paris LE MONDE in French 4 Nov 81 p 14

[Excerpts] Army Chief of Staff Gen Jeannou Lacaze does not think it makes sense for France to have more than seven missile-carrying nuclear submarines by the end of the century if the government wants to keep three permanently at sea. This comment is contained in his speech to students at the Higher Armaments Studies Center, which is published in full in the November 1981 issue of the monthly review DEFENSE NATIONALE.

"As regards the strategic ocean force," General Lacaze explains, "we seem to be thinking in terms of possessing a seventh nuclear submarine. That could be launched around 1990, but then it would be necessary to build it on the basis of technology that is already old. A few years later, say, toward 1994, it could be of a new type and capable of carrying a new missile. As regards the number of nuclear submarines needed to guarantee a sufficient deterrent, numerous arguments have taken place over this and several figures have been put forward. Although the decision is up to the political authorities, I do not think that, even with resources slightly superior to those at our disposal, it would make sense to have more than seven submarines by the end of the century."

General Lacaze adds that if three submarines of the M-4 type (multiple nuclear warhead missiles) are to be kept at sea permanetly, "going above seven or eight would be a deviation from the principle of force, to which we must adhere within the framework of our strategy of the weak deterring the strong." This concept is defined by the army chief of staff as "a strategy of massive countercity retaliation" which "rules out in particlar the fragmented strategic response."

General Lacaze also notes France's action within the Atlantic alliance and puts forward three principles:

"1. Cooperation only concerns our conventional force and therefore excludes all planning as regards the use of nuclear forces.

"2. No automatic commitment of French forces, which excludes, in particular, the possibility of France's taking responsibility in peacetime for land, sea or air zones and participating in what is known as the 'forward battle.'

"3. In the event of a commitment on NATO's side, French forces will remain grouped under national command and in salients or zones covering national territory."

As regards French foreign action forces, the army chief of staff confirms that there is no question of reopening the subject of their presence on the African continent and that a change in the law is envisaged "in order to permit volunteer conscripts to serve in foreign action." At the same time, General Lacaze explains, "the possibility of increasing the number of spaces available to foreign students in our training schools is currently being studied at the request of the political authorities."

The army chief of staff concluded his speech with a brief study of budget problems.

COLOMBO ON JOINING SINAI PEACEKEEPING FORCE

AU120926 Rome ANSA in English 0838 GMT 12 Nov 81

[Text] Rome, 12 Nov (ANSA) -- A nation like Italy, which has made peace and security its highest objective in its international policies "could not remain on the sidelines" concerning the idea of sending an Italian contingent to join the multinational peacekeeping forces set to oversee Israeli withdrawal from the Sinai Peninsula next April, Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo stated on Wednesday responding to questions and inquiries from the Senate Foreign Affairs Commission.

The "eventual Italian participation" can be viewed in the framework, therefore, "of the responsibility, incumbent also upon Italy, as a country with a specific Mediterranean dimension," Colombo explained.

The Rome diplomatic chief also reminded his listeners that the Italian Government has taken participation in the multinational forces into consideration above all after the invitations expressed by the two countries directly interested in the issue, Egypt and Israel, and by the United States, who played a mediating role in the signing of the peace accord.

Colombo, however, made it clear that everything must be subordinated "to a European participation connected to and in the context of" the political viewpoint of the EEC countries which emerged from the declaration in Venice in June of 1980.

The multinational forces, in which Italy, France, Great Britain and the Netherlands may eventually take part, have the sole scope, Colombo reiterated, of maintaining peace in the Sinai after the withdrawal of the Israelis, and no other duty.

In conclusion, Colombo explained that "consequently, concern that (the peacekeeping force) could represent a threat to other Arab nations seems completely unfounded, precisely because it is directed to maintaining peace of the border between Egypt and Israel

The minister also answered questions from the Italian senators on recognition of the Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO) by the Italian Government.

"The Italian position remains that of placing the largely positive evolution already achieved inside a more ample perspective which reciprocally invests the peoples and states of the region," Colombo said.

DEFENSE OFFICIAL BEGINS VISIT TO ISRAEL

AU120909 Rome ANSA in English 0833 GMT 12 Nov 81

[Text] Tel Aviv, 12 Nov (ANSA) -- The secretary-general of the Italian Defense Ministry, General Giuseppe Piovano, is in Israel today, beginning a seven day official visit as a guest of the Israeli Armed Forces.

Unofficial sources have confirmed that his visit, which was scheduled some time ago, is not connected to the possible participation of Italy in the multinational peacekeeping forces in the Sinai Peninsula. Those forces will become operative in the desert peninsula once restitution of the land to Egypt is completed with the withdrawal of Israeli occupation troops, slated to take place on April 21.

General Piovano's schedule includes visits to the principal military industries of Israel. Israeli sources here indicated that the visit will also include tourist excursion to the nation's many historic sites. General Piovano will be accompanied by two high officials and by his wife.

SPADOLINI, MALTA'S MINTOFF HOLD TALKS IN ROME

LD130012 Rome Domestic Service in Italian 2300 GMT 12 Nov 81

[Text] In the talks that Maltese Prime Minister Dom Mintoff had in Rome with Prime Minister Spadolini, bilateral relations and economic cooperation within the framework of the recent understanding reached with the Maltese Government with respect to the island's neutrality were discussed. In addition, the problem of the Mediterranean was also tackled in light of the latest events, which have increased tension in this region. Spadolini reiterated Italy's commitment to guarantee the island's neutrality, which conforms with the line always pursued by Italy in the Mediterranean, and which is aimed at achieving greater stability and safeguarding peace in the entire region.

CHIEF OF STAFF HITS SOVIET AIMS IN EUROPE

PM120909 Rome LA REPUBBLICA in Italian 7 Nov 81 p 13

[V. Vladimiro Odinzov report on Italian Army Chief of Staff Gen Umberto Cappuzzo 6 November report to Atlantic Council conference in Venice: "Cappuzzo Warns NATO Allies; 'Europe Refusing Further Military Spending'"]

[Excerpt] Venice, 6 Nov -- Gen Umberto Cappuzzo, who has been Italian Army chief of staff for the past few months, was right to point out that one of the various posts that he has held in the past was military attache at the Italian Embassy in Moscow, then headed by Ambassador Fenzi. Because in his speech in Venice today to the Atlantic Council conference, little seemed to remain of that distant experience or -- and perhaps this is the more likely possibility -- the general, who immediately made it clear that he was speaking in a personal capacity, preferred to remain within the narrow confines of an analysis which at several points repeated well known reference points and conclusions.

Only at one point did Cappuzzo touch on an interesting point, which could have been expanded on and developed, when he said that "Soviet attention to theater nuclear weapons represents an evolution in Moscow's military thinking," probably stemming from the attainment of strategic parity with the United States and the Atlantic alliance's attitude to so-called flexible response. It is, the Italian Army chief of staff said, "a new logic" in favor of tactical weapons, which is reflected in an increasing strengthening of all the strategies that seem to favor the possibility of a limited nuclear conflict.

Soviet Militarism

Cappuzzo's report was entitled "The Military Component of Soviet Policy on Europe," and the general certainly did not omit to point out the complete and perfect integration that has existed ever since the creation of the Soviet state between the military establishment and the CPSU, the harmonious complementarity between the functions and objectives of these centers of Soviet power, with perhaps an apparent subordination of the military to the Soviet Union's role as leading state.

It would certainly be interesting -- and it was here that Cappuzzo's experience and knoweldge could have been useful -- to reveal the outlines of policymaking within the Kremlin leadership, to expound the formative process that leads to the choice of optimal means and instruments for achieving particular objectives. For instance, to explain why the military invasion of Afghanistan took place, whereas in Poland's case there are clearly elements restraining what might perhaps be the military options.

Instead, Cappuzzo limited himself to a chronological survey of the growth of Soviet power over a period ranging from the end of World War II (the experience of which proved valuable for making corrections to its entire logistical structure and to the control-command-communication complex responsible for coordination among the branches of the armed forces) to the present. This evolution is marked by four principal stages -- 1945 through 1953, 1954 through 1960, 1960 through 1974 and from the latter date to the present. The salient point in this process, the Italian general continued, was perhaps the period 1954 through 1960, which coincides with the spread of nuclear technology and the first attempt to formulate a theory of its application to military strategy, which took place in 1962 with the famous essay on "Soviet Military Strategy" by Marshal Sokolovskiy.

Faced with this process, Cappuzzo pointed out, Europe has begun increasingly to reveal its weaknesses, constituted by a geostrategic weakness to offense from the east, the widespread option for social consumption and the outside dependence of its processing economy.

Hidden Persuasion

The mistrust, if not open hostility, toward burdensome measures and allocations of financial resources in the defense sector in turn prompts disagreements and forms of opposition prejudicial to the alliance's cohesion or to the decisionmaking capacity of the individual governments, and this leads, on the psychological plane, to a weakening of the "defensive instinct." In general, Cappuzzo's opinion, this form of hidden persuasion on the part of the Soviet Union, which insists on the formula of "more military spending, less consumer spending," constitutes an initial victory for Moscow which, without resorting to its terrifying military arsenals, is achieving the further weakening of the West, thanks to the naivety of the pacifist movement.

PCI'S BOFFA LINKS HUNGARY 1956, TODAY'S POLAND

PM120923 Rome l'UNITA in Italian 4 Nov 81 pp 1, 16

[Giuseppe Boffa article: "Hungary, 25 Years On"]

[Text] Though a quarter century has gone by, many of the things published over the past few days to commemorate the 1956 events in Hungary have been merely recollections -- some of them exciting, perhaps -- or contemporary writings, inasmuch as they adopted the same polemical tone that they might well have had 25 years ago. However, there seems to have been no effort to carry out the more thorough historical analysis that the passage of time should permit.

We, too, could follow this path which is, in fact, the easiest. We could find along it several arguments to point out that the kind of problems that we encountered then, despite all the constraints imposed by political options (and the Italian communists took a clear-cut political option at that time), reflected a profound truth which it would be wrong to forget or eliminate now. We could even -- and not without reason -- cite in mitigation Hungary's subsequent evolution, which has maintained some very interesting characteristics, making it possible to heal the deep wounds left by those tragic events by building a new national consensus centered on a policy consistently conceived with considerable originality. Nevertheless, we feel that it is now necessary to explore another topic.

The events of October and November 1956 in Hungary and the simultaneous events in Poland in fact raised a more general issue -- the issue of the prospects of development throughout Eastern Europe. It was the part of the continent that owed its liberation from fascism principally to the Soviet armies. From that moment on, all the countries of the region had been permeated by a profound movement of social and national regeneration which, though one of its principal factors was the USSR's political and military presence, was nevertheless also the result of strong domestic thrusts for the introduction of reforms that had for decades remained one of those societies' unfulfilled demands.

This movement went hand in hand with the openly proclaimed aspiration and the specifically implemented attempt to follow an original path or several "national" paths to socialism. This very approach was cut short, however, by the export -- or, as others say, the coercive transplantation -- of Stalinism, its conceptions, its political guidelines, its methods and its state structures; nor is it true that this was an inevitable consequence of the "premise" or "precondition" constituted by the communist parties' rise to preeminence in the individual governments; this is shown by the conflicts, traumas and ruptures which that imposition caused, even among the communists. All these issues emerged everywhere in 1956 to a more or less tragic extent.

The fundamental problem which thus emerged at that time was recognized then, but not tackled with the promptness, foresight and fundamental capacity for innovation that seemed necessary even then. The 1956 events nurtured the fear of a catastrophic crisis that would perhaps prove impossible to control. It was therefore admitted that every country had its own specific national character and that a diversity of solutions -- both among each other and between each of them and the USSR -- might be necessary. But soon even this theoretical enunciation was subordinated to the formulation of general laws for socialist building which, precisely because they were couched in general terms, lent themselves to official interpretations which were no more than repetitions of old dogmas of the previous Soviet experience and which discouraged truly autonomous research. This led to the shelving of the principal requirement -- to find approaches rooted in national history and life and above all to build broad democratic consensus around these solutions.

Even under such conditions, Eastern Europe's postwar evolution was a very complex phenomenon that cannot be dismissed with a few simple formulas. For many years it was an area of the world that experienced one of the highest rates of development, albeit accompanied by very serious imbalances. Anyone who has seen Wajda's "Man of Marble" cannot fail to have been struck not only by his powerful indictment of Stalinism but also by the images of that development that the director provided, certainly not out of any indulgence toward the authorities. It was not only an economic but also a cultural and, in some aspects, political growth. Anyone who challenges this for the sake of polemics is making a mistake. Contrary to what it might have been possible to believe in those countries' government circles, this course in fact concentrated, rather that eliminated the fundamental problems of consensus and democratic participation. Moreover, as the memories and ruins of World War II -- still so close in 1956 -- receded in the Eastern bloc too, as the detente process itself took over from the cold war, each of those problems became even more pressing.

It would take too long now to recall all the debates that took place on these subjects at various levels during the sixties. We too were involved in these debates -- it is enough to remember the most famous document, Togliatti's Yalta memorandum, but even the quest that was thus being conducted, even then, in our opinion, with worrying delays, was cut short or led along a channel so narrow that it became stifling with the intervention in Czechoslovakia -- an intervention which smashed an innovative operation that stemmed from those same joint demands and was initiated, albeit amid innumerable difficulties, by the Czechoslovak Communists themselves. So only the most negative aspect of the Hungarian intervention -- the possibility of outside intervention by the hegemonic power and the illusion that this really could eliminate problems that in fact had their own irrepressible vitality -- had been retained. This time the repercussions were much more serious -- both in Czechoslovakia and throughout Eastern Europe and the communist movement. If anybody believed that appearances at that time proved the contrary, they were mistaken.

Problems neglected or suppressed for too long always risk exploding into tragic crisis that shake the very existence of the states concerned. This is what has happened again in Poland. We hope -- as every reasonable person should -- that the forces most aware of the dangers threatening the country will find within Polish society the necessary understanding to carry out the hoped-for socialist renewal and the necessary economic recovery. But we do not delude oursleves about how difficult a task this is after a year of progressive deterioration in the situation, which threatens to involve both old and new institutions. Through the solution being attempted now under Jaruzelski's leadership primarily concerns the Poles, it concerns almost all of us, because we know what the reprecussions of an exacerbation of the Polish crisis could be.

Nevertheless, contrary to what has so often been written too irresponsbily in the Italian press, we do not believe that the Polish issue is bound automotically to be extended to other countries. In fact, the most varied, even unofficial indications suggest the opposite: The tensions now shaking Poland are having an effect in the other countries that does not encourage them to follow its example. In any case, the East European nations are too different from one another and the individual states' internal situations are too different for certain automatic connections to make any sense. Having said this, however, the more genreal problem remains that of an evolution toward participation and democratic consensus -- an evolution that long experience has often shown to be necessary. To think otherwise can only nurture dangerous illusions.

We do not believe and have never believed that it was a simple problem which could be resolved by means of a few simple recipes valid in all cases. We also know that, because of the way in which relations and alignments have taken shape on our continent since the war, it is closely connected with delicate international balances that must not be disrupted. But these very considerations show us that the problem cannot be neglected without a very high price having to be paid. Indeed, every domestic crisis -- and, as we have seen, domestic crises are the result of a failure to respond to that need -- would threaten to become a serious international crisis. In any case, if the problem is to a large extent the result of the blocs policy, one cannot consider the elimination of blocs in Europe that we have always considered necessary without beginning to resolve that problem too. And yet this elimination of blocs remains indispensable for a new development of peace on our continent. If we view things properly, it also constitutes the underlying aspiration of the movement against armaments and for peace that has emerged in Europe.

PCI'S REICHLIN ON RELATIONS WITH GOVERNMENT, PSI

PM111605 Rome LA REPUBBLICA in Italian 4 Nov 81 p 3

[Lucio Caracciolo interview with PCI Secretariat member Alfredo Reichlin: "As Long As Craxi Does Not Sell his Soul for Premiership..."]

[Excerpts] Rome -- [Question] What is your verdict on this government, notwithstanding your firm opposition stance?

[Answer] We consider it a very important fact that the DC has lost the premiership. Spadolini's accession to the Chigi palace is a blow to the DC's power system. His commitments to moralization are also important, since they move in the direction of smashing the DC power system and restoring the constitution, which we consider indispensable. For the reasons I have mentioned before, we consider its economic policy negative. Primarily because it is a policy without reform....

[Question] But [PCE Secretariat member] Chairomonte has declared himself in favor of a government-trade union agreement and has accepted the principle of the ceiling on the public deficit. Will you go as far as a social contract?

[Answer] No, the conditions do not yet exist for a social contract. It is possible to discuss the more or less abstract character of the ceiling, but we are agreed that an undertaking must be made to contain spending. In order to involve the trade unions, this objective must be credible and backed by commitments relating to employment and investments. We believe that the cuts can and must be introduced so as to affect spending brought about by wastefulness and patronage policies.

[Question] Will there not be a repetition of what happened to the Forlani government, which was about to fall over the state budget but was saved by the PCI at the last moment?

[Answer] Our opposition to the finance bill will be clear-cut. We see in the latest developments in government economic policy no possibility of remedying the situation without lapsing into a recession.

[Question] But Spadolini is threatened by conflicts within his own majority, which seems very unenthusiastic about the 50 trillion lire ceiling and equally reluctant to ignore the demands of certain sectors hitherto financed with public funds. Will the PCI just stand by and watch?

[Answer] We know that these maneuvers and games are going on. We do not agree with and are not taking part in toppling the government. Indeed, we want to assist the positive tendencies that exist both inside and outside the majority and that aim to govern the crisis and eliminate the DC's power system.

[Question] Which forces are these? Do you have the Republicans and Spadolini in mind?

[Answer] Yes, we have appreciated Spadolini's conduct against the P-2 lodge and on the CORRIERE DELLA SERA case. But there are forces that want to emerge from the crisis along a leftwing and democratic party within the other parties too, especially in the PSI. This is why we do not set ourselves in target of bringing Spadolini down and believe that we are imparting a government character to our opposition. Yes; a government-type opposition, rather than the splittist stubbornness that some newspapers have written about.

[Question] Perhaps this is not a last-minute innovation, as you say. You will not try to deny, however, that you behaved very differently toward Cossiga and Forlani, whom you labelled as "damaging" and "dangerous," no less.

[Answer] There is the innovation of the secular premiership. Do not forget that Spadolini's premiership stemmed from the struggle against the P-2 lodge and against terrorism. This is why we are not demanding a priori the government's departure, just as we do not accept covert agreement. I would add that our opposition to early elections is total.

[Question] Is it true that you are afraid of a solid DC-PSI pact, with Craxi at the Chigi palace?

[Answer] We have no prejudice against a Socialist prime minister. But it would be a tragic mistake if — for the sake of argument (though I refuse to believe that it is even a possibility) — it were to be negotiated from the viewpoint of power-sharing with the DC and in accordance with the tit-for-tat system: I, the Socialist, will break away from the PCI in the leftwing councils if you, the Christian Democrat, give me the Chigi palace in exchange. Nor is it possible to support the two-phase theory of first a Socialist premiership involving anti-PCI discrimination and then the alternative [government coalition including communists proposed by PCI]. Still, for the sake of argument, if the PSI made concessions that strengthened the old oligarchies and lacerated the unitary fabric of the left, there would be no more scope for the alternative. Craxi would be sawing off the branch on which he was sitting.

However, there could be a Socialist premiership based on a different outlook, of a struggle against the DC power system and initiating major reforms.

[Question] You do nothing but talk about reforms. This summer [PCI Secretariat member] Napolitano raised an uproar by talking about a "reformist challenge" to which the PCI should respond. Though historically the Communists have hated the term, do you not believe that you yourselves should issue a reformist challenge?

[Answer] Of course. We are issuing a reformist challenge because the democratic alternative is not a formula, but a specific policy for surmounting the crisis. In the economic field, for instance, reforms of the production apparatus are inevitable unless we want to be relegated to the second league. We run the risk of being excluded from the group of major developed nations, at the very time when a technological revolution is underway. The development of the production forces is the real national issue. This is why the communists must address the more responsible sectors of the productive bourgeoisie too.

[Question] Deputy Reichlin, the PCI has broken away from the DC by proposing the alternative. But your enemy number one still seems to be Bettino Craxi. Is this the case?

[Answer] No. We want to reopen the dialogue with the PSI, because the PSI is not the DC. It is a leftwing, not a moderate party, with a wealth of energies, drive and demands for change. Good manners are not enough in the dialogue with the Socialists. The PCI must provide a more advanced area of dialogue on the analysis of the situation and ideas for resolving the crisis. This is the significance of the effort we are making. We will encounter the PSI in this context.

[Question] But there are some people within the PCI who have gone as far as to suggest that the Socialists are already almost outside the workers movement....

[Answer] The PSI is a leftwing force. It is an abstraction to talk about entries into or departures from the workers movement. I believe not in genetic mutation but in political issues.

POPE AGREES TO VISIT POLAND IN AUGUST 1982

AU071745 Rome ANSA in English 1535 GMT 7 Nov 81

[Text] Vatican City, 7 Nov (ANSA) -- Pope John Paul II announced here today that he will visit his homelnad, Poland, for the second time since election to lead the Catholic Church in August next year.

Accepting an invitation brought him by Polish Primate Josef Glemp, who is in Rome for a session of the Polish Episcopal Conference's General Council, the pope told four thousand Polish pilgrims that it "corresponds to my deep desires which I cannot resist." The pope returned home for the first time after taking the papal crown on June 2-10 1979.

For 1982, his schedule already includes the first visit by a reigning pope to Britian.

BRIEFS

TECHNICAL AGREEMENT WITH PRC -- An important agreement on technical and industrial cooperation has been signed in Beijing between China and Italy. The Finsider of Genoa, member of the IRI group, will supply the Chinese railways with steel infrastructures and techological advice. [Text] [Rome Domestic Service in Italian 1630 GMT 10 Nov 81 LD]

CALVO-SOTELO REITERATES NO ELECTION UNTIL 1983

PM121341 Madrid ABC in Spanish 10 Nov 81 p 6

[Text] Madrid -- Prime Minister Calvo-Sotelo will continue his work of government and faithfully implement his investiture program, according to an official communique from the Secretariat of State for Information issued Sunday evening.

The complete text of the communique is as follows:

"Following his talks with Union of the Democratic Center [UCD] Chairman Agustin Rodriguez Sahagun, the prime minister reaffirms his conviction that the UCD's renewal and strengthening, which are necessary for appearing before the electorate in 1983, should be effected on the basis of the reaffirmation of the principles of the centrist program and ideology.

"Prime Minister Calvo-Sotelo has offered his cooperation in this task -- an offer which he maintains.

"At the same time Prime Minister Calvo-Sotelo intends to continue the work of government and to continue to implement faithfully his investiture program, for which he hopes to enjoy the necessary political support."

GOVERNMENT DENIES RUMORS OF MILITARY RESTLESSNESS

LD122224 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 2200 GMT 12 Nov 81

[12 November statement issued by Secretariat of State for Information]

[Text] There is no evidence, nor has their been the slightest irregularity, to justify the rumors which have been spread this evening about restlessness among the military. The situation is completely normal throughout Spain and both the civil authorities and the military units have reliably confirmed (?that the situation is calm).

UCD'S SAHAGUN URGES 'TRUCE' WITHIN PARTY

PM121351 Madrid ABC in Spanish 10 Nov 81 p 6

[Text] Public support by the government and its members for the party bodies, as well as their support for the government, and confirmation that the Union of the Democratic Center [UCD] is not an elitist but an interclass party are some of the points contained in the communique issued early yesterday evening by the ruling party's Secretariat for Information.

The text of the communique is as follows:

Following the talks held with the prime minister by the UCD chairman to analyze the situation created as a result of the request for a special congress by the member of the so-called "moderate platform," Mr Alzaga, to study the establishment of a natural majority with the Popular Alliance, as well as the crisis created by the departure from the UCD of Mr Fernandez Ordonez and other parliamentarians, and in view of the confusion created by the inopportune statement of an alleged government spokesman following the prime minister's Tuesday evening meeting with some members of his cabinet -- statements advocating the taking over of the party chairmanship by the prime minister -- UCD Chairman Rodriguez Sahagun has reiterated the request which he made together with the prime minister at the 2 November National Executive Committee meeting for securing an atmosphere of relaxation and truce in the party with one aim of:

-- Creating an atmosphere of trust and calm which will make it possible to institute real and comprehensive solutions to the problems existing in the parliamentary group, government activity and party.

-- Maintaining the strictest respect for the rules of the UCD's internal democracy, its party rules and the decisions and resolutions of the party's competent bodies.

-- Public support by the government and its members for the party bodies, as well as their support for the government.

-- Firm commitment to maintaining the UCD as a centrist political blueprint and implementing its election program, and a clear intention of running in elections as an option clearly distinguished from the left and right.

-- Confirmation that the UCD is not an elitist but an interclass party with popular roots, which enjoys for its functioning the active participation of all its members through the structures and activities of its local committees and of its provincial and regional bodies.

-- The need to observe the decisions already laid down by the party's collective bodies, which are incumbent on all its members and which everybody has a duty to respect and observe.

-- Support by everybody for the party's cohesion, integration and unity, as well as for its bodies' activity and for all party members holding government or opposition responsibilities at the level of even the autonomous communities and the provincial or municipal bodies.

COMMUNIST PARTY EXPELS SIX CC MEMBERS 12 NOV

NC120947 Paris AFP in English 0931 GMT 12 Nov 81

[Text] Madrid, 12 Nov (AFP) -- The Spanish Communist Party (PCE) today expelled six members from its Central Committee for their public support of Basque Communist Party plans to quit the PCE and link up with the pro-separatist Basque Party EIA.

The expulsions were approved early today after two days' debate, by 67 votes to 24 with eight abstentions.

EIA is the main faction in the Basque coalition Euskadiko Eskerra, close to the political-military wing of the separatist movement ETA. Communist sources described the expulsions as the biggest event in the party since it became legal in Spain four years ago.

PSOE'S GONZALEZ SURVEYS POLITICAL CRISIS

PM121121 Barcelona LA VANGUARDIA in Spanish 7 Nov 81 p 7

[Excerpt] Madrid, 6 Nov -- Invited by the group of women journalists who organize the "breakfasts at the Ritz," the Socialist leader [PSOE Secretary General Felipe Gonzalez] declared himself to be deeply concerned at a crisis whose causes are difficult to explain but which could endanger the democratic system.

"We are witnessing a struggle between the right and the extreme right. That operation of building the broad right would be bound to satisfy me because it gives the Socialist Party a very clear opportunity to hold a majority. However, it worries me for other reasons: A bloc dynamic is being initiated and the spirit of the constitution is being betrayed."

In Felipe Gonzalez' opinion, the Spanish constitution has a spirit of integration and is proportionalist: "Our constitution provides solutions which restrain the right and the left and restrain radicalization; solutions to avert the tragedy of the republic and of the Civil War, solutions not accepted by that right which wants a strategy of tension to repeat the tragedy of the two Spains."

Calvo-Sotelo Has Not Been Good Administrator

Within this crisis caused by the struggle between the right and the extreme right there is a government crisis: "Calvo-Sotelo was chosen as prime minister to be a good administrator, curb the autonomy process and implement a liberal economic policy. Calvo-Sotelo has been unable to carry out his investiture program, except in the international matter of Spain's entry into NATO; he has not been that good administrator everybody believed [he would be]."

With a government which holds many assets and considerable political capital, an inexplicable crisis is being initiated: "There is only one reason; there is a lack of political will. The worst mistake you can make in politics is to make no mistake through inaction. In politics you must 'knuckle down'; you must have the will to govern.

"With such conditions, Calvo-Sotelo could and should have governed. When have you ever heard of the political power having to be subordinate to four extreme rightwing loudmouths?

"It is incomprehensible why you should give in to the pressures of the broad right's interests and the threats of a gentleman such as [Spanish Confederation of Employers' Organizations chairman] Ferrer Salat, except for one reason: That you wish to give in or are taking part in that strategy of tension and wish to instill fear."

Felipe Gonzalez repeatedly pointed out the dangers of that strategy of tension which is aimed at making a section of the people who would vote Socialist stay at home; a strategy imposed by interests of the broad right which they do not know how to defend by winning votes. "If they wish to cause alarm by saying that our moderation is artificial, they are mistaken. How can Mr Ferrer doubt that we will conduct a Socialist policy? Does he believe that we will conduct his policy?"

"Political Will Is Needed"

According to the latest opinion polls, Felipe Gonzalez would be the most popular prime minister, with a very considerable lead over Calvo-Sotelo: "I place myself in the position of an average citizen and I can understand this, not because of a positive choice but by exclusion. The Spanish people want somebody to extricate them from the mire. Political will is needed."

In Felipe Gonzalez' opinion, this lack of will to govern could in fact constitute a grave danger to democracy: "As the will to govern weakens, the danger of a regression intensifies. What worries me in the situation is that excuses are being provided for a coup, and the number one excuse is a power vacuum.

"I have my reasonable concerns that the regressive or putschist sectors interpret the conflict and the internal struggles in the UCD as such a vacuum. I understand that the prime minister could opt for the dissolution of parliament. I am therefore stating now what the mistakes providing an excuse for regression could be. I have the impression that those sectors are beginning to rear their heads in an organized manner and are leaking the typical analyses which precede a coup or change of course based on the loss of prestige by the democratic institutions."

Felipe Gonzalez described as "deeply unpatriotic" stances in favor of or which could favor a coup, whose consequences, moreover, would boomerang on them. A coup would mean "hunger, cold, despair and humiliation" for the Spanish people.

Political Use of 23 February Trial Is Dangerous

Felipe Gonzalez expanded on this: "The most dangerous regressive sectors lie in the civilian apparatus, because those in the military apparatus offer more resistance to the disturbance of legality because of their disciplined structure. The civilian regressive sectors are more filled with egotism and contempt for other people."

In Felipe Gonzalez' opinion, the holding of the trial of the 23 February conspirators is absolutely necessary: "Let us suppose that somebody is interested in disrupting the normal course of justice and may deem it advantageous to cancel the preliminary proceedings and reopen them. Let us imagine that the possibility has been considered of holding an election in their midst. From that moment I must point out that a very dangerous political use is being made of a matter which must be handled with great care, and that would be an element in the strategy of tension which we will never be able to accept."

Within this context of the weakness of democracy, Felipe Gonzalez warned of the danger that the crisis in two political parties such as the UCD and the PCE could be exploited as an argument against the democratic system. They are two crises of different importance and with different solutions.

"The UCD is not comprehensible as a reality, because it is not real. There are many 'UCDS,' and that is why a logical analysis of a party without clearly defined borders is difficult. In the first place it would be necessary to know whether there is in the UCD a common blueprint, which is what defines a political party, a blueprint which could subsequently be interpreted in a more radical or moderate manner. Does that blueprint exist in the UCD?"

Felipe Gonzalez wished to remain aloof from the UCD's internal conflict: "I have had no occasion, desire or opportunity to meet with Fernandez Ordonez, either before or after his departure from the UCD. I only held a conversation with him immediately after his departure from the government." And the same as regards Suarez: "It is not true that I have spoken with him. We had a meeting scheduled, but is has not taken place, precisely because I wish to give no cause for people to be able to say that I have something to do with their problems. It is their affair, and how they resolve it is their concern."

GONZALEZ: GOVERNMENT MUST GOVERN, NOT PSOE

PM101147 Barcelona LA VANGUARDIA in Spanish 5 Nov 81 p 8

[COLPISA and EFE report on Spanish Socialist Workers Party [PSOE] Secretary General Felipe Gonzalez 4 November press conference in Madrid: "PSOE will Not Govern"]

[Excerpt] Madrid, 4 November -- The Socialist parliamentary group held a meeting this morning at which Felipe Gonzalez asked PSOE deputies to remain calm, since the party would not allow itself to be carried away by a crisis situation.

Following the meeting, Felipe Gonzalez said that the tension and alarmism must be defused, adding that the Union of the Democratic Center's [UCD] crisis "is due to a conflict of personal ambitions and an absence of political ability on the part of the UCD leaders." He said that there is a lack of will to govern, but that "the PSOE will not ggvern. It is the government that must do it. We are in opposition and will continue to be so for as long as the people want."

He stressed that the UCD crisis has "no political, economic or social justification, since it is due entirely to the government's political weakness. The members of the party are not honoring their commitments, but are squabbling among themselves, and their leaders must take measure. What we must not do is extend this process, which facilitates those who want the strategy of tension to increase."

He added that "it is symptomatic that the social democrats that are leaving their party are being criticized, while almost nothing is said about those leaving the UCD to join the Popular Alliance." Felipe Gonzalez believes that the social democrats' decision to continue supporting Calvo-Sotelo implies that, though they do not agree with the UCD line, they do not want to destablize the government by depriving it of votes in this difficult situation.

According to the PSOE secretary general the fact is that "the rightwing political spectrum is being redefined, but," he stressed, "there is no case for alarm." With regard to the socialist stance, he ended by saying that "the PSOE has tried to eliminate frictions, but we cannot be expected to govern on behalf of those who should do so." The government has the means to implement the legislative program until 1983.

PSUC CITES GOALS OF SPECIAL FEBRUARY CONGRESS

PM121335 Barcelona LA VANGUARDIA in Spanish 10 Nov 81 p 31

[Excerpt] The Unified Socialist Party of Catalonia [PSUC] will hold a special congress in February, according to what was decided by the Central Committee last weekend. With this, an attempt is being made to achieve "confirmation of the PSUC's communist distinguishing features, full affirmation of the Eurocommunist strategy and the recovery by the PSUC of its essential role in Catalonia."

The congress' aims are contained in the resolution approved by the Central Committee and were summarized at the press conference held by the PSUC leadership yesterday morning. "In calling a special congress, the Central Committee proposes to end the continued deterioration of the PSUC's internal life and to restore the party's cohesion and unity by means of a political clarification which will end the different and conflicting interpretations of the political line currently existing within the PSUC."

The Central Committee therefore believes that this congress "will make possible full confirmation of the PSUC's distinguishing features as a communist party and as a national and class party, and full affirmation of the Eurocommunist strategy and of the policy of socialism in freedom and revolution of the majority which has characterized the PSUC's practice for many years."

PCE SECRETARIAT DISCUSSES PSUC CONGRESS PLAN

PM061155 Madrid EL PAIS in Spanish 3 Nov 81 p 14

[Text] The PCE national leadership understands the need for the Unified Socialist Party of Catalonia [PSUC] (The Catalonian communists' party) to hold a special congress in order to resolve its current situation of conflict. This is the conclusion reached at the 10-hour meeting held yesterday by the PCE secretariat, headed by Santiago Carrillo, and the Catalonian members of the Spanish Communist organization's Central Committee.

The meeting, called by the PCE leadership, took place at the party's central headquarters between 1100 hours and 2100 hours. It was attended on the part of the PCE by Santiago Carrillo. Nicolas Sartorius, Jaime Ballesteros and Simon Sanchez Montero, among others, and on the part of the Catalonians by PSUC Secretary Genreal Francisco Frutos, former leaders Gregoria Lopez Raimundo and Antonio Gutierrez, Cipriano Garcia, Eulalia Cintor, Jordi Borja, Andreu Claret and Jordi Sole Tura.

The central issue at the meeting was the PSUC leadership's intention to call a special congress in view of the grave conflict within the party. According to what PCE Deputy Secretary Jaime Ballesteros and Andreu Claret -- the latter on behalf of the PSUC -- stated at its conclusion, it was not a matter of making any formal decision, since the Catalonian members of the PSUC [as published] Central Committee do not constitute a decisionmaking body.

Nevertheless, Claret explained that the Catalonians had explained to the PCE leadership the need for the PSUC to resolve its problems by means of a special congress, and added that all the PSUC members taking part in the meeting "believe that the PCE understands this need and realizes that the PSUC must resolve the problems which have been mentioned. Perhaps opinions do not coincide, but the PCE respects the need for it to be the PSUC which resolves those problems." When asked about the prospects of a rift at the special congress, the Catalonian spokesman said that it is a matter of effecting a clarification at the congress which will make it clear that the PSUC has a Eurocommunist policy "which only those who wish to do so will reject."

DENMARK

OLESEN, STRAY CONDEMN SOVIET VIOLATION

PM111327 Copenhagen BERLINGSKE TIDENDE in Danish 7 Nov 81 p 4

[Text] The submarine affair in Sweden will not have any direct consequences for Danish readiness and defense of the coastal belts. But in an overall balanced picture the Soviet violation of Swedish territory will be given great importance.

Foreign Minister Kjeld Olesen said this at a press conference yesterday together with his Norwegian counterpart, Svenn Stray. Kjeld Olesen stressed that the affair shows most clearly that the question of a nuclear-free zone in the Nordic countries is more complicated than the majority of its supporters initially imagined. Kjeld Olesen went on: "The Soviet Union has not been slow to voice encouragement for a nuclear-free zone. And then there is this incredibly glaring contradiction between the type of solemn declarations by the Soviet Union and then sailing a nuclear-armed submarine into Swedish territory. In addition, the violation most of all gives an indication that there are in the Baltic many more nuclear-armed Soviet submarines than we knew about hitherto."

Norwegian Foreign Minister Svenn Stray said that he agreed completely with Kjeld Olesen's condemnation of the violation and warned that, if necessary, Norway would use depth charges. The meeting between the two foreign ministers was completely overshadowed by the submarine affair. However, Kjeld Olesen did also brief Svenn Stray on the expulsion of the second secretary at the Soviet Embassy.

Olesen Notes 'Great Strain'

PM111243 Copenhagen BERLINGSKE TIDENDE in Danish 7 Nov 81 p 3

[Text] "The affair of the expelled Soviet diplomat -- coupled with the affair surrounding the Soviet submarine in the Swedish archipelago -- has put great strain on relations between the Nordic countries and the Soviet Union." This was the strength of the statement made by Foreign Minister Kjeld Olesen when he left the meeting of the Folketing Foreign Affairs Committee at which he had briefed the committee on the background to the expulsion of the Soviet diplomat from Denmark and given some information about the submarine affair in Sweden.

On the subject of the submarine affair the foreign minister said that on behalf of the government he would like to say that it is something which "underlines the power considerations with which a superpower like the Soviet Union thinks. It is an expression of a master-race mentality, which is completely unacceptable, and it will take a very long time before confidence can be restored."

Kjeld Olesen added that faith in the Soviet guarantees in connection with the question of the Nordic countries as a nuclear-free zone is very small "when one witnesses a nuclear-armed submarine moving into the Swedish archipelago."

Of the expelled Soviet diplomat Kjeld Olesen said that it was an extremely unfortunate affair that a Danish citizen had been charged with having helped the diplomat. However, the foreign minister thought one should keep a cool head and not let matters come to a general campaign against the peace movements.

"We have to concede that a debate on continued rearmament is still necessary," the minister said.

Of the espionage affair in Denmark the foreign minister said that, with the help of writer Arne Herloev Petersen, the expelled diplomat had passed on false information to North Korea, and that he had channeled money into a campaign of advertisements about the Nordic countries as a nuclear-free zone. The diplomat was expelled 21 October and left Denmark 30 October.

It was Conservative [party] Folketing member Erik Ninn-Hansen who had asked for the emergency meeting of the Foreign Affairs Committee on the spy affair, and he was satisfied with the briefing to the committee and with the information given to the general public by the foreign minister after the meeting.

"I have not been able to understand the idea behind keeping the reasons for the expulsion secret, because the matter also has far-reaching foreign policy implications. But I do think that it is now possible to say that the whole business of the Nordic countries as a nuclear-frre zone has been pure propaganda work and nothing else. In this connection I must express my regrets that in the summer the prime minister also fell victim to this propaganda and spoke about a Nordic nuclear-free zone," Erik Ninn-Hansen said.

PARTIES URGE MORE SUBMARINES FOR BALTIC

PM111557 Copennagen BERLINGSKE TIDENDE in Danish 9 Nov 81 p 1

[Text] The parties which traditionally support defense legislation will discuss on Friday [13 November] the possibilities of a rapid expansion of the number of Danish submarines for surveillance in the Baltic in the light of the revelations surrounding the Soviet submarine in the Swedish archipelago.

Defense Minister Poul Sogaard reacted positively to a request from the government's four defense settlement partners, the Liberals, Conservatives, Center Democrats and Christian People's Party, to speed up the building of new submarines for the Danish armed forces. The defense minister thinks that the best way to find the money for the new submarines is through redistribution of funds within the defense budget already agreed upon, and he was unwilling to promise that there would be an increase in the defense budget. The government's four partners have called for further funds for the purchase of new submarines in addition to those already budgeted.

Soon Denmark will be down to only two operational submarines and, in the view of the government's partners, this figure must be increaed to six.

"It is natural that we should raise recent events for discussion in the 11-man committee. It is vital that funds be set aside to speed up the construction of Danish submarines," Conservative Party defense spokesman Palle Simonsen said. Liberal Party defense spokesman Arne Christiansen said yesterday: "If we had known what we know today, the defense settlement would have been very different."

DEFENSE CHIEF OF STAFF ON N-ARMED SUBS IN BALTIC

PM111237 Copenhagen BERLINGSKE TIDENDE in Danish 7 Nov 81 p 5

[Text] The Danish defense forces have been aware for several years that the Russian whiskey-class submarines -- like the one which went aground in the Karlskrona Archipelago -- could be carrying nuclear weapons.

However, it has caused great surprise in the defense high command in Vedbaek that the Swedish-Russian submarine affair has revealed that the Russians sail the Baltic -- "the sea of peace" -- with these weapons aboard.

The defense forces' leadership -- both political and military -- will in the next few months be analyzing the consequences for the Danish defense forces in view of the fact that the Warsaw Pact's warships are also armed with nuclear weapons in the Baltic.

Defense Chief of Staff Lt Gen G.K. Kristensen told BERLINGSKE TIDENDE: "When the whiskey-class submarines were brought into operation in the fifties we were aware that the Russians were also making nuclear-armed torpedoes which could be used on these boats. What is new is that it now turns out that they are now sailing around the Baltic with these torpedoes aboard in peacetime."

Lt Gen G.K. Kristensen said the defense forces' leadership cannot imagine what these torpedoes are to be used on in the Baltic.

"Torpedoes with nuclear charges are for us against large ships, such as aircraft carriers, or on convoys or other large concentrations of ships. It must be remembered that the Russians also use the older Whiskey-class boats in the large oceans, where in a possible future war situation they would be able to find the right targets for their nuclear torpedoes. What is surprising is that they also sail with them in the Baltic," Lt Gen G.K. Kristensen said.

The defense chief of staff stressed that both the depth of Danish waters and the defense forces' surveillance systems would make it almost impossible for a submerged submarine to pass through Danish territory. In addition the government has also issued instructions that foreign warships may only pass through Danish waters after they have given advance warning and, as far as submarines are concerned, only on the surface.

"And the Russians have always respected these regulations," Lt Gen G.K. Kristensen said.

PAPER QUERIES 'DISCREET' HANDLING OF USSR SPY

PM101005 Copenhagen AKTUELT in Danish 5 Nov 81 p 2

[Editorial: "Our Sandbanks"]

[Text] Denmark has few reefs which can skewer spy submarines. And under the cover of misused diplomatic immunity Soviet intelligence agents have been able to establish secretive contacts with circles corresponding to the sandbanks along our low coasts.

Have the Danish authorities been too long-suffering in their behavior toward these odious practices? The Vladimir Merkulov case is not the first. Other Soviet Embassy officials have been engaged in illegal activities. The Foreign Ministry has preferred to get rid of them discreetly. But this consideration shown toward Moscow should have led to the embassy's refraining from activities which have had the character of political infiltration.

It is disgraceful that the knife and fork system [informal contacts] should have any effect at all. We must assume that invitations from Kristianiagade [street on which Soviet Embassy is situated] will for the time being be accepted with certain reservations. Even if the KGB makes some use of an embassy, the head of the mission must bear the responsibility for the violations perpetrated on the host country .

The affair casts an unpleasant light over certain "movements" here in Denmark. Merkulov's path through the swamp must be charted. In which of his contacts has he been able to count on naivete -- and on corruptibility?

FINLAND

ELECTORAL COLLEGE ENLARGED SLIGHTLY BY PARLIAMENT

PM101601 Helsinki HUFVUDSTADSBLADET in Swedish 7 Nov 81 p 16

[Excerpt] Now -- before the presidential election -- is the right time to start preparing a reform of the method of electing a president and also of his powers. So said parliament member Henrik Westerlund (Swedish People's Party) when the parliament yesterday gave its unanimous approval to the change in the law which will increase the number of electors in the Electoral College from 300 to 301 with effect from the election in January.

On the technical question the parliament was unanimous. The adjustment is merely a technical matter and is intended to prevent as far as possible the choice of president from finally being decided by lot.

But the parliament took the opportunity to discuss in greater detail the old problem of the president's position and the method of electing a president. A large section of the parliament agreed with Westerlund that the time is now ripe for a reform. But once again opinions were divided on what such a reform should contain.

Westerlund wanted shorter terms of office, a more truly popular electoral method and reductions in the power of the president, especially with regard to the parliament. Representatives of the nonsocialist opposition followed the same line, while the left had different priorities. Direct popular elections do not appeal to the left, but it does agree with the centrist line that the president's powers should be reduced.

PAPER: NUCLEAR THRESHOLD IS BEING LOWERED

PM111559 Helsinki HUFVUDSTADSBLADET in Swedish 9 Nov 81 p 2

[Rafael Paro editorial: "Before the Nuclear Arms Speak"]

[Excerpt] In the discussions surrounding a "warning shot" U.S. officials have envisaged certain scenarios -- the explosion of a device at high altitude to do as little damage on the ground as possible, or in a sparsely populated area, or at sea outside Europe, for instance, in the Arctic Ocean close to Soviet territory. This, the officials argue further, would be a final signal to the Soviet Union of the Western alliance's determination and its intention to defend itself, and would not need to lead to automatic nuclear retaliation but rather to a reassessment of Soviet intentions to proceed with conventional arms in Europe.

The whole of this debate within NATO, which is taking place practically in public, reveals the consequences of the generally admitted inferiority of West Europe in conventional defense terms. It also reveals that Washington no longer considers nuclear arms to be the ultimate weapon, but rather an extension of conventional arms systems. Hitherto the U.S. administration has tried to avoid the whole subject of the use of nuclear arms in a crisis situation. Instead it has been pointed out that they exist as a deterrent and for retaliation in the ultimate catastrophe situation. Now the nuclear threshold is being set at a lower level than in the past.

Is there any rational political explanation of this change? One which U.S. observers are putting forward suggests that Alexander Haig, who is more aware of the European mood than Weinberger and Reagan, wants to assure the Europeans that the U.S. "nuclear umbrella" really exists and that it will also work.

The verbal escalation with its reminders of options, doctrines and strategies in the West and the gruff replies from the East are also to a large extent negotiating tactics with an eye to the start of talks in Geneva on 30 November. What emerged from the Senate hearings with Haig in the last week was that NATO would be prepared to abandon its plans to deploy cruise and Pershing II missiles in Europe if the Soviet Union dismantles its whole SS-20 arsenal.

The Soviet position before the Geneva meeting is that the first thing to be striven for is that no new weapons should be installed in Europe; it would then be possible to begin reductions of those which already exist. The Soviet Union has announced that it is ready to begin unilateral reductions, on the condition that the United States indicates that NATO does not intend to implement its rearmament plans.

The positions of the eve of negotiations are necessarily as entrenched as they seem. The pressure to reach acceptable solutions is growing in the world. A new and more constructive dialogue between the two superpowers must, however, come about soon, before any even more serious mistakes are made in the present tense atmosphere.

NORWAY

STRAY REPLACES BOUNDARY NEGOTIATORS

PM091357 Oslo AFTENPOSTEN in Norwegian 29 Oct 81 p 11

[Excerpt] Ambassador Helge Vindenes will take over after Jens Evensen as leader of the Norwegian delegation at the continuation of the negotiations with the Soviet Union on the demarcation line in the Barents Sea, Foreign Minister Sven Stray has told AFTENPOSTEN. Ambassador Egil Amlie will be the new leader of the delegation at the negotiations with Denmark on the unresolved demarcation conflict between Jan Mayen Island and eastern Greenland. Ambassador Evensen will continue his work with Law of the Sea questions.

Recently Foreign Minister Stray had talks with Evensen about his work at the Foreign Ministry. At the meeting it was stressed that prominent Foreign Ministry officials may not involve themselves personally in foreign affairs.

In a speech recently Stray said that Norway will contact the Soviet authorities in the near future to find a suitable date for the resumption of the demarcation line negotiations. The next round will be held in Oslo -- with Helge Vindenes as the Norwegian delegation's leader. He has already been in charge of Norwegian contacts with the Soviet Union on this issue in the past, before Evensen was appointed delegation leader last year. Vindenes has been an ambassador with special responsibilities since 1978.

According to Foreign Minister Stray the negotiations with Denmark on the Jan Mayen zone will be resumed in the course of the spring, and the Norwegian side will be led by department chief Egil Amlie, who was Norway's first ambassador to East Germany. Amlie became department chief in 1979, when he took over the Foreign Ministry legal department.

FRYDENLUND: SUB INCIDENT ADDS URGENCY TO N-FREE ZONE

PM111505 Oslo AFTENPOSTEN in Norwegian 7 Nov 81 p 10

[Excerpt] The submarine affair in Sweden must not alter our attitude to a nuclear-free zone. This is the view of Norwegian politicians, but they are not all equally hopeful about the prospects of bringing this about. Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman Kaare Kristiansen is the most skeptical. All stress the need for real disarmament.

Former foreign minister Knut Frydenlund, who is now chairman of the Defense Committee, told ARBEIDERBLADET that the submarine affair points to the urgency of the nuclear-free zone issue at the same time as it underlines the importance of monitoring arrangements. However, he expected that many people would make use of this incident for attacks on the zone proposal.

"But this affair emphasizes the necessity of starting work on nuclear-free zones, which should also include coastal waters in the Nordic area. Further work should also attach importance to building in monitoring arrangements. Such monitoring arrangements would have to based on the willingness to undergo checks," Frydenlund said.

SUB INCIDENT SEEN DEVALUING NUCLEAR-FREE ZONE

PM111455 Oslo AFTENPOSTEN in Norwegian 7 Nov 81 p 8

[Excerpt] "What has happened is a gross violation, if the submarine did have nuclear weapons onboard," Norwegian CP Chairman Martin Gunnar Knudsen said in a commentary on the submarine affair.

However, Knudsen added that he thought that the submarine entered Swedish territorial waters because of a navigational error and did not do so intentionally. A strongly worded statement from the Socialist Left Party Executive said that when a Soviet submarine with nuclear arms onboard violates Swedish waters it is a blow to the integrity of all the Nordic countries. In the view of the Socialist Left Party what has happened underlines the need for a nuclear-free zone in the Nordic countries, but also makes the process toward such an arrangement more difficult because it creates suspicion of the guarantees from a nuclear superpower in the area.

PAPER CONSIDERS AIRFIELD DEFENSE ISSUE

PM101141 Oslo AFTENPOSTEN in Norwegian 28 Oct 81 p 11

[Text] The basic plans for the future defense of airfields in Norway could be upset if the authorities buy used Hawk missiles from the United States. This type of missile requires more personnel and is designed for a completely different application from the Roland II, which Norway was officially backing up to September, when the Americans themselves shelved the Roland. In fact the cost was causing the armed forces to reject the Roland back in the spring.

At present three different missile systems are being evaluated by the Air Force Quartermasters Administration -- the original European version of the Roland, the British Rapier, and an improved version of the older U.S. Hawk missile. In practice the armed forces' choice is strongly influenced by the agreement for U.S. contingency stockpiling in Troendelag. Under the terms of this agreement Hawk missiles will enter Norway. The problem of providing Norwegian airfields with air defenses has been a persistent one in the Norwegian defense debate for over 20 years. Today several important air bases are defended by hand-cranked artillery [sveivekanoner] of a prewar model. Early in the sixties Norway was offered Hawk missiles but rejected them. Later the authorities backed the Crotale, but as is well-known this system became a political hot potato. Late in the seventies the Storting finally decided to back the U.S. Roland II system. And in the expectation of funds actually being allocated several Norwegian firms have discussed industrial cooperation with the U.S. producers.

However, last spring the responsible military authorities sent a letter to the Americans making it clear that the price trend for the Roland II was making a Norwegian order impossible. In September Norway was told that cuts in the U.S. defense program would hit the Roland project unless Congress decided to the contrary. So once again Norway is on lookout, and in the meantime price trends have meant that planned purchases of new systems will now cost billions. On 15 September defense chief Sverre Hamre was given a status report on the situation and then issued orders, according to AFTENPOSTEN's information, that he wanted a more detailed analysis of the Hawk system. This month the air force sent experts to Denmark to look at Danish experience with the Hawk, and Hamre told FORSVARETS FORUM magazine that in November he will discuss close-range defenses with the U.S. Army's Gen E.C. Meyer, who visited Norway in the middle of September. It is the U.S. Army which has made the offer to sell used Hawk batteries to Norway at an extremely low price. Several hundred million kroner have been mentioned, as opposed to a couple of billion for a similar number of Rapier or Roland systems. Since the original plans were drawn up, weighty considerations have emerged which point toward the Hawk. First, pressure from officers' organizations as a result of which former Defense Minister Thorvald Stoltenberg rejected the armed forces leadership's proposal for the closure of the Nike Battalion. Second, the agreement on U.S. contingency stockpiling in Troendelag stipulates that two U.S. Hawk batteries are to be manned and maintained by Norwegian personnel. This means that two missile systems have fallen into the lap of the air force, which will have great problems in choosing a third system for airfield defenses in other parts of the country, with a separate maintenance and supply apparatus for each one. But if the Hawk is chosen because of its low price and the advantages to be gained from standardization, there would be other problems, and these are now being investigated by the air force. How will it be possible to train and pay personnel for the Hawk system, which requires a lot of manpower?

How will each unit be protected in war, bearing in mind that the Hawk will have to be spread across miles of ground around an airfield, while the oland was designed to stand right by the runways?

According to information received by AFTENPOSTEN the interim conclusion reached is that the Hawk would require too many personnel to maintain fully opeational batteries in peacetime. So the authorities are investigating the feasibility of keeping the system in service using small caretaker forces, and in the event of war counting on the mobilization of local manpower to man the Hawk.

In any case the Hawk, with its range of around 50 km and its longer reaction time, would require a new concept for airfield defenses. By comparison the Roland has a range of 6 km.

The air force expects a final decision in the present round of investigations around the end of the year.

SWEDEN

NUCLEAR FAILURE COULD HAVE WORLDWIDE IMPLICATIONS

PM101103 Stockholm SVENSKA DAGBLADET in Swedish 3 Nov 81 p 8

[Text] The Swedish National Nuclear Power Inspection Board (SKI) takes a serious view of the faults which shut down Ringhals 3 a few days ago. There could be similar faults with Ringhals 4, which has not yet been primed with nuclear fuel, and with other new pressurized water reactors around the world.

SKI has therefore informed its counterparts abroad about the leaking tubes in the steam generators in Ringhals 3.

This is made clear by a report to SKI board members and its Reactor Safety Commitee. At present comprehensive investigations are taking place to see how widespread the damage to Ringhals 3 is. The reactor will probably be out of operation for a month or two for these investigations and for repairs. The shutdown will mean a loss in millions of kronor for the national power board. When the first investigations have been carried out SKI will call for a complete investigation into the causes of the damage. No repairs will be made until SKI has given its permission. Since the repairs will have to be done in a radioactive area the National Radiation Protection Institute will also have to be involved.

Ringhals was primed on 1 July 1980. Despite the fact that it is relatively new it has been in operation for longer than any of the newly constructed pressurized water reactors in the world. It could be a case of a construction fault and for this reason [remainder of sentence missing].

The preliminary investigations will not be completed before the end of this week. Then SKI and the Radiation Protection Institute will be given a program of action for their approval.

BIGGEST MILITARY EXERCISE SINCE WAR SCHEDULED

LD101944 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 1700 GMT 10 Nov 81

[Text] In the wake of the submarine affair the defense forces are now planning the biggest military exercise since World War II. It is to be held in Norrbotten in March next year with the participation of just over 20,000 soldiers, of whom about 10,000 will be refresher soldiers. There will not be merely exercises; there will also be drama: thousands of spectators are to be invited from the public to see what the defense forces are doing with the tax money.

"Operation Northern Lights," the name of the defense forces' exercise in Norrbotten next year, will be a test of strength of the organizational talents in the Upper Norrland military district. This is the first time since World War II that the military will carry out war exercises with so many men and from so many branches of the forces are combining them into a sinlge large one. "Operation Northern Lights" will therefore cost an extra 7 million kronas for the cost of transportation from southern and central Sweden to the combat area.

At least one-third of the combatants are to come from other military districts. The combat is to go on for 4 days and nights between the Luleaa and Kalix River Valleys, and this will lead to unavoidable disruptions for the public. The combat will to some extent be held close to communities and there will be shooting at all times of the day and night. With troop transports on the road, with about 12,000 men, and with 4,500 men on trains, ordinary traffic will be well and truly hampered. The telephone network will also be blocked and land damage costing 500,000 kronas will be caused.

But this exercise will not be like previous refresher courses, far away in the bushes. No, this time the public will be given the opportunity to watch the combat. Thousands of spectators, almost as many as the participating soldiers, are to be invited and this perhaps demonstrates a new direction or philosophy in the military. Erik G. Bengtsson is a military commander in Upper Norrland:

[Begin Bengtsson recording] First, I want to establish that the defense will in Sweden today is extraordinarily high. The latest opinion poll carried out by the National Psychological Defense Planning Committee shows that about 90 percent of the Swedish people want a defense force, and about as many want compulsory military service. It is thus very high and it is likely that the defense will has become even higher after the submarine incident. So in the first place the purpose is not to increase the defense will, for I think it is very high already, but it is a matter of demonstrating to the people who live in this region what defense means. We shall show them such operations which might very well be topical in case of war, which I hope will never hit us. [end recording]

NAVY CHIEF ON DEFENSE NEEDS AFTER SUB INCIDENT

PM121231 Stockholm SVENSKA DAGBLADET in Swedish 5 Nov 81 p 7

[Excerpt] As a result of the submarine affair the military authorities should demand of the government that the defenses along our coasts be strengthened. Insufficient resources, the length of the coastline and tricky water conditions make it difficult, however, to give a complete guarantee that the violation will not be repeated. Navy chief Adm Per Rudberg told SVENSKA DAGBLADET this in his first statement since the Soviet submarine ran aground last week. The interview also makes it clear that the navy chief fears that foreign submarines could have violated Swedish waters more often than we know about. Often when Swedish vessels carry out major exercises, unidentifiable submarines are discovered.

In the interview Admiral Rudberg seemed to rule out the possibility that the Soviet submarine's intrusion could have been due to navigational error. He also said that it would have been wrong for the Swedish military to resort to force when the submarine was discovered.

According to reports received by SVENSKA DAGBLADET both the government and the Defense Committee in session will take initiatives because of the submarine incident. The navy will probably require additional funds for better surveillance systems and more vessels and also helicopters. The following is a resume of the interview with Admiral Rudberg.

[Question] How could it happen?

[Answer] There are several factors to point to. Our coastline is as long as the distance between the northern tip of Jutland and Spain. The main function of our defense forces is training; we have no standing forces. Water conditions in both the Baltic and along the west coast are well-suited to submarines. The mixture of salt and fresh water and the special variations in temperature make submarine surveillance especially difficult. This is why submarines are important to our defenses.

[Question] Do we not have sufficient resources for surveillance even in restricted military areas?

[Answer] If we were to have a total-cover surveillance system to localize and identify intruders, including those under water, we would need completely different resources from those we have today. There are large areas apart from restricted areas which are of great interest.

[Question] What equipment is needed?

[Answer] It is impossible to give complete cover of what there is under the surface, it would involve enormous expenditure. However, technical developments are gradually improving the situation so that in a few years' time it will be possible to watch the most important areas. Ships and helicopters are what are primarily needed for surveillance and identification on the surface.

[Question] Given the existing resources, what went wrong when the submarine came? It was clearly on the surface for 15 hours before you heard about it.

[Answer] We noted that it was there, but the report did not reach those responsible in time. This is something we are looking into. Our system is not constructed to give total coverage in peacetime. Things would have been completely different after mobilization. The commander in chief's long-term defense program gives priority to direct defense against invasion -- a priority I fully share. In this case our resources were not sufficient to check what it was we had seen on the surface.

[Question] Is this true of radar surveillance?

[Answer] Radar does not tell you what it is you are seeing. In this case, when the submarine arrived, in the poor visibility conditions with mist and darkness, a ship close by would have been needed to identify the object.

[Question] Does this mean that we need more vessels in order to avoid a repetition of the incident?

[Answer] Yes, if the call is for effective defenses against invasion, and for a superstructure better able to deal with surveillance and action in our waters.

[Question] It is this latter which has had to give way to other considerations?

[Answer] It was the commander in chief's and my priority. With limited economic resources we should not put ourselves into the situation in which we are bad at everything. This defense philosophy has been the dominant one for decades. What has changed is that we are being influenced by the growing interest in the area immediately surrounding Sweden from the superpowers. This has come gradually, the danger is that we have perhaps not realized the dramatic change that has taken place in the last few years.

[Question] So in today's situation we cannot prevent repetitions of the submarine violation?

[Answer] Such a guarantee cannot be given. It is obvious and it has unfortunately been proven now that our real resources for surveillance and action in peacetime are extremely limited.

[Question] It is likely that submarines have entered so deep into Swedish territory before?

[Answer] When we go out on major exercises we often meet uninvited guests, who are there to follow the exercise. I have a terribly unpleasant feeling about what might be happening when we are not out in such numbers.

[Question] Did the Swedish military have the right to board and use force when the submarine was discovered?

[Answer] According to international law a naval vessel is part of the territory to which it belongs.

[Question] But when the violation is as gross as this?

[Answer] It must be proven that it is a case of an international violation. We have clear instructions from the civilian authorities. It would have been a completely different matter if the submarine had come sailing in and we had discovered it. Then we would have acted directly.

[Question] Do you consider that it is clear that the submarine came to spy?

[Answer] I do not want to use the word "clear." As a superstitious old seaman I say that anything can happen at sea. But it would be a very remarkable phenomenon if so many things should go wrong in connection with determining position and the like, that one accidently ended up so far inside such a complicated archipelago.

[Question] With reference to the submarine affair, will you be adopting new measures, such as asking for additional funds?

[Answer] Yes, it is my definite view that if we have gotten into a situation in which this type of thing is going to happen in the future too -- and we have seen how activity along our coasts have been increasing -- then it is necessary to find a better way of instilling respect for Sweden's determination to defend the inviolability of Swedish territory, on land, at sea and in the air.

SCIENTIST: SOVIET SUB MAY HAVE HAD URANIUM-235

LD111110 Stockholm International Service in Swedish 1000 GMT 11 Nov 81

[Text] There was at least 10 kg of uranium on board the Soviet submarine in Karlskrona Archipelago, Dr Ragnar Hellborg of the Nuclear Physics Department at Lund University, has revealed. Hellborg took part in the measurements taken around the stranded submarine. According to Hellborg, the measurements taken indicated that the submarine had not only uranium-238 on board, but also another kind of uranium, probably uranium-235, which is more fissionable. Dr Hellborg made his statement following the Soviet report on Monday that the radiation, which was measured, came from the wrist watches of the Swedes taking the measurements. Wrist watches are not powered by uranium; such a statement can possibly be regarded as a poor joke, the Swedish nuclear physcist said.

USSR SOUGHT GUARANTEES OF SUB CAPTAIN'S LOYALTY

PM111553 Stockholm SVENSKA DAGBLADET in Swedish 9 Nov 81 p 1

[Excerpt] Fears that the captain of Soviet submarine 137 would defect to the West were great in Moscow. Before the interrogations of Anatoly Guzhin, the Soviet Union therefore wanted guarantees that he would be taken back to his submarine, SVENSKA DAGBLADET has been told. But Sweden gave no guarantees that Captain Guzhin would be prevented from not returning to his submarine. The Soviet Union agreed to this -- something which surprised the Swedish crisis group.

NUCLEAR 'NONCHALANCE' FUELS EUROPEAN FEARS

PM111057 Stockholm SVENSKA DAGBLADET in Swedish 7 Nov 81 p 2

[Editorial: "Lowered Threshold"]

[Text] In the last few days the world's two superpowers have demonstrated a frightening nonchalance with their superweapons.

A Soviet submarine which is so old that it is almost ready for the scrapyard turns out to be equipped with weapons of mass destruction which are not even left at home when off on an espionage mission and violates a neutral country's territory.

The other superpower's secretary of state announces that the NATO doctrine contains plans which amount to firing "warning shots" if it is considered that Soviet troops "have gone too far" in conventional warfare.

For those with insight it ought to come as no surprise that nuclear arms have now been developed in such a way that the risks have rapidly increased that they could be used at an early stage in a military confrontation between the two big military blocs.

As far as the armaments onboard submarine 137 are concerned they amount to a reminder that nuclear warheads are in the process of becoming "conventional" weapons and that the nuclear threshold on which we relied in the past has been lowered so much that it hardly amounts to a protection anymore.

The fact that the Soviet Union is sailing around with nuclear warheads in one of the areas where Moscow is making propaganda for a nuclear-free zone should not fail to influence those who in their protests are primarily intent on preventing the Western powers from modernizing their defenses in Europe. The fact that the Soviet Union was caught red-handed in the Belkinge Archipelago will also set off echoes in the international bodies in which the Soviet Union has attempted to impress representatives from the Third World by speaking indefatigably of its enormous desire for peace and by making propaganda for nuclear-free zones.

Therefore the revelations in this respect should make a contribution to creating a better balance in the demands from the various peace movements which are growing ever stronger in Europe. But the effect would have been greater if simultaneously in Washington Secretary of State Haig had not expressed himself so carelessly about nuclear strategy. The fact that he was later contradicted by Defense Secretary Weinberger, who explained that there is nothing which even remotely resembles plans to fire nuclear warning shots, has not made things much better.

Alexander Haig, as a former NATO supreme commander, ought to have a good knowledge of what plans are in existence. This is now the second time within a month that Washington has said things about nuclear arms which cannot but worry people in Europe.

Neither President Reagan's statement that he could imagine both sides resorting to tactical nuclear weapons nor Haig's testimony to plans for warning shots is a sensational revelation. But the loose way in which these weapons are mentioned is worrying. It gives the rest of the world an impression of thoughtlessness, and the U.S. allies must be dumbstruck at the lack of coordinated thinking within the Reagan administration.

Both the Soviet violation and the confused U.S. discussion can only lead to stronger demands from world public opinion that the superpowers agree on balanced and internationally controlled disarmament.

It is no longer enough to have arms limitation. They must be reduced and we must also be able to verify that this is really happening.

IRAQ EMBASSY PROTESTS ARMS TO IRAN VIA LARNACA

NC120744 Nicosia HALKIN SESI in Turkish 10 Nov 81 p 1

[Text] Ankara (special) -- The Iraqi Embassy in Ankara has issued a statement in which it says that the Greek Cypriot administration has become a base supplying arms to Iran. It is further stated that the arms and ammunition come to Larnaca airport from Israel and are redirected to Tehran. The Iraqi Embassy stated that it deeply deplores this development and added that Iraq is watching the situation closely and that it will review its relations with the Greek Cypriot administration.

As is known, the Greek Cypriot administration helped supply Iran with arms in the past as well. It has been established that a foreign transport plane three times took off from Tel Aviv, landed at Larnaca airport and then flew to Tehran from there. It was stated then that arms purchased from Israel reached Tehran without the Greek Cypriot administration having anything to do with the affair. It was also alleged then that a Swiss commission agent was obtaining arms from Israel and selling them to Iran, without the Greek Cypriot administration knowing what the plane was carrying.

CULTURAL COOPERATION PROGRAM SIGNED WITH POLAND

NC101821 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1730 GMT 10 Nov 81

[Text] Today, Cyprus and Poland signed their third cultural cooperation program agreement for 1982-1984. The program provides, among other things, for mutual participation in congresses, the exchange of experts and artists, and the grant of six scholarships every year by the Polish Government for undergraduate or postgraduate studies at Polish Universities.

Foreign Ministry Director General Pelayis and Polish Charge d'Affaires (Stepien), who signed the program on behalf of the two governments, lauded the importance of cultural relations to the development of friendly ties among people and stressed the devotion of the two countries to the principles of freedom, democracy and peace.

SPOKESMAN DENIES MILITARY REINFORCEMENT REPORTS

NC121103 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1000 GMT 12 Nov 81

[Text] In a statement today, the government spokesman denied the inaccurate and unfounded claims recently published in the Turkish Cypriot press that Greece has dispatched troops and military materiel to Cyprus, that there are plans for the dispatch of additional forces and materiel to strengthen Cyprus' defense, and that a Greek military delegation will visit Cyprus for [talks on] military issues.

As the government spokesman stressed in his statement, it is believed that these claims aim at covering up Turkey's activities. He also said that reports in the hands of the Cyprus Government -- which is closely following the situation -- indicate that recently both the Turkish occupation troops and the Turkish Cypriots have been reinforced successively with personnel and heavy military materiel. This, he added, is confirmed by increased arrival of Turkish Navy LSTS at the ports of Famagusta and Kyrenia and of air force aircraft of the C-130 type at Tymbou airport, as well as by the frequent arrival of groups of Turkish officers.

ROLANDHIS: NO COMMENT ON MISSING PERSONS PROPOSAL

NC101815 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1730 GMT 10 Nov 81

[Text] A Foreign Ministry statement says that Foreign Minister Rolandhis does not fully agree with the content of a UN statement which was released today on the question of missing persons.

However, in view of the fact that final UN proposals on the question will be forthcoming, he does not wish to make any comment at present.

LISSARIDHIS DENOUNCES WALDHEIM EVALUATION

NC122020 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1730 GMT 12 Nov 81

[Text] The chairman of the socialist EDEK Party, Mr Lissaridhis, speaking at a gathering in Nicosia last night, referred to the UN secretary general's evaluation on the intercommunal talks and said that the acceptance of a solution within the framework of the specifications of Waldheim's document will lead, initially, to partition and ultimately to total national destruction.

Mr Lissaridhis analyzed Waldheim's document and said that it is impermissible for his ideas to become the basis for finding a solution to the Cyprus issue. Our duty, he added, is to point out to Mr Waldheim not to go any further, and when the document was officially submitted our duty was to give an unofficial reply so as not to change the dispute of occupier and victim to one of victim and Waldheim. Mr Lissaridhis said that even now our duty is not to accept the ideas as a reference document to discuss the Cyprus issue, but to indicate that it clashes with the basic UN principles.

More Lissaridhis Comments

NC131242 Nicosia TA NEA in Greek 13 Nov 81 p 3

[Excerpts] At the beginning [of his 11 November speech at a Nicosia gathering on the handling of the Waldheim "evaluation"], Dr Lissaridhis, analyzed the favorable repercussions of the change in Greece and the resulting reestablishment of the Cypriot issue as a question of invasion and occupation.

He then referred to the Waldheim "ideas" and stressed that acceptance of a solution within the framework of the specifications of the Waldheim document would unavoidably lead, initially, to partition and ultimately to total national extermination.

Background: there is no doubt that the Reagan administration is the inspirer of the Waldheim "ideas." Mr Haig was demanding, in an ultimatum-like way, their acceptance before the Greek elections because he realized that if PASOK assumed power it would bring about significant qualitative changes in the elements composing the Cypriot problem.

Mr Waldheim leaked his "ideas" to the official Cypriot side some months ago.

Why?

In order to realize the reaction of the contents of the Haig ideas, whose name was changed to the Waldheim "ideas." Probably Mr Waldheim could not react strongly because of the forthcoming elections for the post of UN secretary general and he was hoping for a reaction by the side concerned.

What was the duty of the Greek Cypriot side?

To point out to Mr Waldheim that his duty was to supervise the holding of the talks within the framework of the UN resolutions and principles, and that the proposals were violating both these principles and the summit agreements. Thus, an end would have been put to this course which today transfers the Cypriot issue from an international question of invasion and violation of principles into a controversy between Cyprus and Waldheim.

Unfortunately, if Waldheim was not encouraged he was also not discouraged from proceeding with the promotion of the spurious "ideas."

This is obvious. The UN secretary general would have never dared to enter into a confronation with the victims and the UN resolutions if had he actually been discouraged by the official Cypriot side. Thus, the responsibility for having been led to the present state of affairs lies with the government and all those who last summer advised it to follow this course.

So, the Cypriot issue is being diverted from a question of invasion and occupation into a confrontation between Cyprus and Waldheim as well as into a discussion of the form of division. It is wrong to say that our unofficial letter would create a controversy, whereas its official submission at the negotiating table will avoid this controversy, unless it is intended to accept the Waldheim "ideas" as a basis for a Cypriot solution.

Even with the new, destructive concessions, no solution will be found, but the Waldheim "ideas" will remain as a future starting point for any new discussion. Thus, the declared reestablishment of the Cypriot issue as a question of occupation is abandoned. In our opinion, this will lead the Cypriot issue on a destructive course.

Even now, it is our duty not to accept the ideas as a reference document for discussion of the Cypriot issue but to recommend that the document be compared with the basic principles of the UN resolutions.

Now we have a Greek Government which regards the Cypriot issue as a question of occupation and is prepared to undertake an international campaign and offer practical assistance. Unfortunately, even at this time of change, the Cypriot leaders are accepting as a basis for discussion views which not only do not consider the Cypriot issue as a question of occupation but, in essence, deny the existence of a sovereign Republic of Cyprus.

What the Greek Government can certainly do is to point out -- as it has pointed out -- the substance of the problem. The Greek Government cannot, by itself, undertake the handling of the issue.

The course being followed will create irreparable faits accomplis which will wreck the Cypriot cause.

There is still time for second thoughts. If we abandon the basis of the problem, nobody -- whatever he may be believe -- will be responsible for stopping this downhill fall. The main weapon of small nations is their adherence to ideals and principles and their struggle to persist in their implementation.

DHIKO 'UNANIMOUSLY' SUPPORTS KIPRIANOU STANCE

NC102040 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 2000 GMT 10 Nov 81

[Text] The political office of DHIKO, the Democratic Party, met today under party Chairman Spiros Kiprianou, who briefed it on the developments of the national issue and the government's and the Greek Cypriot side's future handling, particularly on the question of the Waldheim evaluation on the intercommunal talks. According to a DHIKO statement, the members of the political office unanimously supported this handling and expressed their absolute support for the policy and tactics which Kiprianou follows on the national issue.

KIPRIANOU TO VISIT HUNGARY, BULGARIA, U.S.

NC120758 Nicosia I ELEVTHEROTIPIA in Greek 12 Nov 81 p 1

[Text] Following relevant invitations from the leaders of Bulgaria, Hungary and the United States, President of the Republic Spiros Kiprianou will pay official visits to these countries in late November and early December.

According to our reports, the president will visit Sofia on 24 November. On 27 November he will visit Hungary and most probably he will visit Washington on 3 December. Because of the new developments which have taken place in the Cyprus problem, it is understood that during the official meetings President Kiprianou will have with the leaders of the countries he will visit he will be afforded the opportunity to brief them on our positions.

OLAY REPORTS ON 'CITIZENSHIP LAW' CHANGES

NC131132 Nicosia OLAY in Turkish 9 Nov 81 p 23

[Text] With amendment No 107 published in the Official Gazette on 28 October 1981, the Council of Ministers has determined the "special circumstances" which will be taken into consideration in granting citizenship in accordance with the newly prepared "standing regulations" based on the "citizenship law."

According to this amendment, the following are the conditions under which a person can be admitted to TFSC citizenship without having to wait for the lapse of 5 years: Those who come under any of the categories shown below can be granted exceptional citizenship certificates with the decision of the Council of Ministers, provided that their status complies with the provisions of Section 1 (E) and (D) of the second table.

(A) Those who marry citizens of the TFSC and settle in the TFSC and reside there as a married person for at least 1 year.

(B) (I) Those who are definitely proven to have settled in the TFSC for at least 1 year.

(II) Those who prove that they have bought a residence in the TFSC and have lived there for at least 1 year.

(C) (I) Those who have proved to be making substantial contributions to the economy of the TFSC.

(II) Those who have proved to be contributing t the social and cultural development of the TSFC.

(III) Those who have proved to be capable of contributing to the development of the TFSC's foreign relations.

(IV) Those who can contribute to the development of general education (religious education and secular education) in the TSFC.

(V) Those who are employed in an important department of the TFSC security forces which requires continuity.

(VI) Those who are proved to have rendered extraordinary service to the TFSC.

(D) Those whom the Council of Ministers think should be granted TFSC citizenship.

NORTH'S SPOKESMAN DENIES DISAGREEMENT WITH TURKEY

TA101717 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in Turkish to Cyprus 1530 GMT 10 Nov 81

[Text] The TFSC Foreign Affairs Ministry spokesman has categorically denied Greek Cypriot press reports to the effect that disagreement has arisen between the TFSC and Turkey concerning the attitude to be adopted in dealing with and resolving the Cyprus issue. The spokesman said: There is not the slightest difference of opinion between the TFSC and Turkey on this matter or on any other matter.

Noting that if there is a disagreement concerning the approach to the Cyprus problem as in the case of Waldheim's views, this is between Athens and the Greek Cypriot sector of Lefkosa [Nicosia], the spokesman added: After assuming office, the new Greek prime minister, Papandreou, met separately with Lissaridhis, Kiprianou and Papaiannou, and after each meeting an identity of views was claimed between the respondents. We were not able to understand the meaning of this identity of views, because all these three Greek Cypriot political leaders advocate different views on both Waldheim's views and the general attitude to be adopted. Until yesterday, Lissaridhis was in favor of rejecting these views and was openly declaring this. While Papaiannou supports these views, Kiprianou is continuing his usual neutrality without stating anything definite. Only fortunetellers could probably decipher the meaning of the identity of views mentioned by the Greek prime minister.

DENKTAS REPLIES TO KIPRIANOU STAND ON GUARANTEES

TA121212 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in Turkish to Cyprus 1030 GMT 12 Nov 81

[Text] President Rauf Denktas has reiterated that it is out of the question for the Turkish Cypriot side to agree to a solution of the Cyprus problem that does not contain Turkey's guarantees. Denktas was replying to a statement by Greek Cypriot administration leader Kiprianou during his news conference held yesterday, to the effect that it was aimed at replacing the guarantor powers by another form of guarantee under the auspices of the UN Security Council.

This proposal, President Denktas said, is aimed at destroying existing guarantees, at establishing an administration of the majority by reducing the Turkish Cypriot community to the status of a minority, and at annexing Typrus to Greece in accordance with the Akritas plan. Denktas added that the Greek Cypriot community was trying to obtain through negotiations what it could not achieve through armed attacks since 1963, aimed at the annihilation of the Turkish Cypriot community.

Recalling that it was absurd for Kiprianou to follow (?policies) directed to the implementation of the aims envisaged in the Akritas plan, Denktas said: In the event Turkey does not act as a guarantor of the independent and federal state of Cyprus, this independence cannot last long, and the Turkish Cypriot community will again face annihilation during the enosis (?process). Denktas concluded by noting that Turkish guarantees were contained in the package proposals and that this issue was discussed during his summit meeting with Kirpianou.

NORTH PAPER ON RADIO TRANSMITTER SALE

NC130905 Nicosia HALKIN SESI in Turkish 12 Nov 81 p 1

[Excerpts] Lefkosa [Nicosia] (CAGDAS NEWS AGENCY -- A 50-kilowatt radio transmitter, which was ordered on government instructions at the cost of 250,000 pounds sterling and for which 70 million Turkish liras have been paid, has been offered for sale even before it has been assembled. The transmitter in question was intended to strengthen the Bayrak-Radio-Television BRT] transmitters. The customs and revenues department of the TFSC Ministry of Finance issued a sales advertisement yesterday stating that unless the medium-wave "Marconi" transmitter and various radio and television parts -- which the BRT has been unable to clear since December of 1980 -- are not cleared from customs by 1000 hours today, they will be sold by auction.

As the goods were loaded, the Marconi Company drew its money through the confirmed letters of credit provided by the cooperative Central Bank for the 50-kilowatt medium-wage transmitter which was ordered by the BRT on the instructions of the government, while the bank presented the relative documents to the BRT demanding payment. Though at the beginning, the BRT managed to meet its responsibilities, later it has been unable to clear from customs equipment which has been at the customs since the end of 1980. It has been learned that protests have been lodged with Prime Minister Cagatay and Finance Minister Cosar against the intention of the customs authorities to sell by auction the radio and tv equipment, since the BRT is a state institution and bears no responsibility for the payment of the customs duty.

PAPANDREOU MEETS WITH IRANIAN CHARGE 12 NOV

NC122016 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 1900 GMT 12 Nov 81

[Text] The prime minister today received in audience the Iranian charge d'affaires, (Masun Hasani). During their talks, which were held in a cordial atmosphere, they reviewed the friendly relations between the two countries and established the mutual desire to expand their cooperation.

On this occasion, the prime minister referred to the misinterpreted answer about aggressiveness, which he had given to a television correspondent when asked about the Iran-Iraq conflict in which Greece remains neutral and wishes a peaceful and just settlement based on the internationally accepted principle. In conclusion, the prime minister stressed Greece's sincere and friendly feelings for the Iranian government and people.

PAPANDREOU TO ATTEND NATO MEETING IN DECEMBER

NC122054 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1930 GMT 12 Nov 81

[Text] The government spokesman today confirmed the report that Prime Minister Papandreou, in his capacity as minister of defense, will participate in the winter NATO ministerial conference to be held in Brussels at the beginning of December. The prime minister will be accompanied by Foreign Minister Kharalambopoulos.

ROMANIAN DEPUTY FOREIGN MINISTER ARRIVES 12 NOV

NC122100 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1930 GMT 12 Nov 81

[Text] Romanian State Secretary for Foreign Affairs Duma arrived in Athens at 1600 today for talks. Upon his arrival at Ellinikon Airport, the Romanian official stated there is no problem in Greek-Romanian relations, which are characterized by sincere friendship, mutural respect and trust. He added: My visit is taking place within the framework of meetings and exchanges of view between the foreign ministers of the two countries on bilateral and internal issues. I will have talks with Deputy Foreign Minister Papoulias on matters concerning our trade relations, technology and the more general relations between the two countries. With Foreign Minister Kharalambopoulos, I will discuss political matters concerning mainly the consolidation of peace in the Balkans and Europe in general.

In conclusion, Mr Duma said that Romania's position on Cyprus is always in favor of the island's independence and territorial integrity, because the Romanian Government believes that the Cyprus issue must be solved on the basis of the UN resolutions in the interest of the two communities. At 1000 tomorrow, Mr Duma will meet with Foreign Minister Kharalambopoulos and then he will hold talks with deputy Foreign Minister Papoulias.

BRIEFS

TRANSFER OF ENVOYS -- Tonight it was announced that the government has decided to transfer to Athens the following Greek Ambassadors: Tzounis, who is serving with the Greek Embassy in Washington; (Iraklidhis) from the embassy in Lisbon; Katapodhis, from the permanent delegation at the United Nations; Korandis, from the embassy in New Delhi; Yiannopoulos, from the embassy in Khartoum; and Petrounakos from the embassy in Tripoli, Libya. The government also decided to transfer to embassies or permanent delegations abroad the following ambassadors: Fridhas, Karandreas, Velissaropoulos, Sosidhis, Vasilikos, Frantzeskakis, Sekeris and Dhoundas. [Text] [Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1930 GMT 9 Nov 81 NC]

EVREN TO BEGIN PAKISTAN VISIT ON 22 NOV

TA110547 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 0430 GMT 12 Nov 81

[Text] Head of State General Kenan Evren will pay an official visit to Pakistan from 22 to 27 November. A statement by the Foreign Ministry's information department says the Turkish head of state will make the visit within the framework of brotherly links existing between the two countries and upon the personal invitation of Islamic Republic of Pakistan President General Ziaul Haq.

ECONOMIC DELEGATION LEAVES FOR PAKISTAN TALKS

TA092022 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 2000 GMT 9 Nov 81

[Text] The Turkish-Pakistani joint economic committee will meet in Islamabad tomorrow. The Turkish delegation headed by Minister of State Nimet Ozdas which will represent Turkey at the talks left for Pakistan this morning. Increasing the volume of trade between the two countries and possibilities for cooperation in the fields of industry, energy, agriculture and construction will be discussed at the committee meetings which will last 6 days.

TURKMEN TO MEET GREEK FOREIGN MINISTER IN DEC

TA081618 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 8 Nov 81

[Text] It has been announced that Turkish and Greek foreign ministers will hold bilateral talks during the NATO ministerial meetings to be held in Brussels next month. This announcement was made by Greek Government spokesman and Information Minister Dhimitrios (Marudhas). The spokesman added that in the event a positive climate was achieved for the solution of problems concerning the two countries -- particularly in the Aegean issue -- the Turkish and Greek prime ministers could meet in the spring of 1982 for summit talks. A Turkish Radio and Television correspondent who asked a Foreign Ministry official in Ankara his views on the statement, has confirmed that the Turkish and Greek foreign ministers were expected to meet during the NATO ministerial meeting in December for talks.

GUNAYDIN SAYS PAPANDREOU FOLLOWING HITLER MODEL

NC090717 Istanbul GUNAYDIN in Turkish 4 Nov 81 p 3

[Commentary by Husamettin Celebi: "Papandreou on Hitler's Path"]

[Excerpts] What would happen if a group of our fellow countrymen came forward and suggested the formation of a "pan-Turkist" party when the formation of political parties becomes possible? Undoubtedly, the authorities would not allow it. It would be argued that the desire to unite all the Turks from the Balkans to East Turkestan under the flag of a political party known as "Pan-Turkist" could not be realized in the 20th century and that such an action would be a dangerous adventure which would court trouble for Turkey. If the founders of such a party maintained the contrary and if they tried hard to stress the "socialistic" character of their party, they would be told "your socialism is meant to conceal your true ambitions," and, as time goes by, the real name of the party is forgotten and it is eventually known as a "fascist party."

This is what is happening in our neighbor Greece. A man, whose entire life is full of question marks, has been able to come forward and found a "Panhellenic party." A Panhellenic party carries the same meaning and dangers and Greece as a Pan-Turkist party would for Turkey.

The effort to camouflage the aims of such a party by the word "socialist" does not alter the outcome. The founder struggles hard for years and eventually manages to assume power.

While many of us are extremely sensitive to the prefix "pan," none of us has dwelt on the "fascist" character of the developments in our next door neighbor. Elections are over now and the masks have been dropped. It is after such a statement by Papandreou as "our lands, where many Hellenic compatriots of ours live, are under occupation," that an awakening is seen in Turkey. It is clearly understood that what came to power is a "racist movement" in the true sense of the word and an uncovered "fascism."

There is no difference between Hitler's concept of "Lebensraum," which means additional territory needed for a nation's economic well-being, and Papandreou's concept of "national territory." With the lapse of time this will become clearer. Hitler's "Austria" movement will be copied by Papandreou in Cyprus, if he is given a chance.

But such an adventure may lead Papandreou where Hitler's Germany ended up. Only such a calamitous result can ensue. For adventures are adventures at all times and at all places.

What is more, Papandreou is facing Turkey and the Turks. Many people in Greece are in a position to understand what we mean. Papandreou too is old enough to know this. If he has forgotten, we advise him to learn, and once he learns, we advise him to ponder over it.

OZAL ADDRESSES ECONOMY CONGRESS IN IZMIR

TA071408 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1352 GMT 7 Nov 81

[Text] Izmir, Nov 7 (AA) -- The second Turkish economy congress which ended in Izmir Saturday will shed light on the economic life of Turkey for years to come, Deputy Prime Minister Turgut Ozal said in the meeting's final session. He said a new era was opening up. And Turkey's most urgent target in this new era was to reach a level where she could be one of the major industrial powers of the world.

Noting that the economy has its own rules, Mr Ozal said there was no use in trying to deviate from these rules. This would be nothing but trying to make a river flow in reverse, he said. He said an economy had to be based on the rules of supply and demand. Thus the introduction of price controls would create nothing but black-market and dual prices.

Mr Ozal said Turkey's most important problem was to redress her balance of external payments and he hoped that the third economy congress would be convened when this problem was resolved. He said the success of his government's economic policies depended on continuity and this could be achieved by persistence and without a no-concessions policy. Any slight deviation would make the economy topsy-turvy. The past was full of case histories explaining the failures. And all those failures could be traced to one important missing element: continuity.

SECURITY COUNCIL RATIFIES HIGHER EDUCATION CODE

NC051414 Paris AFP in English 1401 GMT 5 Oct 81

[Text] Ankara, 5 Nov (AFP) -- Turkey's controversial higher-education code was ratified by the ruling National Security Council yesterday and will take effect Monday, well-informed sources reported here today.

According to the new code, to be published in the Official Gazette this weekend, the universities will maintain the autonomy of their curricula, but will lost the administrative autonomy they enjoyed so far. Faculty members will teach at higher education institutions other than their own on a compulsory, two-year rotation basis.

All universities will fall under the authority of a 26-member "Board of Higher Education" (BHE) chaired by the minister of education and appointed by the head of state, the government and the universities. One member will also be named by the chief of general staff.

The retirement age of the teaching staff will be 67. The code bans them from joining political parties. Higher education will no longer be free after the new code comes into effect and tuition fees will be determined by the BHE.

COURTS IMPOSE DEATH PENALTY IN TERRORIST TRIALS

Adana Military Court

TA101627 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1550 GMT 10 Nov 81

[Text] Adana, 10 Nov (AA) -- Trial of the members of the terrorists group "Dev Yol-Revolutionary Path" ended today. The military court sentenced 7 to death and 2 members of the group to life in prison.

Army 9th Corps Court

TA121810 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 12 Nov 81

[Excerpt] The army 9th Corps and martial law command 1st military court has sentenced to death three members of the illegal Turkish People's Liberation Party-Front [THKP-C].

AFP: GOVERNMENT CHANGES JOB ASSIGNMENTS IN TRT

NC101701 Paris AFP in English 1636 GMT 10 Nov 81

[Text] Ankara, 10 Nov (AFP) -- The Turkish Government has transferred 101 professionals out of Turkish Radio-Television (TRT) to other government jobs, informed sources here said today. Most of those affected were described as "progressives". The move was legal because the TRT employees as civil servants, official sources said. The new job assignments had nothing to do with journalists.

Those transferred included the director of cultural radio programs, Oktay Arayici, who was assigned to the Port Authority of Istanbul and television producer Cetin Oner who was transferred to the Bureau of Natural Disasters in the Ministry of Housing and Reconstruction. The jobs, which do not carry a bonus paid to TRT employees, will result in a 60 per cent drop in salary for those affected. According to unconfirmed reports at TRT, more than 250 other employees will be transferred and another 40 will be fired. The operation would eventually affect more than 1,000 of the 7,000 TRT employees, the sources said.

FAILURES IN POWER TRANSMISSION FROM USSR, BULGARIA

LD051124 Ankara International Service in Turkish 1800 GMT 3 Nov 81

[Summary] "Due to unfavorable weather, faults have developed in the power lines transmitting electricity from the Soviet Union and Bulgaria to Turkey." As a result, beginning today, power cuts will be increased from the present 1 hour per day to 1.5 hours in the 51 provinces where these are currently in force and there will be power cuts of 1.5 hours per day in the 15 provinces where there were none until today. The latter are: Edirne, Kirklareli, Tekirdag, Giresun, Ordu, Trabzon, Rize, Artvin, Kars, Agri, Erzurum, Erzincan, Gumushane, Elazig, and Tunceli.

VOTCP ON SECURITY OPERATIONS IN KURDISH AREAS

TA130757 (Clandestine) Voice of Turkish Communist Party in Turkish to Europe and Turkey 0600 GMT 13 Nov 81

[Excerpts] For months, pressures have been exerted in Diyarbakir, Mardin, Urfa and Siirt regions.

Now, security operations are now being intensified in the Tunceli, Ovacik, Karakocan and Bingol areas. Armed with heavy weapons, soldiers are exerting terrible pressure during these operations. In some villages, men between the ages of 15 and 50 and women aged between 15 and 35 are being assembled at the village square. Some of these are being tortured and beaten then and there. In others, the Alevi Kurdish villagers are being thrown out of their homes and being replaced by [Sunni] commandos. In these areas, the inhabitants are being forced to evacuate their houses. Rumors among the people say that many people are being killed and wounded during these operations.

More security operations are reported from Akcadag and Dogancay, districts of Malatya. Airborne commandos from the Kayseri Airbase are being used in these operations. Based on tips supplied by Maoists to security authorities, atrocious tortures are being carried out during these operations. These incidents are evoking deep reactions among our people.

VOTCP: GENERAL ERSIN HAILS RELATIONS WITH USSR

TA100755 (Clandestine) Voice of Turkish Communist Party in Turkish to Europe and Turkey 0600 GMT 10 Nov 81

[Station report: "Importance Being Attached to the Development of Turkish-Soviet Relations"]

[Text] An official reception was held in the Soviet Embassy in Ankara on the occasion of the 64th anniversary of the Great October Socialist Revolution. National Security Council [NSC] member and Ground Forces Commander Gen Nurettin Ersin -- on behalf of the NSC -- certain ministers, officials of the Foreign Ministry and representatives of various institutions were present in the reception.

During the reception, General Ersin conveyed to the Soviet ambassador to Ankara, Aleksey Rodinov, Head of State General Evren's best wishes and greetings on the occasion of this great Soviet holiday. The general continued: We attach great importance to the development of Turkish-Soviet relations. We abide by the good neighborly relations and friendly cooperation between the two countries which date from the time of Ataturk. We wish the further development of these relations. General Ersin also recalled that in his message to Soviet leader Brezhnev, General Evren expressed his best wishes and greetings on the occasion of the anniversary of the Great October Socialist Revolution.

VOTCP CALLS FOR CONSISTENT POLICIES TOWARD USSR

TA120907 (Clandestine) Voice of Turkish Communist Party in Turkish to Europe and Turkey 0600 GMT 12 Nov 81

[Station commentary: "A More Consistent Basis Is Necessary"]

[Text] The anniversary of the Great October Socialist Revolution has been marked with ceremonies. Turkey and Greece were the only NATO countries that participated in the magnificent ceremonies held in Moscow to mark the occasion. In accordance with their repulsive policies of a return to the cold war, the other NATO countries did not participate in these ceremonies. A reception was held at the Soviet Embassy in Ankara on the occasion. Ground forces Commander Gen Nurettin Ersin was present at the reception on behalf of the military administration in power in our country.

In a statement at the reception, General Ersin recalled that the friendship ties between the two countries established at the time of Ataturk and Lenin must continue. Our people, all progressive patriotic forces and all those in favor of our national interests have been supporting for a long time the friendship established between Turkey and the Soviet Union at the time of Ataturk and Lenin because this friendship has brought many benefits to our people and country. It has played a major role in the successful end of our national liberation war. Industrial projects realized as a result of cooperation with the Soviet Union have been beneficial to our national economy.

Considering the Ataturk-Lenin period as the basis of Turkish-Soviet friendship and participating in the ceremonies of the Great October Socialist revolution are both constructive steps. As continuously reiterated by genuine patriots, these steps must be perpetrated.

On the other hand, those in responsible posts within the current administration are taking damaging steps directed against the Soviet Union which could impede the development of good relations between the two countries. In their statements these people employ the same language used by the imperialist, most reactionary and pro-American circles.

At a time when Turkey officially participated in the Moscow ceremonies, and when the friendship period of Ataturk and Lenin were recalled as the aim of the present administration, the coordinator of the National Security Council secretariat and one of the most influential persons within the military administration, Rear Admiral Isik Biren, told a GUARDIAN correspondent that the fact that Turkey is a neighboring country of the Soviet Union is one of the main reasons why the heavy pressures, antidemocratic moves and the inhuman tortures were necessary. This statement reverses all reality.

To praise the friendship period established by Ataturk and Lenin on the one hand and on the other to portray our great neighbor and friend in need as a threat to our country and a source of insecurity are not consistent stands. Our people are opposed to any programs that hinder the development of our basic and multilateral relations with the Soviet Union.

If the genuine friendship period established at the time of Ataturk and Lenin is to be considered Turkey's aim, then a more consistent stand must be adopted. It is obvious that the concessions to be made to imperialism damage the deep-rooted and friendly links between Turkey and the Soviet Union. As in the past, that is why our people and all forces in favor of our real national interests are waging a struggle against making concessions to policies that aim at loyalty and subordination to imperialism.

VOTCP CHALLENGES TERCUMAN CAMPAIGN AGAINST TCP

TA130950 (Clandestine) Voice of Turkish Communist Party in Turkish to Europe and Turkey 0600 GMT 13 Nov 81

[Station commentary: "The Pitiful Efforts of the Reactionaries"]

[Text] Dear listeners, in a series of articles, the Istanbul daily TERCUMAN has undertaken a new campaign against the Turkish Communist Party [TCP]. In this series, TERCUMAN is embellishing the information supplied to it by the so-called agents of MIT [National Intelligence Organization]. In addition to these articles being published in TERCUMAN for 4 or 5 days now, tracts are also being distributed in various cities and rumours are being spread against the TCP.

In this series, the Istanbul daily claims that the TCP has been disrupted and paralyzed as a result of the Balyoz [sledgehammer] code-named operation carried out by the security forces. Statements by dark circles posing as leftist and progressive reiterate these claims using leftist jargon. There are even newspaper reports to the effect that the Voice of Turkish Communist Party radio conceded that the TCP has been disbanded in Turkey.

The purpose of this campaign is to damage and weaken the TCP through psychological warfare being conducted in accordance with CIA methods, something they could not achieve through torture, pressure and mass arrests. Even TERCUMAN, which has in the past several times announced that the TCP has been abolished, does not take pains to hide this purpose. It openly declares that this campaign is being undertaken with the aim of completely destroying the TCP. In the same way as the Fascist NAP members who in the past, killed tens of people daily under the cover of helping out the state security forces, the TERCUMAN daily also is claiming to be of help through its revelations to the martial law commands of the junta.

However, not only the TCP members but all democratic forces are being attacked in this series. Members of the peace movement, teachers movement, cooperative movement and the trade union movement as well as all the honorable and decent representatives of the people are being accused for being affiliated with the TCP. The junta administration, which is exerting pressure on these movements through fascist methods, tolerates this campaign of black slanders by the TERCUMAN against the TCP. Not only is it tolerating these slanders, it is even providing the newspaper with material in a hidden way.

TERCUMAN claims to publish statements made to the police by certain progressive persons who were arrested last summer. In this way, a series of unfounded claims are being made against the TCP. Are these the real statements made by these people to the police? If they are, how can TERCUMAN resort to them in its articles? How can documents pertaining to a trial that has not yet been concluded be published in a newspaper? How can people be accused even before the indictments against them have been prepared? How did these police statements reach the hands of the newspaper writers? How were they reproduced and spread?

How much of this evidence is the fruit of the imagination of the TERCUMAN writers? How much of it is the result of tortures? What are the views on these declarations of the people who, it is claimed, have made these statements to the police? Where are they at this moment and what is their condition? The reactionary and antipeople writers of TERCUMAN are hiding these facts from their readers.

Let us expose the truth: Aydan Bulutgil, one of the persons whose police declarations have been used in the TERCUMAN articles, is currently in a hospital with both legs in a cast, as a result of inhuman torture.

Dear listeners, what is the aim of TERCUMAN? What is the aim of other campaigns being waged in a bid to support the TERCUMAN claims? Their aim is, first and most, to slander the TCP through lies and unfounded allegations, to damage the TCP's image among the people and to prepare the ground for new blood-stained attacks against the TCP.

This is not all; the TERCUMAN followers are trying on the one hand to crush all the democratic forces in their anticommunist pincers and, on the other, to undermine relations between Turkey and the other socialist countries. At a time when even General Ersin, the most reactionary and pro-American member of the National Security Council, makes statements in favor of relations between Turkey and the Soviet Union, TERCUMAN reiterates its anti-Soviet lies.

The reason for this campaign is to provide for the further crushing and exploitation of the workers, toilers and the people for the sake of the interests of a handful of collaborationist monopolists. That is why the TERCUMAN writers are so anxious in their articles. They are intensifying their attacks on the TCP because they know that this party stands only for the lofty interests of the workers, toilers and the motherland and because they are afraid of the bright future of our country.

The fact that the reactionaries are forced to engage in such pitiful campaigns demonstrates that the TCP is still living and continuing to struggle. That is why we are loudly proclaiming: Come into the open all enemies of the TCP, attack the TCP as much as you can, go on with your slanders, crush the people as much as you can. All this will be to no avail. This will not abolish or silence the TCP, nor will it prevent the working class and the toiling masses from overthrowing this damned military order with their strong hands.

Attacks by TERCUMAN and other reactionaries against the TCP only enhance the position of the party. This is the way workers, toilers and democrats think: This same TERCUMAN which has always slandered us, our professional organizations and our leaders is now attacking the TCP. The communists have no other interests than those of the workers and toilers. Poor reactionaries! While trying to attack the TCP they are only confirming this truth.

FBIS DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 220 16 November 1981

CONTENTS

BENELUX

BELGIUM

LE SOIR Views Election Results 'Upheaval' [10 Nov] F 1

NETHERLANDS

Paper Doubts Cohesion of Van Agt Cabinet [NRC HANDELSBLAD 5 Nov] F 3

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

FRG Will Discuss Zero Option During Brezhnev Visit J 1
Genscher on FDP Peace Goals, 'European Peace Order' J 1
Brandt 'Skeptical' of Soviet Proposal on Arms J 2
Apel Comments on Need To End Arms Race J 2
Schmidt Discusses Arms Control, NATO With Luns J 2
Bahr: Past Mistakes Are Lessons for U.S.-USSR Talks J 3
Red Cross Concerned About Ethnic German Emigration J 3
FRG, Saudi Ministers Sign Cooperation Agreement J 4
Schmidt Receives Saudi Minister J 4
Promotion for Joint Projects J 4
Genscher Receives Indian Foreign Minister J 4
Berlin Senator Comments on FRG-GDR Relations J 4
Television Carries Poll Results on Neutrality J 5
Briefs: Admiral Issues Denial; Moellemann to Mideast; Contract With USSR Firm J 5

FRANCE

Gandhi Appeals for End To World Arms Race K 1
Mauroy, Gandhi Comment on Talks K 1
Mauroy on Mirage Purchase [Delhi] K 2
Communique Issued K 2
Gandhi Summarizes Visit K 3
Mitterrand on Relations With Developing Nations K 4
Group Claims Responsibility for Bombing K 4
Suspected Armenian Extremist Released K 4
Release Denied K 4
Group Warns of Reprisals K 5
Briefs: Nuclear Sub; Soviet Message K 5

ITALY & THE VATICAN

Pope Exchanges Statements With Iranian Envoy L 1
Colombo Holds Discussions in Yugoslavia L 1
Malta Prime Minister Departs After 2-Day Visit L 2
Colombo Meets With Israeli Deputy Prime Minister L 2
DC Aide: Haig Remarks on N-Weapon Use 'Madness' [LA REPUBBLICA 8-9 Nov] L 2

CYPRUS

Spokesman Cites Turks' Airspace Violations R 1
Government To Protest R 1
I DHILINI Comment [14 Nov] R 1
President Kiprianou Suffering From Influenza R 1
[PUBLIC INFORMATION OFFICE 16 Nov]
Kiprianou To Meet President Reagan 8 Dec R 1
Rolandhis Scores Citizenship to Turkish Settlers R 1
Romanian State Secretary Duma Arrives 14 Nov R 2
Interparty Parliamentary Delegation Returns R 2
Kiprianou 11 Nov Statement on Waldheim Plan R 3

GREECE

'Polytechnic' Date Noted With U.S. Embassy March S 1
Government Permits March S 1
Papandreou Observes Date S 1
March Occurs Peacefully S 1
Government Statement S 1
AVRIANI Alleges Violation of Airspace 5 Nov [13 Nov] S 2
Papandreou Clarifies Statement on Iran, Gulf War [NEWS 13 Nov] S 2
Spokesman Responds to Haig Statement on Bases S 2
Government Determined To Remove Nuclear Missiles [RIZOSPASTIS 12 Nov] S 3
Agreements Signed With USSR in 1979 Reactivated S 3
Government Spokesman on Dialogue With Turkey [RIZOSPASTIS 12 Nov] S 4
Spokesman Replies to Archbishop Khrisostomos [ELEVTHEROTIPIA 12 Nov] S 4
Government Spokesman Comments on Libyan Statement S 4
Libyan Envoy Comments Cited [Nicosia] S 5
More on Comments [RIZOSPASTIS 14 Nov] S 5
Romanian Minister Holds Talks in Athens 13 Nov S 6
I AVYI Urges Free Return of Political Refugees [14 Nov] S 6

TURKEY

Ulusu Questioned on Foreign, Domestic Topics 14 Nov T 1
Further on News Conference T 1
Ozal Leaves for Economic Talks With Libya T 2
Technical, Trade Protocol Signed With S. Korea T 2

OTHER COUNTRIES

MALTA

Saudis Grant Loan; Government Supports Fahd Plan U 1

PORTUGAL

Lisbon Sees Normalization of Relations With Cuba U 1
Consulates May Be Opened in Tripoli To Handle Trade U 1

SPAIN

Sahagun Resigns; Calvo-Sotelo To Take Over U 2
Government Has Parliamentary Support U 2
Briefs: Natural Gas Discoveries U 2

BELGIUM

LE SOIR VIEWS ELECTION RESULTS 'UPHEAVAL'

PM131529 Brussels LE SOIR in French 10 Nov 81 pp 1, 2

[Text] Were the 8 November elections pointless? Rarely has an election which was originally not expected to produce many surprises resulted in so many upheavals in the position and relationships between the parties and paved the way for so many possibilities. This is equally true of the country as a whole and of each of the three regions, in which, as is known, the elections were to produce community and regional executives, aside from the Brussels executive. Five main points -- some expected and others completely surprising -- should first be highlighted:

1. The collapse of the Social Christian family. Both in the north and the south and in Brussels the Christian People's Party [CVP] and the Social Christian Party [PSC] paid the price of almost uninterrupted participation in government since the last war and also, probably, of the centrism they practised in the past few months. While remaining the leading party in Flanders, the CVP has lost 14 deputies' beats and hence no longer has an absolute majority on the Plemish regional executive. It has also lost one deputy in Brussels, while the PSC, its French-speaking "little brother," has lost a great deal of ground in the capital and in Wallonia. It is no longer the second biggest party in that region. At the national level the Social Christian family now has less influence than the Socialist Party [PS] and Belgian Socialist Party [SP].

2. The Socialist status quo. In the country's three regions the PS and SP have escaped the "erosion of power." In Wallonia the PS is still by far the dominant party and can choose its partners; in Brussels it has held its position creditably, while in Flanders it only just lost its place as second biggest regional party following the gains made by the Party of Liberty and Progress [PVV].

3. The ground gained by the Liberals and the Democratic Union for the Respect of Labor [UDRT]. In Brussels and Wallonia the Party for Reform and Liberty [PRL] has now become the second biggest party. In Flanders it has gained almost as much ground as the People's Party [VU]. It probably benefited from an "opposition cure" for several years and from the growing anxiety of the population, which is tempted by new remedies to the crisis. These two factors also favor the UDRT, which was obtained considerable scores everywhere, although not winning the "massive gains" predicted by some.

4. The community paradox. The spectacular drop in support for the French-Speaking Front [FDF]-Walloon Rally [RW] contrasts sharply with the VU's success in Flanders.
The FDF, which lost four seats in the chamber in Brussels but nonetheless remains the leading party in the area, is the only major political party not to have benefited from its opposition status. The only conclusion that can be drawn from this is that the "Brussels-Wallonia" operation launched before the election campaign was inopportune for it and for the RW. It should also be noted that the FDF-RW had been joined on the federalist issue by other parties, which was not the case with the VU in Flanders, which was the only party to take a clear stance on the community issue during the election campaign and has been liberally rewarded.

It will be noted that, aside from the federalist parties, the traditional political "families" behaved in exactly the same way in the three regions.

5. The ecologist thrust. In Flanders, and especially in Wallonia and Brussels, and despite their division, the "Greens" probably benefited from their new, attractive image, especially among the young voters going to the polls for the first time. They also benefited from the fact that people felt "fed up" with the traditional politics which, contrary to expectations, was not reflected in an increase in blank or spoiled ballots.

This concludes the election's "national" lessons. In addition there were upheavals in each of the three regions which were particularly important since -- as we said -- the regional executives will be autonomous after this election. The FDF, which in the last elections had not suffered the damaging effects of power, has paradoxically suffered the after-effects of an opposition cure this time. The effects of the political alliance with Walloon Brabant will have to be known before the extent of its losses can be assessed. But the FDF has undoubtedly suffered from its alliance with the RW, from the generalization of the federalist idea and from the economic crisis which probably prompted some of its voters to turn to a party more directly "concerned" with the economy, in this case the PRL.

The PRL, whose share of the vote is up around 7 percent, becomes the second biggest party in the Brussels region, ahead of the PS, whose position remains unchanged. The PRL and the UDRT (up around 5 percent) are sharing the fruits of the economic worries of former FDF and PSC voters. The ecologist thrust seems to benefit the "Ecolo" list, to which the "Greens" turned in particular. The small parties all achieved negligible scores, including the Belgian Communist Party [PCB], which is stagnating with some 2 percent of the votes.

"Progressive Majority" in Wallonia?

Adhering strongly to its previous positions, the PS can henceforth choose its partners in the south of the country. Sunday evening Huy Spitaels set the tone by talking of a "progressive majority," while on the Social Christian side Mr Vanden Boeynants and Mr Maystadt spoke of the appropriateness of a period in opposition.

However, the striking aspect of the election in Wallonia is probably the fragmentation of the political forces which, even though it has produced a "leftwing" political majority, will provide anybody seeking to form a coalition with a difficult task: The net losses of the PCB and RW -- which are roughly still in the same position -- and the ecologist thrust give Mr Spitaels fragmented forces in the face of which the PRL, which has been considerably consolidated -- especially by transfers of PSC votes -- and will exert its full influence.

CVP Drop in Flanders

The CVP's loss of ground will very probably impose a fairly considerable political radicalization in the north in all spheres. The impressive gains of the VU, which has achieved a score unprecedented since its formation, can be attributed to the fact that this party -- which has become markedly more radical since Hugo Schiltz's departure -- was the only one to wage a campaign based resolutely on community issues. Moreover some prominent CVP members recognized that Sunday evening. The Flemish bloc, however, was not really credible on that issue. Similarly it was the PVV's economic radicalism which enabled it to overtake the SP. It was able to play the "monetarist" card forcefully, not being handicapped by a trade union wing like the CVP. And that card was a winner.

What kind of Regional Executive?

The first executives to take office -- and this will not be a negligible factor should there be lengthy negotiations to form a government -- will be the community and regional executives. Indeed the law states that they will be formed in proportion to the composition of their respective assemblies. It is also known that, aside from Brussels, these executives will be outside the central government and will have an independent existence.

Thus the Walloon region executive will comprise three Socialist members, two Liberals and one Social Christian. The Flemish region executive will probably comprise four CVP members, two SP, two PVV and, unexpectedly, one VU member. On the French-speaking side the community executive will comprise two PS and one PRL member, who will thus replace the PSC. As for the Brussels region executive, it remains, as is known, within the central government and will be formed in accordance with the coalition formed at national level.

It is obviously dangerous to predict a few hours after the election what will happen at the national level once the electoral leaves have been swept up. Without as yet exploring the alliances which are arithmetically and politically possible it can nonetheless be noted that things will be no easier after 8 November than they were before. Indeed there could be a radicalization on the part of the victors and vanquished.

These victors -- PVV and VU in Flanders, PRL in Wallonia -- will mainly try to impose a change of policy in the economic sphere to which the Socialists, according to their initial postelection statements, remain openly hostile. Of the vanquished, the CVP in Flanders ought in particular to learn from its resounding defeat by improving its nationalist image and removing the trade union influence on its economic and social program. In Brussels the FDF can be expected to wave the community banner more than ever.

In this context it is the Socialists who should play the moderating role, the Socialists who 8 November became the strongest political force in the country, overtaking the Social Christian family in the chamber by 1 seat: 62 Socialists as against 61 Social Christians out of 212 deputies.

NETHERLANDS

PAPER DOUBTS COHESION OF VAN AGT CABINET

PM121439 Rotterdam NRC HANDELSBLAD in Dutch 5 Nov 81 p 3

[Editorial: "Repaired"]

[Text] The second Van Agt cabinet has been repaired, but there are still doubts about whether more cracks will appear. From the terse reports that leaked out in this phase of the cabinet repair attempt, the last thing that seemed likely was that all differences had been settled. Up to the very last moment there was a tough tug-of-war between the two main antagonists, Van Agt and Den Uyl, over the content and scheduling of the so-called job creation program, which principally exists in the head of the minister for special affairs and employment [Den Uyl].

However, what is certain is that the main protagonists in this phase saw a chance of keeping cool heads and were not willing to accept the risk of a complete cabinet collapse. Perhaps this should be seen as the gain from the operation of negotiators De Galan and Halberstadt. The cabinet can now present itself to the Second Chamber with its government declaration. Former Minister Albeda has already expressed hope that the problems facing the Netherlands will make the cabinet more cohesive. At the present time it is hardly possible to cherish this hope, and there is little reason to hope for much more than this.

FRG WILL DISCUSS ZERO OPTION DURING BREZHNEV VISIT

LD151256 Hamburg DPA in German 1208 GMT 15 Nov 81

[Excerpt] Bonn, 15 Nov (DPA) -- When Soviet state and party leader Leonid Brezhnev visits Bonn the Federal Government will, in the opinion of Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher, stress its serious desire for cooperation with the Soviet Union. Moreover it wishes, as Genscher said today in an interview with ZDF [television], "above all to win over the Soviet Union to the West's suggestion of a zero option in the area of medium-range missiles, that is, the abandonment of medium-range missiles in West and East." The Federal Government is prepared to do this but the key lies not in Bonn or in Washington, but in Moscow.

The CDU/CSU hopes, above all, for economic cooperation between the two countries. Alois Mertes, foreign policy spokesman of the opposition parliamentary group, said in the same ZDF broadcast: "I believe economic relations between Germany and the Soviet Union are a sphere in which good cooperation is possible."

Deputy Chairman of the parliamentary group Alfred Dregger said in an interview with Deutschlandfunk today that the Soviet Union is indeed militarily superior to the West at the moment, but it is in a very bad way economically and has to rely on economic support from the West. "I think we have only to exploit the economic potential, in order -- in the talks we will hold with Brezhnev in Bonn -- to make our political interests effective also," Dregger said.

GENSCHER ON FDP PEACE GOALS, 'EUROPEAN PEACE ORDER'

LD141844 Hamburg DPA in German 1614 GMT 14 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn/Wuppertal, 14 Nov (DPA) -- On Saturday leading FDP politicians once again stressed the need to overcome the military blocs by means of a European peace order [friedensordnung]. Party Chairman Hans-Dietrich Genscher said at a party event in Wuppertal that it must be the central aim of European peace policy gradually to make a reality of the ideal of a European peace order, which would first span the blocs and then overcome them.

FDP Parliamentary group leader Wolfgang Mischnick, who on Tuesday in Berlin began the debate on transforming the system of military blocs in East and West Europe as an aim of FDP policy, said in an interview with Radio Free Berlin that the aim is (?to) develop from disarmament "the opportunity for contact across the alliances and to move from that to peace order." This is a long-term perspective and thus also a long-term opportunity for a joint policy with the Social Democrats.

Genscher took the view that throughout Europe, regardless of ideological barriers, a generation is growing up that demands categorically that nonwar through deterrence become a peace order through trust. This demand is becoming more and more an expression of European identity, which is steering a course toward the rebirth of Europe as a power for peace. In the communist countries this movement is less articulate, but no less vital, than in the European democracies.

The policy of the FDP to actively protect peace in aimed at a European peace order which is to be defined in terms of politics, security policy, economics and culture. The precondition is the preservation of the security interests of all sides. Therefore, the FDP supports balanced steps toward disarmament with the aim of achieving parity at the lowest possible level. The zero solution, that is, the abandonment by East and West of nuclear medium-range missiles, could start a new chapter in the efforts to promote arms control and disarmament.

BRANDT 'SKEPTICAL' OF SOVIET PROPOSAL ON ARMS

LD151610 Hamburg DPA in German 1539 GMT 15 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 15 Nov (DPA) -- The need of the Western alliance for the security of the Federal Republic has been emphasized by SPD Chairman Willy Brandt. In an interview for the SPD organ VORWAERTS, which was prereleased in Bonn today, Brandt emphasized that the [Western] nations could survive only if they prevent war. "And for this we need the Western alliance for the foreseeable future." The Western alliance "serves our security and thus corresponds to our vital interests in the true sense of the word."

Brandt believes the discussion on whether the United States and France [as received] were planning a "German battlefield" was not very realistic. This would not happen in his view "without further areas -- in Europe and beyond -- being razed to the ground."

Brandt is skeptical about the proposal by Soviet party chief Leonid Brezhnev that the Soviet Union would not use nuclear arms against states who abandoned the production, acquisition and deployment of such arms. He does not believe this is the way "which will lead forward," the SPD chairman said. However important it is to arrive at effective agreements, particularly concerning nuclear mass destruction weapons, the connection between nuclear deterrent and conventional defense capability could not be simply ignored without jeopardizing the equilibrium between East and West which ensures peace.

"I believe we shall make progress only if we adhere to the concept of mutual and equal reduction of nuclear arms and if the negotiations between the world powers conducted on this basis lead to early results," Brandt said.

APEL COMMENTS ON NEED TO END ARMS RACE

LD151416 Hamburg DPA in German 1342 GMT 15 Nov 81

[Text] Hamburg, 15 Nov (DPA) -- In the opinion of Defense Minister Hans Apel (SPD), the National Day of Remembrance should also remind us of "what other nations had to suffer in the worldwide inferno unleashed by Germany." It is regrettable that young people have so little historical education and do not think in historical terms, Apel said today at a solemn ceremony in Hamburg at the National Federation for the Upkeep of German War Graves.

The three principles of Western policy -- nonviolence, balance and deterrence -- are, in Apel's view, not enough to safeguard peace. Measures to bring about arms control and disarmament must be doggedly pursued. A positive result, the minister said, would be if the Soviet Union at the disarmament talks in Geneva at the end of November would decide to remove its medium-range missiles and if NATO would abandon counterarming. "We all want out of the arms race," Apel stressed.

The "growing military might of the Soviet Union" does cause anxiety and fear, in Apel's words, but one has to recognize "that the Russian people love peace as much as we do. The minister reminded his listeners of the sufferings of Russia in the German offensive of 22 June 1941, and described it as understandable that the Soviets are afraid of being "encircled."

SCHMIDT DISCUSSES ARMS CONTROL, NATO WITH LUNS

LD141458 Hamburg DPA in German 1344 GMT 14 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 14 Nov (DPA) -- Chancellor Helmut Schmidt received NATO Secretary General Josef Luns for a 1-hour exchange of views on Saturday. A government spokesman in Bonn said that East-West relations, arms control and current questions concerning the alliance were discussed. Luns subsequently left for Washington.

The government spokesman emphasized that the talk had shown far-reaching agreement in the assessment of the present position of NATO. Schmidt and Luns agreed on attaching the greatest strategic importance to overcoming the present world economic difficulties and their effects on the economic and social situation in the NATO countries.

BAHR: PAST MISTAKES ARE LESSONS FOR U.S.-USSR TALKS

LD141316 Hamburg DPA in German 1233 GMT 14 Nov 81

[Excerpt] Berlin, 14 Nov (DPA) -- SPD disarmament expert Egon Bahr has warned against repeating the mistakes made in the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks at the impending negotiations between the United States and USSR on medium-range missiles. The "gap" then created made possible the present "arms race" in the medium-range missile sector, Bahr said today at a "peace forum" organized by the Berlin SPD. Such a gap should not be allowed to arise in the short-range missile sector.

It was realistic to assume, Bahr said, that the Soviet SS-20 missiles will not be "sent just anywhere" or destroyed but that an equilibrium or approximate balance on the present basis will be perpetuated. The British and French medium-range missile systems will have to be taken into account although they are not under discussion.

According to Bahr, there is no quarrel between the SPD and the peace movement about the objective, only about the methods of maintaining peace, in particular the NATO dual decision. However, this conflict is in the process of becoming "irrelevant" since the NATO decision has become the basis of negotiations by the superpowers.

RED CROSS CONCERNED ABOUT ETHNIC GERMAN EMIGRATION

LD131414 Hamburg DPA in German 1334 GMT 12 Nov 81

[Excerpts] Bonn, 12 Nov (DPA) -- In the month of November, during the last week of which Soviet General Secretary Leonid Brezhnev is expected in Bonn, a negative record threatens to be set as regards the issuance by Soviet authorities of emigration permits for ethnic German citizens. Up to Thursday only 46 people had arrived in the FRG. The number was 180 for the whole of the previous month. According to the German Red Cross, the latter number constitutes the lowest monthly total this year. The German Red Cross has asked Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt to discuss the emigration problem in his talks with Brezhnev.

According to the German Red Cross, these numbers have steadily fallen in the last years, from 9,704 people in 1976 to 6,954 in 1980. Only 3,300 emigrants had arrived in the FRG by 12 November this year. Experts think that over 100,000 ethnic German citizens of the Soviet Union are waiting in vain for their emigration papers. Over and above this are an unknown number of those who would apply to emigrate if they were sure they would not be harrassed as a result.

FRG, SAUDI MINISTERS SIGN COOPERATION AGREEMENT

LD131330 Hamburg DPA in German 1253 GMT 13 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 13 Nov (DPA) -- German-Saudi cooperation in the field of vocational training is being extended. A Foreign Ministry spokesman said that Foreign minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher and Saudi Finance and National Economy Minister, Aba al-Khayl, signed a corresponding agreement on Friday in Bonn. Genscher spoke of the good cooperation between both countries over the last 10 years in this field. Further, the foreign minister emphasized the "broad agreement in nearly all important political questions." He also praised the economic cooperation among the Gulf states recently agreed upon in Riyadh, and assessed the results of the summit conference of the Gulf states as a model for the significance of regional cooperation.

Schmidt Receives Saudi Minister

LD131506 Hamburg DPA in German 1351 GMT 13 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 13 Nov (DPA) -- Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt has emphasized the great influence of Saudi Arabia and the FRG on the world economy. At a meeting with Saudi Minister of Finance and National Economy Aba al-Khayl, who is visiting Bonn for the fifth meeting of the German-Saudi Economic Commission, Schmidt said today that both countries should contribute to a stabilization of international economic relations in their own interest.

The chancellor stressed the increased and still rising economic importance of Saudi Arabia, especially as an oil producer. The Federal Republic plays an important role in the world economy as an industrial nation. Schmidt expressly acknowledged the current responsible Saudi policy on energy and finance questions. Federal Economics Minister Otto Graf Lambsdorff also took part in the talk with the Saudi economics and finance minister. The meeting took place in a friendly atmosphere, according to a government spokesman.

Promotion of Joint Projects

LD131724 Hamburg DPA in German 1552 GMT 13 Nov 81

[Excerpts] Bonn, 13 Nov (DPA/VWD) -- Saudi Arabia and the Federal Republic intend to deepen still further the already close economic cooperation between the two countries. At the end of the fifth session of the German-Saudi Arabian mixed economic commission, the two sides signed in Bonn on Friday the foundation document for a German-Saudi Arabian "Society for the Promotion of Investment Projects." The objective of this society will be to enable small and medium-sized FRG enterprises to establish themselves in Saudi Arabia. Saudi Finance and National Economy Minister Aba al-Khayl, who jointly chaired the commission session with FRG Economics Minister Otto Graf Lambsdorff, expressed the wish to continue the "close cooperation" with the Federal Republic.

The new organization is to be based in Saudi Arabia. Contractual partners are the German Development Society (DEW) and the Saudi public investment fund. The society will have a share capital of 10,000,000 Saudi rials. The Saudi partner will have a 52 percent majority. The purpose of the society will be to offer small and medium-sized FRG firms the opportunity for joint ventures with Saudi firms. The society is to help firms get off the ground and possibly provide financial help. A talk on increasing cooperation in the agriculture sector was held at the Agriculture Ministry by 'Abd al-'Aziz al-Modbil, Saudi Arabian deputy agriculture minister. According to reports the commission session served above all to further the basic agreement on possible areas of cooperation. The German side emphasized, among other things, the great interest in securing oil supplies.

GENSCHER RECEIVES INDIAN FOREIGN MINISTER

LD160950 Hamburg DPA in German 0915 GMT 16 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 16 Nov (DPA) -- Indian Foreign Minister Narashima Rao met with Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher in Bonn today for an exchange of views. The talks are likely to be about the situation in southwest Asia and in Afghanistan, the North-South dialogue, problems arising in connection with the United Nations, and relations between the two countries.

In the afternoon Rao will be received by federal President Karl Carstens, who paid a state visit to India in the spring. Rao will also open a Nehru exhibition in the Bonn office of Baden-Wuerttemberg Land.

BERLIN SENATOR COMMENTS ON FRG-GDR RELATIONS

LD141636 Hamburg DPA in German 1243 GMT 14 Nov 81

[Text] Berlin, 14 Nov (DPA) -- In the opinion of Norbert Bluem (CDU), Berlin senator for federal affairs, the GDR can expect from the Federal Republic "orderly relations, the respecting of treaties concluded and proper conduct." However, moral endorsement would have to be denied to the GDR as long as it kept people apart by means of the wall and by compulsory money exchanges, Bluem said in an interview for Sunday's edition of BERLINER MORGENPOST.

The senator sharply criticized the view of SPD politican Guenter Gaus who believes that the concept of nation must be separated from that of state as far as the FRG and the GDR are concerned. The concept of a German nation could not be separated from the word freedom. The GDR could "never expect recognition from us."

An edited version of the interview was prereleased to DPA.

TELEVISION CARRIES POLL RESULTS ON NEUTRALITY

DW131307 [Editorial Report] Hamburg ARD Television Network in German at 1915 GMT on 12 November carries the results of an Allensbach Institute opinion poll on the issue "Neutrality in the Federal Republic." The question asked was: "What do you think would be the better foreign policy: Should we firmly link ourselves with the Americans militarily, or should we try to be completely neutral?"

The responses are evaluated as follows:

For neutrality: 1975 -- 36 percent; 1980 -- 27 percent; and November 1981 -- 33 percent.

Results according to sex, 1981: women -- 36 percent, men -- 29 percent.

Age groups favoring neutrality: 16-29 years -- 46 percent; 30-50 years -- 27 percent; and 60 years and older -- 29 percent.

Party members favoring neutrality: CDU/CSU -- 22 percent; SPD -- 34 percent.

In response to the question "What effect would neutrality have on peace?" 62 percent of those polled said it would weaken peace while 28 percent said it would safeguard peace.

BRIEFS

ADMIRAL ISSUES DENIAL -- Grossenbrode, 13 Nov (DPA) -- The inspector of the federal navy, Vice Admiral Ansgar Bethge, rejected an accusation made on Friday that NATO navies, in particular units of the federal navy, are violating the territorial waters of the Eastern bloc states in the Baltic. Speaking at the close of a meeting of commanders of the federal navy in the Navy Coastal Protection Service School in Grossenbrode, he was referring to a report issued by the Soviet news agency TASS which had made this accusation. The admiral described the accusation as a Soviet "attack designed to divert attention from themselves" and emphasized that the federal navy has strict orders to keep an additional margin of safety away from Eastern territorial waters. [Excerpt] [Hamburg DPA in German 1514 GMT 13 Nov 81 LD]

MOELLEMANN TO MIDEAST -- Bonn, 14 Nov (DPA) -- The foreign policy spokesman of the FDP parliamentary group, Juergen Moellemann, left Sunday on a several-day visit to Lebanon and Libya. In Tripoli Moellemann will meet with the Libyan head of state, Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi. Before his departure the FDP politician said in Bonn that in his talks with Al-Qadhdhafi he will be concerned with probing to what extent Libya is prepared to support the Middle East peace plan proposed by Saudi Arabia. In case the preparedness is greater than one has had reason to suppose up until now, then the efforts of the EEC an its negotiator, British Foreign Secretary Lord Carrington, to achieve a peaceful solution of the Middle East conflict would be substantially eased. Moellemann plans to hold talks in the Lebanese capital Beirut with the PLO leadership and also with Lebanese President Sarkis and Prime Minister al-Wazzan. [Text] [Hamburg DPA in German 1315 GMT 15 Nov 81 LD]

CONTRACT WITH USSR FIRM -- Ehingen/Donau, 15 Nov (DPA) -- The Liebherr Factory Ltd, (Ehingen) has won a contract worth DM 360 from the Soviet Union. According to Friedrich Baer, the managing director of this factory, which belongs to the Liebherr group of companies (Biberach/Riss), Liebherr will supply in the period March-November 1982 altogether 323 telescope truck cranes for laying natural gas pipes and for constructing pumping stations to the Soviet Mashinoimport, which has an option on the purchase of 30 more truck cranes. [Excerpt] Hamburg DPA in German 1127 GMT 15 Nov 81 LD]

GANDHI APPEALS FOR END TO WORLD ARMS RACE

NC132000 Paris AFP in English 1945 GMT 13 Nov 81

[Text] Paris, 13 Nov (AFP) -- An appeal for an end to the world arms race was made today by Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

"The 'global village' is in danger of becoming the global battleground," she said in a speech at a banquet given in her honour by French Premier Pierre Mauroy. "Our region is being militarized as a war zone in a rivalry which is quite unrelated to the security or welfare of the people of the region.

"Obviously, we cannot achieve rapid economic development in such an ambiance....when countries like ours are forced to expend their energies on armament rather than development, no one is the gainer. Unless all nations decry and counteract the short-sighted calculations of global power-politics, the suffering will be universal, even of those who count on immediate gains."

(India has been considering spending up to three billion dollars to buy French Mirage 2000 fighter planes. Mrs Gandhi said earlier today India needs planes of that type because the U.S. Government has agreed to supply Pakistan with 40 F-16 fighters.)

Mrs Gandhi said India's non-alignment and France's "independent judgment" are "stabilizing elements in the stormy seas through which we must navigate. We both stand for peace and for an equitable world order."

She said cooperation between India and France "is firmly founded and is progressing in a well-designed framework." Its latest symbol was a project to build one of the world's biggest aluminium plants in Orissa, India.

She invited Premier Mauroy to India "to see something of our efforts to lessen the disparities in our society and to raise the standard of living of our people..."

Premier Mauroy in his speech praised the work of Mrs Gandhi and the independence of Indian foreign policy. He said the two countries were destined to develop economic, scientific, technical and cultural cooperation to a great extent.

Mauroy, Gandhi Comment on Talks

NC132129 Paris AFP in English 2117 GMT 13 Nov 81

[Text] Paris, 13 Nov (AFP) -- French Premier Pierre Mauroy said after talks with Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi today that both countries were renewing their political dialogue in the spirit of the Cancun summit.

He told newsmen that Mrs Gandhi's talks here showed "India appreciates" the French desire to help developing countries, as expressed by President Francois Mitterrand at the recent North-South summit conference in Cancun, Mexico.

Mrs Gandhi said in an interview earlier today that President Mitterrand "backed up our ideas" at Cancun. "I think there is something we can do in that field." Political cooperation should be based on concrete cooperation, Premier Mauroy said, for instance in the fields of telecommunications, space and nuclear industry, armament and research. The two delegations made a start on that tonight by signing four agreements dealing with cooperation in the fields of energy and environmental problems.

Earlier in the day, French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson had a 40-minute private talk with the Indian leader.

The visiting Indian delegation explained to French officials that New Delhi has not received a formal "no-war offer" from Pakistan (although Pakistani newspapers have reported such an offer.)

In a French TV interview today, Mrs Gandhi criticized the U.S. plan to sell 40 F-16 fighter planes to Pakistan. She suggested that since Pakistan was unlikely to use the fighters against the Soviet Union, they were wanted for use against India. She strongly denied that India was a Soviet ally, dependent on Soviet weapons, or influenced by the Soviet Union in carrying out India's non-aligned foreign policy. Mrs Gandhi also suggested that Western applause for Afghan resistance against Soviet occupation forces contrasted with the failure of most Western countries to applaud Vietnam's fight for independence. Countries deploring Vietnamese intervention in Cambodia had failed before the intervention to do anything to stop attrocities by the Khmer Rouge regime despite Vietnamese appeals for such action, she said. Referring to Afghanistan, she said "we are against any foreign intervention." But condemning the Soviet intervention would not help things.

Mauroy on Mirage Purchase

BK140744 Delhi Domestic Service in English 0240 GMT 14 Nov 81

[Text] French Prime Minister Pierre Mauroy has expressed his government's willingness to provide credit to India for purchase of Mirage-2000's for its air force. This was stated by Mauroy last night while talking to newsmen after holding talks with Mrs Gandhi.

French Finance Minister Jacques Delors, who was also present at the news conference, said that France is ready to assist India in buying the Mirage aircraft.

Communique Issued

NC141314 Paris AFP in English 1314 GMT 14 Nov 81

[Text] Paris, 14 Nov (AFP) -- Following is the full draft text of the joint communique issued at the end of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's visit to France:

"The president of the French Republic, Francois Mitterrand, and the prime minister of India, Indira Gandhi, sharing alike the concern over the aggravation of political and economic tensions throughout the world, noting that these tensions undermine the very foundations of international relations, convinced that India and France can, through increased cooperation, reinforce the effectiveness of their respective efforts aimed at a new international order, declared:

"1. India and France reaffirm that they reject the conduct of international affairs based on fear, dominance and arrogance, on the use of violence and subversion, and on the disregard of the principles inscribed in the charter of the United Nations.

"They reaffirm their conviction that a world of many nations, beliefs and peoples must necessarily be a world of pluralism, tolerance and coexistence, with scope for different cultures to flourish without mental barriers or ideological exclusiveness.

"More stable and equitable relations among nations necessarily presuppose a scrupulous respect for the sovereignty, integrity and national identity of all countries. France and India therefore denounce the interferences to which nations are subjected, in particular, nations incapable of posing by themselves a threat to others. It is the duty of the international community to look for ways and means through which can be restored and safeguarded the independence of countries which continue to be subjected to foreign domination or to external interventions or interferences.

"France and India are opposed to the extension of bloc confrontation and, being concerned by the acceleration of the armament race notably on the part of nations holding the strongest arsenals, intend to pursue with determination such measures as would lead to concrete results to reinforce confidence and peace among states.

"They are both ready to intensify their co-operation and will remain in close consultation in this regard.

"2. India and France express their common concern about the worsening world economic crisis and stress that the continuance of this situation, which is detrimental to both industrialised and developing nations, calls for an overall restructuring of international economic relations.

"In the present circumstances, the foremost concern continues to be the launching of a global dialogue between industrialised and developing countries, based on the recognition of interdependence and solidarity and focused on the need to find a solution to the most urgent problems.

"In this respect, the two countries are of the view that the strengthening of the food security of developing countries, the stabilisation of markets for primary commodities, the financing of the balance of payments deficits of oil-importing developing countries, and the financing of the investments for developing energy resources of the world constitute priority objectives for the international community.

"India and France reaffirm their willingness to maintain and deepen their consultations on these issues.

"In this context, the two countries have agreed to constitute a high-level group to consult regularly with each other on matters relating to energy.

"Through joint efforts, they hope to contribute to the establishment of a new international economic order."

Gandhi Summarizes Visit

LD152048 Paris Domestic Service in French 1800 GMT 15 Nov 81

[Text] Indira Gandhi left French soil at 1630 today to return to New Delhi after a 3-day official visit, 3 days of exchanges of views with Francois Mitterrand, Pierre Mauroy and Claude Cheysson. Before leaving France, Indira Gandhi gave an interview, partly in French and partly in English, to France-Inter and (Alois Gosset). The interview covers the two aspects of the visit, political and economic. First, here is Mrs Gandhi speaking about her overall impressions:

[Begin recording] I am happy to be in Paris. This is a very beautiful city which I like very much. This has given me the opportunity of making the acquaintance of the new government and maybe also of a better understanding than before.

[Question] So relations between India and France have become even closer?

[Answer] I very much hope so.

[Question] Are you not sure of it?

[Answer] Only time will tell. [end recording]

So much for the political side. There is contact between Paris and New Delhi, but in the economic field, on the other hand, there is some disappointment, mainly over this well-known contract for Mirage aircraft. Mrs Gandhi has not signed it; she even said she did not discuss the question with Francois Mitterrand:

[Begin Gandhi recording in English with superimposed French translation] I have not discussed it with anybody, either with our own delegation or with the French. No agreement can be signed now, the subject is under discussion and must be examined in detail.

[Question] What is the problem now about the discussions?

[Answer] I do not know at all. During my journeys, and not only in Paris, I prefer not to talk about such questions. [end recording]

That was Mrs Gandhi who, as you heard, denies having talked about the purchase of 150 Mirage-2000 aircraft with the head of state and the premier.

MITTERRAND ON RELATIONS WITH DEVELOPING NATIONS

BK141448 Hong Kong AFP in English 1435 GMT 14 Nov 81

[Text] New Delhi, 14 Nov (AFP) -- French President Francois Mitterrand foresees a "determined and substantial role" by India and France as a major factor in bridging the barrier between the industrialised and developing nations to achieve a new international order, the TIMES of India reported today.

In an exclusive interview with the TIMES which coincided with the current visit of Prime Minister Indira Gandhi to Paris, Mr Mitterrand said he was convinced that both India and France shared the capacity to carry their other partners along with them.

On Cambodia, Mr Mitterrand said that France would be inconsistent if it was not concerned over the clear breach of international law committed by the Soviet-backed Vietnamese intervention, which he said the offenses of the former Khmer Rouge Pol Pot regime could not justify.

"In fact we cannot accept either of these wrongs, and we have acted accordingly on the diplomatic plane since we have neither established relations with the Phnom Penh authorities nor had anything to do with the Khmer Rouge regime," the French president said.

"As for the future, France considers together with its European partners that a reasonable solution must be based on the existence of an independent and neutral Cambodia with a truly representative government, free from all foreign military involvement that would maintain friendly relations with all the countries in the area," Mr Mitterrand added.

GROUP CLAIMS RESPONSIBILITY FOR BOMBING

NC141127 Paris AFP in English 1113 GMT 14 Nov 81

[Text] Agen, France, 14 Nov (AFP) — A violent explosion destroyed a power transformer in the suburbs of this city in central France early today.

An anonymous telephone call to the AFP bureau in Toulouse claimed responsibility for the blast in the name of a group called the "Golfech Antinuclear Army." The caller said the blast was "a warning...From here on we will strike at city centres." There was no explanation of the group's intentions.

The destroyed transformer was owned and operated by the French Government power monopoly, Electricite de France. It had supplied power to about half the region's residents, who were without electricity today. No injuries were reported.

SUSPECTED ARMENIAN EXTREMIST RELEASED

NC140922 Paris AFP in English 0858 GMT 14 Nov 81

[Text] Paris, 14 Nov (AFP) -- A suspected Armenian extremist was expected to fly out of France today after top-level French political authorities ordered his release "for reasons of expediency," informed sources said.

The man, 32, was believed to be a member of the militant secret Armenian Army for the Liberation of Armenia, which has claimed responsibility for a number of assassinations and attacks against Turkish diplomatic missions. He was detained at Orly Airport on Wednesday as he was about to board a plane for Beirut, allegedly in possession of a false Cypriot passport in the name of Dimitriu Giorgiu, and 10,000 Swiss Francs (5,700 dollars).

Investigators believe bomb attacks against the Air France office and French Cultural Centre in Beirut on Thursday could have been connected with his detention the previous day.

The local prosecutor's office refused to give any details on the "reasons of expediency" but informed sources said the decision had been made by authorities at the "very highest level."

Police were believed to be angry at the order to let the militant go before they had finished their questioning. He was handed over to airport police and was due to leave France today for Beirut.

Release Denied

NC141214 Paris AFP in English 1132 GMT 14 Nov 81

[Excerpt] Paris, 14 Nov (AFP) -- A suspected Armenian extremist was handed back to local police here today only hours before he was due to fly out of the country, as the local prosecutor's office went back on a decision to order his release "for reasons of expediency."

In a statement today the public prosecutor in Creteil, the district in south Paris responsible for Orly Airport, said that a judicial investigation would be opened against the detained man on an allegation that he used a false passport.

Group Warns of Reprisals

NC142336 Paris AFP in English 2324 GMT 14 Nov 81

[Excerpt] Paris, 14 Nov (AFP) -- A group claiming responsibility for two anti-French bomb attacks in Beirut Thursday has demanded that authorities here release a suspected Armenian extremist by tomorrow or some French diplomats "will be targets," well-informed sources reported tonight.

The ultimatum by the hitherto-unknown organization calling itself "the Orly Group" was confirmed by the Paris prosecutor's office.

In an anonymous telephone call to police at Orly Airport outside Paris, the group demanded the release of a 32-year-old man charged today with being an accomplice to passport forgery and using a false passport.

They gave authorities until "11 am Sunday" (1000 GMT), or "French diplomats around the world will be targets."

Late Saturday night, a bomb slightly damaged an automobile parked near the Eiffel Tower. Within minutes of the blast, which caused no injuries, the Orly group telephoned the AFP bureau in Beirut and AFP [word indistinct] in Paris to claim responsibility for the incident. The Paris caller said the explosion was "the first warning."

BRIEFS

NUCLEAR SUB -- President Mitterrand has just approved the construction of a seventh nuclear missile-launching submarine. Defense Minister Charles Hernu made this announcement earlier this evening at the National Assembly. The funds necessary for its construction have already been allocated. [Text] [Paris Domestic Service in French 2300 GMT 13 Nov 81 LD]

SOVIET MESSAGE -- Soviet ambassador to Paris Stepan Chervonenko today met French President Francois Mitterrand for a 90-minute talk, during which he handed him a message from Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev. The message dealt with "perspectives for relations between Paris and Moscow and major problems in the international situation," the ambassador said after the meeting. [Text] [Paris AFP in English 2149 GMT 13 Nov 81 NC]

POPE EXCHANGES STATEMENTS WITH IRANIAN ENVOY

AU141642 Rome ANSA in English 1558 GMT 14 Nov 81

[Text] Vatican City, 14 Nov (ANSA) -- Pope John Paul II, responding today to a statement by the Iranian ambassadors to the Vatican on the 14-month-old Iranian-Iraqi war, declared that "the Holy See works for the elimination of war and for overcoming all hatred." The pontiff also affirmed that Holy See policy is directed towards supporting "national sovereignty and integrity" and a firm belief in "international justice and universal freedom."

With reference to the ambassador's remarks on the "liberation of Jerusalem: and condemnation of "imperialist aggression from East and West against Afghanistan and other oppressed countries," the head of the Roman Catholic Church preferred to stick to the principles behind Holy See policy in relations between Iran and Iraq and mentioned, in this context, the Holy See's condemnation of terrorism and defense of human life in all areas.

The pope's statement came after receiving the ambassador, Seyed Hadi Khosrowshahi, who delivered to the pontiff a personal message from the Iranian spiritual leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeyni. The Iranian diplomat was the first of fourteen ambassadors to be received by the pope for the presentation of their credentials following the May 13 attempt on the pope's life.

Speaking of "Persian Catholics," the pope said that they "belong fully to the nation" and would like to "work for the good and progress of the country, seeking only to enjoy full religious freedom and freedom of action along with their Muslim brothers and sisters."

In response to the diplomat's harsh statement on "the war (with Iraq) which caused ten thousand martyrs and at least two million refugees" and led to the destruction of mosques and churches, schools and hospitals, the pontiff said, "You remember the sufferings of war, the violence and terrorism. Both are evils which our predecessors have constantly condemned. With no less intensity, we are concerned with a plea for fostering essential justice and brotherly love which reigned among members of the human family."

In another area of his statement, the Iranian ambassador said that "with your blessing and the cooperation of the Holy See, we hope to succeed in our commitment to purify mankind of materialism and atheism (a[illegible]) to establish a revolutionary situation in Iran to put a halt to Eastern and Western interference in our internal affairs." Ambassador Khosrowshahi also referred to the requirement to "liberate Jerusalem, one of the most holy of places for Christians, Muslims and Jews," and to create a Palestinian state to achieve lasting peace in the Middle East.

COLOMBO HOLDS DISCUSSIONS IN YUGOSLAVIA

LD141728 Rome Domestic Service in Italian 1630 GMT 14 Nov 81

[Text] The problem of East-West relations was at the center of talks in Belgrade between our minister of foreign affairs, Emilio Colombo, and Yugoslav officials. In the Yugoslav view, the Soviet Union reportedly intends to seriously engage in the negotiations with the United States aimed at reducing the nuclear arsenals in Europe. Colombo also tackled with his Belgrade counterparts the subject of the Madrid Conference for Security and Cooperation in Europe. Both the Italian Government and the Yugoslav Government are willing to take part in a conclusive meeting at foreign minister's level to be held before the end of December.

MALTA PRIME MINISTER DEPARTS AFTER 2-DAY VISIT

AU131554 Rome ANSA in English 1535 GMT 13 Nov 81

[Excerpt] Rome 13 Nov (ANSA) -- Maltese Prime Minister Dom Mintoff left here for home this morning after a two-day visit during which he met with Italian Premier Giovanni Spadolini, Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo and Defense Minister Lelio Lagorio, as well as holding consultations with Pope John Paul II at the Vatican City. He made no departure statement, but a spokesman said that the major topics covered in his meetings were Italo-Maltese relations and international problems, especially the situation in the Mediterranean area.

The agreement of last year by which Italy guarantees Maltese neutrality figured importantly in the talks, and Spadolini made the point that it is a guideline of Italian foreign policy to seek greater stabilization and respect for the rules of peace and coexistence in the entire region. With Lagorio, Mintoff examined the work of the Italian military mission currently stationed on the strategic island. Authoritative sources said the two sides agreed on voicing their satisfaction with how things were going.

Peace and cooperation in the Mediterranean were also a keynote in Mintoff's talks with the pope yesterday during an official audience preceded on Wednesday evening by a meeting with Cardinal Secretary of State Agostino Casaroli.

COLOMBO MEETS WITH ISRAELI DEPUTY PRIME MINISTER

AU131542 Rome ANSA in English 1530 GMT 13 Nov 81

[Text] Rome, 13 Nov (ANSA) -- Israel Deputy Premier Simha Ehrlich met with Italian Foreign Minister Emilio Colombo at the Italian Foreign Ministry building yesterday, ministry sources confirmed today. Ehrlich is in Italy on a private visit.

DC AIDE: HAIG REMARKS ON N-WEAPON USE 'MADNESS'

PM131233 Rome LA REPUBBLICA in Italian 8-9 Nov 81 pp 1, 3

[Excerpt] Comiso, 7 November -- "Haig is really crazy; we are not the Americans' servants and we will tell them to their faces what needs to be said." This is how Christian Democrat Secretary Flaminio Piccoli commented on the U.S. secretary of state's remarks on the possibility of nuclear conflict in Europe. Piccoli, who arrived here this afternoon for the peace rally organized by the DC in Ragusa province, agreed to answer our questions before the meeting. "Haig has said there would be a possibility -- as a warning to the enemy alignment -- of exploding a bomb as a warning," Piccoli said. "This is madness, and we say so openly. But we are convinced that a Europe without the United States will not survive on its own."

[Question] Why not?

[Answer] Becuase it is not strong enough to stand alone in the defense field. This is not just my opinion; it is the opinion of all statesmen over the past 40 years. So if we want peace now we must guarantee it through the steadfast capability and unity of the Atlantic pact powers and a steadfast stance not on weapons superiority but on restoring a balance in them. I have come here to Comiso, to the heart of what could become a volcano, to reassure the people of Sicily. The DC confirms its commitment to negotiations between the major powers to lower the level of strategic missiles to zero -- and zero not only for Western Europe but also for the Eastern bloc countries.

SPOKESMAN CITES TURKS' AIRSPACE VIOLATIONS

NC131522 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1500 GMT 13 Nov 81

[Text] Today the government spokesman stated that despite the government's continuous protests, both to the UN peace force and directly to the UN headquarters, Turkish fighter planes have violated the republic's airspace three times in the past 10 days. The violations occurred both over the occupied area and, in some cases, over the free area along the buffer zone.

Government To Protest

NC141608 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1130 GMT 14 Nov 81

[Text] It was officially announced that the Cyprus permanent UN representative has been instructed to denounce to the UN secretary general the fresh violations of the Cypriot airspace by Turkish fighter aircraft. The new violations were made yesterday and the day before.

I DHILINI Comment

NC141605 Nicosia I DHILINI in Greek 14 Nov 81 p 1

[Text] In view of the resumption of the talks and despite the government's continuous protests to the United Nations, the fact that Ankara is proceeding with provocative actions--such as the violations of Cypriot airspace--constituting psychological war against the Cypriot people reveals the ill-intentions of the Turks. An authoritative government source stated this to I DHILINI, stressing that these Turkish actions not only make the creation of a favorable climate for conducting constructive talks impossible, but also tend to foil the talks.

PRESIDENT KIPRIANOU SUFFERING FROM INFLUENZA

NC160954 Nicosia PUBLIC INFORMATION OFFICE in Greek 16 Nov 81 p 1

[Text] President Kiprianou is suffering from influenza and his attending physicians recommend that he should confine himself for a few days.

KIPRIANOU TO MEET PRESIDENT REAGAN 8 DEC

NC161010 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1000 GMT 16 Nov 81

[Text] The Governments of Cyprus and the United States have announced that the meeting between President Kiprianou and President Reagan will take place in Washington on 8 December. Both governments, the statement adds, look forward to a constructive exchange of views on fields of mutual interest.

ROLANDHIS SCORES CITIZENSHIP TO TURKISH SETTLERS

NC131912 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1730 GMT 13 Nov 81

[Text] Foreign Minister Rolandhis has instructed Mr Mavrommatis, Cyprus permanent representative at the United Nations, to lodge a complaint with the UN secretary general, as well as with all UN member countries, against the recent decision of the Turkish Cypriot leadership to give so-called Turkish Cypriot citizenship to settlers from Turkey en masse. Instructions have been given to point out that this decision aims at nothing else but consolidating faits accomplis and encouraging more Turks to settle in the occupied areas in order to change Cyprus' demographic character.

ROMANIAN STATE SECRETARY DUMA ARRIVES 14 NOV

NC141901 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1730 GMT 14 Nov 81

[Text] Romanian State Secretary for Foreign Affairs Duma arrived in Cyprus tonight for a few days official visit. Mr Duma will meet with the president of the republic and will have contacts with members of the government.

INTERPARTY PARLIAMENTARY DELEGATION RETURNS

NC141907 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1730 GMT 14 Nov 81

[Text] House of Representatives President Ladhas returned tonight from Yugoslavia, where he headed an interparty parliamentary delegation for an official visit following an invitation from President of the Assembly of Yugoslavia Markovic. In a statement shortly after his arrival at Larnaca airport, House President Ladhas said:

[Begin recording] We return from Yugoslavia very pleased with our mission there. Both I personally and my collaborators, house members from all parties in the house, have had talks with distinguished personalities of the Yugoslav Federation. The main talks were held between our delegation and the delegation of the Federal Assembly of Yugoslavia, headed by Assembly President Gragoslav Markovic. We also had talks with Yugoslav President Kraigher, President of the Federal Executive Council Djuranovic and with Foreign Affairs Minister Vrhovec. We laid a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier and flowers at President Tito's mausoleum.

On Thursday we went to Zagreb on board the Yugoslav Government's private plane. We were met by the city's mayor and had talks with the president of the presidency of the Socialist Republic of Croatia, Mr Blazevic. On the same day we returned to Dubrovnik, where we were met by the city's mayor and the municipal council and the following day we went back to Belgrade.

The talks were continued between our delegation and the delegation of the Yugoslav assembly. The talks were held in a most friendly spirit; all the members of our delegation spoke and it was noted that there was full unanimity of views, both on the international problems which were discussed, and on bilateral problems and the trade and economic problems that concern the two countries.

The Yugoslav officials were fully briefed on the present phase of the Cyprus problem, and we have no doubt that the Yugoslav Government will always support and help the cause of a fair Cyprus solution.

I warmly thank all the Yugoslav officials who accorded us warm hospitality and received us with nice words. I also thank the members of our delegation, the House members from all the parties who put forward the views of their parties without any disagreement. I also thank Mr Attalidhis, head of the House Public Relations Bureau, for his great assistance to our delegation.

The message which I bring from Yugoslavia is that we have, in the Yugoslav officials and the Yugoslav Government, warm supporters and friends in our effort to create a free, federal, demilitarized Cyprus, a Cyprus where all the citizens -- regardless of race, religion, language, customs and traditions -- will live in freedom and peace in their own country.

I also warmly thank the Yugoslav ambassador in Nicosia, Mr Cvijeto Job, who organized and prepared in the best possible way our visit to Yugoslavia. [end recording]

House members and members of the parliamentary delegation Galanos, Kourtellaris, Anastasiadhis and Omirou also returned with Mr Ladhas. The delegation was met by Yugoslav Ambassador Job.

KIPRIANOU 11 NOV STATEMENT ON WALDHEIM PLAN

NC111900 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1500 GMT 11 Nov 81

[11 November press conference in Nicosia by Cyprus President Spiros Kiprianou -- recorded]

[Excerpt] I have considered it expedient to call this press conference today after the various recent consultations and discussions on the present phase of the Cyprus problem. As is known, I recently had talks in Athens with the Greek Government of Papandreou. Then, we held two meetings in Cyprus of the National Council and two meetings of the Council of Ministers on the latest development -- the submission by the UN secretary general of his evaluation of the inter-Cypriot talks.

However, before I refer to the evaluation and the decision made on the way of approaching it, I would like to stress that our criterion in charting our policy on the national issue is always the national interest alone and absolutely no other criterion. I respect the views which might be opposite; we have a democracy and we are proud because we have a democracy. However, I firmly believe that the conclusion we have reached on the way of handling this very delicate phase -- because it truly is a very delicate phase and any superficial handling would have serious repercussions -- is the correct decision and conclusion.

As is known, after submission of the Turkish proposals -- Turkish Cypriot proposals -- which were absolutely unacceptable, the dialogue was heading toward a deadlock. In light of this reality, the UN secretary general decided to intervene -- not to propose a plan for a Cyprus solution, as has been said by some quarters, nor to propose points which would constitute a basis for negotiation -- but with the aim of submitting an evaluation of the talks which, in his opinion, could assist in the continuation of the dialogue in a fruitful manner. In the past, there was also a thought by the UN secretary general's special representative about some intervention of this form within the framework of the UN secretary general's good offices, because, as is known, the talks are being conducted on the basis of the UN resolutions and under the auspices of the UN secretary general. However, the UN secretary general did not then deem it expedient to undertake such an initiative; he decided to do so only recently, last September, when he expressed for the first time his intention to undertake such an initiative.

The government has been faced with this evaluation which was finally delivered the day of my departure for Athens. In Athens, we drew some conclusions. But, as it was agreed in Athens, this document should constitute the subject of consultations at the Cypriot National Council and at the Council of Ministers and the final decision on the way of handling it should be made in Cyprus.

I firmly believe that if this document were to be accepted as is, it would be a mistake. It could not be accepted as is, since it contains negative elements. If it were rejected, or if a policy were followed which would result in discouraging the secretary general, this would create a different situation, and it would create a situation of dispute between the Greek Cypriot side, the Cyprus Government, on the one hand and the UN secretary general on the other. This is over and above the fact that such an eventuality would have adverse repercussions internationally which, in their turn, would have repercussions in the eventuality of a new discussion of the Cyprus issue at the UN General Assembly. This is because we must not overlook the fact that this evaluation does not originate with a particular country of the world. It originates with the UN secretary general and, to further emphasize my argument, I would say that even if this document contained double the number of negative elements, the UN secretary general should neither be discouraged nor should there be a rejection. This is because the correct solution always exists.

The correct solution, the correct handling and what was in the end decided upon, is that we must state our views on the document at the negotiations table.

We must state what we consider negative elements and why we consider them negative. We must state what we consider positive elements and why we consider them positive. We must state what we consider to be gaps and why there are such gaps. We must state that in our opinion there is a mistaken evaluation and we should explain why there is such an evaluation mistake.

This is what was decided in the end. This is the approach we resolved to follow. I have absolutely no doubt that this is the only correct tactic, because our differences are not with the UN secretary general. He simply decided to offer an evaluation upon which we will comment. Our differences are with the other side. Our basic disagreements are with the other side, even though we may have differences on the evaluation as well. If, for example, this document were not presented at the talks, we would never have the opportunity to establish whether there is any change in the Turkish position -- I refer to the document's points which are positive for us -- that is, what will be the Turkish position on the points of the document which are favorable to us. If the secretary general were to be discouraged, we would have deprived the other side of the opportunity to state its views, and we would have placed ourselves under a continuous and permanent accusation that we disagreed with the secretary general, that we rejected his proposals -- they are not proposals -- that we rejected his evaluation, and the other side could always argue that it would have been willing to discuss it, that it would be willing to appear conciliatory, but that this opportunity was not offered to it because of the totally negative position of the Greek Cypriot side.

What is our responsibility? This is of great importance. Our responsibility is continually to make every possible effort to guarantee progress toward an honorable solution of the Cyprus problem on the basis of the UN resolutions and the summit agreements. Most certainly, anything which is beyond the UN resolutions and the summit agreements cannot be acceptable.

The initiative of the UN secretary general was aimed at further exploration of the possibilities for guaranteeing a certain progress. We must exhaust this margin as well, without being held responsible in the event of an impasse.

At the same time, why should we be afraid to state our views? For what reason should we be afraid of stating our views? The opinion has been expressed that we are somehow sentencing ourselves to an adventure which may lead to dangerous complications for our national cause. It depends on us to confront things correctly; it depends on us always to maintain the right stand. What is of significance is that, without abandoning our goals -- which are well known, known to everyone, and which have been repeatedly declared, and I will reiterate them today -- we will be constructive in all efforts emanating from within the UN framework and we should not fear to say about the UN secretary general's evaluations that these are positive, these are negative; these are acceptable, these cannot be acceptable; these are not correct, these are wrong, here there are gaps, how things would work with these gaps.

Our goal is to secure all the prerequisites for a complete and true independence of Cyprus, sovereignty, territorial integrity, unity of the Cypriot state with a federal system. Whatever is not federal, whatever does not lead toward federation from the internal structure point of view, most certainly cannot be acceptable. However, whatever envisages federation, taking also into consideration the facts in Cyprus -- and, to avoid any misunderstanding, I do not mean the facts created by the invasion, which are in any event unacceptable, but the true facts of Cyprus -- most certainly must be discussed.

Our aim is to safeguard the people's inalienable rights; the human rights and fundamental freedoms, as are clearly stressed both in the UN resolutions and the summit agreements. The freedom of movement, settlement and right to own property are freedoms which, for us, cannot be negotiated. What is important is their implementation and confrontation, prior to any Cyprus solution, of any possible difficulties and resolution of these difficulties with the aim of absolutely safeguarding these rights. Most certainly, these rights are fully compatible with the status of federation. We want a nonaligned, demilitarized Cyprus.

We want to create conditions for both political unity -- through the federation -- and economic unity so that our people as a whole may be able to create the prerequisites for a better future for the coming generations.

We want to convert Cyprus from a cause of conflicts and conflagrations. This is why we are not talking about patching up the Cyprus problem, but we talk about a permanent Cyprus solution -- an honest, just solution so that Cyprus may be turned into bridge of understanding in this sensitive Mediterranean area instead of a cause of conflicts, conflagrations and adventures.

Our goals are immutable. In our attempt to secure our goals and promote them, the ways of handling vary according to developments. It has been said that we should create the developments. This is partly correct. But, most certainly, we are not those all-powerful persons on whom all world developments depend. We should certainly create as many developments we can, but our ways of handling other developments which we cannot create should be undertaken accordingly, also taking into consideration those developments.

I steadfastly believe that, with the policy we decided to follow on the UN secretary general's evaluation, we will see, we will be able to see, if there can be a change in the Turkish stand so that there may be substantive progress. And if there is substantive progress, most certainly we will all welcome it and most certainly the continuation of the dialogue will be justified. If not, then things will be different; if these possibilities are also exhausted and there is no progress, certainly we will proceed with other ways of handling, and I do not hesitate to say that the next step will be the UN General Assembly.

The handling which we have selected to follow -- and at this point I would like to stress that, despite the fact that I obtained the views of the parties at the National Council and despite the fact that I have had the unanimous opinion of the Council of Ministers, I personally take the full responsibility for this handling as well as for all ways of handling. And I firmly believe that it is the most correct. Any other way of handling would result in adventures of another form which, in addition to anything else, would not bear fruit and would result in our international weakening, while the correct handling of the UN secretary general's evaluation will either result in some progress or will result in strengthening our international position.

Most certainly, as I have already said, everyone has right to have his views. For the one who is handling the national issue with responsibility, because of his position of course, it is many times more difficult to refer to things to which others refer publicly with greater ease. I have tried to give a picture of the handling which we have considered imperative under the conditions created at this delicate phase of our national issue. I do not have the slightest doubt that this handling will also enjoy general appreciation, will safeguard our positions completely and will enable us to handle things in the future according to the developments which will promote our national issue. The fears being expressed, even in good will, are not justified. I repeat, we will not fear to say at the negotiating table what we consider positive, negative, omission, or wrong appraisal.

I would like to conclude with the statement that dialogue is something envisaged by the UN resolutions. Of course, we are not seeking a sterile, protracted dialogue. But we have every obligation toward this country and people to exhaust all possibilities so that we may see if it is possible to make progress. If we exhaust all possibilities, then most certainly other ways of handling will take place. Concerning my visit to Athens, the only thing I can state today, in addition to all that I have already stated, is that there is unanimity in the various ways of handling this issue.

'POLYTECHNIC' DATE NOTED WITH U.S. EMBASSY MARCH

Government Permits March

NC132152 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1930 GMT 13 Nov 81

[Excerpts] The 3-day celebrations marking the 8th anniversary of the Polytechnic school uprising opened today with popular participation.

On Sunday, marches will be held in Athens and Thessaloniki. The Council of Ministers, which met tonight, has accepted the EFEE [National Student Union of Greece] request and allowed the holding of the Athens march as stipulated by the EFEE administration; that is, from the Polytechnic school down Vasilissis Sofias Avenue to Ambelokipoi [the site of the U.S. Embassy].

In this connection, the following government communique has been issued: The government calls on the Greek people and the Greek youths who will participate in this march marking the Polytechnic uprising anniversary to preserve order, to safeguard the demonstration and not to allow any extremist elements to disturb its peaceful nature. The students' march in Thessaloniki will start at the university campus and proceed to the administration square.

Answering a pertinent question, the government spokesman stated that the government believes that there will be no incident during the march marking the Polytechnic uprising that will take place on Sunday because it believes that when the youths are free to hold their demonstrations, they will hold them peacefully.

Papandreou Observes Date

NC141348 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 1200 GMT 14 Nov 81

[Text] The new PASOK government feels that its course for the country is one that responds to the vision and sacrifice of the Polytechnic generation. For us it is a tribute to those who fell for national independence and democracy, for freedom and progress, and opened the road so that there may be a government today which responds to the people's expectations. This statement was made by Prime Minister Papandreou at 1130 today upon laying a laurel wreath at the Polytechnic, where he went accompanied by members of the Council of Ministers within the framework of events, continuing for the second day, to mark the eighth anniversary of the Polytechnic uprising and the sacrifice of fighters who opened the road to the overthrow of the dictators' tyranny and restoration of democracy in our country.

March Occurs Peacefully

NC152038 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1930 GMT 15 Nov 81

[Text] The gigantic march, culminating the 3-day activities to mark the 8th anniversary of the historic Polytechnic uprising, ended a short while ago. Peacefully, without any incident or provocation, hundreds of thousands of people participated in the march, through which they paid tribute to all those who fought against the 7-year dictatorship and reminded everyone of the need to continue the efforts in support of democracy and to fulfill the ideals which the youths declared from the Polytechnic in 1973.

Government Statement

NC152203 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 2100 GMT 15 Nov 81

[Text] The march, which started from the Polytechnic at 1700 today and ended around 2200 at Ambelokipoi, was held and terminated with absolute order and tranquillity.

This was the culmination of the 3-day activities marking the 8th anniversary of the Polytechnic. Many thousands of people participated in the march after having gathered at the Polytechnic to manifest their faith in democratic ideals and to pay tribute to the heroic fighting youths of the Polytechnic.

After the end of the Athens people's peaceful march, a government spokesman made the following statement: The peaceful development of the magnificent march constitutes the highest contribution of the youths and Greek people in paying tribute to the heroic dead of the Polytechnic. At the same time, it vindicates the opinion that the people's free expression not only is not fraught with dangers but guarantees the country's public order and equanimity, which have also been maintained thanks to the irreproachable attitude of the security corps. Democracy, people's sovereignty and freedom -- which are among the basic objectives of the Polytechnic vision -- have been vindicated today as well.

AVRIANI ALLEGES VIOLATION OF AIRSPACE 5 NOV

NC131854 Athens AVRIANI in Greek 13 Nov 81 p 1

[Text] According to information this newspaper has received from military circles, foreign military aircraft violated the Athens Flight Information Region on 5 November. We ask the government whether this information is true.

PAPANDREOU CLARIFIES STATEMENT ON IRAN, GULF WAR

NC131747 Athens NEWS in English 13 Nov 81 p 12

[Text] Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou yesterday said he did not accuse Iran of being the aggressor in the Persian Gulf war.

Following a meeting yesterday with Iran's charge d'affaires, Mr (Masun Hasani), Papandreou said false impressions were created when an answer he gave to a TV reporter, in connection to Greece's position vis-a-vis the Persian Gulf war, was "misinterpreted" by the press.

The prime minister said Greece remains neutral in what concerns the Gulf war, and hopes for "a peaceful and just settlement, based on internationally accepted principles." He also stressed the Greek Government's "feelings of sincerity and friendship" for the government and people of Iran.

SPOKESMAN RESPONDS TO HAIG STATEMENT ON BASES

NC151847 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1900 GMT 15 Nov 81

[Text] Washington favors development of relations with Greece. This stand was put forward by Secretary of State Haig, who was commenting on the U.S. ambassador's visit to Prime Minister Papandreou. A very good dialogue between the two parties has begun, he said. I believe it is of great importance that we all admit that there is a democratic society in Greece. The Greek people have spoken at the polls. The United States has a tradition in relations with democratic countries. Therefore, our task is that we should proceed with good intention with the Greeks with whom we are linked by historical and indispensable ties. Greece's new socialist government does not demand the removal of the U.S. bases and military personnel despite speculation which was most probably linked with election campaign rhetoric.

In connection with the statement by the U.S. secretary of state, a government spokesman in Athens stressed: As Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou has stated, the negotiations on the bases will begin during the first months of the new year. Within the framework of the negotiations, a schedule for the removal of the bases from Greece is definitely included.

GOVERNMENT DETERMINED TO REMOVE NUCLEAR MISSILES

NC131335 Athens RIZOSPASTIS in Greek 12 Nov 81 p 1

[Excerpts] The government is determined to proceed with the removal of nuclear weapons from Greece. This categorical statement was made yesterday by Deputy Minister to the Prime Minister Maroudhas during a press conference with foreign correspondents. The deputy minister pointed out the relevant initiatives of the Bulgarian People's Republic and the USSR to stress that there are realistic possibilities in this direction.

According to reliable information: After his policy statement, Prime Minister Papandreou will seek meetings with other Balkan leaders to discuss the systematic method and the necessary practical measures for the establishment of a nuclear-free zone in the Balkans.

Answering questions from foreign correspon nts, Mr Maroudhas stressed that "we do not want Greece to become a nuclear holocaust." He said that the government will proceed "even unilaterally" with the removal of the nuclear warheads from the U.S. bases. In any case, this will be among the first questions to be raised and discussed at the Greek-U.S. negotiations for the status of the bases at the beginning of 1982. At this point, Mr Maroudhas made it clear the question of removing the nuclear warheads is not related to the possible future status of the bases and added: "It is not a question for negotiation with the United States but the primary and basic demand which the Greek Government will raise with the opening of the talks."

Pointing out the government's positive orientation toward the problem of nuclear weapons, political observers have stressed that the question of the abolition of the foreign bases should also be raised with similar clarity so that a substantive and complete solution may be given to the fundamental issue of the U.S. military presence in Greece. This is more so when the government itself is publicly committed [to the view] that the removal of nuclear weapons does not constitute a "negotiable element" with the United States but its immutable goal.

At other points in his press interview, the deputy minister noted that:

-- The U.S. nuclear weapons in our country do not fall under the system of military balance between Greece and Turkey because, on the one hand, they are directed against the Soviet Union and, on the other hand, are under the absolute and exclusive control of the Americans.
-- The negotiations for the bases will not be linked with NATO.

In any event, the deputy minister to the prime minister yesterday reiterated the position recently outlined by the prime minister that the NATO problem is basically limited to "the safeguarding of Greece's borders" from the side of another member country of the Atlantic alliance.

AGREEMENTS SIGNED WITH USSR IN 1979 REACTIVATED

NC132154 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1930 GMT 13 Nov 81

[Text] The agreements that were signed in 1979 with the Soviet Union on the construction of an alumina plant and a natural gas pipeline to our country are being reactivated. The entire framework of the agreements with the Soviet Union will be submitted to the Chamber of Deputies for ratification so that in the meantime the interministerial committee of the two countries will be able to operate. This statement was made by Deputy Coordination Minister Pottakis, who added that this was agreed at during a meeting he had with Mr (Novakovskiy), head of the Soviet trade mission in Greece.

Mr Pottakis said: The agreements with the Soviet Union were frozen because they were not ratified by the Chamber and thus the Soviet side could not buy our agricultural products in the quantities that one would expect following the the abolition of the clearing system of exchanges.

Next week a conference will be held at the Ministry of Coordination with the Iraqi delegation to implement proposals for bilateral economic cooperation.

GOVERNMENT SPOKESMAN ON DIALOGUE WITH TURKEY

NC131321 Athens RIZOSPASTIS in Greek 12 Nov 81 p 11

[Text] The new government is not bound by the results of the Greek-Turkish dialogue which has been conducted thus far. The policy of facing the Greek-Turkish dispute is different from the policy of the previous government and, for this reason, different tactics will be followed. This statement was made yesterday by the government spokesman, who added that until now no initiative for a meeting has been manifested by Athens or Ankara.

The Greek side, the spokesman went on, does not object to the continuation of the dialogue between the two countries, but there can only be a dialogue when Turkey stops having claims at the expense of Greek sovereign rights. The Ulusu statements for the development of peaceful and friendly relations between the two countries, the spokesman said, are only of a theoretical nature and there is nothing specific as yet showing a change of policy on the part of Turkey.

In further clarifying the government's position, the spokesman stated that, in the event of an Ankara proposal for the resumption of the dialogue, the Greek side will set as an inviolable term that Turkey gives up any claims at the expense of national sovereign rights. He also said that the meetings between the secretaries general of the foreign ministries are interrupted and concluded by maintaining that the initiative now rests with Turkey [as heard].

SPOKESMAN REPLIES TO ARCHBISHOP KHRISOSTOMOS

NC131500 Athens ELEVTHEROTIPIA in Greek 12 Nov 81 p 16

[Excerpt] The government spokesman, expressing the government's surprise over Archbishop Khrisostomos' cable to the prime minister in which he said that he disagrees with the acceptance of Waldheim's proposals by the representatives of Greece and Cyprus, stated in Athens yesterday that neither the Greek Government nor the Cyprus Government have stated that they accept Waldheim's proposals as a basis for negotiations on the Cypriot issue.

The text of the government spokesman's statement is as follows: "The government is surprised over the cable Archbishop of Cyprus Khrisostomos sent to the prime minister. Already yesterday the government spokesman had stated that 'the Greek Government is in a position to know that the Cyprus Government is deferring its specific assessment on the ideas of Waldheim's plan to the negotiating table.' Consequently, Archbishop Khrisostomos' reference to the acceptance of Waldheim's ideas cannot be concluded from the above statement. Nor can this be concluded from the statement made by President of the Republic of Cyprus Mr Kiprianou in today's (yesterday's) press conference, which particularly stressed that there was no issue of accepting Waldheim's idea as a basis for negotiations and that there was no danger of complications or derailment of the issue. The president of the Republic of Cyprus explicitly stated that the Cyprus Government will not accept solutions that are contrary to the resolutions of the United Nations and the summit agreements."

GOVERNMENT OFFICIAL COMMENTS ON LIBYAN STATEMENT

NC132304 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 2200 GMT 13 Nov 81

[Text] This morning the Libyan Embassy Secretary, (Al-Gamuni), held a press conference on developments in the Middle East as well as on Greek-Libyan relations.

Asked about a statement by the Libyan spokesman, the government spokesman said: We respect the good intentions of the Libyan leadership toward our country. PASOK's initiatives to convert the Mediterranean into a sea of peace are well known. The government of Greece shapes the country's foreign policy in accordance with the interests of the nation and of our people.

Answering another question, the government spokesman said: Prime Minister Panandreou has not been invited to make an official visit to Libya.

Libyan Envoy Comments Cited

NC140732 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 0430 GMT 14 Nov 81

[Text] In a statement yesterday, the new secretary of the Libyan bureau in Athens, (Al-Gamuni), stressed that his country opposes the partition of Cyprus and supports the sovereignty and unity of the island. He also said that resolving the Greek-Turkish differences will also contribute to resolving the Cypriot issue.

(Al-Gamuni) also called on the Greek Government to remove the U.S. bases from Greece and rid the country of all other military presence. Finally, the Libyan representative called on the Papandreou government to break diplomatic relations with Israel and recognize the PLO as the only representative of the Palestinian people.

More on Comments

NC151102 Athens RIZOSPASTIS in Greek 14 Nov 81 p 10

[Text] The new secretary of the Libyan bureau in Athens, (Muhammad al-Gamuni), has expressed Tripoli's great concern over the "Bright Star" exercise the United States is staging in Egypt, its opposition to the Fahd plan, and its hope that more favorable conditions will be created in developing relations with Greece.

The new secretary stressed that the U.S. plans in the region, which Libya "knows very well," might even lead "to a third world war." These plans are aimed at taking over the oil wells of the Middle East. (Al-Gamuni) particularly referred to Reagan's recent statement on a limited nuclear war in Europe and to the charges that his country "encourages terrorism."

(Al-Gamuni) stated: "If terrorism is the struggle of the PLO, and the national liberation struggles of the people of El Salvador, Nicaragua, Chad, Namibia or others, then we accept this charge."

On the Fahd plan, he said that it is an "embelished Camp David plan." With regard to details on the plan, he described the terms on the withdrawal of the Israelis from occupied territories as positive, but he considered the "open recognition of Israel" as "unacceptable." The new secretary generally and categorically ruled out this last detail. Libya has asked for the withdrawal of the Fahd plan and, according to (Al-Gamuni), the same has been done by the PLO, Syria, Algeria and the PDRY.

(Al-Gamuni) said that relations with Greece are "old and steady." He expressed the conviction that these relations will be improved even more when "all foreign military bases and nuclear warheads" are removed from Greece. He stressed that Greece's independence is a favorable factor in the Arab people's struggle.

The new secretary is in favor of Cyprus' independence, integrity and sovereignty. With regard to Greek-Turkish relations, he stated that beyond personal views, the Greek people are the only ones who can settle as many problems as there are. He stressed, however, that these problems are being stirred and blown up by the United States and NATO, which "are interested in continuing their military presence both in Greece and Turkey."

ROMANIAN MINISTER HOLDS TALKS IN ATHENS 13 NOV

NC131525 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1230 GMT 13 Nov 81

[Text] This morning, Romanian Deputy Foreign Minister Duma and Greek Deputy Foreign Minister Papoulias held tlaks on bilateral inter-Balkan and international issues. Romanian Ambassador to Athens Mr Ion Brad and officials from both sides took part in the first phase of the talks this morning.

At 1100, Mr Duma, accompanied by Mr Papoulias and Mr Brad, visited Foreign Minister Kharalambopoulos for talks. At 1330, Mr Kharalambopoulos gave a luncheon at the Foreign Ministry in honor of the Romanian official. The Greek-Romanian talks will continue at the Romanian Embassy tonight. Romanian Ambassador Brad will then give a dinner for all participants.

I AVYI URGES FREE RETURN OF POLITICAL REFUGEES

NC151318 Athens I AVYI in Greek 14 Nov 81 p 6

[Editorial: "The Political Refugees"]

[Text] The statement Public Order Minister Skoularikis made the other day on the major issue of the repatriation of political refugees was limited in scope. He failed to provide a concrete prospect for the definite solution of this problem, of which this is only one: To recognize and to give the right of free and unconditional repatriation to all political refugees without exception.

Of course, we take into consideration Mr Skoularikis' clarification that the measures for speeding up the procedures for the approval of repatriation applications which he has announced will be valid until "the question of automatic repatriation" is settled. We are not aware of the difficulties that the government is facing in order to chronologically postpone this "automatic repatriation." And we cannot understand either which categories of political refugees -- or even which individual cases -- concern the "very few exceptions" for the approval of the applications for repatriation. If the government is determined to proceed -- which is concluded from Mr Skoularikis' statement the other day -- with "automatic repatration," then what is the meaning of prolonging the status of the "very few exceptions" which are finally used to deny -- or even to subject to administrative committees -- the obvious right of democratic and antifascist Greeks who want to return to their country?

The question of the repatriation of political refugees is of vital importance for the substantive democratization of the country, and for this reason there cannot be any half measures. But beyond this, which constitutes the vital political substance of the problem, there is also the question of economic security for those to be repatriated. If this question is not dealt with, thousands of people will not be able to be repatriated. It is well-known that the socialist countries have not yet replied positively to the fair claim for the transfer to Greece of the insurance rights and contributions of the political refugees who will be repatriated.

The new government must particularly insist on this. We suggest that a way should be found to include in the negotiations representatives of Florakis' party [the KKs]. The reasoning is because, according to the allegations of Florakis' party, it has "brotherly" relations with the communist parties of the socialist countries. Thus, these relations will help solve this problem. Besides, if we are not wrong, Florakis himself said before the elections that he knows that the socialist countries are leaning toward the solution of this problem, which supports our suggestion. However, regardless of the course for the definite solution of the problem, the repatriated refugees could be treated the same way that those who have been repatriated from Istanbul and Egypt, until a final settlement is concluded with the governments of the socialist countries.

ULUSU QUESTIONED ON FOREIGN, DOMESTIC TOPICS 14 NOV

TA141045 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 14 Nov 81

[Excerpts] Prime Minister Bulent Ulusu has said that his government is determined to continue to exert efforts in a bid to insure political and economic stability in the country once and for all and to achieve prosperity for the people. The prime minister was speaking today in Ankara at his fifth news conference.

Ulusu explained his government's views on efforts being made to insure peace and tranquillity in the country, on new legislation being prepared, on the economic situation and policies to be pursued in this field, on the exploitation of energy and other natural resources and on reconstruction. The prime minister also stated his views on labor relations, social security issues, housing policies, agricultural problems and foreign affairs.

Referring to foreign policy issues, Prime Minister Ulusu said his government is pursuing a foreign policy in accordance with Ataturk's motto of peace at home and peace in the world. He added that special care is being taken to promote Turkey's relations with the Western countries and NATO. Ulusu continued: The latest developments and the existing strains in our region have demonstrated clearly Turkey's importance for the region's security and stability. Military and economic aid that will contribute greatly to Turkey's defense capability and economic development must be increased and stepped up in accordance with our country's particular position in the alliance. This fact must be properly assessed by our friends and allies.

Pointing out that at a time when political and armed clashes in the Middle East are continuing, Turkey's solid, reliable and stable policies in the region are yielding constructive results, Ulusu said Turkey takes a sensitive and understanding stand toward regional problems and is exerting efforts to remain impartial.

On the solution of the Cyprus issue, Ulusu recalled that the Turkish side has submitted comprehensive proposals on the issue and added that Tuekey is following policies for a just and lasting solution to the problem through the intercommunal talks.

Noting that Turkey pays great importance to its relations with Greece, Ulusu said the Greek prime minister's stand and statements are being watched and assessed carefully. Ulusu said Papandreou's initiative for an exchange of ideas on the issue of relations between the two countries was a constructive sign for peaceful solution of the problems. Ulusu added: The solution of problems through peaceful negotiations has always been Turkey's basic foreign policy. We are ready to exert efforts to find a solution to our problems with Greece within this framework.

Further on News Conference

TA141612 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1545 GMT 14 Nov 81

[Text] Ankara, 14 Nov (AA) -- Prime Minister Mr Bulent Ulusu answered some of the questions asked by Turkish and foreign press (?members) during his fifth news conference Saturday.

A foreign reporter asked about the Turkish Government's views regarding the negative reaction of various Western governments on the abolition of political parties and on the sentencing of former Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit to 4 months' imprisonment. Prime Minister Ulusu said, "In Turkey, judicial jurisdiction belongs to independent courts and judges. The September 12 movement and our government respects the principles of independent courts and natural judges. We have no comment to make on this issue."

Asked about Federal German Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher's remarks following his visit to Turkey, Ulusu said he has no comments to make on Mr Genscher's remarks at the German parliament. Ulusu (?added) Genscher realizes the importance of foreign aid to Turkey.

In reply to a question about divergencies of views among the members of the Supreme Council of Arbitration, the prime minister said the Supreme Council of Arbitration was an excellent organization to serve the country at this time. He added, "It is quite natural that members of the council should have differing views. We are organizing meetings in the prime ministry to solve these problems. I am repeating, this council is the best that can serve the interests of workers, employers and the government, all together."

A journalist asked about the recent shift of 61 Turkish Radio and Television employees to other state agencies. Mr Ulusu replied, "The Turkish Radio and Television is an organizatin which has to secure its neutrality. In order to obtain this neutrality, some personnel shiftments have been made at TRT. This shiftment is natural for every kind of state organization."

Turco-Greek Relations

On the possible meeting of Turkish and Greek foreign ministers at the NATO meeting in Brussels, Prime Minister Ulusu said a special private meeting was foreseen in Brussels between the Turkish and Greek foreign ministers with the [word indistinct] that the Greek side was seeking this. He added, "Later, it was understood that this [word indistinct] both sides think that an unofficial meeting between the foreign ministers would be more appropriate. The meeting will be in this context."

Trade With Libya

Asked whether it is true or not, that Libya is planning to scale down importation from Turkey, the prime minister replied, "There are no existing problems of trade between Libya and Turkey in general. There may be some misunderstandings, but this issue will be discussed during joint commission meetings and during Mr Turgut Ozal's coming visit to Libya."

OZAL LEAVES FOR ECONOMIC TALKS WITH LIBYA

TA151128 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1000 GMT 15 Nov 81

[Text] State and Deputy Prime Minister Turgut Ozal today left for Tripoli to attend the joint Turkish-Libyan economic committee meetings. In a statement at Yesilkoy Airport before his departure, Ozal said various issues concerning the two countries will be discussed at the committee meetings, which will begin tomorrow. Pointing out that economic relations between Turkey and Libya have increased significantly, Ozal said total exports to Libya will reach $400 million this year. Ozal noted that the problems of the 100,000 Turkish workers employed in Libya will be also discussed.

Officials from the Foreign, Commerce and Finance ministries, the Treasury Directorate General, the State Planning Organization, the Central Bank and the Turkish Petroleum Directorate General will also attend the meetings. Ozal will leave Libya 19 November for the United Arab Emirates.

TECHNICAL, TRADE PROTOCOL SIGNED WITH S. KOREA

TA131539 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1455 GMT 13 Nov 81

[Text] Ankara, 13 Nov (AA) -- Turkey and South Korea signed a protocol here today for closer cooperation in economic, trade and technical fields. Foreign Ministry Assistant Secretary General for Economic Affairs O. Iscen said there were vast areas for cooperation between the two countries and the protocol signed today will enable them to work closer together.

MALTA

SAUDIS GRANT LOAN; GOVERNMENT SUPPORTS FAHD PLAN

LD150504 Valletta Radio Mediterran in English 0700 GMT 13 Nov 81

[Excerpt] Saudi Arabia has confirmed a soft loan of 12 million Malta pounds for infrastructure and development projects in Malta. Prime Minister Dom Mintoff disclosed this when addressing delegates at the extraordinary general meeting of the Malta Labor Party.

The prime minister said that (?a few) weeks ago he had led an official delegation for talks with King Khalid and Saudi cabinet ministers who had welcomed the Maltese delegation [words indistinct] from the two sides' talks it transpired that they were in complete agreement on how to achieve peace in the Middle East and freedom for the Mediterranean. Malta was in the forefront in supporting the Saudi Arab plan for a solution to the Middle East problem and had done its utmost to get the plan accepted in Europe. Mr Mintoff said that before it left Saudi Arabia the Maltese delegation had been assured that by election time the Maltese people would know to what extent the Saudis accepted the Malta labor movement.

The 12-million-pound loan was to be at an interest rate of 3 percent with 5 years' grace and another 15 years for repayment. Four and a half million pounds would go toward enhancing Malta's water supply through the sea water desalination project; 5.5 million pounds are to be spent on the new [word indistinct] building project, while 1.5 million pounds will go toward further development of [words indistinct].

PORTUGAL

LISBON SEES NORMALIZATION OF RELATIONS WITH CUBA

LD131342 Lisbon in Portuguese to Europe 1230 GMT 13 Nov 81

[Text] It has just been announced that Cuba has nominated its ambassador to Portugal. He is Carlos Lechuga Havia, who until his designation to the post by the country's Council of State, was director of the Cuban Foreign Ministry's department for international organizations.

His nomination follows the appointment last summer of Francisco Jose Knopfli as Portugal's ambassador to Havana, an apointment which reactivated relations between the two countries which went sour 8 months ago when Cuba accused the then Portuguese charge d'affairer, Francisco de Mascarenhas, of having links with the CIA.

The Pinto Balsemao government then recalled the charge d'affaires and declared Cuban ambassador to Lisbon Manuel Esteves Perez persona non grata.

Diplomatic sources see today's nomination announcement as a clear normalization of relations between the two countries.

CONSULATE MAY BE OPENED IN TRIPOLI TO HANDLE TRADE

NC151946 Paris AFP in English 1939 GMT 15 Nov 81

[Text] Lisbon, 15 Nov (AFP) -- The Portuguese Government is considering opening a consulate in Tripoli to handle growing trade with Libya and the increasing Portuguese presence there. A semi-official government source said here today.

Lisbon scrapped earlier proposals to open an embassy in Tripoli when Libyan head of state Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi advocated "Africanising" the Portuguese possessions of Madeira and the Azores at an Organisation of African Unity (OAU) meeting.

Libya is represented in Lisbon by an embassy that was renamed a People's Office in January this year.

SPAIN

SAHAGUN RESIGNS; CALVO-SOTELO TO TAKE OVER

LD132032 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 1900 GMT 13 Nov 81

[Text] The National Executive Committee of the UCD [Democratic Center Union] has accepted the resignation of Agustin Rodriguez Sahagun as party president and has deemed it advisable to bring together in one person the head of the government and the presidency of the party. Secretary General Rafael Calvo-Ortega has also announced his intention of resigning from his post. Meanwhile Calvo-Ortega will provisionally lead the UCD until the Political Council -- the main body of the UCD -- accepts the assumption of the party presidency by Calvo-Sotelo on 21 November.

The National Executive Committee also condemned the tendentious comments and reports against the dignity and honor of certain UCD leaders which were made during the last few days and which violated the minimum rules guiding a society living together in peace.

Today's Executive Committee resolution, which was unanimously approved, ratifies its support for the government staying in power until the end of the constitutional legislature period, and agrees to continue supporting the action of the executive. It also reaffirms the character of the UCD as an option which is different from both the left and the right; it positively assesses the activity of the presidency and the secretary general of the party and considers it vital to maintain the model of a unitary, decentralized party adapted to the state of Spain's emerging federal structure with popular roots, being an inter-class, unifying party with a commitment to the reform and modernization of Spanish society. That is what the first statute of the UCD statutes says.

GOVERNMENT HAS PARLIAMENTARY SUPPORT

LD140214 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 0100 GMT 14 Nov 81

[Excerpt] At a routine press conference following the 13 November cabinet meeting, the secretary of state for information said that the government has sufficient parliamentary support to continue to govern until the next general elections, scheduled for 1983. He said that the 12 November rumors of alleged military unrest were quite clearly putschist.

BRIEFS

NATURAL GAS DISCOVERIES -- One of the prospecting operations for natural gas which the state oil monopoly has been conducting in the western part of the Gulf of Cadiz ended over the weekend with much more positive results than had been expected. It was thought there was 6 billion cubic meters of gas, but the work has revealed that the figure could be as much as 8 billion. Other gas deposits have been found and these will go into production very soon. It is hoped that this gas will begin to come ashore at the beginning of 1985. The Gulf of Cadiz could become one of the most important natural gas producing areas in West Europe. [Text] [Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 1400 GMT 12 Nov 81 LD]

FBIS DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 221 17 November 1981

CONTENTS

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Schmidt Calls for Coalition Discipline on Economy J 1
Apel Warns Against 'Verbal Radicalism' in Debate J 1
Genscher Interviewed on Forthcoming Brezhnev Visit J 1
Not Expecting 'Spectacular' Results J 2
Genscher, Rao Call for Afghan Political Solution J 3
FRG, USSR Exchange Views on Nuclear Energy J 3
[SUEDDEUTSCHE ZEITUNG 13 Nov]
Timing of Schmidt-Honecker Talks Still Undecided J 4

FRANCE

Defense Minister, Chief of Staff on Arms Sales [LE MONDE 11 Nov] K 1
Diplomatic Incident 'Narrowly' Averted in PRC [LE MONDE 11 Nov] K 2
Cot Outlines Policy; Warns of Tension in Third World [L'UNITE 31 Oct] K 2
Poland, Western Creditors To Discuss Debt K 4
L'HUMANITE Publishes PCF-PCP Communique [3 Nov] K 5
Officer Urges Truly European Defense Pact [LE FIGARO 5 Nov] K 7
LE MONDE Sees Defense Budget as Stopgap [11 Nov] K 8
Briefs: Vanuatuan Prime Minister; Repatriation of Securities K 10

SPAIN

Defense Minister Denies New York TIMES Report N 1
Five Madrid City Councillors Expelled From PCE N 1
EPK Congress Endorses Merger With EIA N 1
PSOE Leader Hits Nature of Relations With U.S. [YA 1 Nov] N 1

NORDIC AFFAIRS

FINLAND

SDP Delegation Returns From Moscow Talks With CPSU P 1

SWEDEN

Increased Spending Proposed for Coastal Defense P 1
Nonsocialist Parties Back JAS Aircraft [DAGENS NYHETER 11 Nov] P 1
Briefs: Protest to Turkey P 1

CYPRUS

Gobbi To Announce Waldheim Evaluation at Meeting R 1
Talks Resume 18 Nov R 1
Spokesman Comments R 1
Lissaridhis Opposition R 1
AKEL Position R 1
Missing Persons Meeting Set for 20 November [Bayrak Radio] R 2
Romanian Delegation Signs Economic Agreement R 2
AKEL Protests, UK Denies U.S. Use of Bases [CYPRUS MAIL 15 Nov] R 3

KHARAVYI Criticizes U.S. Use of UK Bases [17 Nov] R 3
AKEL Views National Issues, Monitoring Stations [KHARAVYI 17 Nov] R 4
UN Envoy Meets North's Talks Negotiator [Bayrak Radio] R 5
Talks Schedule Confirmed [Bayrak Radio] R 5

GREECE

U.S. Uses Bases for 'Bright Star' Exercise [RIZOSPASTIS 13 Nov] S 1
Chamber of Deputies Holds Swearing-In Ceremony S 1

TURKEY

Turkmen Departs for Council of Europe Meeting T 1
State Minister Ozdas Returns From Pakistan T 1
MILLIYET Comments on Relations With Greece [11 Nov] T 1
Consultative Assembly To Approve 23 Death Sentences T 2
VOTCP Commentary Looks at Kurdish Problem T 3

SCHMIDT CALLS FOR COALITION DISCIPLINE ON ECONOMY

LD161800 Hamburg DPA in German 1710 GMT 16 Nov 81

[Excerpts] Bonn, 16 Nov (DPA) -- Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt has shown reserve with regard to the demand by the SPD and the trade unions for an employment program. Addressing the SPD Executive in Bonn today, Schmidt expressly ruled out an old-style economic program by drawing attention to the nature of the current economic difficulties of all Western industrial countries with balance of payments deficits. According to those present at the meeting, Schmidt did not mention the possibility, which he had recently hinted at, that the government might decide during the debate on the annual economic report expected in January on additional employment policy measures. Only a few days ago the call for an employment program was criticized and rejected by the FDP leadership. Schmidt himself also called for discipline on the part of the coalition on this issue.

The federal chancellor said the subjects of arms control and disarmament would be of special importance during his talks with Soviet state and party leader Leonid Brezhnev in Bonn next week. With regard to the U.S.-Soviet talks starting in 2 weeks on the basis of the NATO decision on limiting European medium-range weapons in Europe, the federal chancellor said the Federal Government was striving for a zero solution -- the abandonment of such weapons -- for both East and West. The Federal Government is currently carefully coordinating with its Western partners on this aspect of the talks with Brezhnev.

APEL WARNS AGAINST 'VERBAL RADICALISM' IN DEBATE

LD161746 Hamburg DPA in German 1626 GMT 16 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 16 Nov (DPA) -- Contradictory remarks from the United States on NATO strategy on a nuclear war limited to Europe create difficulty for the debate on security policy in Europe, according to Federal Defense Minister Hans Apel. He could only hope that "these kinds of public remarks belong to the past," he said in an interview with FRANKFURTER RUNDSCHAU (Tuesday's edition).

According to the paper, Apel expressed the wish that people in America could be more thoroughly informed than hitherto of what the thinking in Europe is and what Europe expects the position of its U.S. ally to be. "We should not, however, counter unfortunate remarks with unfortunate remarks of our own about U.S. policy and U.S. politicians, because verbal radicalism of this kind can only be detrimental to a rational policy.

According to Apel, NATO strategy consists of "leaving the potential enemy completely in the dark as to what our provoked military response would be. The more one gets involved in such debates, the more NATO strategy is jeopardized."

GENSCHER INTERVIEWED ON FORTHCOMING BREZHNEV VISIT

DW161303 Mainz ZDF Television Network in German 1810 GMT 15 Nov 81

[Interview by Hans-Joachim Reiche with FRG Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher in the program "Bonn Perspectives;" date and place not given -- recorded]

[Text] [Question] Mr federal foreign minister, since Brezhnev's last visit to Bonn, NATO has made the dual decision, the Soviet Union has invaded and occupied Afghanistan, the Federal Republic has boycotted the Moscow Olympics and a new President has moved into the White House in Washington. Have these events changed the character of German-Soviet relations?

[Answer] Mr Reiche, the international situation has changed without a doubt over the past years. The continuous occupation of Afghanistan by the Soviet Union and the increasing nuclear threat to West Europe by Soviet medium-range missiles create increasing insecurity and alarm. The recent submarine incident on the Swedish coast is part of all this. On the other hand, the nonratification of SALT II in Washington and the change of government in the United States have raised questions about the continuity of American policy. All these developments have naturally had some influence on German-Soviet relations. However, our clear aim continues with regard to continued cooperation with the Soviet Union. That is part of predictable German foreign policy and we have never considered it to be a temporary phenomenon but always a long-term political aim in view of the significance of German-Soviet relations with regard to stability and peace in Europe.

[Question] What role could Bonn play in the international political situation between Washington and Moscow?

[Answer] It must be our task as a government bearing responsibility in a divided country here in the heart of Europe to do everything to overcome misunderstandings, and to always look for new possibilities to continue detente, cooperation, arms control and disarmament. It is not an empty formulation but the truth that no people would suffer more from relapsing into Cold War than the Germans.

[Question] Doesn't this almost force the Federal Republic into a neutral position if it wants to fulfill this task?

[Answer] The Federal Republic can fulfill such a task only as a firm partner of the Western alliance and the European Community. If it sought a role between the blocs or between the two big powers, it would be nothing but a plaything in international politics.

[Question] Do you believe that Moscow sees it the same way, or are errors possible such as, for example, misinterpreting the peace movement in our country?

[Answer] It is our task to point out our position to the Soviet Union over and over again. I believe it would be a really gross misinterpretation if the Soviet Union saw any such tendencies in the peace movement. I believe that the opposite is the case. The search for peace and considering the European task to be a peace task is a search for a new European identity. This exists in West Europe, in Central Europe and it exists in East Europe, although it cannot express itself as freely in communist states as in ours. The desire for peace does not mean understanding for Soviet missiles; the desire for peace means making efforts for cooperation and disarmament in the West and in the East.

[Question] What do you expect to come from this visit?

[Answer] With this visit we want to stress our serious desire for cooperation with the Soviet Union; we want to explain our desire for arms control and disarmament and most of all we want to win the Soviet side over to the Western proposals for achieving a so-called zero solution in the field of medium-range missiles, that is the renunciation of medium-range missiles in the West and the East. We are prepared to do this. The key does not lie with us and it does not lie in Washington -- it lies in Moscow. If the Soviet Union were to agree to renounce medium-range missiles, it would remove grave anxieties from the people in Europe.

[Question] Do you really feel that the Soviet Union could scrap its SS-20 missiles?

[Answer] We must do everything to convince it that in doing this it would give a new quality to East-West relations and international disarmament efforts.

Not Expecting 'Spectacular' Results

LD161528 Hamburg DPA in German 1436 GMT 16 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 16 Nov (DPA) -- In the view of Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher (FDP) no spectacular results can be expected from the forthcoming visit of the Soviet state and party leader, Leonid Brezhnev, to Bonn.

"If we approach this working visit with the idea of attaining spectacular results, we will be putting it in a false perspective right from the start," Genscher said in an interview with the press service PRESSEPLAN published on Monday by the Foreign Ministry.

It is the Federal Government's hope that the visit will provide a positive impetus for the disarmament negotiations which Washington and Moscow are to hold beginning 30 November in Geneva. Genscher said that since Federal Chancellor Schmidt and he managed to transform the Soviet Union's negative attitude to negotiations into a "positive starting-point" during their visit to Moscow last year, the task now is to make two things perfectly clear to the Soviet Union. First, Moscow has to take seriously the fact that the FRG feels threatened by Soviet prearming in medium-range missiles. Secondly, the Soviet Union has the opportunity, by abandoning its prearming, that is, by the final removal of its medium-range weapons, to make possible a balance at the "zero level." "The key lies with those who have prearmed, with the Soviet Union," Genscher emphasized.

GENSCHER, RAO CALL FOR AFGHAN POLITICAL SOLUTION

LD161722 Hamburg DPA in German 1610 GMT 16 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 16 Nov (DPA) -- One week before the Soviet state and party leader Leonid Brezhnev's visit to Bonn, Federal Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher and his Indian counterpart, Narasimha Rao, agreed today in emphasizing that a political solution must be found to the Afghanistan problem.

According to the Foreign Ministry, attention was drawn in this respect to the European community's Afghanistan initiative which calls for a withdrawal of Soviet troops in return for a guarantee of Afghanistan's nonalignment. Genscher stressed that for peace to be preserved, all states must respect people's rights to self-determination and must exercise moderation when pursuing their own interests.

The Indian foreign minister, who spent 1 day in Bonn after visits to Paris and London, had a lengthy exchange of views with Genscher and was received by Federal President Karl Carstens. Carstens and Genscher paid an official visit to India last spring. It was noted during the talks that relations between the Federal Republic and India had developed very positively and that there was wide identity of views between the two countries on international questions. Carstens described his state visit to India as a symbol of the good relations between the two countries. Genscher assured Rao that his country had a partner and friend in the Federal Republic which would continue in future to be ready for trusting and intensive cooperation.

They also agreed in their positive assessment of the summit of 22 industrial and developing countries in Cancun. Carstens emphasized, according to the federal president's office, that the course and outcome of the summit had given cause for hope that progress could be achieved in the North-South dialogue.

FRG, USSR EXCHANGE VIEWS ON NUCLEAR ENERGY

DW131333 Munich SUEDDEUTSCHE ZEITUNG in German 13 Nov 81 p 6

[Article by staff writer Christian Schuetz: "Soviet Minister Knows Nothing About Reactor Accidents"]

[Excerpts] Munich, 12 November -- Yuriy A. Izrael, Soviet Minister for Environment Protection, said that a scientific symposium concluded in Munich, Thursday after 5 day's duration was an overture to practical German-Soviet cooperation in several fields of environment protection. The meeting had been organized by the Soviet State Committee for hydrometeorology and Environment Protection, the Bavarian State Ministry for Landscaping and Environment Problems and by the Upper Bavarian Chamber of Industry and Commerce, and financed by Soviet institutions and German companies.

Bavarian Minister for Environment Protection Alfred Dick, jointly with Izrael the sponsor of the conference, said that it was impressive to find that the Federal Republic of Germany and the Soviet Union largely have identical environment problems irrespective of their different economic and social systems, and that they have achieved similar results independent of each other in understanding these problems scientifically.

The following fields were discussed in 14 Soviet and German lectures each and in the subsequent discussions: environment surveillance, environmental hygiene, ecology and economics, development of energy and ecological consequences, pollution-control technologies for water and air, protection against noise and international actions against border-crossing air pollution (especially sulfur dioxide). The Soviet Union it was said, attaches special significance to the latter topic. By way of air currents from West Europe it "imports" to the northern part of Russia between 5 and 10 million tons a year of this flue gas from the combustion of coal and oil which is particularly dangerous to forests, but it "exports" only 2 million tons.

This is why the enhancement of nuclear energy constitutes a policy which is ecologically considerate. Energy generation by means of nuclear power plants causes 10,000 times less waste than fossil fuels. The Soviet Union is putting its stakes on nuclear power and hydroenergy in its European part. Plans provide for the construction of thermopower plants above the huge coal deposits in Siberia, whose electric power will be conveyed to the consumption terminals via 1.5-million volt lines. All necessary steps are being taken for the safety of the people when nuclear energy is being enhanced Izrael said. He stated that he knew nothing about reactor accidents nor Western press reports about them. The Soviet power plants are100 percent safe; if Finland subsequently provided a Soviet-supplied reactor with German safety appliances, then this is a Finnish decision. He said that in connection with this conference safety precautions against the case of a serious accident were also discussed, but "only theoretically."

Asked what he thinks of the reactor security discussion in the Federal Republic, Izrael said that a debate on the problem is necessary but that it must be held "on a good scientific level." Izrael was asked how he assessed the nuclear energy policy of the Soviet Union since the DKP and other communist groups in the Federal Republic are against nuclear power plants because the poor are being exploited by the wealthy class that way. He said that technical progress is good and that the class fight problem must be seen separately.

Bavarian Environment Protection Minister Dick stated that he was very much impressed by the far-reaching agreement between the Soviet Government and the Bavarian state government on problems of peaceful exploitation of nuclear energy.

Dick as well as Izrael said they were most satisfied by the interesting exchange of information and the friendly and businesslike atmosphere of the symposium. Dick praised mutual understanding and the respect for scientific achievements. Izrael, in the name of the Soviet delegation thanked him for "the spirit of benevolence," saying that he was convinced that the symposium would gain great practical significance and deepen German-Soviet relations prior to Brezhnev's visit to Bonn. He extended an invitation for a continuation of the meeting in 1983 in the Soviet Union.

TIMING OF SCHMIDT-HONECKER TALKS STILL UNDECIDED

LD161524 Hamburg DPA in German 1430 GMT 16 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 16 Nov (DPA) -- Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt may go to the GDR for talks with SED leader Honecker later than is generally assumed in Bonn. Although recent unofficial statements in Bonn have mentioned January as the time of the trip, Government Spokesman Kurt Becker reaffirmed to the press in Bonn on Monday his earlier statement that a much broader span of time in early 1982 is under consideration. Becker repeated that the meeting between Schmidt and Honecker will take place after the expected visit of the Soviet head of state Leonid Brezhnev to Bonn next week, probably at the beginning or in the first quarter of 1982. It was also said in Bonn that the Federal Government and the GDR have not yet had talks on the date of the intra-German summit.

DEFENSE MINISTER, CHIEF OF STAFF ON ARMS SALES

PM161111 Paris LE MONDE in French 11 Nov 81 p 9

[Text] "Arms export policy will be aimed at introducing a certain degree of morality in trade of this type," but "future courses of action will take into account the contribution which arms exports can make to the equipping of our armed forces at minimal cost." That is the reply given by Defense Minister Charles Hernu to a senator, Pierre Salvi (Val-d'Oise, Centrist Union [Union Centriste]) who tabled a question in writing about the supply of arms to foreign countries.

In his reply Mr Hernu specifies that "commitments made in the past will be respected" except for Chile, whose supplies of ground installations which could be used for order-keeping operations have been discontinued, and to the Republic of South Africa, by virtue of the 1977 UN embargo.

Three Principles for French Sales Abroad

For the rest the defense minister explained that the current revision of the policy of arms sales abroad will draw inspiration from three principles:

"1. The arms export policy will be aimed at introducing a certain degree of morality in trade of this type. In particular the risks that military equipment could be used for suppressing popular movements will be considered;

"2. Future courses of action will take into account the contribution which arms exports can make to the equipping of our armed forces at minimal cost, to France's industrial employment and diplomatic activity and to the service of the principles of states' independence and sovereignty;

"3. Operations conducted in cooperation with other democratic states will primarily be sought, while respecting the sovereignty of each partner. The examination of future relations with the PRC with respect to armaments will come within the above-mentioned framework," Mr Hernu added.

For his part Gen Jeannou Lacaze, armed forces chief of general staff, addressing civilian and military students at the Center for Advanced Weapons Studies recently, revealed the risks involved for the army in "exporting high-performance developments." He sees at least three risks:

"1. That of divulging to a potential enemy the characteristics of our own equipment and the technical standard we have reached;

"2. That of leaving ourselves open to using our own weapons against an enemy we had armed ourselves. That is not a mere school exercise hypothesis if you think of what has happened in Iran or in the Gulf of Sidra recently;

"3. That of being obliged, for reasons of political expediency, to set aside equipment intended for our own forces. Such levies, the need for which can perfectly well be understood, are nonetheless detrimental to us since not only do they disrupt the units' equipping program but they also run the risk of affecting our own operational capacities."

General Lacaze specified too that the effort made by the army in training, demonstrating and even in support at the time of sales abroad involves 1,400 personnel (530 officers and 870 noncommissioned officers) in rendering military technical assistance.

DIPLOMATIC INCIDENT 'NARROWLY' AVERTED IN PRC

PM161109 Paris LE MONDE in French 11 Nov 81 pp 1, 3

[Manuel Lucbert dispatch: "Hardening of Attitude in Beijing"]

[Excerpts] Beijing -- Mr Michel Jobert's visit to China, which began under most favorable auspices, ended in a heavy atmosphere Tuesday, 10 November. A diplomatic incident was narrowly averted, but only just.

This sudden change in the atmosphere, which was completely beyond the control of the state minister and the French delegation, was a result of an unexpected turn, during Mr Jobert's visit, of a matter which had been discussed by the two countries for several weeks and whose protagonists are a former French diplomat in Beijing -- Mr Emmanual Bellefroid -- and his Chinese fiancee, Miss Li Shuang.

Has the Chinese Government shown an obvious lack of judgment over this matter or did it want to deliberately cause a commotion by refusing to resolve the problem amicably before Mr Jobert's arrival and by taking steps to disclose its decision during the French minister's visit? Be that as it may, it has behaved in a conspicuously clumsy manner. Such behavior is surprising in a country whose people are so sensitive to questions relating to "face".

Therefore, there remains a political explanation -- Chinese firmness over this matter could have two objectives. On the one hand, it could serve as a warning to foreigners eager to establish excessively close relations with Chinese citizens -- a recently issued internal Central Committee document seems to point in this direction. And, on the other hand, it could show the Beijing leaders' determination to stop any fringe activities. Since political dissidence was stifled some months ago, the only task remaining for the authorities is to silence what is in any case a very small group of nonconformist artists, who have been associating on a very informal basis under the name of "xingxing" (stars). The fact that Miss Li Shuang was connected with that group, with which Mr Bellefroid himself very naturally maintained relations, could lend credit to this thesis. Under the circumstances, the possibility of a quick settlement of the matter seems extremely remote.

In view of these very strange circumstances, the economic talks between Mr Jobert and his interlocutors have been pushed into the background. On the first day of his visit, that is, Saturday, the French foreign trade minister had some quite comprehensive talks with Vice Premier Gu Mu on the state of bilateral trade relations and their prospects. Even though these talks should create no illusions as to prospects for any spectacular development of cooperation, they at least can be given credit for providing useful and precise information about a certain number of issues.

With reference to nuclear energy, for instance, it now appears that because of a lack of both means and any sufficiently clear energy policy, China is unable at present to fulfill the promise made a year ago that it would purchase two power stations. On the other hand, the Chinese seem anxious to increase cooperation in the spheres of oil, mining, railroads, agriculture and cement production. Certain contracts of medium importance could be signed soon. Whether they are concluded or not will give a first indication of whether, following Jobert's visit, French-Chinese relations have indeed begun to cool.

COT OUTLINES POLICY; WARNS OF TENSION IN THIRD WORLD

PM111321 Paris L'UNITE in French 31 Oct 81 p 12

[Interview with French Cooperation and Development Minister Jean-Pierre Cot: "The Third World Countries Have Understood That France Is no Longer Content Just To Talk"; date and place not given]

[Text] L'UNITE: the Cancun conference has given rise to various interpretations. Apart from the results obtained, several commentators have found that it was all much ado about nothing much.

Cot: The most beautiful girl in the world can only give her all.

And you must not ask the Cancun conference to give more than it could: some people expected too much from it perhaps. This meeting of 22 heads of state was not designed to make decisions but to provide a political impetus. This aim was achieved: An agreement emerged on resuming global negotiations within the United Nations and more generally on approaching the complex of North-South relations with the desire to succeed, that is, making the necessary compromises.

If that were all, I would deem the balance positive. Certainly one could dream of better, but you must remember what the starting point was and the intensity of the opposition.

L'UNITE: The French Government showed its interest in that meeting. What does it think of the results?

Cot: In a memorandum distributed before the conference, we posed two questions and added some wishes. On the first question -- resuming global negotiations with the United Nations -- we had satisfaction. On the second question -- a program of mobilization of energy resources in the developing countries by means of, for example, an energy branch of the World Bank -- we did not obtain a consensus, that is, a unanimous agreement. But I point out that this idea of a branch has considerably advanced. For, if you can regard as an "energy branch" the fact of mobilizing extra resources and modifying the power structure in the decision-making body -- the World Bank -- this idea, when presented to the conference, did not arouse any opposition during discussion. Even better, it received a certain amount of support, including the fundamental support of Saudi Arabia.

From the French viewpoint, we can assert that our two initial aims have been largely taken into account.

Moreover, the president expressed the desire that other problems be raised. I will mention just two. First of all the food problem. In this sphere it is going to be possible to make progress in particular as regards energy stocks. That depends today on specialized institutions.

Second point: The fluctuation of the price of raw materials. We are tackling a "big one" here, for it is a question in fact of a new international economic order. France's position is clear: It has taken the part of the Third World against the states of the North, which reject it. For it is not only the United States which does not wish to upset the present anarchy in raw materials prices. There are also Britain and the FRG, for example. On this point, Cancun did not facilitate progress. It only allowed the very strong pleas of the South in this sphere to be registered. I am thinking of the Ivory Coast foreign minister's speech and the statements of the Tanzanian president who, in a picturesque form with sometimes biting sarcasm, made the realities of the South clear to Ronald Reagan.

L'UNITE: People have been talking about North-South dialogue for many years now. Yet the announcement of the resumption of negotiations comes to be seen as a success. What has happened?

Cot: There was a block. All attempts failed, one after the other. At the start of the year everything seemed blocked. The Reagan administration had redoubled its hostile statements, the British and to a lesser extent the Germans had hardened their stances. There was no hope of seeing global negotiations recommence and the partial negotiations -- food, trade and so forth -- were also deadlocked. It was to see whether it was possible -- and how -- to set everything going again that the Cancun conference was called. Until July it was not clear whether it was possible for the 22 heads of state to sit down at one table. The signals began to change in Ottawa. The conference on renewable energy in Nairobi, then the Paris conference on the least developed countries produced modest results, perhaps, but results which marked an awareness. Cancun was first of all an outcome and then, after 2 days of further discussion, a jumping-off point.

L'UNITE: The urgent need to find solutions to underdevelopment has often been mentioned. In recent months some people seem to have realized that such solutions would also help the industrial countries out of the crisis. Finally people have talked about war and peace. Is this apocalyptic talk?

Cot: No, that is in keeping with reality. Tension is mounting visibly in the Third World. And if solutions are not found rapidly for these problems, that will create dangerous situations. If there is a war it will come from the Third World. Or rather, there are already wars, all in the Third World. The French often think that the world has been at peace since 1945. That is because war has not touched the hexagon [metropolitan France] since that date and not one French soldier has been killed since 1962. But war has never ceased.

What Francois Mitterrand mentioned was the danger of generalizing conflicts, of importing East-West tension into the Third World with the dangers which that entails. For it is true that economic instability and the risk of social explosions create explosive situations. If we do not manage to find rapid solutions, peace is in serious danger. And it is not dramatizing the situation simply to acknowledge it.

L'UNITE: It is rare for a country to "let its colors be clearly seen" before an international meeting. France did this with its memorandum -- at the risk of not seeing all its objectives succeed and of appearing the "loser." Why did the French Government act in that way?

Cot: Cancun was not the site of a negotiation. It could have been and was the moment of awareness. This happened primarily through the personal contact between the 22 heads of state. Nonetheless it was the first time that some people there, and not the least among them -- I am thinking of Ronald Reagan for example -- had thought for 48 hours at a stretch about North-South relations. It was in order to precipitate this phenomenon of awareness that the president communicated this memorandum.

It was in order to remind the participants as a whole of their responsibilities that Francois Mitterrand acted in a rather unusual manner as regards the traditional rules of diplomacy. That enabled the discussions to be placed at their true level: the level of politics.

L'UNITE: But does France have the means to carry out its policy? It is not too ambitious?

Cot: We have proposed nothing and announced France's commitment to nothing without having the means to achieve what we propose. In the North-South dialogue this is one of the major differences from the preceding governments. Valery Giscard d'Estaing talked a lot, and some of his rhetorical positions were not bad. But nothing came of them. The talk was generous but French practice was aligned with U.S. practice: the North versus the South.

Our concrete commitment was proved by the conference on the least developed countries. Together with budgetary "proof." And we proved it at Cancun as regards the financing of the common fund, a sort of international bank designed to finance regulatory stocks for the basic products.

This is important for the credibility of our behavior. The countries of the Third World have understood that France is no longer content just to talk.

POLAND, WESTERN CREDITORS TO DISCUSS DEBT

NC161852 Paris AFP in English 1839 GMT 16 Nov 81

[Text] Paris, 16 Nov (AFP) -- Poland's 15 main Western government creditors will meet Polish Government officials here on Wednesday and Thursday to discuss the rescheduling of Poland's debt repayments due next year, informed sources said here today.

Poland's scheduled 1982 payments amount to 5,700 million dollars, including 2,700 million dollars in public loans. Its total debts amount to 23,000 million dollars.

Poland will discuss with its 15 creditor countries the possibilities of harmonising its 1982 payments. Warsaw is also scouting the chances of raising new short-term loans.

It is complaining of new financial difficulties caused by the withdrawal by Western banks of their short-term deposits from Polish banks. Warsaw also complains that it cannot take advantage of Western credit because it is hamstrung by interest payments that are imminently due. The two parties to the meeting have already agreed to meet next month to sign an accord on the rescheduling to 1988 of the 2,400 million dollar payment due for payment by Poland from March to December this year. French banking sources said that the prior condition for any agreement was the payment by Poland of its arrear interest bill, which observers put at 750 million dollars due on January 1 next year.

L'HUMANITE PUBLISHES PCF-PCP COMMUNIQUE

PM1011135 Paris L'HUMANITE in French 3 Nov 81 p 8

[Text] The PCF and PCP have published a joint communique whose text is as follows:

At the invitation of the PCP Central Committee, a PCF delegation headed by Georges Marchais, secretary general, and consisting of Maxime Gremetz, secretary of the Central Committee and member of the Politburo; Jean-Francois Gau, member of the Central Committee, and Roger Trugnan, from the foreign policy section, was in Portugal 28 through 31 October 1981.

The PCF delegation visited the region of Avis, Portalegre, where it was received by Antonio Gervasio, member of the Politburo and of the leadership of the Alentejo regional organization. At the Avis city hall the delegation met with the mayor and other members of the municipality. It visited the 1 May production collective/cooperative where it talked with the leaders and many workers.

Georges Marchais was received by the president of the republic, General Ramalho Eanes.

The delegation was received by the speaker of the assembly of the republic and had talks with representatives of the parliamentary groups of the PCP, the Popular Democratic Movement and the Union of the Socialist and Democratic Left.

On 30 October, during a meeting at the sports pavilion in Lisbon, Georges Marchais and Alvaro Cunhal extolled the friendship and solidarity existing between the two parties and peoples.

The PCF delegation had talks with a PCP delegation consisting of Alvaro Cunhal, secretary general; Octavio Pato, member of the Political Commission and secretary of the Central Committee; Albano Nunes, member of the Central Committee and in charge of the international section, and Jeronimo de Sousa, candidate member of the Central Committee.

Defense of April Victories

These talks took place in an atmosphere of the fraternal friendship characterizing the relations between the two parties. They enabled the two delegations to exchange extensive information on the situation in their country, on their parties' activity and most urgent tasks, and to touch on the most urgent questions in the international situation and the communist and workers movement.

The PCP delegation supplied information on the struggle the party is waging in close conjunction with the working class and people's masses for the defense of the victories of the April revolution, against the anticonstitutional revision of the constitution and for a democratic alternative to the present government and policy. It noted the contribution made by the Portuguese communists and people to the defense of peace and to disarmament, which is closely linked to the struggle against the reactionary government's policy of submission to imperialism and for the defense of independence and national sovereignty.

The PCP delegation welcomed the victory won by the French democratic forces at the recent elections and the essential contribution made by the communists.

It expressed the Portuguese communists' solidarity with the PCF's struggle for the interests of the French working class and people and for peace and socialism.

The PCF delegation stressed that in France the leftwing victory has opened up a new period of national life. The participation of Communist ministers in the government is a precious asset for success in carrying through the renewal process which has been initiated. The PCF is pleased that important measures in the right direction have now been taken. In the face of animated resistance from the big bourgeoisie, the solution of the remaining important problems requires the workers' active involvement. The PCF, which places itself honestly in the new majority, is developing its activity at every level by making every effort to curb the maneuvers of big capital, to answer the expectations of the workers and the country and to advance, via democracy, to socialism.

The PCF voiced its solidarity to the PCP in the struggle to defend the gains of the April 1974 revolution and to preserve the democratic regime enshrined in the constitution.

The two delegations note, on the basis of their own experience under their countries' very different conditions, that the role of the communists is fundamental in beating the right and reaction, defending and advancing democracy, promoting social progress and resolving the big national problems, and advancing toward socialism.

Imperialism Can no Longer Act as it Chooses

Examining the international situation, the PCP and PCF stressed that the socialist countries' growing achievements, role and influence, the important successes gained by the peoples fighting for their national and social liberation, and the development of the workers and democratic struggles in the capitalist countries confirm that the world is continuing to evolve in the direction of democracy, national independence, social progress and socialism. Today imperialism can no longer act as it chooses.

Imperialism is trying by all the means at its disposal to safeguard its positions and even regain those it has lost, it is resorting to a policy of interference in the internal affairs of other states. Moreover, it is trying to cast fresh doubt on the balance of military forces and to acquire superiority in this field. That explains Reagan's relentlessness in seeking to obtain the implementation of the NATO decision to deploy new nuclear missiles in Europe, and the decision to produce the neutron bomb, to considerably reinforce the arsenal of mass-destruction weapons and to envisage the possibility of a "limited nuclear war" on our continent. It also explains his refusal to consider the constructive disarmament proposals put forward by the Soviet Union.

The two parties firmly denounce this dangerous policy, which must be curbed.

Struggle for Peace and Socialism

Imperialism's aggressiveness is not a sign of strength but expresses its difficulties in the face of a world gradually escaping its domination. The popular movement for peace and disarmament which is spreading in Europe and involving millions of men, women and young people of different political, philosophical or religious views is striking evidence of this. Expressing satisfaction at this important movement, the two parties intend to continue making an active contribution to it.

The PCF and the PCP are opposed to the deployment of new nuclear weapons on our continent and are in favor of the immediate initiation of negotiations with a view to attaining the limitation and reduction of all medium-range weapons in Europe. They are in favor of the balanced and gradual [progressive] reduction of all armaments and the simultaneous dissolution of military blocs, and of the success of the Madrid meeting.

They believe that the struggle for peace and the struggle for democracy, social progress and socialism are indissolubly linked, although they have differing specific objectives and specific development processes.

Solidarity Among Revolutionary Forces

The PCP and PCF delegations asserted that in the present world situation the two parties consider mutual solidarity among all revolutionary forces to be of the greatest importance.

They displayed their solidarity with all peoples struggling against imperialism, colonialism, neocolonialism and racism and for democracy, national independence, progress, peace and socialism, and in particular with the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola-party of labor and the Angolan people in their struggle to repel the South African troops invading that country and in their defense of their country's sovereignty and territorial integrity in order to advance on the path of socialism. They also voiced their solidarity with the Mozambique Liberation Front and the Mozambique people and the other peoples of southern Africa.

The two delegations voiced their parties' determination to continue to act to strengthen the ties of friendship between the Portuguese and French peoples and to develop cooperation between Portugal and France, particularly in the economic, political, diplomatic and cultural fields, in the interest of the two countries.

The PCF and PCP express satisfaction at the relations of friendship and solidarity which unite them. They have agreed to strengthen and deepen these relations and have decided on new cooperative initiatives to this end.

OFFICER URGES TRULY EUROPEAN DEFENSE PACT

PM121049 Paris LE FIGARO in French 5 Nov 81 p 2

[Part II of article by senior French officer under pseudonym Brution: "[illegible]olitical Building and Defense of Europe: 2 -- The 'Petty Traders'"]

[Text] France is the only European country to have been provided with a military system which, despite some shortcomings, is coherent and effective. But just think what military strength West Europe would have today if Britain, the FRG, Italy and a few others had agreed to join forces with us after 1966 and set up a real European defense system: There is no point bemoaning what they have or, rather, have not done. But there is nothing to stop us thinking that, like Saint Thomas, they will ultimately bow to the evidence and, recognizing the soundness of the French theory, will one day agree to follow us on the course laid down by General De Gaulle.

Europe's emancipation depends first on the independence of its component states, which is incompatible with the integration of their armies in NATO. Rather than being merged into a structure over which they have no control, the Europeans should, therefore, start by organizing themselves. This certainly does not mean that they would not then establish preferential relations with the United States within a rebalanced alliance.

If there is any change of seeing the political building of Europe emerge from limbo one day, our allies must wake up to the increasingly military connotation of political problems in the present international environment. France has a crucial role to play in this change in thinking since it is the only European political decisionmaking center which has a nuclear shield and a significant overseas action capability. Thus our leaders have a powerful argument for urging Europe to play its rightful role within the alliance.

A Zollverein [customs union] Is Not a Homeland

According to E. Renan: "The existence of common interests makes trade treaties.... A Zollverein is not a homeland." It is probably a fundamental mistake, a deviation, to believe that Europe's political union will follow naturally from the EEC. This is because the existence of common economic interests is a far cry from the intention to defend them together with arms.

Moreover their material nature makes them perishable and makes it impossible for them to be used for long-term building. Is the British Labor Party not saying that its accession to power would have the immediate effect of withdrawing Britain from the Common Market? What kind of community is it that you can join out of pure mercenary interest and from which you threaten to withdraw when times are hard? An assemblage within which the degree of solidarity shown by the members varies according to the economic situation is anything but a community.

Just imagine a military alliance which functioned well in peace time and fell apart in wartime: Now we are in the middle of an economic war, and other threats, military this time, are hanging over Europe; and if there were no strong French-German duo, what would be left of the Ten's cohesion? But France and Germany have indeed decided to go beyond mere economic considerations, and their cooperation is the result of a traditional political treaty signed between General de Gualle and Chancellor Adenauer in 1963.

At that time that treaty was criticized by the European federalists because in a way it sanctioned the existence of two sovereign states instead of outlining the start of a supranational organization. Moreover this was for the same reasons as were behind the failure of the Fouchet [French diplomat] plan, which was caused by some "Atlanticist" states within NATO which were aware that that was a first step toward a "European Europe" which they did not want.

However, it can now be seen that federal Europe has not progressed at all whereas, despite its shortcomings, French-German political cooperation is the only tangible fact. The political building of Europe no longer lies in a quantitative increase in its members but rather in the qualitative improvement of the relations among some of them. Which ones? Those which would accept the idea of no longer being confined to a unidirectional EEC, devoted to economic affairs, but giving the edifice a second politico-strategic dimension without which there will never be a European union.

Indeed, NATO has detached the European armies from the political powers administering them which -- if the reader will forgive this trivial expression -- have become, for their soldiers, "petty traders." The employer is the U.S. President, he and he alone would give them orders through an American general in the event of conflict. And it is by no means certain that their governments -- in view of the urgency -- would be able to intervene to alter any measure they deemed inappropriate. There is only one step from this to the citizen-soldier asking for whom and for what he is fighting, and sooner or later that step will be taken. And when a soldier asks that question, whatever the technical quality of the weapons he uses, he is defeated in advance.

Europe therefore must reconquer its defense. The American ally must commit it to so doing because the alliance's credibility and consequently, to some extent, U.S. security, depends on it. Thus the European governments, having the use of their armies restored to them, will seek a politico-military formula which enables part of them to be united within a European force. The WEU would be the natural political framework for this, the vital intermediary between the ineffectiveness of a coalition of national armies and the present integration of those same armies within a soulless body. This must be done to ensure that the old world does not in turn become the world's Lebanon....

LE MONDE SEES DEFENSE BUDGET AS STOPGAP

PM161015 Paris LE MONDE in French 11 Nov 81 pp 1, 9

[Jacques Isnard article: "The Military Budget; Pending the Major Choices"]

[Excerpts] With the abstention of the opposition's representatives the draft military budget for 1982 has been approved by the National Assembly Defense Commission. Even if, at the public session at the Palais-Bourbon, the RPR and UDF representatives display a different attitude, does this vote by the commission express a real national concensus on defense or does it, more simply, reflect the fact that the opposition considered that military policy had not changed?

Defense Minister Charles Hernu, who is presenting his draft budget for 1982 on Friday 13 and Saturday 14 November at the National Assembly, is in fact asking to be judged on his performance over the next 2 years -- 1982 and 1983 -- because over these 2 years the government will endeavor to catch up on the lag noted in the implementation of its predecessors' 1977-1982 military program law and because the Socialist authorities' real military planning, beyond this 2-year provisional plan, will not have any actual effect until 1984-1988, right at the end of Mr Mitterrand's 7-year term.

It is doubtless an irony of history that responsibility for conceiving a new generation of national deterrent weapons should have been given to men who for the most part were in the recent past opponents of nuclear force. With, moreover, the obligation to embark on this business with the knowledge that, if all the headquarters' proposals for updating the nuclear force are retained, over 4 percent of the gross marketable domestic product [produit interieur brut marchand] will have to go on defense at a time when many other items, also priority ones, are demanding national investments.

All these considerations explain why the draft defense budget for 1982 is an interim draft whose cost is growing less rapidly than the state's average civil expenditure and the rise in whose equipment credits is slowing down, especially for planning permits which express orders for materiel and reflect real future commitments.

The government seems to have been motivated by a threefold desire: To preserve the forces' activeness and training, to keep up current equipping programs in order to complete them over the next 2 years, and to avoid forfeiting -- so that the Defense Council might cut it short -- the implementation of any of the large-scale arms systems (mobile or semi-mobile missiles, a seventh missile-launching submarine, the Hades tactical missile, an observation satellite and a nuclear-powered aircraft carrier) which will replace current weaponry.

A Differentiated Service

To this threefold desire we must add the outlining of a different policy regarding national service: A policy for a service whose conditions will be increasingly varied, in actual duration, in daily performance and in the lifestyle available to draftees. If the government keeps at 12 months the time spent in the armed forces for reasons which seem to have more to do with economic and social considerations than military or technical ones, in reality everything seems to suggest that at the same time it is launching a reform of the living conditions in the armed forces.

The 20 or so measures already announced or the dozen which will be announced at the forthcoming National Assembly debate are all along the same lines: instituting in the future a national service whose organization will vary according to the speciality, rank and geographical location of the posting of the draftee who wants to take advantage of it. Already the national navy, thanks to what has been dubbed "the Michel de Bennetot law," named for the former RPR deputy foreign minister who was the inspiration of it, is practicing differentiated forms of national service. While it has not yet acknowledged it officially, the Socialist government intends to extend a similar service to the other two branches of the armed forces, which, in particular, presupposes that the ground army will in turn be reorganized on the basis of these new principles just a few years after the in-depth modification to which it was subjected by Gen Jean Lagarde, its former chief of staff.

But is that really the gist of the matter? If it is agreed that never, in the 20 years that France has been planning the building of its defense arsenal, has any plan been applied on time or in conformity with initial commitments, why should we then believe that a new program law, even if it is a Socialist one, should at last be respected to the letter, at whatever cost? Of the three branches of the armed forces only the navy has managed in recent years to carry out its plan. In truth, as a staff general officer explains, France has been seeking for too long now "to get two or even three different defense policies into a single military budget." Because it is reluctant to block any option, the world's third army, as Mr Giscard d'Estaing described it, is combining substantial military manpower with low-dose armaments at the service of numerous objectives which it has difficulty in meeting.

Responsibility rests with the government leaders, who are holding back from making the expected choices and, out of caution, prefer to keep all their irons in the fire in the name of an understandable political philosophy which makes them fear that if they recommended "impasses" they would be mistaken and would have to bear the burden of defeat if their options were shown to be inopportune or dangerous under adverse circumstances.

BRIEFS

VANUATUAN PRIME MINISTER -- Paris, 16 Nov (AFP) -- Vanuatuan Prime Minister Walter Lini arrived here today for a six-day visit during which he is to review the state of his country's relations with France. Mr Lini and his French hosts, which include Prime Minister Pierre Mauroy, will discuss ties between France and the former South Pacific protectorate, which had been administered jointly by Britain and France until its independence on July 30, 1980. Relations between the two became strained [?when] the new government took restrictive measures against French on the island, and reached their lowest point last February when French Ambassador Yves Rodriguez was declared persona non grata. They have since improved, although Mr Lini has been a persistent critic of French nuclear tests on their south Pacific atoll of Mururoa. [Excerpt] [Paris AFP in English 1150 GMT 16 Nov 81 NC]

REPATRIATION OF SECURITIES -- The government is asking the big French banks to repatriate all securities of American branches of enterprises to be nationalized. They fear in effect that the Americans, who could find the compensations insufficient, will freeze these securities through court action. [Text] [Paris Domestic Service in French 1400 GMT 16 Nov 81 LD]

DEFENSE MINISTER DENIES NEW YORK TIMES REPORT

LD171016 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 1000 GMT 17 Nov 81

[Text] This morning Defense Minister Alberto Oliart issued a firm denial of the rumors which appeared in the New York TIMES on Sunday and are cited today by the Spanish newspaper YA, to the effect that the king recently received requests from senior armed forces officers to appoint a general as prime minister.

FIVE MADRID CITY COUNCILLORS EXPELLED FROM PCE

LD161502 Madrid in Spanish to Europe 1400 GMT 16 Nov 81

[Text] The PCE decided this morning to expel from the party the five Madrid city councillors who refused to resign from their positions on the Madrid City Council. Meanwhile, the Basque communists led by Roberto Lertxundi definitively broke with the PCE yesterday with the reform of the Euskadi communist party's statutes.

EPK CONGRESS ENDORSES MERGER WITH EIA

LD161610 Madrid Domestic Service in Spanish 0700 GMT 16 Nov 81

[Text] The first phase of the 5th congress of the Communist Party of Euskadi [EPK], the Lertxundi sector, which was held over the weekend in Bilbao, has endorsed the merger with the Basque Revolutionary Party [EIA], a member of the Euskadik O Ezkerra coalition. The great majority of the almost 600 delegates who took part in the congress approved the report submitted by Roberto Lertxundi which stressed the need to defend the autonomy statute and to work for the unity of the left against the exclusive policies of the Basque Nationalist Party [PNV]. There was also mention of the Socialist Party of Euskadi and sectors of Herri Batasuna as possibly forming part of this unity of the left. Roberto Lertxundi, in his report, also defended the participation of Navarre in the Basque autonomous community and a national, class and independent trade union movement. Speaking of the 10th PCE congress, he said that it has resolved nothing and has, rather, opened up a profound crisis within Spanish communism. He also explained the political significance which the merger with EIA held for his sector. This merger, in his view, responds to the reality in Euskadi. During this first phase of the congress the party statutes were also reformed in such a way as to secure the separation of the pro-Lertxundi sector of the EPK from the PCE. The second phase of the congress will be held between 5 and 6 December and will focus, above all, on the subjects arising out of the merger with EIA. It will also elect the new Central Committee. Finally, it is worth noting the presence over this weekend of the son of Ramon Ormazabal.

PSOE LEADER HITS NATURE OF RELATIONS WITH U.S.

PM121001 Madrid YA in Spanish 1 Nov 81 pp 6-7

[Maria Herida interview with Felipe Gonzalez, secretary general of the Spanish Socialist Workers Party: "I Do Not Aim To Give the Soviet Union a Victory"]

[Excerpt] Once the result of the vote on Spain's entry into NATO was known, following the debate of the full congress, Felipe Gonzalez told us that if all the arguments expounded there were true, regarding the strategic and geopolitical importance and the situation in West Europe, the Strait of Gibraltar, the Mediterranean, the Atlantic, the Canary Islands, the Balearic Islands and so forth, it was necessary to assert that truth for those who want to enter into a military pact, "but to assert the truth coherently, however, I believe that this is not the intention, and consequently I believe that there must be political or other arguments in favor of this step under these conditions."

And the Socialist leader added that there was no confrontation revealing convergence and divergence in the analysis. "They were basically parallel analyses. I tried, for example, to introduce an analysis of the security arguments why Spain should or should not take this step and of the defense arguments, and the truth is that I failed because there was not a clear response on the government's part."

Relations With The United States

The trap that the government tried to create in the debate with the Socialist Party, pointing out that they were not discussing the position but the Socialist alternatives, he said, was whether or not the relationship with America was being maintained. And the epithets are there. They can qualify as much as they like, and it can then be said that the relationship is not balanced; the truth is that it has been said that the relationship is one of pure leasing of land, it has been said that the bases are American, and it has been said by the government that this is not tolerable for a democratic country. It has been said in committee, certainly in order to make the Socialist Party enter into the contraadiction of wanting to maintain the "status quo," and it strikes me as a political mistake of incredible magnitude. You see, if the United States is not respectful of Spain in bilateral relations, what will make the citizens believe that it will be respectful in multilateral relations, when everyone knows that the United States and the Soviet Union take the chief role in any important negotiations on strategy at a world level? How can they not realize that they are slipping by arguments into a kind of passion for dialectic swordsmanship and putting themselves, on the contrary, in a difficult position, and are themselves falling into a trap from which they will have a hard time extricating themselves with rationalism.

America Condemned Spain to Dictatorship

[Question] Are you, perhaps, more interested in a rather lopsided bilateral treaty than a treaty with 14 other countries on equal terms; or would the important thing be to resolve our problem with America definitively?

[Answer] The problem of America and us is a very clear problem which I, after the great platform created for me by the government, to put it in all sincerity, can state much more readily because the government itself affirms it. America helped Europe to free itself from fascism, and it not only did not help Spain but condemned it to dictatorship for many more years. In 1949 America proposed a pact of alliance which benefited Europe in the sense of curbing the Soviet Union's expansion in some specific areas of Europe. It also helped with the idea, magnificent no doubt, of the Marshall Plan, which got Europe out of the disaster and misery of the war. And the gratitude that we must have for that American position amounts to what appeared in the movie "Welcome, Mr Marshall": The rapid passing of a car, Dutch cheese and a little powdered milk. That is the reality, the sad reality of our own history. But overcoming that reality, not only do we wish to maintain a good relationship with the United States but we believe that we belong to a part of the world in which the United States plays an important role -- but, as I say, overcoming this reality which still has not been put right.

Relations With The United States More Positive Under Franco

That is to say, the relations that used to exist between Franco's regime and the United States were much more positive for Spain in the commercial sphere, in the sphere of exchange and in all spheres. Those relations have deteriorated with democracy. I understand that there has been an international crisis, but we owe the United States few favors at present, and even so we can maintain relations of friendship and cooperation; I repeat, of friendship and cooperation. And, of course, the arguments that the treaty is bad cannot be put to me because I have not yet voted for a single treaty with the United States or for a single pact.

They have facilities to use Spanish territory for their military operations, sometimes outside the NATO sphere. In exchange, however, they never recognize even a guarantee of defense -- I do not say against third countries which are not a strategic objective of NATO -- but not even for a possible conflict within the bosom of NATO. Well, it's too much, too much. And Spain does not put it right simply because it is part of a bloc with other countries.

No to Subordinate Relations

[Question] How, then, is it to be put right?

[Answer] Through the dignity of a people and through the clear political will not to let oneself be trampled on -- which is the only language that is understood in international relations. And this, I insist, while maintaining relations, not breaking them. But it is logical that some day we will have to say: "Listen, are you interested in being here or not? You are interested? Then let us negotiate the terms on which I am interested, and when it is clear what interests me and what interests you, there will be no relationship of subordination, even though it is a question of a large country and a small one." There will be no more relationship of subordination, which exists now that the U.S. President says that the neutron bomb is being produced and will be deployed in Europe within 3 years unless something different happens. And he did not make this decision after consulting the members of the alliance or the famous rights of veto that exist on paper, but made it because he knows that he can make it and because he knows that afterward there is a capacity for imformation and pressure, without negative connotations, which in the end will oblige the governments of the alliance to adopt the decisions that are made at the Pentagon. And I say in the end, to the extent that some great leader among those who are cited here so much (counterparts of the Union of the Democratic Center are never cited, probably because there are none, and therefore they cite our counterparts -- on which we greatly congratulate ourselves) one of those leaders -- I say -- commented a few months ago that "Every time one notes less the differences in the USSR's treatment of the Warsaw Pact countries and the U.S. treatment of the NATO countries. And still we are democratic countries which can decide by the will of our people," This is a thought which would probably be denied from any country in the Atlantic alliance, but it is a thought which is there and which is carrying more weight than ever in the conscience of Europe.

We Have Little To Thank America For

I can also add that I had a good opportunity to speak with a great American representative not many months ago and to explain very clearly to him what I have just said here: that we have little for which to thank the United States, the last country with which we were at war. The Willy Brandts, the Kreiskys, the people who felt that liberation effort in their own flesh and could be grateful for it, are now going out of power. The new generations have other memories. The remember Vietnam, the Dominican Republic, an American country which had its reasons of hegemony, which had its problems, its vision of the world and which conquered Europe. And I also told him, a few months before a tremendous row was made in Berlin: "You are losing European public opinion. It does not matter to me that the Soviet Union has lost the public opinion of the East, because it never had it. It has conquered them, but it has done so by a theory, a doctrine, a philosophy and a totalitarian political scheme. But you cannot do that, not only in Europe but in the United States, which still has public opinion and sometimes loses battles on the battlefield."

[Question] And what was the American's reply?

[Answer] [Apparent quotation] That is possible and delicate. In 10 years' time it will be very difficult to meet a young European under 45 years of age who has the same attitude as the European leaders who lived through the world war and the liberation process, and that strikes me as simply dangerous [end of apparent quotation].

In fact, in order to understand each other, we are not moving with history but against history. And some say that they are very consistent and yet they are in the 18 [allusion unknown] in this and other viewpoints.

[Question] All that you have just said is equivalent to saying that our adherence to NATO is like a hunting trophy for the United States?

[Answer] If that is what you think, you are right.

I insist: No to NATO

[Question] Mr Gonzalez, will you really send a report to the countries which make up NATO?

[Answer] Clearly, I am against Spain joining NATO, and it is also clear that an element has been introduced into Spanish diplomacy which has been used constantly: that we are not so opposed to this adherence, but testimonially against -- which means that in contact with external relations, including in the embassies, the very ambassadors say: "But let us see what is the Socialist Party's definitive position?"

[Question] But what troubles you in this sense?

[Answer] That, first, the United States and, second, the other NATO allies are working on the sole hypothesis that Spain will join, because that strikes me as dangerous. That is not the only hypothesis. There are the hypotheses that Spain will not join or that it will soon leave, so, they must make their calculations and work on two hypotheses, and consequently it cannot be maintained that adherence is definite, and I say so with concern.

Report to the NATO Countries

[Question] Why?

[Answer] Because it seems to me that foreign policy decisions must tend toward permanence, and this decision, of course, has not been made with sufficient basis to guarantee the permanence of the decision. That is what I am going to get across, and probably without having to travel: just by sending the contents of the debate to the countries which make up the alliance, and without any specific request. Let them make their decision, as it is only fitting for me to make decisions in Spain as a representative of my party and the electorate that supports us, but not outside Spain. I have tried always to act with the greatest integrity in external relations and have not been reciprocated. But I will continue acting with just the same integrity, although I do not trust what others are doing, and I say so with all rationality. Moreover, not only am I not going to trust it but I am not going to take the responsibility for what others do.

FINLAND

SDP DELEGATION RETURNS FROM MOSCOW TALKS WITH CPSU

LD151524 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 1400 GMT 15 Nov 81

[Text] Representatives of the Finnish Social Democratic Party [SDP] and the Communist Party of the Soviet Union agree that the permanence of Finland's foreign policy line constitutes the basic issue of the forthcoming presidential elections in Finland. During its visit to the Soviet Union the SDP delegation conducted talks about the general political situation and the prospects of the disarmament talks with representatives of the CPSU Central Committee. SDP Secretary Erkki Liikanen said the continuity and development of good relations between Finland and the Soviet Union were stressed in the talks, on the basis of the Paasikivi-Kekkonen line. It emerged during the talks that the CPSU representatives appreciated the activity of the SDP in support of disarmament. The initiative concerning a nuclear-free north was regarded as being still of topical interest. according to SDP Secretary Liikanen who led the delegation. The delegation returned from its visit today.

SWEDEN

INCREASED SPENDING PROPOSED FOR COASTAL DEFENSE

LD151342 Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 1130 GMT 15 Nov 81

[Text] According to SVENSKA DAGBLADET today, the Defense Committee is to request an additional 200 million kronor to be earmarked for the 5-year period from 1982 to 1987 for increased surveillance of the coast and island areas. The money will be used on helicopters, converted torpedo boats, so-called vedettes, monitoring buoys, new radar stations and the speedier development of the marine surveillance centers at Karlskrona, Goeteborg and Malmoe. The proposal for increased resources for the coastal defense is a direct consequence of the affair with the grounded Soviet submarine, according to SVENSKA DAGBLADET.

NONSOCIALIST PARTIES BACK JAS AIRCRAFT

PM131247 Stockholm DAGENS NYHETER in Swedish 11 Nov 81 p 1

[Text] On Tuesday [10 November] the liberal party Riksdag group gave its unanimous approval to a Swedish-produced JAS [pursuit, attack, surveillance] aircraft. This means that all three nonsocialist parties have given their support to this line, while a Social Democratic decision might not materialize before next spring. The Defense Committee is to present its decisions on aircraft, unit closures and the general economic framework for the armed forces at the end of this month. The Social Democrats do not think that there is any hurry for a decision on the JAS. In the Defense Committee they will probably content themselves with indicating a framework for total defense expenditure and how much of this will be spent on the air force. The government will not be presenting its draft defense policy legislation until next spring. Before this happens the Social Democrats want new calculations of the cost of the JAS and new negotiations.

BRIEFS

PROTEST TO TURKEY -- The Swedish foreign minister, Mr Ola Ullsten, called the Turkish ambassador to the Foreign Ministry in Stockholm to protest against the sentence of imprisonment passed on the former Turkish prime minister, Mr Bulent Ecevit. The foreign minister appealed to the Turkish Government to repeal the sentence. Sweden has also requested the European Council of Ministers to take up this question at their meeting in Strasbourg next week. [Text] [Stockholm International Service in English 1100 GMT 11 Nov 81 LD]

GOBBI TO ANNOUNCE WALDHEIM EVALUATION AT MEETING

Talks Resume 18 Nov

NC162038 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 2000 GMT 16 Nov 81

[Text] The special representative of the UN secretary general in Cyprus, Gobbi, has announced that he intends to officially present the evaluation of the UN secretary general on the intercommunal talks at the negotiating table. Gobbi made the statement today following separate meetings with the representative of the Greek Cypriot side at the intercommunal talks, Ioannidhis, and the Turkish Cypriot interlocutor, Onan. The next meeting of the interlocutors has been scheduled for next Wednesday [18 November].

Spokesman Comments

NC131250 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1130 GMT 13 Nov 81

[Text] Commenting on press reports about the handling of the Waldheim evaluation, the government spokesman has said that President Kiprianou has made the only correct ipso facto decision with full consciousness of his responsibilities following the consultations which have been conducted and with the national interest as the sole criterion.

The spokesman said that the attempt to create impressions that we may be led into diversion or complications is absolutely unjustified because it is up to us to prevent such a likelihood. He also stressed that the president of the republic is determined to resolutely face any such attempt regardless of any pressures. The responsibility of the country's leadership, the spokesman added, is to exhaust all possibilities for the achievement of progress, always on the basis of the UN resolutions and the summit agreements. If this does not become possible, however, most certainly other ways of handling, which have already been decided upon, will follow. The spokesman further said that the handling which has been decided upon, regardless of the outcome of the present phase, will undoubtedly lead to the strengthening of our positions, particularly internationally. The spokesman said: It is emphatically stressed that the president of the republic will never accept any partitionist solution or the selling out of the Cypriot people's inalienable right.

Lissaridhis Opposition

NC162222 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 2100 GMT 16 Nov 81

[Text] The chairman of the socialist EDEK Party, Lissaridhis, speaking at an Athens gathering tonight reiterated his party's opposition to the Cypriot Government's decision on the handling of the Waldheim evaluation. Lissaridhis said it must be pointed out to the UN secretary general that his evaluation does not respond to the agreements nor to what is being presented as a question of equal distance between the two sides, and that since this matter is not submitted as ideas or proposals but as an evaluation, there is no basis for discussion.

AKEL Position

NC162104 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 2000 GMT 16 Nov 81

[Text] AKEL Secretary General Papaioannou, speaking tonight at the inauguration of AKEL's new offices in Paphos, reiterated that the course chosen by AKEL and the National Council on handling the Waldheim evaluation is the most proper. This course, he added, leaves no margins for exploitation by the enemies of Cyprus and does not divert the Cyprus issue from the framework and resolutions of the United Nations.

The secretary general of AKEL also referred to the country's economic problems, stating that the government must adopt a new economic policy based upon a further increase in the rate of Cypriot economic development in industry, animal breeding and farming, as well as in tourism. He also called upon the government to take drastic measures to control prices and check imports, and to proceed with state interventionism in sectors where private capital cannot produce. He also placed himself against any thought of abolishing automatic cost of living adjustments.

MISSING PERSONS MEETING SET FOR 20 NOVEMBER

TA161741 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in Turkish to Cyprus 1530 GMT 16 Nov 81

[Text] The Foreign Ministry spokesman has said that the Turkish Cypriot side was ready to participate into the meeting of the missing persons committee scheduled for 20 November. The spokesman was commenting on Greek Cypriot comments following the announcement by the UN spokesman to the effect that the missing persons committee meeting would be held on 22 November.

The spokesman continued: Statements by the Greek Cypriot side on the forthcoming committee meeting gives the impression that efforts are being made to link its participation to certain preconditions. Our stand on this issue is clear. We are ready to participate in the meeting, but we do not approve Greek Cypriot efforts to create preconditions.

ROMANIAN DELEGATION SIGNS ECONOMIC AGREEMENT

NC162028 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1730 GMT 16 Nov 81

[Text] Cyprus and Romania today signed an agreement on avoiding double taxation. Finance Minister Avxendiou signed on behalf of the Republic of Cyprus and State Secretary for Foreign Affairs Duma signed for Romania.

In a statement, Avxendiou said that the Romanian people are among Cyprus' best friends. He also expressed appreciation for the conscientious support Romania has given in the political field. Referring to the agreement signed, he said that it will contribute to a further expansion of economic cooperation between the two countries and will also facilitate implementation of other agreements signed in other fields.

Duma expressed happiness that he is visiting Cyprus and added that the signing of the agreement will further strengthen the good relations between his country and Cyprus. Our bilateral relations, he said, are developing steadily and have become closer, particularly since the talks between President Kiprianou and President Ceausescu in Romania.

At the Foreign Ministry today, Cyprus and Romania signed a program for cultural exchanges for the 1982-1983 period. It provides, among other things, for mutual participation in congresses and exchanges of experts, artists, scientists, newsmen and musical ensembles. On behalf of Cyprus, the program was signed by Director General of the Foreign Ministry Pelagias, and on behalf of Romania, by the general director of European affairs, Ambassador (?Neagu). After the signing, statements were made. Pelagias recalled that Romania was the first to courageously condemn the act of violence in 1974 and expressed gratitude for the position Romania has assumed at the current phase of the Cyprus issue.

Romanian State Secretary for Foreign Affairs Duma, who was present at the signing of the agreement, stated that Romania and Cyprus are devoted to the principles of nonintervention and respect of equality and territorial integrity of states. He emphasized that the agreement on cultural exchanges will contribute to the further strengthening of friendship between the peoples of the two countries. Duma is due to depart from Cyprus tomorrow.

This afternoon, Duma was received by the chairman of the House of Representatives, Ladhas. During their meeting, Duma invited the chairman to visit Romania on behalf of Romanian Grand National Assembly Chairman Giosan.

Duma expressed his satisfaction over the good relations between the two parliaments and the firm belief in their further development.

Answering, Ladhas expressed his gratitude for Romanian support to Cyprus and satisfaction over the visit of the Romanian Grand National Assembly chairman to Cyprus early next year. Views were also expressed on the Cyprus issue and other international issues during the meeting.

Foreign Minister Rolandhis also conferred with Duma today. They discussed the latest developments in the Cyprus issue and bilateral relations. The meeting was attended by the director general of the Foreign Ministry, Pelagias, and the Romanian charges d'affairs in Cyprus, (Alexie).

AKEL PROTESTS, UK DENIES U.S. USE OF BASES

NC150756 Nicosia CYPRUS MAIL in English 15 Nov 81 p 1

[Text] "There is absolutely no truth", a spokesman for the British sovereign bases in Cyprus said yesterday when asked to comment on press reports that the British bases are being used by the Americans in the "Bright Star 82" exercises in Egypt. The report was quoted in the AKEL party's KHARAVYI yesterday which said that according to the Athens communist paper RIZOSPASTIS, two American regiments "stationed in the British bases in Cyprus" are taking part in the exercises. It said that the troops were taken to Egypt with Hercules transport aircraft, which also carried large quantities of equipment, and that the Cretan bases in Greece were also used.

Prompted by these reports, the AKEL leader, Mr Ezekias Papaioannou, sent a message of protest to the UN secretary general saying that the AKEL Central Committee "strongly protests against use of Cyprus territory as transit point and springboard for aggressive American military manoeuvres 'Bright Star 82'." The Cypriot people, said the message, demand withdrawal of all foreign troops and military bases on Cyprus.

KHARAVYI CRITICIZES U.S. USE OF UK BASES

NC170814 Nicosia KHARAVYI in Greek 17 Nov 81 p 3

[From the "Views and Comments" column: "Deadly Threat to Cyprus"]

[Text] The protest by the AKEL secretary general against the use of the British bases in Cyprus as a springboard for U.S. troops taking part in the Bright Star 82 exercises conveys the feelings of indignation and concern of our people over the illegal and provocative U.S. activities on Cypriot territory and in our region. The Bright Star exercises -- the biggest and most spectacular exercises ever held in the Middle East since World War II -- aim at expanding the presence of the U.S. military in our region and at intimidating progressive countries and national liberation movements. Moreover, they are considered a general rehearsal for a military intervention in Libya. The PLO, Syria, Libya, Ethiopia and the People's Republic of Yemen have condemned these exercises as an aggressive action against them. The last three countries are meeting in Addis Ababa to consider measures to confront this threat.

It is indeed unacceptable that Cyprus is being used illegally and contrary to its people's will as a point of support for an aggressive action against friendly countries. We are irreparably exposed in the eyes of our friends who have been consistently supporting our independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity when, even against our will, Cyprus is being used by the United States in order to threaten our independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity. The fact that U.S. airborne troops are stationed at the British bases and are participating in the exercises implies that Washington considers Cyprus as a point of support for its interventions in our neighboring countries.

As is well known, Thatcher has given the Reagan administration clear assurances to this effect.

It is obvious that the stationing of U.S. airborne troops on our territory strikes at Cyprus' most vital interests and entails deadly dangers for our security. The American U-2 planes were permitted to be stationed at the British bases in order to monitor the cease-fire in the Sinai. Now there is no need for such a thing and they must leave. The use of the bases by the Americans for spying and aggressive activities is illegal and contrary to the treaties. The government has a duty toward the people and our friends to demand the termination of imperialist immunity and the immediate withdrawal of U.S. aircraft and troops from Cyprus.

AKEL VIEW ON NATIONAL ISSUES, MONITORING STATIONS

NC170856 Nicosia KHARAVYI in Greek 17 Nov 81 pp 1, 7

[Excerpts] AKEL and the National Council have properly approached the question of Waldheim's evaluation, and this position not only keeps the Cyprus problem within the framework of the UN resolutions, keeping it internationalized, but it also allows us, in the event of a fresh deadlock, to appeal to the UN General Assembly and to secure more active UN support.

This sound position of the party of the Cypriot working class and of the National Council was explained by the AKEL secretary general yesterday during the opening of the new AKEL building in Paphos. E. Papaioannou made a brief reference to the phases of the Cyprus problem during the last 30 years; to Makarios' ability to display realism in order to face, as few as possible, any painful consequences from the new situation that was created at every concrete stage. He said that we would be in a better and stronger position to effectively wage an antiimperialism struggle from the moment we completely isolate imperialism and arrive at an agreement with the Turkish Cypriots to solve the internal aspect of the Cyprus problem.

E. Papaioannou declared that AKEL is firmly devoted to the UN resolutions and the summit agreements, to the struggle against occupation and imperialism, and called on all political quarters and the people to learn from the experience of the last 30 years of the Cypriot struggle.

Papaioannou also stressed: Our struggle is antioccupation, antiimperialist, and for the removal of the Turkish and of all the other foreign troops from our territory; for the abolition of the British bases and of the U.S. monitoring spy stations; for the voluntary return of the refugees to their homes and their property under conditions of security, as provided for by the pertinent UN resolutions; for the tracing of missing persons, and for the solution of the Cyprus problem by the Cypriots themselves -- Greeks and Turks alike -- within the framework of the UN resolutions and the summit agreements; and for the solution of the external aspect of the problem at an international conference, within the UN framework, which will also discuss the agreements which Cyprus was forced to sign in 1960 as an indispensable condition for its declaration as an independent state. We want the complete abolition of these agreements and their replacement by UN Security Council guarantees or by other reliable international guarantees. We demand the complete abolition of the British "sovereign bases" and of the U.S. monitoring stations and the demilitarization of Cyprus.

We will be in a much stronger position to effectively wage an antiimperialist struggle once we come to an agreement with the Turkish Cypriots on the solution of the internal aspects of the Cyprus problem. We would completely isolate imperialism and show the whole world that the Cyprus problem is not a dispute between Greek Cypriots and Turkish Cypriots, as the imperialist propaganda has been trying to describe it, but a really unbridgeable difference between the Cypriot people -- Greeks and Turks alike -- and imperialism.

AKEL is firmly devoted to the UN resolutions and the summit agreements. It is firmly devoted to the rejection of the faits accomplis of the invasion and the occupation. It is firmly devoted to the struggle against occupation and imperialism, so that the Turkish and all the foreign troops may leave Cyprus and our island be fully demilitarized.

We do not underestimate the assistance which the new Greek Government could give to Cyprus' liberation struggle. We believe that it could also assist in the struggle for further internationalization, as well as in the struggle for an international conference on the Cypriot problem. The greatest assistance which it could give us would be Greece's withdrawal from NATO and its integration in the nonaligned bloc, because the Cypriot people's sufferings come from NATO. The Turkish troops, which have been holding 40 percent of Cypriot territory are NATOite troops. Greece, by leaving NATO and then joining the nonaligned bloc, could offer considerable help both to itself and to Cyprus. Moreover, it could offer still more help to the cause of international peace. Thus, we are waiting, ready to applaud such actions by the new Greek Government.

UN ENVOY MEETS NORTH'S TALKS NEGOTIATOR

TA131550 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in Turkish to Cyprus 1530 GMT 13 Nov 81

[Text] The UN secretary general's special representative in Cyprus, Hugo Gobbi, has said that the intercommunal talks might be resumed next Wednesday. Gobbi met with the Turkish Cypriot interlocutor to the communal talks, Umit Onan, today. Necati Munir Ertekun and Rustem Tatar, advisers to Onan, were also present at the meeting. In a statement after the meeting, Gobbi said that he is continuing his contacts regarding the date for the resumption of the talks and that the talks might be resumed on Wednesday. Onan said that the meeting dealt with the Cyprus problem in general. Noting that they have not yet received official information on the Greek Cypriot stand regarding UN Secretary General Waldheim's views, Onan added that the issue will be taken up at the negotiating table. Onan concluded by saying that the resumption date and agenda of the talks will probably be determined following Gobbi's contacts at the beginning of next week.

Talks Schedule Confirmed

TA161617 (Clandestine) Bayrak Radio in Turkish to Cyprus 1530 GMT 16 Nov 81

[Text] It has been announced that the intercommunal talks will resume on Wednesday, 18 November. A UN communique issued in Lefkosa [Nicosia] today says that the next meeting will take place at the Ledra Palace Hotel at 1700. In this connection, UN Special Representative in Cyprus Hugo Gobbi met today with Turkish Cypriot negotiator Umit Onan. In reply to questions by reporters after his meeting, Gobbi confirmed that the intercommunal talks would resume on Wednesday and added that UN secretary general's ideas on the solution of the Cyprus issue would be officially brought up for discussions. Replying to a question on whether the Greek Cypriot side had any objections to this development, Gobbi replied that there were no problems.

In a statement to the correspondents, Onan said that though the Turkish side had its own counterproposals, the Waldheim ideas were of a nature to constitute the basis for talks.

U.S. USES BASES FOR 'BRIGHT STAR' EXERCISE

NC132018 Athens RIZOSPASTIS in Greek 13 Nov 81 p 1

[Text] The U.S. bases in Crete and Cyprus [as published] are being used as primary support areas for the large provocative "Bright Star" exercise that begins tomorrow in Egypt, Sudan, Somalia and Oman.

According to information, four auxiliary vessels of the U.S. fleet were refueled at Soudha base. Afterward, they set sail for the seas off Gavdhos as well as to the larger region of the Libyan sea, near Libya's territorial waters, where the 6th Fleet will hold exercises.

The two U.S. paratrooper units stationed at the British bases in Cyprus will participate in the "Bright Star" exercises. They have already been transported to Egypt aboard huge "Hercules" transport planes. A great quantity of war materiel was also transported from Cyprus to Egypt aboard these aircraft.

The area between Crete and Gavdhos was used as a gathering and staging point for the 6th Fleet units that will sail to Libyan waters. As is known, the large U.S. exercise that begins tomorrow -- the largest and most spectacular in the Middle East area since World War II -- is aimed at frightening the progressive countries of the area (Libya, Syria, Egypt and the PDRY). Reliable observers do not rule out that this exercise constitutes -- beyond exhibiting U.S. power -- a "dress rehearsal" for a possible invasion of Libya.

It is not known whether or not the Americans have informed the responsible Greek authorities that they are using their bases and Greek airspace and seas in order to carry out the frightful anti-Arab "Bright Star" exercise. However, irrespective of whether the pertinent "briefing" was made, the implementation of this exercise using Greek territory reveals that our country might get involved, despite and against its interests, in the U.S. imperialists' adventurous anti-Arab actions. This danger, as political observers are very justifiably pointing out, will threaten our country as long as the aggressive U.S. military bases are in our territory.

CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES HOLDS SWEARING-IN CEREMONY

NC161135 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1100 GMT 16 Nov 81

[Text] At 1100 today, the official ceremony was held on the opening of the first meeting of the third parliamentary session of the presidential republic. At the beginning of the meeting, acting President Lavrendidhis read the presidential decree on the dissolution of the previous Chamber of Deputies and the proclamation of elections. He also read the names of the members of the Council of Ministers and the decree on their appointment.

Then Prime Minister Papandreou read the decree on the convocation of the Chamber of Deputies. Prayers by Archbishop Serafim then followed, with members of the holy synod co-officiating. The swearing-in of the deputies was then held.

The ceremonial opening meeting of the Chamber of Deputies was attended by senior judicial and state officials, the leaders of the armed forces and security corps, headed by General Gratsios, chief of the National Defense General Staff, members of the diplomatic corps, representatives of foreign religious groups, and other officials.

The Chamber of Deputies then adjourned until 1800 tomorrow when voting will be held for the election of president, a position for which PASOK has nominated Mr Yiannis Alevras.

TURKMEN DEPARTS FOR COUNCIL OF EUROPE MEETING

TA161649 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 16 Nov 81

[Text] Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen departed Ankara for Strasbourg today to participate in the Council of Europe Ministerial Committee meeting to be held on Thursday. In a statement at Esenboga airport, Turkmen said that cooperation in Europe, East-West relations, the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe and relations with the United Nations were among the topics to be discussed at the meeting.

Pointing out that a meeting would be also held in a bid to coordinate the work between the Ministerial Council and the Consultative Assembly of the Council of Europe, Turkmen said that he would brief the participants in this meeting on latest developments in Turkey. He added that on this occasion he would meet with foreign ministers of other European countries for talks. Turkmen said that the issue of Turkey's membership to the council would not be taken up in the Ministerial Committee meetings.

STATE MINISTER OZDAS RETURNS FROM PAKISTAN

TA162052 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 2000 GMT 16 Nov 81

[Text] State Minister Mehmet Nimet Ozdas returned home today from Pakistan after participating in the meetings of the Turkish-Pakistani joint economic committee. In a statement at Istanbul's Yesilkoy Airport, Ozdas said that as a result of the meetings, two separate cooperation agreements were signed between Turkey and Pakistan in the fields of economy, science and technology. Ozdas added that the agreements also envisaged the extension of the trade volume between the two countries as well as coordination in various industrial fields.

MILLIYET COMMENTS ON RELATIONS WITH GREECE

NC161128 Istanbul MILLIYET in Turkish 11 Nov 81 p 9

["They and We" column by Mehmet Ali Birand: "Messages Full of Olive Branches"]

[Excerpts] Ever since Papandreou assumed power in Greece, a new concept has found its way into our diplomatic language: "The olive branch." On 30 October, Papandreou invited the Turkish ambassador to his office and sent the first olive branch to Ankara, telling him that "he would expect a response from Ankara." So, in response, Prime Minister Ulusu too has sent him "an olive branch."

After receiving the Turkish ambassador, who brought him the olive branch, Papandreou told the Greek press that he had acknowledged "the olive branch." To tell you the truth, I became a little inquisitive as to what lay behind this exchange of olive branches. As one who has been watching the Turkish-Greek dialogue over the years, I have observed that this "exchange of olive branches" eventually turned into "an exchange of cudgels."

I was really astonished to see that Papandreou, who never missed an opportunity after winning the elections to repeat what a dreadful danger Turkey is, had suddenly turned into an angel of peace sending green olive branches. Having investigated the matter a little, I have discovered that both sides have been sending each other cudgels decorated with green leaves.

The first message Papandreou sent to Turkey was no different from those which all former Greek Governments had been sending: "Athens wished to resolve its dispute with Turkey in an atmosphere of peace and through negotiations. To achieve this, methods different from those hitherto attempted should be tried. Papandreou would study all the dossiers and would seek ways and means of improving relations peacefully. A well-prepared summit conference could be held." At this first meeting, Ambassador Alacam expressed "hope that what the Greek prime minister had said could also be put into practice."

At this first meeting with the Turkish ambassador, Papandreou kept suggesting that methods not attempted in the past should be tried, but he failed to put forward an adequately concrete proposal himself. Hadn't all methods been tried in the past? Hadn't secret preparations led to foreign ministers' meetings and even to summit conferences, plus foreign ministers' meetings after every NATO, Council of Europe and United Nations meeting to be followed by efforts by the prime ministers, through successive summit meetings, in search of a solution? Every method, every system has been tried, the outcome being that not a single concrete step could be taken either in the Aegean or in any other dispute. When the Turkish message sent in reply to Papandreou's olive branch reached Athens, it was understood that its contents were closer to realities. "The Greek prime minister talks of a peaceful rapprochement, but he never refrains from complaining about Turkey to every journalist he encounters. What sort of peaceful rapprochement is this? Turkey is ready for the solution of the disputes through negotiations. The two foreign minsiters can prepare a summit conference."

In the same message, Turkey informed Papandreou about how it views bilateral issues, and dwelt on the methods employed and on the distance covered so far (to be more specific, on the distance not covered so far!) Now we shall have to wait for the meeting of Foreign Minister Turkmen and his Greek counterpart and for the Ulusu-Papandreou summit talks which will follow. Will anything positive come our of these contacts? Definitely no....

Apparently, Papandreou is pursuing a bilateral approach which he considers useful from his policy point of view. On the one hand, he continually accuses Turkey in the international press and stresses the great danger which Turkey poses for the Hellenic race; while on the other hand he proposes peaceful approaches to Turkey through undisclosed secret messages. In fact, the Greek prime minister should explain the reasons for all the statements he has made since the elections before sitting at the negotiating table. If he refuses to do so and if he fails to expose his true intentions, then Turkey will have to do so. The place where Turkey will make such a disclosure is NATO.

Another person whom Turkey has a right to ask certain questions is General Rogers, commander of the European forces of NATO. Was it not General Rogers who pressed Ankara to accept a provisional agreement concerning the issues of the Aegean control command, by providing personal assurances -- naturally with Washington's support? Isn't it thus that he managed to secure Greece's reintegration into the military wing of NATO? However, although a whole year has elapsed, no development whatsoever has been achieved over the Aegean control command. So much so that although Greece had agreed with Rogers that it would keep its airspace at 6 miles during the NATO exercises, it went back on its word later. Greece is still saying that the Aegean is completely under its control and command. What is more, Papandreou is saying that he is going to ask Parliament to nullify the Rogers agreement. Most probably Turkey will ask General Rogers a few questions at the NATO military committee meetings in December.

It seems that the best judgment passed on the Turkish-Greek relations was that of a former Turkish prime minister who said this when I asked him when he thought the Turkish-Greek relations will return to normalcy: "As long as we are not economically powerful, we cannot resolve our differences with Greece. We talk abundantly, but can achieve nothing." Particularly today let us not expect any settlement at all.... We must not allow ourselves to be duped through mutual exchanges of olive branches.

CONSULTATIVE ASSEMBLY TO APPROVE 23 DEATH SENTENCES

TA161458 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1445 GMT 16 Nov 81

[Text] Ankara, 16 Nov (AA) -- The National Security Council handed down today 23 death cases passed by high military courts to the Consultative Assembly for final review.

Mehmet Ali Agca, the pope's would-be assailant, is among the 23 whose death sentences will be reviewed by the Consultative Assembly for approval. Meanwhile, the first bill on amendments on Turkish legal system was introduced to the Consultative Assembly by Kazim Ozturk and nine other assembly members. The bill demands the formation of a body to review and revise the whole legal system in Turkey.

VOTCP COMMENTARY LOOKS AT KURDISH PROBLEM

TA151040 (Clandestine) Voice of Turkish Communist Party in Turkish to Europe and Turkey 0600 GMT 15 Nov 81

[Station commentary: "On the Kurdish Problem"]

[Text] The pressure on the Kurdish people and progressives is an important indicator of the antidemocratic structure of Turkey. The ruling bourgeoisie has always ignored the Kurdish reality and attempted to destroy the Kurdish people's smallest democratic demand through pressure. During the early years of the Turkish republic, the pressure and terror by the bourgeoisie turned toward annihilation. The separatist and provocative policy of the imperialists in the region is not sufficient to cover this reality.

The head of the junta, Evren, is referring to citizens who do not speak Turkish. The Diyarbakir martial law courts are employing translators for suspects who do not speak Turkish. Furthermore, the generals of the junta are talking about the danger of secession. Our people are now awaiting the answers to the following questions: Who are the citizens who do not speak Turkish? What language do the suspects, who are being tried through translators speak? In other words, why has no one so far demanded freedom on Turkish soil for Germans, Americans or French, and only demanded freedom for the Kurdish people? If there are no Kurds, then what is the purpose of so much flurry, pressure and massacre?

The leaders of the junta and the reactionary force are unable to answer these questions. As in the past, these forces continue to keep the truth from our people and sow seeds of enmity between the Turkish and Kurdish peoples. Where its own class differences are concerned, the bourgeoisie has never respected the rights of nations. On the contrary, in such situations, the bourgeoisie acting with fierce chauvinism incites national differences, attempts to transform them into hostility and intensifies the pressure and terror against those who demand national rights. This is what the ruling bourgeoisie is doing now.

Even as they do not fully approve of this policy by the sovereign forces, some forces that are in favor of democracy are choosing to remain silent in the face of the pressure and terror applied on the Kurdish people and democratic forces. These forces assess the Kurdish problem as a purely regional backwardness. They disregard the national democratic rights of the Kurdish people and are blind to the fact that the brotherly coexistence of the Turkish and Kurdish peoples should be realized through the free will of the two peoples. They are influenced by the chauvinistic propaganda waged by the reactionaries.

What is the truth? How does the Turkish Communist Party [TCP] approach this problem? Millions of Kurds are currently living in Turkey. This constitutes some 20 percent of Turkey's population. Moreover, the Kurds are one of the oldest and most established peoples in the region. The Kurdish people have been living together with the Turkish people for centuries. During the national liberation war, the Kurdish people fought against imperialism shoulder to shoulder with the Turkish people and shared the same destiny. Later, Turkish and Kurdish workers were organized in the same unions, the Turkish and Kurdish [word indistinct] studied in the same schools and faced the same problems. Today, both peoples are again faced with the pressure and terror of the military dictatorship. However, the Kurdish people have been deprived of their national democratic rights.

The Kurdish people are reacting to the chauvinistic policy of the ruling bourgeoisie. Their fury is directed against the ruling bourgeoisie and its pressure and terror, not against the Turkish people.

The massacres of 1925, 1930 and 1938 are still fresh in the memory of the Kurdish people. National oppression is not only limited to these incidents. During each crisis period, the ruling bourgeoisie has attacked the Kurdish people as well as the working class. The incident of the 49 in 1960, the incident of the 23 in 1963. The trials of the Revolutionary Eastern Cultural Hearths [DDKO] and the Kordestan Democratic Party [KDP] during the 12 March period and the current Revolutionary Democratic Cultural Association [DDKD], the Turkish Kordestan Socialist Party and the (?National) Liberators of Kordestan [KUK] are examples of this attack.

The pressure and terror applied by the reactionaries is spreading at the same rate as the democratic reaction of the Kurdish people. The Kurdish massacres following the national liberation war constitute the transformation of the national bourgeoisie's egoism and limitations into a fierce chauvinism. These past massacres are painful and dark pages in the history of the Turkish people, just as they are painful to the Kurdish people. The Turkish people condemn this fierce chauvinism and share the sufferings of the Kurdish people. The Turkish toilers reject the chauvinistic and oppressive policy pursued by the monopolistic bourgeoisie, which is allied with imperialism, in a bid to preserve class differences. They want to coexist with the Kurdish people fraternally and under equal conditions.

The TCP shares the feelings of our people. It advocates that the Kurdish nation must determine its own future through its own free will. Like all nations, the most natural rights of the Kurdish nation to become a state, govern itself, read and write in its own language and enjoy equal national rights with the Turkish nation must be recognized. This is its right. No nation can be deprived of these natural rights through pressure and tyranny. The ruling bourgeoisie, which is oppressing the Kurdish people, is also the enemy of the Turkish people.

What is the meaning of the Kurdish people determining their own future through their own free will and their right to separate? How can the Kurdish people attain their freedom under the existing concrete historical conditions in Turkey?

Dear listeners, it is necessary to regard the problem from the viewpoint of the proletariat's class interests and the real common interests of the Turkish and Kurdish peoples. Under current conditions, the TCP is in favor of solving the Kurdish problem on the basis of an autonomous republic. Such a voluntary union to be formed under the roof of a democratic state would be compatible with the class interests of the proletariat and increase the free development opportunities of the Turkish and Kurdish peoples.

As mentioned in the 1981 TCP Central Committee plenum, Kurds from every section of Kordestan must struggle against imperialism and internal reactionism alone with the proletariat of that country. This is tantamount to the fact that imperialism and internal reactionism is the enemy of the Turkish and Kurdish peoples. Therefore, the joint struggle of the two peoples for freedom against the joint enemy is the most correct solution. The coexistence of the Turkish and Kurdish people under the roof of a free and democratic state is possible.

There may be those who pose the following question: Would not the demand for an autonomous republic be tantamount to restricting the free will of the Kurdish people? Certain so-called leftist elements that are trying to attain their goals by exploiting the Kurdish problem are resorting to such demagoguery. However, currently, the failure to set a concrete goal is tantamount to remaining inactive in the face of the fierce chauvinistic attack by the reactionaries. The right to separate does not mean absolute separation. The right of nations to free self-determination comprises coexistence in the same way as it comprises separation.

The solution of the problem is determined by concrete historical conditions. The current concrete historical conditions and the proletariat's class interests demand the voluntary unity of the Turkish and Kurdish peoples. Only such a unity can secure the free development of the Kurdish people. The most suitable solution for a unity is an autonomous republic.

The right to separate is guaranteed through the constitution of the democratic state after the Kurdish problem is solved on the basis of an autonomus republic. This is the essence of a voluntary unity. The right to separate is not a (?framework) problem as understood by certain leftist elements. An autonomous republic does not contradict the right to separate. This is the taking shape of the Kurdish people's free self-determination in accordance with the concrete conditions. The establishment of a strong unity between the two peoples against imperialism and internal reactionism is the basic condition for the free self-determination of the Kurdish nation. This requires, above all, the unity of all Turkish and Kurdish workers. Every action aimed at dividing the working class weakens the struggle against the common enemy and damages the struggle of the Turkish and Kurdish peoples. The joint struggle of the two nations would be victorious only if it is joined to the struggle of the working class.

The second factor in securing the joint struggle of the two peoples consists of the anti-imperialist democratic Kurdish movement. The alliance between the working class and the democratic Kurdish movement is necessary. A Kurdish national movement that is not able to establish an alliance with the working class movement and the democratic forces cannot provide freedom for the Kurdish people.

The 1981 Central Committee pleunum of our party supplies the following answer to the problem: The alliance between communists and the anti-imperialist and democratic Kurdish national movement plays a basic role in securing the worker-peasant alliance. All party organizations are charged with the task of supporting the concrete and constructive demands of the Kurdish people for land and for education in their mother tongue, and their struggle against the intended backwardness of Kordestan and the pressures applied against the Kurdish people. They are also charged with the duty of enhancing the unity of action between communists and the anti-imperialist democratic national Kurdish movement and securing the alliance between these two movements. The TCP considers necessary the alliance of the anti-imperialist democratic national Kurdish movement with communists and other progressive forces on the national democratic front against the most reactionary forces.

The military junta is currently holding power in Turkey. The junta is applying pressure and terror. However, the pressure on and terror against the Kurdish people and progressives is even more intensified. The junta, which is pressuring and terrorizing the Kurdish people, is also the enemy of the Turkish people. The separatism demagogy conducted by the military dictatorship aims to divide the democratic forces and legitimize pressure and terror. Everyone who is in favor of democracy must oppose the oppression of the Kurdish people. The TCP and communists call on everyone opposed to the policy of the junta and favors democracy to be in solidarity with the Kurdish people and progressive forces. The TCP and communists are at the side of the Kurdish people and progressives against the chauvinistic and oppressive policy of the junta, which aims at dividing the Turkish and Kurdish peoples and disbanding the progressive forces.

DAILY REPORT

CONTENTS

Western Europe

Vol VII No 222 18 November 1981

AUSTRIA

Joint Communique on Poland's Czyrek Visit Issued [WIENER ZEITUNG 12 Nov] E 1
Chancellor Kreisky Criticizes Both Superpowers [DIE PRESSE 11 Nov] E 2
Kreisky, Pahr Meet Tunisia's Es-Sebsi [WIENER ZEITUNG 17 Nov] E 2

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Schmidt Briefs Cabinet, SPD on Reagan Statement J 1
FRG Cannot Be 'Broker' Between U.S., USSR J 1
Schmidt-Thatcher Summit Talks Begin in Bonn J 1
Apel Interviewed on Peace Movement, Arms Talks [FRANKFURTER RUNDSCHAU 17 Nov] J 2
Genscher, Eagleburger Meet, Discuss Arms Talks J 5
Offergeld Discusses Nicaraguan Aid, Human Rights J 5
Strauss, Suzuki Call For Closer Cooperation J 5
Soviet Trade Official Hints at Nuclear Cooperation J 6
TV Network Carries Poll on FRG-USSR Relations J 6
Briefs: Schmidt-Honecker Summit; GDR Tour; Libyan Approval Sought J 7

FRANCE

Mitterrand Meets With Djibouti President K 1
Cheysson Comments on Impact of Li Shuang Affair [LE MONDE 12 Nov] K 1
Cot: Vanuatu To Receive Economic, Education Aid K 2
Former Minister Denies Plan To Kill Al-Qadhdhafi K 2
PCF's Plissonnier on Congress Draft Resolution [L'HUMANITE 4 Nov] K 2
PCF Aide Cited on Presidential Poll, 24th Congress [L'HUMANITE 11 Nov] K 4
Cuban Aides Received at PCF Headquarters [L'HUMANITE 10 Nov] K 5
Marchais, Wheelock Meet, Discuss 'Tense' Situation [L'HUMANITE 14 Nov] K 6
Armenian Nationalists Give 'Last Warning' K 6
Soviet Envoy Gives Details of Brezhnev Message [LE FIGARO 14-15 Nov] K 6
SPD's Bahr 'Explains' FRG Peace Movement [LE MONDE 12 Nov] K 7
Paper Describes France-Taiwan Economic Links [LE FIGARO 10 Nov] K 7
FAN Again Denies Fighting in Eastern Chad K 8
LE FIGARO Comments on Mitterrand's Foreign Policy [13 Nov] K 9

ITALY & THE VATICAN

Naples Mayor, City Assessors Resign 17 Nov L 1
Socialists Organize Nationwide Peace Marches L 1
Pertini Receives South Korean Deputy Premier L 1
Berlinguer on Peace Moves, Economic Reform [L'UNITA 9 Nov] L 2

GREECE

Diplomat Stabbed To Death in Australia [Melbourne] S 1
Spokesman Answers PRAVDA on U.S. Bases Policy S 1
Chamber Elects PASOK Candidate President S 1
Papandreou Interviewed at Parliament Opening S 2
Addresses PASOK Parliamentary Group [ELEVTHEROTIPIA 17 Nov] S 2

TURKEY

Joint Economic Committee Meets in Libya T 1
Interior Minister Leaves To Visit Yugoslavia T 1
Court Gives Six Militants Death Sentence T 1
Briefs: Social Security Agreement T 1

JOINT COMMUNIQUE ON POLAND'S CZYREK VISIT ISSUED

AU131025 Vienna WIENER ZEITUNG in German 12 Nov 81 p 3

[Text] At the invitation of Dr Willibald Pahr, minister of foreign affairs of the Republic of Austria, Jozef Czyrek, foreign minister of the Polish People's Republic, paid an official visit to the Republic of Austria 9-11 November 1981. During this visit Foreign Minister Czyrek was received by Dr Bruno Kreisky, chancellor of the Republic of Austria. Moreover, a meeting took place with Dr Josef Staribacher, minister for commerce, trade and industry.

The foreign ministers exchanged opinions on current international questions. They expressed their determination to support to the best of their ability the continuation of the policy of detente and collaboration in Europe. They expressed the expectation that the Madrid meeting would lead to balanced specific results in all fields of the Helsinki Final Act. The convening of a conference on military aspects in Europe is of special importance. In this context they discussed the initiatives taken to date, including the Polish proposal to convene such a conference in Warsaw.

The two ministers were agreed that steps are necessary to improve the international situation and to mitigate the existing hotbeds of crisis. Both sides affirmed their loyalty to the UN statutes whose strict observance is an important instrument to preserve peace in the world and to strengthen security and international cooperation.

The two ministers welcomed the announcement of Soviet-American negotiations on medium-range nuclear missile systems in Europe, and expressed the hope that these negotiations would bring positive results soon. Austria and Poland support all endeavors to halt the arms race and to bring about a constant reduction of armed forces and arms with consideration to the balance of forces. The two ministers advocated an intensification of bilateral and multilateral collaboration among the states so as to achieve progress at the disarmamert talks, especially between the United States and the Soviet Union.

The two sides discussed the most important aspects of bilateral relations and noted with satisfaction that there are favorable prospects for their further development on the basis of good-neighborliness and the already high level of contacts. Both sides are determined to expand these relations in the spirit of the traditional Austrian-Polish friendship.

The two sides paid special attention to the current level and prospects for economic collaboration between the Republic of Austria and the Polish People's Republic. The Austrian side stressed the importance of Polish coal deliveries to Austria within the framework of the mutual commitments laid down in long-term agreements. The Polish side declared that the government of the Polish People's Republic will take every possible measure to overcome the current coal delivery difficulties as quickly as possible, and to avoid effects on the long-term opportunities for economic collaboration between the two countries.

Both sides declared that the state of cooperation in the fields of culture, education, science and technology gives cause for satisfaction, and they expressed their intention to further promote these relations. They stressed again the importance of the work of the joint experts commission on questions of textbook revisions.

The two ministers also discussed the situation of Polish citizens who are at present staying in Austria.

Both sides expressed their satisfaction with the visit, which was marked by a friendly atmosphere and contributed toward further developing the relations between the Republic of Austria and the Polish People's Republic.

Foreign Minister Czyrek invited Foreign Minister Pahr for an official visit to the Polish People's Republic. This invitation was gratefully accepted.

CHANCELLOR KREISKY CRITICIZES BOTH SUPERPOWERS

AU121710 Vienna DIE PRESSE in German 11 Nov 81 p 2

[Summary] In a Vienna press conference after the 10 November cabinet meeting, Chancellor Kreisky commented on the role of the two superpowers, FRG Chancellor Schmidt's difficult position at the forthcoming Brezhnev visit, and the need for Western aid to Poland. "The chancellor described the submarine affair off the Swedish coast as a 'gross disregard of neutrality,' and said that this must be made very clear to the 'gentlemen in Moscow' since they were in the habit of posing as honest advocates of peace, making peace propaganda all over the world. But the 'prattle of some American gentlemen' also showed that there is not enough caution and consideration. The Americans had better see to it that the distrust and feelings of insecurity of their allies be reduced. However, Kreisky did not believe that the nuclear threshold for using nuclear weapons was now lower. But the superpowers should at long last sit down at the conference table and negotiate. Peace policy 'in the world' must be made in such a way that 'he who reaches for the sword will perish by the sword,' Kreisky said."

Commenting on the forthcoming Schmidt-Brezhnev meeting, Kreisky said that "during the Brezhnev visit Schmidt would have to play a far more important part than those who spoke ever so well rhetorically at peace demonstrations." On Poland, Kreisky said that it was the task of Western democracies to help the Poles -- taking into consideration the new social forces -- to successfully conclude the new development. "He added that he did not propose any 'interventionism,' but one should help give Poland's population the impression that a little more freedom also leads to a little more prosperity."

KRIESKY, PAHR MEET TUNISIA'S ES-SEBSI

AU171134 Vienna WIENER ZEITUNG in German 17 Nov 81 p 3

[Summary] Tunisian Foreign Minister Beji Caid es-Sebsi, who arrived in Vienna on Sunday for an official visit and who will stay until Wednesday, had a working talk on Monday with Austrian Foreign Minister Willibald Pahr, and was received by Chancellor Bruno Kreisky in the afternoon. Since Austrian-Tunisian relations are friendly and marked by the absence of any problems, international questions were discussed on both occasions. Today Minister es-Sebsi will pay visits to parliament, the Vienna Islamic Center and the Vienna UN city, and on Wednesday he will visit the Spanish Riding School and the Vienna Art History Museum.

At their meeting on Monday, Pahr and Es-Sebsi signed an agreement on the road transportation of passengers and goods between the two countries with ferry transporation across the Mediterranean Sea. The agreement stipulates which trips are subject to permits, prohibits sabotage, and regulates the transfer of freight shipments proceeds to the partner country, as well as the mutual compliance with transportation and labor regulations. The agreement still requires ratification by the two parliaments before it can go into effect.

At a dinner he gave in honor of the Tunisian foreign minister last night, Pahr stressed that during the working talks there had been similar or identical views on all essential questions discussed. Regarding the Middle East question, Pahr expressed the hope that the Arab League summit conference would discuss the Fahd plan. "In his reply es-Sebsi described the situation in the Middle East as explosive. He drew attention to the fact that Austria was the first European state to recognize the PLO and stressed that Chancellor Kreisky had started his first factfinding mission with a talk with President Bourguiba. Regarding the trade relations between the two countries, Es-Sebsi said it was to be hoped that they would develop beyond the traditional framework of goods exchange to industrial cooperation."

SCHMIDT BRIEFS CABINET, SPD ON REAGAN STATEMENT

LD171550 Hamburg DPA in German 1443 GMT 17 Nov 81

[Excerpts] Bonn, 17 Nov (DPA) -- Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt has described U.S. President Ronald Reagan's statement, scheduled for Wednesday, on nuclear disarmament policy as an important decision. Schmidt briefed the federal cabinet and SPD leadership bodies in advance today in Bonn on the essential details of Reagan's statement and stressed in particular that the United States has adopted Bonn's goal of a mutual abandonment of medium-range nuclear weapons in East and West.

Schmidt said it is a success that the West has accepted the zero base solution in medium-range weapons as a negotiating target. This provides good conditions for his talks with Soviet state and party leader Leonid Brezhnev in Bonn next week.

The chancellor stressed that there are still 18 months left for U.S.-Soviet negotiations. He was referring in this respect to the NATO decision to deploy 572 U.S. medium-range weapons in West Europe by the end of 1983 if by then no satisfactory result has been achieved in negotiations with Moscow. If no agreement has been reached after 18 months, Schmidt said, then they will be deployed in West Europe. This certainty will spur negotiations and prospects for talks.

"The zero base solution is in the forefront as far as we are concerned," said Deputy SPD Chairman Hans-Juergen Wischnewski today, describing the outcome of the SPD leadership debate on security policy. At the same time, he drew attention to Brezhnev's statement that the Soviet Union is ready to reduce its nuclear missiles. Wischnewski: "We have cause to approach the impending negotiations with critical hope [kritische hoffnung]." The SPD supports the chancellor's call for a meeting between Reagan and Brezhnev and would welcome it if this meeting were to take place next year.

FRG CANNOT BE 'BROKER' BETWEEN U.S., USSR

LD171724 Hamburg DPA in German 1557 GMT 17 Nov 81

[Excerpt] Bonn, 17 Nov (DPA) -- Government Spokesman Becker told a press conference in Bonn today that the Federal Governent wishes to see the starting positions of the United States and USSR at the forthcoming U.S.-Soviet talks in Geneva moving closer to one another. Even so, the Federal Government cannot assume the position of a go-between or "broker" between Washington and Moscow during Brezhnev's visit. The Federal Government is not a bystander but a partner in the Western alliance. Bonn is also concerned lest the Geneva negotiations become deadlocked on secondary issues and that they should concentrate for a start on medium-range missiles and then seek to achieve results on other weapons gradually.

SCHMIDT-THATCHER SUMMIT TALKS BEGIN IN BONN

LD180858 Hamburg DPA in German 0836 GMT 18 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 18 Nov (DPA) -- One-day German-British summit talks began in Bonn this morning. Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt welcomed the British prime minister, Margaret Thatcher, who is accompanied by six members of her cabinet, in Bonn with military honors. Directly afterwards, the chancellor had an initial meeting with the prime minister. The main topics of the German-British government consultations are likely to be East-West relations, disarmament and EEC problems. There are currently new difficulties in the community about the planned agricultural reform and the question of contributions.

APEL INTERVIEWED ON PEACE MOVEMENT, ARMS TALKS

DW171131 Frankfurt FRANKFURTER RUNDSCHAU in German 17 Nov 81 p 7

[Editor Ulrich Mackensen interview with Defense Minister Hans Apel; place and date not given]

[Excerpts] FR [FRANKFURTER RUNSCHAU]: At the commanders meeting in Ingolstadt you urged the soldiers to actively take part in the peace movement. How is this supposed to happen?

Apel: My motives first: I do not see why only pensioned generals, some of them with debatable expertise, should take part in the current debates on security and the safeguarding of peace. The active soldiers must become involved. We must, however, inform some of them first about a number of facts as well as political assessments. We are doing it at present. And then the commanders may enter the debate under one condition, namely that they should be treated decently in the debate. Our soldiers are not to be treated like doormats in debates loaded with emotions.

FR: One could outline that a bit more concretely. Does entering the debate mean that they should represent the standpoint of the government, should they argue for NATO's dual decision, or should they deal with the youths more intensely?

Apel: I would advise them not to become too involved in what I call beer hall discussions of nuclear problems. The debate has long since assumed a basic ethical character -- and we welcome that -- with regard to such problems as, for example, whether we may safeguard peace with arms which would destroy, if used, civilization, culture and everything we live for. This is the kind of debate I would like to take place.

The soldiers can contribute something to this from their own approach to things. This debate does not mean that everything the minister says must be repeated in a streamlined way. Nuances must be visible. That is a danger for the debate. But the one who demands civil courage must protest also those who may possibly not argue the way we would prefer.

FR: A question in this connection involving you personally: You are an active Protestant. A most intense discussion is going on particularly in the Evangelical Church. What contribution can you make in this respect in the church?

Apel: I can make a contribution resulting from almost 4 years of my activity at Hardthoehe [Defense Ministry] and I can try to take seriously the concern of those who are afraid of an exchange of nuclear strikes in Europe: I can try to point out to them that our policy is not a policy of war preparation but of safeguarding peace. I would accept every debate, also a really controversial one under the prerequisite that it can take place. That is being systematically prevented in some places, not by church members but by others who penetrate such meetings.

FR: What do you think of the peace movement as a whole?

Apel: I think that "the" peace movement does not exist. Many different trends and motives flow together. It cannot be contested that communists are involved there....

FR: ...But the peace movement is not being financed by Moscow...

Apel: ...The communist part of the peace movement is certainly financed by the East, but these are just the ones who run along, not the ones who create the activity of the peace movement.

FR: Could it not be useful for you in your function as defense minister, as a Social Democratic politician and an active Protestant to consider giving a signal to the peace movement by giving up the Defense Ministry's chairmanship in commissions of conscientious objectors?

Apel: I am prepared at any time to accept every organizational change of examination procedures. I welcomed it very much that we were facing a change shortly before the last Bundestag elections according to which the whole competence was to be shifted to another field.

I would very much welcome it because we could then evade the unjustified suspicion of trying to bring influence to bear on this matter. That is not the case at all. But as matters look now, one cannot expect any organizational or other changes to take place in the near future.

FR: You warned the soldiers not to become involved in beer hall discussions of nuclear problems when they take part in peace movement or peace discussions. One is under the impression at the same time, however, that the beer hall discussions of nuclear problems have been influenced by statements of American politicians, contradictory statements of American poliicians. What is your opinion with regard to these contradictions? Is it not more and more difficult for a federal minister to recognize a clear position?

Apel: The clear position results from what we have agreed on and are agreeing on in NATO, in so far as no doubts exist about the clear position of the United States. But who would deny it that statements coming from the United States, often to contradictory statements, certainly complicate the debate here in Europe. One must add on the other hand that some people wait almost greedily for every statement coming from America to use it as evidence for their own arguments. Yet I wish that America would formulate a much stronger idea than it has so far with regard to what the thinking in Europe is and what Europe can expect regarding the positions of its American ally. We should not, however, counter unfortunate remarks by unfortunate remarks of our own about U.S. policy and U.S. politicians, because verbal radicalism of this kind can only be detrimental to a rational policy.

FR: Let us refer to a concrete point, the latest statement by U.S. President Reagan that in his view a nuclear war can be limited.

President Reagan that in his view a nuclear war can be limited.

Apel: I can see this statement only as being misunderstood. NATO's strategy consists in leaving our potential enemy totally in the dark about the nature of our challenged military response. The more you allow yourself to get involved in debates the more you endanger the NATO strategy, and this not only because of the public debate which is bound to follow but because an idea of war suddenly becomes calculable for the Soviet Union.

That must not happen. I think we must discuss in the NATO bodies once again what NATO's strategy is, what can and what can't be discussed in public. Then I can only hope that this sort of public statement belongs to the past.

FR: A group of NATO specialists for some time has been working on preparations for the Soviet-U.S. talks on a limitation of the medium-range potential. What chances do these talks have in the foreseeable future? SALT (Strategic Arms Limitation Talks) always took a very, very long time.

Apel: The more comprehensive the package is the more complicated the negotiations and the more difficult also the zero option. If all existing medium-range nuclear capabilities are included, aircraft, sea-based systems...

FR: ...the forward based systems...

Apel: ...the forward based systems as well as the SS-20's and the cruise missiles and the Pershing missiles which are not yet produced, then we will have negotiations which are found to assume a SALT-like nature because in such negotiations only the intercontinental missiles, the land-based missiles are excluded.

I think, in the interest of rapid progress we must concentrate on a few systems and achieve results here with the goal of rendering a zero solution possible.

However, we must promise the Soviet Union that these negotiations will immediately be followed by everything that is also in the Soviet interest, namely, the air-launched as well as sea-based and thus also the intercontinental nuclear weapons. It means, this process of negotiations on medium-range missiles must be limited and then pass into SALT follow-up negotiations. Then we will also have time enough to achieve a zero solution. Those who are wasting time here or make negotiation packages too comprehensive also signal that the chances of success will become smaller in the foreseeable future.

FR: Another subject: There are considerations, not in the SPD but in the FDP, to abandon -- in the course of constantly decreasing means for national defense -- the principle of the present brigades (immediately ready for action) and thus also to call into question the principle of forward defense. FDP Secretary-General Verheugen made a statement recently on this. Do you consider forward defense which includes the presence of troops, meaning, with the focus being on the army, as being the proper means also in the foreseeable future?

Apel: We will have a personnel shortage. The measures we are discussing at present will not be able to fully eliminate the personnel shortage. Therefore we must concentrate on the essential things. It would be very unwise to make changes in a field where we show our forward defense with 36 present brigades and corresponding airforce and naval units. I expect the longterm commission working at Hardthoehe to submit other proposals.

We have in the Bundeswehr many posts, many staffs and a bureaucracy which does have its value but which can certainly be streamlined. It means, as an answer to the personnel shortage: cadres, no, but a reduction of staffs and posts, yes. This means that it is here that we must start restructuring stepwise, not with the combat units.

FR: You indicated at the commanders' meeting in Ingolstadt that the current and relatively rigid distribution system of funds will be handled more flexibly in the future. Does that indicate that focal points will be set differently also in the Federal Republic?

Apel: They must be set differently. I must point out, however, that the next years will be characterized by the fact that we must introduce the arms systems I have not ordered but I have to pay for. Only thereafter will we be able to set new focal points, and the trends of the past regarding the distribution of personnel and financial means cannot be continued. That is the reason why the role of the inspector general must be strengthened because he, as the highest-ranking military adviser of the Federal Government, is in the best position to make suggestions going beyond the justified interests of the military branches to shift the emphasis.

FR: Do you think that this development could be a first step in the direction of a factual division of labor in the alliance?

Apel: I wish that such a consideration could take place in the alliance. The first considerations, however, are not very encouraging. The alliance partners I talked to bilaterally naturally want to get rid of expensive tasks or those where respective considerations are being strongly disputed in public debates. In other words, we ought to hold this debate in the alliance, but it cannot be expected that concrete results can be achieved so quickly that new signs will be set in a foreseeable future for the inner structure of the Bundeswehr.

FR: Would that have an effect on possibly planned multinational armament and procurement plans?

Apel: If this were achieved, it would have effects. But aside from this we must intensify armament cooperation with our European neighbors and also with the Americans.

FR: But in the form of a two-way street. Was not the cancellation of Roland (antiaircraft tank a setback?

Apel: It was a setback. And it will have side effects because naturally we expected the Americans to take over this arms system. I expect my American colleague to take notice of our budget problems and take them seriously as I take notice and take seriously his problems and his answers.

GENSCHER, EAGLEBURGER MEET, DISCUSS ARMS TALKS

LD171730 Hamburg DPA in German 1619 GMT 17 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 17 Nov (DPA) -- Federal Foreign Minister Genscher met in Bonn today with U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Lawerence Eagleburger, for a detailed exchange of views. According to Government Spokesman Becker, Eagleburger wanted to inform the Federal Government about Washington's position concerning the U.S.-Soviet talks on medium-range missiles due to begin in Geneva on 30 November. In addition, Eagleburger explained the U.S. attitude toward the forthcoming visit to Bonn by the Soviet head of state and party, Brezhnev. Eagleburger, who had come from Brussels, has been appointed by his government as coordinater of German-U.S. relations. The Federal Government intends to appoint a similar coordinator within the foreseeable future.

OFFERGELD DISCUSSES NICARAGUAN AID, HUMAN RIGHTS

LD171800 Hamburg DPA in German 1719 GMT 17 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 17 Nov (DPA) — The Federal Government is concerned about the political developments in Nicaragua. This applied especially to the preservation of elementary human rights, the federal minister of economic cooperation, Rainer Offergeld, said in a talk with a delegation of the Sandinist revolutionary government of Nicaragua in Bonn today.

According to his ministry, Offergeld made it clear that without visible signs of a change in Nicaragua further aid by the Federal Government was difficult to imagine. Since the Sandinist revolution in 1979 Bonn has made available about DM110 million for Nicaragua's economic and social development. The delegation, which is headed by the minister of agrarian reform, Jaime Wheelock, arrived in the Federal Republic yesterday for a 1-week visit at the invitation of the Friedrich Naumann Foundation, which is close to the FDP.

STRAUSS, SUZUKI CALL FOR CLOSER COOPERATION

LD171136 Hamburg DPA in German 1033 GMT 17 Nov 81

[Excerpt] Tokyo, 17 Nov (DPA) -- Japanese head of government Zenko Suzuki and Bavarian Minister-President Franz-Josef Strauss have called for closer cooperation between Japan and the Federal Republic. They laid special emphasis in this respect on the two countries joint responsibility toward a functioning world economy and free trade.

During an exchange of views in Tokyo, which covered the forthcoming visit to Bonn by Brezhnev as well as China's role in securing world peace, the two politicians expressed their hope that the first meeting of deputies from the two German union parties and the Japanese governing Liberal-Democratic Party (LDP) would establish a "new tradition" and lead to intensified contacts between the two countries' political groups.

Manfred Woerner, deputy chairman of the CDU Bundestag group, who also attended the 2-day conference of parliamentarians, expressly spoke in favor of including security policy in future German-Japanese cooperation. At a press conference following the meeting, the union group's Bundestag defense expert said both countries were faced with the "Soviet Union's expansive claim for power" which extends above all to the regions of the world rich in raw materials on which both the Federal Republic's and Japan's well-being depends.

"There is no substitute for the solidarity of the Free World," said Woerner and added that Bonn and Tokyo should, "within the framework of a comprehensive Western strategy," also coordinate their security policy to a greater extent than previously. In the same way, Strauss had on the previous day, called on Japan in his speech opening the parliamentarians' meeting to assume the role of an "order-keeping power" in the Asian-Pacific region.

During his meeting with Suzuki, which lasted 1 hour -- twice as long as orginally planned -- Strauss met with similar views on policy with regard to China, according to his spokesman. Suzuki stressed that support for China's modernization plans for Japan and other Western nations is helping the country toward stability and thus constitutes a contribution to safeguarding peace "not only in Asia."

Suzuki described present Japanese-Chinese relations as "the best for 2,000 years." Strauss will visit China on Wednesday where he is to meet leading politicians.

According to Strauss's spokesman, the Japanese head of government and the other members of the cabinet, whom the Bavarian minister-president met today, expressed great interest in the forthcoming visit to Bonn by Soviet state and party leader Leonid Brezhnev. Strauss again drew attention to the defense gap in West Europe. He stressed that the West German opposition believes it would only be possible for NATO to forego its nuclear counterarming if Moscow reduces its arms lead in the field of medium-range weapons.

Bilateral trade problems, which Strauss discussed today with the leaders of Japan's largest industrial association, also played a major role at the parliamentarians's meeting. At the ensuing press conference, both sides agree that protectionist trends in the EEC could be combatted most effectively if Japan opens up its market for European products to a greater extent.

SOVIET TRADE OFFICIAL HINTS AT NUCLEAR COOPERATION

LD171902 Hamburg DPA in German 1732 GMT 17 Nov 81

[Text] Duesseldorf, 17 Nov (DPA) -- Possibilities of German-Soviet cooperation in the field of nuclear energy have been hinted at by the head of the Soviet trade mission in the Federal Republic, Dmitriy Kozmin, in connection with the forthcoming visit to Bonn by the Soviet head of state and party, Leonid Brezhnev. In an interview with WIRTSCHAFTSWOTCHE, Kozmin said that it might be possible to jointly build power stations in the nuclear energy sector or to order the necessary equipment from the Federal Republic.

Kozmin enumerated a number of projects which in the Soviet view have possibilities for German participation. Apart from several projects which have already been mentioned in the past, such as opening the coal reserves in the Kansk-Achinsk basin and the liquefaction of coal, other projects include "a number of chemical plants" and projects "concerning ferry traffic between our Baltic ports and the North Sea ports of the Federal Republic." Kozmin also thought that cooperation in third countries was "capable of development."

Indirectly criticizing German export promotion, Kozmin said that medium-sized firms in the Federal Republic could have a larger share in deliveries to the USSR "if in their export transactions they could offer their partners credit conditions camparable to those of their competitors."

The interview has been prereleased to DPA in an edited version.

TV NETWORK CARRIES POLL ON FRG-USSR RELATIONS

DW161309 [Editorial Report] Mainz ZDF Television Network in German at 1810 GMT on 15 November carries the results of a ZDF opinion poll on FRG-USSR relations conducted in October 1981. The number of people polled is not given. The following are the questions and the corresponding responses.

1. How are relations between the FRG and the Soviet Union? Good 46 percent, bad 54 percent.

2. What direction should relations with the USSR have in the future? Should be developed 56 percent, should be rather curtailed 16 percent, should stay as they are at the moment 29 percent.

3. In times of political crisis, is the Soviet Union a reliable business partner or not? Reliable 32 percent, unreliable 65 percent.

BRIEFS

SCHMIDT-HONECKER SUMMIT -- Bonn, 17 Nov (DPA) -- Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt considers it possible that his meeting with GDR State Council Chairman and SED leader Erich Honecker, which has been postponed since 1980, may take place "by about Easter" (April 1982). This was stated by the chancellor in Bonn today at a meeting of leading SPD bodies. His readiness to visit the GDR makes it clear that the Federal Republic intends to pursue the policy of dialogue and detente with full vigour and not merely to keep it alive. The last time a date was mentioned in Bonn for a Schmidt-Honecker meeting it was given as the end of January 1982. However, observers were expecting a further postponement. [Text] [Hamburg DPA in German 1618 GMT 17 Nov 81 LD]

GDR TOUR -- Bonn, 16 Nov (DPA) -- The chairman of the Intra-German Committee of the Bundestag, Uwe Ronneburger (FDP), and four other FDP members of the committee left on Monday for a 5-day fact-finding tour of the GDR. According to the parliamentary group, they want "to hold informal talks on political, cultural and ecclesiastical issues" in Eisenach, Erfurt, Weimar, and Wittenberg. Ronnebuger is visiting the GDR for the first time in his capacity as chairman of the Intra-German Committee. [Text] [Hamburg DPA in German 1007 GMT 16 Nov 81 LD]

LIBYAN APPROVAL SOUGHT -- Beirut, 16 Nov (DPA) -- The foreign policy spokesman of the FDR parliamentary group, Juergen Moellemann, wants to ask the Libyan head of state, Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, to agree to the Middle East peace plan put forward by the Saudi Arabian Crown Prince and head of government Fahd. Moellemann, who arrived in Beirut on Sunday evening for a stopover prior to his talks in Libya, spoke with representatives of the PLO and of the Lebanese Government. The talks centered on the relations between the FRG and the PLO and the German contribution to the Middle East peace efforts. [Text] [Hamburg DPA in German 0752 GMT 16 Nov 81 LD]

MITTERRAND MEETS WITH DJIBOUTI PRESIDENT

NC171838 Paris AFP in English 1819 GMT 17 Nov 81

[Text] Paris, 17 Nov (AFP) -- Visiting President Hassan Gouled Apidon of Djibouti and French President Francois Mitterrand had talks here today which centred mainly on mutual cooperation and the situation in the Horn of Africa and the Middle East.

Mr Gouled, who arrived yesterday, wants France, which has 4,000 troops based in Djibouti and supplies (?judiciary) and civil aid totalling some 20 million dollars a year, to help in his country's development plans. These plans cover notably an extension of Djibouti's [words indistinct] tapping of geothermal resources. Mr Gouled has said he has no intention of requesting the withdrawal of French troops from Djibouti as long as the Horn of Africa remains unstable. His country is strategically situated at the southern end of the Gulf of Suez between Ethiopia and South Yemen, which are Soviet allies, and Somalia and Kenya, which look to the West.

Also today the Djibouti president had talks with Cooperation and Development Minister Jean-Pierre Cot and Defence Minister Charles Hernu. Tomorrow, he was [word indistinct] to see foreign and Justice Ministers Claude Cheysson and Robert Badinter.

CHEYSSON COMMENTS ON IMPACT OF LI SHUANG AFFAIR

PM171111 Paris LE MONDE in French 12 Nov 81 p 3

[Text] External Relations Minister Claude Cheysson believes that the sentencing of Li Shuang, the young Chinese fiancee of the French diplomat Emmanuel Bellefroid, to 2 years of labor reeducation has "affected" relations between Paris and Beijing.

Questioned Tuesday at the Elysee after the restricted session on the situation in the New Caledonia, he said: "Since French public opinion is involved, French Chinese relations are affected." He also pointed out that France had made several representations to the Chinese Government "well before" Michel Jobert's visit to Beijing.

"They were friendly and diplomatic representations," Cheysson explained, "but in no way legal representations, for France has no rights with regard to this girl, who is not a French national and did not work for France. What we can do and have done is to tell the Chinese authorities that we are surprised at a penalty which seems harsh to us and for which no public justification has been given. In the preceding weeks we have made it known to the Chinese Government that we would like this girl to have the right to leave her country to rejoin her fiance and get married."

For its part, the Chinese Embassy in Paris circulated a "clarification" Tuesday, of which the following are extracts:

"Li Shuang, a Chinese citizen, having infringed Chinese law, has been sentenced to 2 years of labor reeducation, a penalty decided by China's judicial organ in conformity with judicial procedure. Labor reeducation is not a penalty as such, but a form of compulsory education.

"Emmaneul Bellefroid, ex-diplomat in the French Embassy to China, took advantage of his status as diplomat to harbor Li Shuang in his room at the residence reserved for foreign diplomats for 2 months. This was a flagrant violation of Chinese law.

"The aforementioned facts show that the Li Shuang affair is not, as some people claim, a problem of love between Li Shuang and Bellefroid, but an attack on Chinese law.... That China, a sovereign country, settles in conformity with its own law the case of Li Shuang, who has transgressed that law, is perfectly in order and was nothing to do with Sino-French relations."

COT: VANUATU TO RECEIVE ECONOMIC, EDUCATION AID

NC171450 Paris AFP in ENglish 1429 GMT 17 Nov 81

[Text] Paris, 17 Nov (AFP) -- France is anxious to forget past misunderstandings with Vanuatu and help develop the economy and educational structures of the former Franco-British protectorate, French Minister for Cooperation and Development Jean-Pierre Cot told a delegation led by Vanuatuan Prime Minister Walter Lini here today.

The delegation, which arrived yesterday for a six-day visit, began talks with French officials today to review the state of relations between the two countries since the South Pacific archipelago became independent in July 1980 after 74 years of joint rule by Britain and France. A secessionist rebellion in September last year on the northern island of Espiritu Santo, which was supported by much of the French-speaking population there, was put down by trocps brought in from Papua-New Guinea.

At today's talks Mr Cot told the delegation that the 10,000 young Vanuatuans undergoing a French schooling were a key element in the programme of cooperation that France would continue to promote. France would also assist the new country's economic development, particularly in the matter of livestock, cocoa, and palm-oil production, he said. Prime Minister Lini told the meeting: "We wish to build on these agreements, in which the use of the French language and the development of French culture -- good points of our heritage -- are such an integral part."

FORMER MINISTER DENIES PLAN TO KILL AL-QADHDHAFI

NC171406 Paris AFP in English 1353 GMT 17 Nov 81

[Text] Paris, 17 Nov (AFP) -- Former French foreign minister Jean Francois-Poncet today denied that he had discussed a plan to assassinate Libyan strongman Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi with U.S. officials while on a visit to Washington last February.

A report by the U.S. weekly magazine TIME that the government of former French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing had told the U.S. of plans to assassinate Col al-Qadhdhafi prompted some to speculate that Mr Francois-Poncet had been the official who gave the U.S. the notification.

"The political discussions that Mr Francois-Poncet had during his trip to Washington last February were conducted exclusively with Secretary of State Alexander Haig, and not with Mr Richard Allen, adviser to President (Ronald) Reagan," said a spokesman for the former French foreign minister.

This was in response to a reference in the TIME report that suggested that a top official told Mr Allen of the French plan last February.

"The talks concerned the international situation," the statement added. "At no time was the eventuality of an action against the person of Col al-Qadhdhafi discussed." Other officials in Mr Giscard d'Estaing's entourage also denied the report, saying it was a complete fabrication. The White House has said the subject of Libya was discussed during meetings last February with a ranking French officials, but denied that the talks involved a plan to kill Col al-Qadhdhafi.

PCF'S PLISSONNIER ON CONGRESS DRAFT RESOLUTION

PM160951 Paris L'HUMANITE in French 4 Nov 81 pp 1, 4

[Gaston Plissonnier article: "Being Critical in Order To Be Effective"]

[Text] The draft resolution submitted for Communists' discussion with a view to the 24th congress is arousing great interest and thought among them. The information media, for their part, have already made certain comments.

Those people who make it their job to distort the PCF's positions are presenting this document as an attempt by the PCF leadership to avoid an examination of its activity of late and to place on former leaderships the responsibility for the 1981 electoral setback.

This is purely and simply a falsification.

In the draft's first chapter we find a critical examination of the 1977-1981 period. Already the 23rd congress report contained a critical opinion of the 1977-1978 events -- 2 years before the parliamentary elections. Let us state that it is normal for a revolutionary party like ours to embark on an overall examination of its activity from the starting point of a historical period. This is not the first time this has been the case.

This was the case, for example, during the thirties, when the PCF, in an innovative way, touched on the great problems of the time and was able to express this in daring political initiatives such as in particular, the Popular Front, the Villeurbanne Congress and so forth. Similarly, at the end of 1947, while believing that the union with the Popular Front during the resistance had made considerable democratic progress possible following the liberation, the Central Committee considered that the union had in fact been insufficiently rooted at the base, at the heart of the mass movement. At that moment it also revised its viewpoint on the profound causes for the exclusion of communist ministers, stressing that this was part of a gigantic imperialist battle to attempt to reconquer the positions lost in 1945. Recalling these facts makes it evident that our party does not hesitate to embark on a critical examination, when this proves necessary, in order to draw conclusions making it possible to be more effective in the revolutionary fight. Were the other parties to make an objective judgement of their own past, political life would be greatly clarified.

In the historical period referred to by the draft resolution, (1955-1981), the PCF played a political role of great significance. It organized struggles for peace and against the danger of atomic weapons, against colonial wars and for support for the national liberation movements, for the defense of liberties and the working people's claims, against personal power and so forth. It also enriched its theory, as is attested by, among other things, its analysis of state capitalism, its thought in the philosophical sphere and the elaboration of the "Champigny manifesto." Everything shows that it was in the thick of the action. Its leadership included leaders who had acquired a great political reputation, such as Maurice Thorez, Waldeck Rochet, Jacques Duclos and their comrades. May our detractors know that we will not allow the reality of this past to be falisified.

Having given this explanation, it is true that the draft resolution raises a fundamental question bearing on PCF strategy. With the detachment of time, it seems clear that the analysis made during these decades did not get to the bottom of the fundamental problems. It did not answer all the demands dictated by the situation and the changes in the correlation of forces on the international scale. The advance of socialism, the victory of the Chinese revolution, the growth of revolutionary forces and the inexorable rise of the national liberation movement meant a new setback for imperialism.

In France the contradictions and crisis of capitalism became more acute. The big bourgeoisie was aware of this. To fend off the real solutions, save its system and ensure monopoly capital's interests it set up new institutions in 1958 which corresponded to its aims to be better able to confront the popular movement. If our party was unarguably in the vanguard of the fight against the undertakings, it remains that its analysis did not take full account of the changes taking place within French society and did not give the overall response which was called for. The scope and nature of the imperialist crisis, which was a crisis of the system, called for a reevalution and a solution of a strategic nature. The historically concrete response to be given was that of socialism as the only society capable of confronting the problems of our time.

There was another consideration be taken into account. At that time the concept still dominated in the world communist movement was that of a single "model" for the transition to socialism, implying in particular armed struggle, a single party and the dictatorship of the proletariat.

While the 20th CPSU Congress should have been an incentive to broader thinking, our party kept to this outline which, quite clearly, did not correspond to French conditions. Even if it affirmed the ideal and developed propaganda in favor of socialism, it conceived it as a distant objective. There thus resulted a harmful delay in research and the formulation of a national path of struggle for socialism. Our permanent political action was strongly marked by this, including in relation to union. This latter was oriented toward agreements between formations rather than popular unification and action, more against something than within the framework of strategic action, which is what our action should be.

The joint program -- the idea of which, formulated as far back as 1959, was to be amplified with the years -- was typically a summit agreement with no real correspondent within the mass movement. It was to end in political and ideological confusion and a certain eclipsing of the party. In the face of this bitter class struggle, this practice of union did not promote political awareness. It served to develop the illusion that one could cast a useful vote by voting Socialist, which seemed easier than voting Communist.

Finally, the agreement which resulted in the weakening of the positions of the PCF, the revolutionary party, reveal that this practice of union is not right. It does not produce progress. On the contrary, it weakens the positions of the working class and the progressive forces.

In addition, what is being discussed now is not union per se -- union being a permanent principle of our policy -- but, indeed, the conditions for implementing it. The debate which is being set up which will be amplified right up to the congress will relate to our strategy and how to deepen it. This debate will be an indispensable contribution to elaborating the party's policy for the period ahead.

For my part, I believe that the coherent and aggressive draft resolution places the problems to be solved on the bases and in the breadth demanded by our times and its prospects. The 3 months of discussion will define and enrich it. It is possible to assume that, through the participation of all its members, the PCF will be better armed after its 24th congress to confront the present and future struggles and to go foward. This is what our opponents fear.

PCF AIDE CITED ON PRESIDENTIAL POLL, 24TH CONGRESS

PM171241 Paris L'HUMANITE in French 11 Nov 81 p 4

[Text] PCF Secretary Paul Laurent was Didier Lecat's guest on France-Inter yesterday morning. The Communist leader was asked about preparations for the 24th PCF congress.

Will the debate which is now beginning in the PCF be really democratic? Paul Laurent stated that "The first criticism has come from the Central Committee. The document which we have published," he asserted, "is a critical reflection on an entire period of our history. It is quite natural that after a period which ended in a serious electoral setback but also with the entry of Communist ministers into government we should have carried out a very profound analysis." And he added: "It will be possible to say anything during the debate."

Lecat then expressed the view that the present PCF leadership blames the previous leaderships for the present situation. Paul Laurent replied to this statement by saying: "This is not the case at all; on the contrary! We believe that it is necessary to look at an entire historical period in which, anyway, most of our present party leaders were involved. We believe that we had an inadequate strategy from the viewpoint of the socialist prospect which we offered to the French people and that the union tactics we followed as a result led to an electoral setback." Replying to another question, Paul Laurent stated that it was "a profound mistake" not to put forward any Communist candidate in the two presidential elections.

"I personally," he stated, "participated in the nomination of a single, noncommunist candidate. Therefore I was involved in what we now believe to have been a mistake. As a result we were unable either to express our views or completely deploy our forces during decisive political periods for Communist policy. At a time when a decisive political struggle was beginning we were put into the shade by a political party whose strategic vision is obviously different from ours. Our party suffered a setback as a result. We believe that by putting forward a candidate we would in fact have greatly improved the situation, and that by clearly expressing our policy, as we did during the presidential campaign, we would have initiated a revival. But, obviously, we entered that period 'the wrong way' even in relation to a section of our electorate."

Later, the interviewer asked Laurent whether the criticisms would manifest themselves on the rostrum. Paul Laurent answered in the affirmative: "There can be no doubt at all that any important idea expressed during the discussion will adequately be reflected on the rostrum."

He was then asked if this would serve any useful purpose, he replied: "I am absolutely sure it will. As far as I know, in the past, all draft resolutions put foward at any congress have been quite profoundly modified as a result of discussion before being adopted. I believe that this time we will again pay serious heed to what the Communists say."

Finally, the interviewer asked whether it will be possible to "explicity criticize G. Marchais, who is running for a new term of office." In reply, Paul Laurent stated: "Anybody can be criticized. I want to emphasize this. It is necessary to allow all the feelings and all the views held by party members to be expressed with a view to helping to formulate our policy. Once it is determined, well, everybody fights in unison to ensure its success — this is a party rule."

CUBAN AIDES RECIEVED AT PCF HEADQUARTERS

PM171031 Paris L'HUMANITE in French 10 Nov 81 p 8

[Text] Armando Hart Davalos, Cuban minister of culture, accompanied by Gregorio Ortega Suarez, Cuban ambassador to Paris, was received yesterday at PCF headquarters by Georges Marchais and Maxime Gremetz.

In the state of tension which the U.S. Government is provoking in Central America and the Caribbean, its threats against Cuba have recently taken an alarming turn. In the name of the Communist Party of Cuba, of which he is one of the leaders, the Cuban minister naturally made known the emotion and, especially, the determination of the Cuban people in the face of the repeated provocations disseminated by U.S. propaganda. But the United States is now going beyond ideological warfare and their plan for anti-Cuban broadcasts to be aired as of next January by a transmitter cynically called "Radio Jose Marti."

U.S. spy planes continue to fly over Cuba and the U.S. navy continues its intimidatory maneuvers and preparation for the worst: the potential military actions which the Pentagon has allegedly been instructed to prepare by Secretary of State Alexander Haig, and the maneuvers by the "marines" based at Guantanamo, Cuban territory occupied since 1902 by the United States, are part of these preparations.

The fictitious motive for all this talk and these hostile acts is still based on the false information which charges Cuba with supplying arms and men to the democrats and revolutionaries who are fighting in El Salvador for their liberty and their national independence.

The Cuban people are on the alert against all eventualities.

In the name of French Communists, Georges Marchais repeated to Armando Hart that they are at the side of the Cuban people and in solidarity with them, as they have always been in their anti-imperialist struggles and in their work of building a socialist society. Defending Cuba against the intolerable aggressiveness of the Reagan administration is the urgent duty of all democrats and also of all French people who defend peace.

A new aggression against the Cuban people -- after the Bay of Pigs aggression in 1961 -- would be criminal and moreover, would probably place the Caribbean and Central American region in grave danger and could not fail to weigh heavily on international tension.

In the face of the Reagan administration's aggressive measures with regard to socialist Cuba, the PCF, loyal to its traditions of internationalist solidarity, will take the necessary initiatives.

MARCHAIS, WHEELOCK MEET, DISCUSS 'TENSE' SITUATION

PM171549 Paris L'HUMANITE in French 14 Nov 81 p 8

[Excerpts] Cmdr Jaime Wheelock, representative of the Nicaraguan junta of the government of national reconstruction, was received at PCF headquarters Friday 13 November by Goerges Marchais and Maxime Gremetz. He was accompanied by Deputy Foreign Minister Victor Tinoco, Raul Guerra of the Sandinist National Liberation Front's [FSLN] international relations section and Nicaraguan ambassador to Paris Alejandro Serrano.

Jaime Wheelock gave information on the tense situation which has forced his government to declare a state of alert. This decision was justified once again 12 November when U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig told Congress: "I refuse to rule out any possible attempt to destabilize or overthrow the Sandinist regime in Nicaragua."

On behalf of the government junta and the FSLN national leadership Cmdr Jaime Wheelock invited the PCF secretary general to visit Nicaragua soon. That invitation was accepted with pleasure.

ARMENIAN NATIONALISTS GIVE 'LAST WARNING'

LD172228 Paris Domestic Service in French 2200 GMT 17 Nov 81

[Text] There has been a threat from the Armenian nationalists: In a telephone call to AFP a short while ago, the Orly organization states that the operation against the Gare de l'Est station yesterday evening was its last warning to the government. It demands the release of six imprisoned activists, including the members of the commando group responsible for the hostage-taking at the Turkish Embassy last September, and also that of Dimitriu Giorgiu, who was arrested in Paris last week.

SOVIET ENVOY GIVES DETAILS OF BREZHNEV MESSAGE

PM171615 Paris LE FIGARO in French 14-15 Nov 81 p 2

[Text] At the end of a meeting lasting more than 90 minutes with President Mitterrand at the Elysee Palace, USSR ambassador to Paris Stepan Chervonenko stated that he had handed the French head of state a message from Leonid Brezhnev "on the prospects for relations between Paris and Moscow and on the major problems of the international situation.

"Of course," the ambassador added, "we have different views on some problems, especially international problems, but there are quite a few points on which our positions are close or identical.

"Politics is politics," he said. "Its aim is not only to compare positions but to try to reconcile them and to act side by side and jointly in the interest of reducing international tension and of detente and peace."

The diplomat noted that the French President had "confirmed his intention to develop and reanimate French-Soviet relations" during his press conference and on several other occasions. He also stressed the "useful dialogue" which has long been established between the two countries. "We try to do all we can to be fully acquainted with the other side's viewpoints and to seek points of agreement and spheres of cooperation."

SPD'S BAHR 'EXPLAINS' FRG PEACE MOVEMENT

PM161109 Paris LE MONDE in French 12 Nov 81 p 3

[Jean Wetz dispatch: "Egon Bahr Tries To Explain Motives of German 'Peace Movement'"]

[Text] Bonn -- In an open letter to his "dear French friends" Mr Egon Bahr, who was the architect of Chancellor Brandt's ostpolitik and who is now the SPD's disarmament expert, tries to explain the inspiration behind the "peace movement" in the FRG and to reassure all those on the banks of the Seine who are worried by this development. Mr Bahr's letter is published this Wednesday 11 November by the West German SPD weekly VORWAERTS.

First Mr Bahr says he is surprised and "frightened" by the discussions which he says are going on in Paris. He alleges that people are saying that pacifism and neutralism are progressing rapidly in the FRG at the same time as a new aspiration to German unity. Mr Bahr is quick to point out that 40 years ago people primarily feared an excessively warlike Germany.... Could people possibly now fear that it might become too peaceful?

Nonetheless the Social Democratic deputy proclaims that "The German nation is not dead." But people in France should not forget that the detente policy pursued by Bonn over the past 10 years has had the constant aim of consolidating peace in Europe. "There is no national objective," he writes, "which would justify a war within a Europe stuffed with nuclear weapons."

Mr Bahr admits that some French people fear that the FRG may become a rather less reliable partner as regards the defense of Europe. He replies, rather maliciously, that Paris would certainly not want German participation in NATO to "follow France's model."

According to Mr Bahr the "central point" of the debate is the contrast between a France which, thanks to its nuclear arms, "determines its own destiny," and the Germans, Belgians and Netherlanders on the other hand, who are not in a comparable situation. Thus, unlike the "pitiful" march organized in Paris by the PCF, the pacifist demonstrations in Bonn, Brussels and Amsterdam primarily expressed a "rebellion against the nuclear powers.'

The "peace movement" therefore is apparently not a typically German phenomenon but affects all countries in which there are nuclear weapons which they do not own.

Mr Bahr's conclusion is that, at a time when the world could be wiped out several times over, security is no longer possible in opposition to the adversary but only with him. This is allegedly particularly the case in Germany: "The FRG cannot enjoy security in opposition to the GDR but only with it. We would be united in destruction and nobody wants that." According to Mr Bahr this should also be the rule for all other states without any country being able to abandon its alliances.

It remains to be seen whether this analysis -- or this plea -- which is not without confusion and even contradictions, is enough to justify the exhortation with which it ends: "Do not have any fear, my dear French friends."

PAPER DESCRIBES FRANCE-TAIWAN ECONOMIC LINKS

PM171103 Paris LE FIGARO in French 10 Nov 81 p 4

[Part II of special correspondent Francois Nivolon dispatch: "Taiwan Rejects Any Negotiation With China"]

[Excerpts] Taipei -- Overtures to the Common Market date from 2 years back and have produced very satisfying results. Britain, France, the FRG, Belgium, the Netherlands, Austria, Spain and Greece have opened official trade missions in Taipei. Denmark and Sweden are planning to do likewise. Taiwan has opened 14 unofficial bureaus in West Europe.

Taiwanese exports to the EEC in 1980 were over $1.7 billion, while EEC exports to Taiwan amounted to $1.4 billion.

For the past 3 years we have made a serious study of the West European markets," the director of the European section at the Foreign Ministry told me. "Last May," he added, "a trade fair was attended by 293 companies from 13 European countries interested in us because we have considerable means with which to finance our imports (Noted: Taiwan's currency reserves amount to $7 billion). We intend to buy an increasing amount from West Europe to reduce our heavy balance of trade deficit with Japan. We also need European exports in the framework of cooperation. Indeed, to continue its development, our economy is turning toward more sophisticated industries requiring not only the use of new equipment but also new techniques. Eight European banks have opened branches in Taipei and we want air links with West Europe."

The French Association for the Development of Trade With Asia, a private body, set up an office in Taipei 2 years ago. France imported goods worth FR1.5 billion from Taiwan in 1980 and its exports attained around FR500 million. The figures for this year will be of the same order but a considerable improvement in exports is expected in 1982 thanks to the supply of three airbuses each worth FR180 million, ordered by China Airlines.

In addition, France has a very good chance of winning a very big contract for the supply of two 900-megawatt units intended for Taiwan's fourth nuclear power station.

An agreement was recently concluded between Renault and a local company for the installation of an assembly line to assemble 15,000 Renault 9 automobiles per year. A team of French technicians will be on the spot in early 1982. Another completely Taiwanese assembly line is assembling around 2,000 Peugeot 500 automobiles each year under license. This year Peugeot sent two permanent engineers and one commercial representative to Taiwan. Two Franch banks, the Societe Generale and PARIBAS, are established in Taipei. The National Bank of Paris has just received permission to open an agency.

FAN AGAIN DENIES FIGHTING IN EASTERN CHAD

AB171121 Paris AFP in Franch 0839 GMT 17 Nov 81

[Text] Paris, 17 Nov (AFP) -- The headquarters of former defense minister Hissein Habre's Northern Armed Forces (FAN) denied again on Monday evening that fighting had resumed in eastern Chad following the Libyan withdrawal.

Mr Afal Ahmed, the FAN delegate in Europe, made this denial on behalf of the FAN in Paris. According to the statement, the towns of Guereda, Eritra and Adre, from where the Libyan troops withdrew, have rallied together without fighting and they have not been attacked by Mr Habre's forces.

The FAN vehemently condemns the dangerous effects of the Mitterrand government's stand on Chad's interests and they are not directly or indirectly associated with the machinations between Paris, Tripoli and the OAU secretary general, the denial statement stressed.

The FAN have also rejected the inter-African peace-keeping force meant to serve the devilish interests of Chadian President Goukouni Oueddei, France and Libya. They call on African states not to support this plot. It is through the strict adherence to the Lagos accords signed by all the Chadian factions that peace and independence will be restored to Chad, the FAN concludes.

LE FIGARO COMMENTS ON MITTERRAND'S FOREIGN POLICY

PM171441 Paris LE FIGARO in French 13 Nov 81 pp 1, 4

[Paul-Marie de la Gorce article: "Between Atlanticism and Third Worldism"]

[Text] It is undeniable that the French-African conference has been a success for French diplomacy. One would, therefore, be inclined to credit the success to the "Third Worldist" aspect of France's foreign policy, especially since it was recognized in these columns immediately after the 10 May election that it is through its action among Third World nations that our country can play a more important international role and project a stronger and more acceptable image of itself -- in accordance, furthermore, with what French Governments since General de Gaulle have always sought to do, with or without success.

However, the policy pursued for the past 6 months has in no way been limited to this gesture toward the Third World. A few weeks ago, that policy could be defined by placing it under the dual sign of Atlanticism and Third Worldism while wondering whether the latter was not merely a fragile mask concealing the former and pondering upon the contradictions which could well either paralyze it or at least blur its results. Recent events have prompted us to ask ourselves similar questions.

The president's visit across the Atlantic has provided an opportunity for doing that. Even though France is right not to lose interest in it (indeed General de Gaulle once condemned American intervention in the Dominican Republic), France cannot play any major role in Latin America and it can be clearly seen that what was important as far as that visit was concerned was not the speech made by Mr Mitterrand in Mexico, in which he imparted to the political and social revolts in Latin America that lyricism which is a mark of his undeniable talent, but concerted action and convergences between the American and French policies with respect to Chad and over the implementation of the Camp David accords.

Indeed it was after his talks with Mr Reagan and with his support that the president took the initiatives whose repercussions are well-known. It was on the same occasion and in the same way that Mr Mitterrand decided on France's participation in the international force which is to be deployed in Sinai under the terms of the Camp David accords.

On this point, a considerable service has been done to American policy which, as is known, is finding the greatest difficulty in carrying through the Camp David process, which has always sought to dissuade Europe from pursuing a different policy from it regarding the Near East and which is obviously satisfied to secure France's support -- and, thanks to France, that of other European countries -- in the practical implementation of the American-Israeli-Egyptian accords.

This French decision follows many others which moved in the same direction and which, to simplify matters, we will call "Atlanticism": the support given to the deployment of American Euromissiles in Europe, support for Germany's membership in NATO, the repeated condemnation -- more categorical than ever -- of the Russian intervention in Afghanistan, the freezing of French-Soviet political relations and, perhaps, the reactivation of the consultative group cooperating committee, the NATO body responsible for monitoring and limiting East-West trade.

Therefore 2 months ago it was natural to wonder about the preponderant tendency of French foreign policy -- Atlanticist or Third Worldist? -- and the events which have occurred since raise the same question. At that time it was suggested that Atlanticism would prevail over Third Worldism or rather that the one would "compromise" the other and that in any case contraditions between the two would be bound to emerge. That is precisely what the president disputed in his press conference last month. In his view, the presumption that there could be a contradiction was misunderstanding the place which France necessarily holds in the world in the heart of the Western system while at the same time having its own capacity to act in the Third World: The two aspects of French policy would therefore be complementary too.

But is this in fact the case? In Africa for instance, France can only play an active and positive role if it is an acceptable interlocutor to the very different states on that continent, including those which in no way want to allow themselves to be subjected by American hegemony in order to escape former colonialisms or the temptation of Soviet hegemony. French policy would lose all attraction in their eyes and indeed all efficacy if it seemed to be passing on, and backing up, American policy.

The case of the Near East is even more significant. However kind you are, you cannot help being struck by what seems to be incoherence. Mr Mitterrand began by scuttling, without hesitation, the European approach taken at his predecessor's initiative. Then he gave his support to the Fahd plan which essentially takes up all the principles of that initiative. In his press conference he pointed to the advantages of "small steps" and limited agreements, whereas the Fahd plan, which he supports, aspires to be a plan for a comprehensive settlement. Finally France's official and practical support is being given to the Camp David agreements whereas most of the states concerned, including the United States, are trying not to be confined to them.

French policy is clearly living on the credit built up over the years in which it at least had the merit of clarity and precision, asserting equal attachment to Israel's right to existence and the Palestinians' right to a political existence which can only be guaranteed by a comprehensive settlement. This has produced growing distrust among many states which have so far expressed it with caution and courtesy but which observe that France no longer has its former dynamic initiating role. Is it possible to talk of a "Third Worldist" policy when such a considerable section of the Third World feels this distrust?

Therefore there is no way of preventing at least a discussion of the preponderance of Atlanticism in French foreign policy or of the importance of its Third Worldism.

There are some signs which show that this debate has really been started. In the magazine NON! which expresses one of the currents of thought substantially represented in the PS leadership, it is possible to read this judgment which is intended to be critical and severe: "For the past 6 months the new government's foreign policy has been Atlanticist on the whole." Last week L'HUMANITE challenged France's participation in the international force planned for Sinai.

In another way those who formerly supported or were inspired by General de Gaulle's foreign policy are being forced to ask questions: That policy was based on the determined and absolute affirmation of national independence which justified the establishment of new relations with the East and the West and implied support for the independence of other nations in the world. Is it a distortion to say that, within the system in which it is situated, the current policy aims to both consolidate it and turn it toward a better understanding of the problems posed by the Third World? The two aspirations are different even if their applications are the same on individual points.

It is right to say that a foreign policy should not be judged too soon: The example of the last Socialist government in 1956-1958 is there to show it. Prime Minister Guy Mollet was the first to visit Moscow since 1944 and his foreign minister went as far afield as India and Egypt to launch a new dialogue with Africa and Asia. But those leanings were swept away by the terrible dialectic of the war which was being fought in Algeria and which was extended by the Suez War.

It is therefore probably too early to judge the present foreign policy: but it is not too early to ask questions about it.

NAPLES MAYOR, CITY ASSESSORS RESIGN 17 NOV

AU171732 Rome ANSA in English 1526 GMT 17 Nov 81

[Text] Naples, 17 Nov (ANSA) -- The Naples city government, one of the leftwing administrations running several of Italy's largest cities (including the capital), is officially in crisis as of today. Mayor Maurizio Valenzi and nine Communist assessors submitted their resignations this morning.

Six Socialist and five Social Democratic assessors resigned some days ago, following a vote of no confidence presented by the Christian Democratic opposition which charged that the city government was paralyzed and inefficient. Valenzi has been mayor of Naples for six years.

SOCIALISTS ORGANIZE NATIONWIDE PEACE MARCHES

AU160844 Rome ANSA in English 0828 GMT 16 Nov 81

[Text] Rome, 16 Nov (ANSA) -- Peace demonstrations called by the Italian Socialist Party (PSI) were held Sunday in 101 cities up and down the peninsula. Over 200,000 persons took part in the marches, rallies and debates, according to the PSI.

All of the Socialist leaders speaking at the various peace events plumped for "option zero" which calls for the elimination of medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe, on the part of the East and the West. "Ours is a simple formula that expresses the people's hope: Away with the missiles there are, away with the missiles there might be," was how PSI Secretary Bettino Craxi put it.

The situation must be brought back on both sides to zero, he continued, At that point, discussions could get underway on a further reduction of nuclear and conventional weaponry, he said. Craxi noted that Italy is one of the NATO countries that agreed to host the nuclear cruise missiles, but in any case, we will never agree to missiles on our territory without having full participation in the control of their commands," Craxi said.

Italy and Europe must take part in negotiations with the Soviet Union, the Socialist leader went on. "We cannot leave the keys to our security and to our very future in America's power. Everything must be the fruit of consultations," Craxi said.

A group of young people belonging to the League for Unilateral Disarmament, a pacifist organization with strong support from the Radical Party, opposed Craxi's words. As the party's security services moved in to get rid of hecklers, Craxi said affably that to those who came to a peace demonstration with posters calling him a hangman, he would offer a red carnation, the party's symbol.

PERTINI RECEIVES SOUTH KOREAN DEPUTY PREMIER

AU171727 Rome ANSA in English 1531 GMT 17 Nov 81

[Text] Rome, 17 Nov (ANSA) -- South Korean Deputy Premier for National Security and Foreign Affairs No Tae-u, was received at the Quirinale Palace today by Italian head of state Sandro Pertini. During the encounter here No Tae-u delivered a message for Pertini from the president of the Republic of Korea.

BERLINGUER ON PEACE MOVES, ECONOMIC REFORM

PM171147 Milan L'UNITA in Italian 9 Nov 81 pp 1-2

[Ugo Baduel report on PCI Secretary General Enrico Berlinguer 8 November speech in Rome: "Democratic Alternative Path To Reform Country and Advance Peace Proposals"]

[Excerpt] With regard to the terrible topics of the international situation, Comrade Berlinguer said that the world situation is deteriorating daily. We, he added, have not hesitated to indicate the Soviet Union's share of responsibility for the crisis in international detente and have expressed our sharp condemnation of the intervention in Afghanistan and of other actions which we consider contrary to a policy of dialogue and detente. The PCI has frankly reasserted its opinions in various international forums and on several occasions. In any case, our overall assessment of the situation is well reflected in the document approved at the latest Central Committee meeting and published by L'UNITA.

Having said that, however, it is now more than ever our duty to renew the alarm that we have been raising for some time with regard to actions, intentions and threats such as those that come almost daily from U.S. leaders and are driving toward a most dangerous deterioration in all international relations.

In this connection, Berlinguer recalled the U.S. decision to build the neutron bomb, which is destined for the European theater; Haig's remarks about the possibility of a "deterrent" nuclear bomb in the event of a conventional war in Europe; Reagan's previous remarks about the possibility of a "limited" nuclear war in Europe -- remarks first retracted but confirmed in Verona yesterday by the NATO commander, who said, moreover, that the allies were aware of this. Furthermore, in the past few days, the threats of U.S. military initiatives against Cuba and Nicaragua have been rekindled.

As you know, the PCI secretary general said, I recently visited those two countries, as well as Mexico. My aim was to express profound solidarity with two revolutions that have prompted so many feelings of sincere sympathy and admiration in our people, and we did this irrespective of our disagreements concerning some stances on the part of those countries' leaders -- disagreements which we discussed with the frankness and respect due to those who have managed to lead a revolution to victory and are now committed to the huge task of defending it.

We also wanted to demonstrate and confirm the link between the West European workers movement and progressive forces and Latin America. Last, we wanted to expound the PCI's positions on the major topic of North-South relations, as expressed in the "charter" approved by our Central Committee.

What impressions did I bring back with me? Berlinguer asked. The clear impression that Latin America, and Central America in particular, are becoming a nerve center of the world situation -- an area of tension no less serious and with dangers no less acute than those affecting the Middle East, for instance. Why is this so? Is it, perhaps, because of "international terrorism" or is military infiltration taking place from Cuba or Nicaragua into El Salvador or Guatemala? This is the false thesis being bandied about by the U.S. leaders' propaganda. But the truth is quite different, and we communists are not the only ones to say so. The fact is that in countries such as El Salvador and Guatemala and elsewhere, fierce, bloodthirsty and corrupt dictatorships are rampant, while the most terrible Third World poverty is spreading -- and this in full accordance with, indeed, with full dependence on the United States. It is therefore natural that popular rebellion has emerged and is growing ever stronger in those countries and that a desperate struggle is underway for democracy and independence, for the defense of the most elementary human rights.

In short, there is a struggle there because there are some strata of the population that have had enough, and because in certain conditions (in El Salvador and Guatemala now, as in Nicaragua before) the path of weapons is the only one left open to democrats to escape and put an end to the massacres. This is the truth.

And we Communists are not the only ones to say so; so do governments in Latin America and Europe and so does the French-Mexican joint communique, which recognizes the Salvadoran Liberation Front and urges a political solution to resolve that country's crisis. These things are also said by many U.S. politicians who are more farsighted than the Washington administration.

Unfortunately, these truths are not stated by the Italian Government or by the DC, which supports the Duarte junta in El Salvador (though many Christian Democrats refuse this support and broad Catholic sectors condemn it).

Therefore, Berlinguer stressed, the theses upheld by the Reagan administration concerning alleged "international terrorism" or outside "intervention" ascribed to Cuba and Nicaragua are absurd and unacceptable. And military-type initiatives such as those being discussed by the United States, which would kindle a blaze on an incalculable scale in that area, seriously threatening world peace, seem truly incomprehensible.

Berlinguer concluded this part of his speech by issuing an appeal to the Italian masses to confirm their solidarity with the struggling Latin American peoples, and pointing out that the PSI and many democratic Catholics with positions similar to the PCI's on these subjects can also act effectively to press the Italian Government to be more active in solidarity in that part of the world and to discourage aggressive intentions on the part of the U.S. administration.

So, Berlinguer said, this international situation confirms our basic stances. With regard to the rivalry and opposition between the United States and the USSR, which is objectively the prime cause of the exacerbation of the international crisis, action must be taken by all the forces which -- by virtue of their position or their inspiration -- can make a decisive contribution to moderation, detente, a brake on the arms race, negotiated solutions and building a new international economic order. Berlinguer cited the Nonaligned Movement, the Catholic and other churches, Western Europe and especially the forces of its workers movement and our continent's progressive forces and people's masses -- all the forces that can play an effective role.

In fact, the PCI secretary general continued, it is in Western Europe that a powerful movement of extraordinary breadth and vigor in favor of peace has begun to develop. It is a movement that transcends the confines of the leftwing parties, involves a large variety of movements, organizations and institutions and is mass in nature. He recalled the impact, still felt by everyone, of the great peace marches in Bonn, Rome, Brussels, Paris, London and Milan. Demonstrations against rearmament, against missiles and nuclear weapons of all kinds and in all countries, against increased military spending and in favor of negotiations to reduce those weapons and of negotiated solutions to conflicts. This has already had an effect; on certain European governments and even in the United States, through the newspapers and the stances adopted by politicians who urge Reagan to reflect.

These demonstrations have also had some influence on parties in Italy, but unfortunately none on our government. As happened before with the choice of Comiso as a base for U.S. missiles, our government has again decided to be "teacher's pet" in connection with the contingent to be sent to Sinai. The presence in Sinai places us in a negative position with respect to the Arab world, and it is not true that it was an obligatory decision shared by all 10 EEC countries. Indeed, Greece and other countries are wondering whether it is so necessary and wise to espouse the theses of the Camp David agreements to such an extent and are instead looking with interest at the new Saudi Arabian proposals. Meanwhile, they have not yet decided on contingents for Sinai, as the Italian Government has done, however -- even though it has not yet felt the need to recognize the PLO.

The conclusion to be drawn, Berlinguer said, is that the movement for peace and dialogue must spread so as to impose a correction of the most negative stances adopted by the Italian Government.

Next, the PCI secretary general pointed out that it was recently the 64th anniversary of the October Revolution in the Soviet Union. We have not lost, and will not lose, our awareness that that event marked the beginning of a new era for the world, that is, the end of world domination by capitalism and imperialism, and at the same time the start of and a thrust to other tumults and revolutions which eliminated capitalist exploitation and colonial oppression from other countries and on other continents, he said. Nor are we forgetting the irreversible historical value of the contribution in terms of sacrifices and the blood shed by the Soviet people in the war against Nazism and Fascism. At the same time, Berlinguer added, we are aware that the time has gone when the revolutionary forces organized themselves and rallied around a single center. For some time -- and this is the case now more than ever -- to tackle the major tasks of defending peace, asserting the peoples' and nations' independence and sovereignty and advancing the cause of the masses' emancipation and liberation, it has been necessary for the communist parties, the other forces of the workers movement and all progressive movements to act with full autonomy of assessment and initiative in the spirit of a new internationalism -- an expression which we were pleased to see used at the recent French Socialist Party congress. The fact that our party has adhered to these principles has been and still is one of the fundamental reasons why everywhere we are received with respect and why we maintain such wide-ranging relations with all communist parties (excluding only Albania's), with the socialist and social democratic parties, and with Third World forces and movements.

From the international situation, Berlinguer moved on to Italy's problems.

For some time the communists have been warning of the dangers of a serious recession and decline in the country, Berlinguer said. Now this is becoming clear to everyone. The new element in Italy's present crisis compared with the entire postwar period is that it strike at the heart of the most advanced sectors of our economy, the major industrial sectors whose expansion has enabled us to reach seventh place among the industrialized countries, albeit with high social and human costs. Berlinguer cited nationalized industry, the state-controlled industries, but also private sectors; the steel and chemicals industries, but also automobiles and mechanical engineering. Everywhere the picture is of crisis, growing unemployment, dismissals, unemployment. Amid a serious and undeniable world economic crisis, Italy is paying the additional price of profound distortions in its kind of development, due to the power system centered on the DC, favoritist practices among the ruling parties, which are not only a source of corruption and scandals but also stifle the economy and lead to inefficiency in the institutions. This is the point; the nub of the "morality issue" lies entirely in the fact that corruption affects not only the methods and conduct of the government and certain parties, but undermines any chance of economic reform and correct functioning of the institutions.

Why this danger of recession and decline? Berlinguer asked. He explained as follows: The policy which the government is pursuing is supposedly designed to contain inflation (and this is a valid aim requiring everyone's cooperation), but in fact it is obstructing investment and research, even in the sectors that have constituted and still constitute the driving force behind the economy. This is stifling and clearly makes our country falter and lose ground in a world, and with respect to countries that are right now experiencing a new phase of technological revolution.

All this, Berlinguer added, poses serious threats to democracy. It has been said on the most diverse sides that if inflation exceeds certain limits, democracy could collapse. But there is something else that must be said. That is, it must not be forgotten that historical experience shows that when unemployment exceeds certain limits, democracy collapses; let us remember that on the eve of Nazism there were 3 million unemployed in Germany.

This, then, is the communists' basic criticism of the economic policy of past governments, and of this government, too, despite its modifications to the culpably optimistic analyses being made until a few months ago.

When it comes to cutting public spending -- which is undeoubtedly necessary -- it lacks the courage to strike a serious blow against wastage, parasitism, privilege and patronage while hitting out indiscriminately, thus hitting the poorest people. The entire issue of medical prescription charges is symptomatic. Furthermore, real decisions are being evaded because of the continuous squabbling among ministers, thus failing to open up proespects of recovery and development for the most advanced production sectors. In this connection, Berlinguer also cited the example of the additional cuts that the government wants to introduce in local council expenditure -- spending which would in fact constitute a useful tool for production investments and for correcting serious social inequalities.

That is, Berlinguer added, unless the cut in local council expenditure (which, moreover, hits mainly the major cities, which are governed by leftwing forces) conceals political aims. Next the PCI secretary general cited the case of Naples, where the DC seems willing even to seek the votes of the Italian Social Movement in order to bring down Valenzi's council. Why now? Because of the approaching completion of the plan for 20,000 homes, which is being carried out entirely in the open, with construction companies and other concerns which for the first time have not been forced to pay "kickbacks" to the political parties, in accordance with methods which destroy the very foundations on which the DC's entire power system in the cities rests. This is how an activity is being hindered, a partly productive development is being obstructed solely for the sake of a political maneuver -- a particularly cynical maneuver, moreover, bearing in mind that we are talking about Naples only a year after the terrible earthquake.

Berlinguer cited in passing the communists' proposals for amending the finance law being discussed by the Senate and confirmed the PCI's political verdict on the Spadolini Government.

This government, he said, is no longer headed by a Christian Democrat and this, as we have said, is an important factor that we take into account. But it is also a government that encounters steadfast opposition from us -- especially with regard to its foreign and economic policy. Moreover, this government is being undermined by its own majority with maneuvers aimed at causing a crisis in it with a view to a further early dissolution of Parliament or an "iron pact" among certain parties, conceived purely in terms of anti-communism.

What must we Communists do in such a complex and contradictory situation? Berlinguer asked.

1 -- We do not want and must not help such maneuvers, which are contrary (both early elections and the DC-PSI "iron pact") to the country's fundamental interests;

2 -- We must develop our opposition in Parliament and throughout the country to modify the government's aims and options as far as possible, exerting pressure on the government with regard to foreign policy, economic policy and the morality issue (starting with the cancer constituted by the P-2 lodge, in which connection President Pertini spoke such clear and steadfast words, which we full support and welcome;

3 -- We must reassert the need to work tenaciously for a democratic alternative in the country's leadership.

In this connection, Berlinguer said, two things must be clear:

-- That the democratic alternative does not mean a transition from one government (or premiership) to another within the context of the same political power system, but a substantial change in that system;

-- That the democratic alternative must not be merely proclaimed. The conditions for a shift in the balance of forces among the masses and in the parties must be clearly defined.

If we have not yet achieved this, it is not only the fault of other people's insensitivity and shortsightedness, but also because we ourselves have not done all the work needed to make such an option inevitable.

Berlinguer was approaching the end of his speech.

What tasks face the party? To fulfill all its capabilities to put forward correct and new ideas and proposals, to organize movements, initiatives and battles to resolve the fundamental problems:

-- Peace and a new international order;

-- The struggle against inflation and recession and for a new kind of development and a new quality of life;

-- The correct and efficient functioning of the institutions;

-- The reform of the state and the parties.

Apart from these, Berlinguer added, there are the problems of all the citizens' everyday lives; these are the tasks not only of the party's central bodies but of you all. This is the way not only to obtain partial successes but also to make new forces emerge in other parties too, and among the masses -- forces willing to fight for change.

Consider, for instance, Berlinguer said, what is happening in connection with the peace issue. Following the major demonstrations attended by people from all the parties, nobody maintains any longer that "peace is not threatened" and indeed even the other parties have announced marches and days in defense of peace. We shall see whether these initiatives too, like the unitary ones already held, will be directed against all kinds of weapons, including U.S. missiles.

Be that as it may, this all proves that when profound movements emerge from the people, even the parties and the government must take note.

This is the PCI's major, irreplaceable, role. And this is the value of the PCI and Italian Communist Youth Federation membership campaign. Petroselli often used to cite a remark by Togliatti: "to cling to all the folds of society." This now means being able to interpret many innovations, such as the women's movements, their forms and substance, and the exceptional attendance of peace demonstrations by large masses of young people. The PCI is a party that can carry forward these innovations, this regeneration, without breaking away from its own past or the unity of all its members, from the oldest -- the veterans whom we saluted affectionately here today -- to the youngest recruits.

If we look at the experience of other communist and workers parties, Berlinguer concluded, we must admit that we have succeeded in avoiding two opposite dangers which have affected some of those other parties; the danger of bureaucratization, fossilization, detachment from the masses, constriction of internal democratic life, inability to promptly identify emergent innovations; and the danger of splittism, the prevalence of intestine struggles over the prime tasks of the external struggle.

This is what we must do: Maintain steadfast vigilance against these two dangers, developing democratic life within our ranks, nurturing the dialectic of ideas and contact with the conditions, lives and feelings of the broad masses; and at the same time defend party unity against the false hopes of those who aim to split us.

DIPLOMAT STABBED TO DEATH IN AUSTRALIA

BK160813 Melbourne Overseas Service in English 0500 GMT 16 Nov 81

[Text] The Greek consul-general to Australia has been stabbed to death at his consular residence in Sydney. A police spokesman said Mr C. Giannaris was found by his staff with a knife protruding from his back at the consular residence in the Sydney suburb of Darling Point. The upstairs section of the four-storey consulate had been ransacked. Police units have sealed off the area as investigations continue. Mr Giannaris took up his post 2 years ago.

The murder comes nearly 1 year after the assassination in Sydney of the Turkish consul-general and his bodyguard. An Armenian guerrilla group claimed responsibility but no one has been caught.

SPOKESMAN ANSWERS PRAVDA ON U.S. BASES POLICY

NC172055 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1930 GMT 17 Nov 81

[Text] The Greek Government formulates its foreign policy according to the interests of the nation and people. This statement was made by the government spokesman in answer to a question on a report in the Soviet newspaper PRAVDA about the U.S. bases in Greece.

CHAMBER ELECTS PASOK CANDIDATE PRESIDENT

NC172130 Athens Armed Forces Radio in Greek 1900 GMT 17 Nov 81

[Text] At its meeting this evening, the Chamber of Deputies that emerged from the 18 October elections elected the PASOK deputy for the first Athens constituency, Mr Ioannis Alevras, president of the body for the length of the parliamentary period. The meeting opened at 1800 in the presence of Prime Minister Papandreou and the cabinet members. It was chaired by acting President Lavrendidhis, who was nominated by the New Democracy Party as its candidate for the position of the new Chamber of Deputies president.

Following his nomination as candidate for the presidency, Mr Lavrendidhis took his place at the deputies bench and the president's chair was taken by Mr Serpanos, PASOK deputy for Aitolia and Akarnania constituency and one of the oldest deputies in the new chamber. During the secret voting that followed, a total of 298 deputies voted. Mr Alevras received 170 votes, Mr Lavrendidhis 111 and 17 blank ballots were cast.

After his election, Mr Alevras took his position at the body's presidency amid warm applause from his colleagues. Addressing the members of the Chamber, Mr Alevras thanked them for electing him and assured them that, in carrying out his task, he will give all his strength. He added: My election to the position of president is, of course, due to the votes of the members of one party -- which is what usually happens in the Greek Chamber of Deputies. Furthermore, from my personal position, that which political consistency and morals dictate will also happen -- I will maintain my link with the party which expresses my faith and ideas.

He went on: This is the right of a free consciousness, exactly as objectivity and impartiality are duties of the Chamber president. In connection with these views, he stressed that the will of the Chamber's majority requires that the body's presidency acquire convincing and even positively safeguarded objectivity.

Mr Alevras also referred to the need for the radical reformation of many regulations and procedures concerning the functioning of the Chamber of Deputies. Within the framework of briefing and informing the deputies he said, it is necessary to establish an independent scientific-technical service in the Chamber.

He also referred to the pressing need to solve the problem of the lack of space facing the Chamber. He said that in the not too distant future the entire Chamber building will be turned over to the Chamber. In conclusion, Mr Alevras welcomed the presence of many new deputies in the Chamber and stressed that, from this Chamber, which has so many virtues and fruitful forces, one can expect a creative and big task for the improvement and prosperity of the Greek people. He concluded: With the conviction that this lofty task is our common goal, I call upon all of you to realize it with faith and enthusiasm.

Referring to the Polytechnic anniversary, Mr Alevras stressed that, as has also been the case in past years, the Chamber owes a wreath of honor, and called upon the deputies to maintain 1 minute of silence in memory of the Polytechnic heroes. Mr Alevras then adjourned the meeting until 1100 tomorrow, when the sole topic on the agenda will be the election of the Chamber's first vice president. The election of the other two vice presidents and the remaining members of the presidency will be held at 1800 tomorrow.

PAPANDREOU INTERVIEWED AT PARLIAMENT OPENING

NC171137 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1930 GMT 16 Nov 81

[Text] After the Chamber of Deputies meeting, ERT [Hellenic Radio-Television] correspondent Apostolopoulos asked Prime Minister Andreas Papandreou:

[Begin recording] [Question] Good morning, Mr Prime Minister. How do you do? How do you see the new Parliament, Mr Prime Minister?

[Answer] The new Parliament [words indistinct because of simultaneous talking of Papandreou and ERT correspondent] The legislation for change, with strong opposition too...

[Correspondent interrupting] Yes, definitely it is the strongest in Europe.

[Papandreou continues] ...will be of great [words indistinct] the strongest in Europe, and I believe the strongest parliamentary opposition ever in the Greek chamber.

[Question] But the fact that there are only three parties. Isn't this a disadvantage?

[Answer] This is how I view it; it simplifies the procedure, I also believe that this is a disadvantage. We agree on this. There should have been at least one representative, one voice, from the other opposition ranks [words indistinct] [ERT correspondent interrupts; words indistinct] with the new law on elections. I hope we shall be able to guarantee this for the future. [end recording]

Addresses PASOK Parliamentary Group

NC172240 Athens ELEVTHEROTIPIA in Greek 17 Nov 81 p 2

[Text] At the first meeting yesterday of PASOK's parliamentary group, Andreas Papandreou made the following statement: Dear colleagues: This very moment is perhaps a most touching moment for all of us. We have fought, each one of us in his own trenches, for many years so that at long last we would be able to free the state from the monopoly of the rightwing. Fundamentally, the right ruled for 48 years. There were transitory hopes which, however, were never fulfilled. We truly represent all the generations of modern Greece which were "present" in all the great struggles, during the national resistance movement, during the first and second "implacable" struggles and during the struggle against the junta. In essence, we all arose through this struggle for the liberation of our nation, our people from the national level to the cultural level. It is difficult to appreciate what is happening today because when one is involved it is difficult to appreciate the true extent of the change in Greece.

There is a totally different atmosphere. There is an atmosphere of conciliation between the people and the state. Yesterday's march [on the Polytechnic anniversary] was a great example. It was so vast and so peaceful, without armored police vehicles and riot squads, protected by the people themselves.

I sincerely believe, Papandreou continued, that if we -- PASOK -- had not won this election -- not simply won in the sense that we are the leading party -- the situation in the country would have become worse. Change is truly a prerequisite for the nation's survival, and this is not a preelection slogan. This is the truth. All of us in this hall must realize this.

We are all tied to a common struggle for the fulfillment of our and the people's expectations, and we must honor our covenant. We must truly apply and implement all that we promised. A state with justice which at long last will learn to serve the interests of the Greek people and the Greek nation; a state within the framework of which the people, no matter where they might be -- geographically or productively -- will participate actively and responsibly in the great decisions that are being made for them. This is our atmosphere, this is the people's expectation, and we must truly justify the struggles, the sacrifices and hopes of the people.

Referring to the armed forces, he then emphasized that along the course we have laid down for change, the country's armed forces will not have any involvement in the policymaking of PASOK's government. This is a great conquest because the party of change, the movement of change, this democratic, national movement has, for the first time in our country's recent history, truly reconciled the army and the people. You all know it, you all have a history of struggle, each one remembers some struggle, you have all taken part in some struggle or another. It is a characteristic of both the parliamentary group and our government that they have this fighting resistance character and heritage.

Referring to the problems which afflict the world and generally economic progress today, the prime minister stressed:

"It is not surprising to us that economic progress on a world scale -- with few exceptions -- is truly falling. The forecasts are that unemployment will take on more dramatic and greater dimensions on the European Continent. It is obvious that as a result, the political groups which until now sought a solution will be swept aside, because the problems which afflict the world today and particularly afflict Europe cannot be solved within the framework of today's institutions and the current balance of forces. As a result we, like all the others, will also have to face a difficult course in the economic field.

"I stated during our preelection discussions that the deficit in the public sector was 350 billion drachma. The minister of finance has informed me and certain of our aides in the economic sector that it was in fact 350 billion, although this figure could increase further. One thing, however, which nobody has realized, is the composition and structure of this deficit. The regular budget in our country during recent years was always approximately balanced. But it was balanced up to 1979.

"In 1980 the regular budget deficit was 9 billion. In 1981, the deficit of the regular budget will be approximately 90 billion drachma. In other words, it will be 10 times that of 1980. It is, of course, obvious that with such deficits we will have to be thrifty. We will have to pursue a policy aimed at the revitalization of our economy. We will have to proceed with a policy to increase the national income, because this is the only way to absorb the unemployed. This year's increase in the national product is estimated -- this is the best we can say -- at a minimum. In all probability, it will be negative. Our own goal will be that within 1982 we should reach -- let us say -- an increase of 2.5 percent.

"Naturally, there is always the danger that such an expansionist policy will strengthen inflation which, unfortunately, will justify the forecast I made for 1981 when I was speaking on the budget, that is, that it will reach 30 percent. It is consequently clear that in the same way that it is essential for us to have an expansionist policy, it is simultaneously just as essential to control, to check and to lessen the inflation rate. This is extremely basic if we take into consideration the polls which said that inflation was one of the main factors for a change of view among a section of the population. Our task is difficult, but I am optimistic that we will successfully deal with it."

Papandreou then made a short review of the international situation.

"In reference to the international sector, it is clear that the eastern Mediterranean is becoming a very tense area. The Middle East issues in all its dimensions, the recent assassination of As-Sadat, who formulated a policy in accordance with the Pentagon's instructions, the possibility of a clash between Libya and Egypt, the Cyprus issue, the Greek-Turkish -- as it is described -- differences in the Aegean; all this, within a more general atmosphere, demonstrate that the superpowers will proceed to new costly and more dangerous nuclear armaments. Within the framework, we will fight to strenghten our national independence and to forge and implement a genuinely independent national Greek foreign policy under which we will be in a position to keep our promises and to establish a new era, an era which at least in the European, the Balkan and the Middle East area will allow Greece to play a more decisive role."

Referring to domestic and social problems, the prime minister stated:

"Over and above the economic and foreign problems, we must not forget the critical sectors of our social life: relations between the state and the church; women's rights; purging the public services; the battle for a human environment; the struggle for administrative decentralization and for an administration with different morality; and, above all else, we must -- and I consider this critical -- we, the 172 [deputies] with our example, political activities and our personal life and morality must forge a new course. I would like to tell you that this natinal representative body in which we have a comfortable majority is an historic national body, an historic chamber, and all of us must truly rise to the height of the circumstances. This is my appeal.

"We must not forget, the prime minister continued, that the parliamentary group -- at a time when a party, a movement, is in opposition, has a great importance -- but it does not rule the outcome of a struggle. At a time when such a group is in the government, however, at a time when it is faced with the great task of change with historic dimensions, then this parliamentary group becomes the key. When we understand that we are the leaders of a nation at a critical period, then I believe we will also be able to make history, that each one of us will make history."

Papandreou then issued instructions on the operation of the parliamentary group and mentioned that Andonios Livanis is taking over the position of chief of the parliamentary group.

"In reference to the task which the new chairman, Alevras, will be taking over," he continued, "I am certain that he will be able to promote those changes which are needed so that we may create a Chamber which will support every deputy in his duty, whether it is legislative, as in our own case, or opposition, as in the case with New Democracy and the KKE. This first meeting closed with 1-minute silence in memory of the victims of the Polytechnic.

JOINT ECONOMIC COMMITTEE MEETS IN LIBYA

TA171710 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 17 Nov 81

[Text] The seventh round of meetings of the Turkish-Libyan joint economic committee has begun in Tripoli, the capital of Libya. Speaking at the opening session, State and Deputy Prime Minister Turgut Ozal, who is in Libya, said that relations between the two countries have greatly developed in recent years and that Turkish businessmen working in Libya have been very successful. Libyan Economy Minister (Abu Zait Umar) [title and name as heard] said that Turkish-Libyan relations are an example of friendship among Muslim countries in the Middle East. The joint economic committee meetings will continue through the activities of the trade, industry and banking subcommittees that have been formed. A protocol will be signed at the end of the talks that will last until Thursday. Ozal will leave for Abu Dhabi after concluding his contacts in Libya.

INTERIOR MINISTER LEAVES TO VISIT YUGOSLAVIA

TA171358 Ankara ANATOLIA in Turkish 1340 GMT 17 Nov 81

[Text] Istanbul, 17 Nov, (A.A.) -- Interior Minister Salahattin Cetiner has left for Yugoslavia as the guest of the Yugoslav federal secretary of internal affairs, Franjo Herljevic. Cetiner, accompanied by Security Director General Fahri Gorgulu, Deputy Security Director General Yusuf Aydin and Gendarme Adjutant Major Orhan Balli, said the following in connection with his visit before his departure at Yesilkoy airport:

"I am going to Yugoslavia as the guest of the Yugoslav federal secretary of internal affairs. We shall discuss issues concerning the Interior Ministry. One issue we will insistently dwell upon will be traffic. We shall cooperate on the issue of diminishing difficulties for our citizens on the E-5 road's Yugoslavian section and on solving their problems." Cetiner also inspected the Yesilkoy airport terminal.

COURT GIVES SIX LEFTIST MILITANTS DEATH SENTENCE

TA161716 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 16 Nov 81

[Text] The Istabbul 2d Military Court condemned to death today six members of the illegal Revolutionary Left organization [Dev-Sol] accused of killing former Prime Minister Nihat Erim, Istanbul Deputy Police Chief Mahmut Dikler and their bodyguards.

Sadettin Guven and Baki Altun were accused of killing Erim and his bodyguard in Dragos on 19 July 1980. Aslan Tayfun Ozkok, Aslan Sener Yildirim and Harun Kartal were accused of killing Dikler and his bodyguard. Ahmet Fazil Ozdemir was accused of providing the necessary arms to carry out the operations and encouraging them to commit the crimes. The verdict says that the six militants were condemned to death in accordance with Turkish penal law code 146/1 and that the court found no mitigating circumstances in the case.

BRIEFS

SOCIAL SECURITY AGREEMENT -- A Turkish-Austrian social security agreement has been signed in Istanbul. According to the agreement, Turkish workers employed in Austria will benefit from all the social security benefits provided to Austrian workers. The agreement was signed by the deputy under secretary of the Social Security Ministry on behalf of Turkey and by the Austrian ambassador to Ankara on behalf of Austria. According to the agreement, the working years spent in Turkey will be calculated in determining the retirement time of Turkish workers employed in Austria. Currently there are about 30,000 Turkish workers employed in Austria. [Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1400 GMT 13 Nov 81 TA]

DAILY REPORT

Western Europe

Vol VII No 223 19 November 1981

CONTENTS

AUSTRIA

Kreisky Firm on Defense Budget; No Interceptors [WIENER ZEITUNG 18 Nov] E 1
Committee Reviews Defense Budget [WIENER ZEITUNG 18 Nov] E 1
Program of Kreisky's Visit to Hungary 18-20 Nov [WIENER ZEITUNG 14 Nov] E 1
TV Commentator Praises Reagan Arms Proposals E 2

BENELUX

NETHERLANDS

CDA, Labor Parties React To Reagan Proposal F 1
DE VOLKSKRANT Hits U.S. Policy 'Confusion' [7 Nov] F 2

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Schmidt Meets Thatcher, Previews Brezhnev Talks J 1
Statement Issued on Talks J 1
Welcome Reagan's Arms Initiative J 1
Chancellor Expresses Concern Over SS-22 Missiles J 2
CDU Spokesman Praises Reagan Decision J 3
Press Reacts To Reagan Arms Negotiations Proposal J 3
Reagan Reacted Late [SUEDDEUTSCHE ZEITUNG 19 Nov] J 3
'Tables Turned' [DIE WELT 19 Nov] J 4
Unattainable Standard Set [FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE 19 Nov] J 4
Further Press Comment J 5

FRANCE

Mitterrand Lauds Fahd Plan as Spirit of Camp David K 1
Reagan 'Adroitly' Hits Ball Back to Soviets K 1
'Orly Group' Puts Rail Station on Bomb Alert K 1
Threat Closes Orly Airport K 2
Group Doubts 'Orly Group' Armenian K 2
Joint Communique on PS-FLN Talks Issued [EL MOUDJAHID 9 Nov] K 2
Cheysson: Chad Embassy To Be Reopened Soon K 4

ITALY & THE VATICAN

Government Response 'Positive' to Reagan Speech L 1
More on Response L 1
Libyan Representative Comments on Relations L 1

SPAIN

Suarez Said 'Unhappy', Considers Leaving UCD N 1
PCE Central Committee Gives Reasons for Expulsions [LA VANGUARDIA 13 Nov] N 1

NORDIC AFFAIRS

FINLAND

Political Parties Nominate Presidential Candidates P 1
SFP Nominates Jansson [HUFVUDSTADSBLADET 15 Nov] P 1
Coalition Party Nominates Holkeri [HUFVUDSTADSBLADET 16 Nov] P 1
Defense Chief Questions Limited Nuclear War Theory P 1
Briefs: Agreement With Brazil; Polish Loan P 2

SWEDEN

U.S. Fails To Exploit Submarine Propaganda Coup P 2
[SVENSKA DAGBLADET 12 Nov]
Stockholm Daily Scores USSR Note to Swedes [SVENSKA DAGBLADET 13 Nov] P 3
Paper Assesses USSR Reaction to Sub Incident [DAGENS NYHETER 13 Nov] P 4
Briefs: Forthcoming Military Appointments; P 5
Foreign Sub Observed

UNITED KINGDOM

Ministers Restate Stance on Sinai Peace Force Q 1
DAILY TELEGRAPH: Bold Challenge to Brezhnev [19 Nov] Q 1

CYPRUS

Intercommunal Talks Resume in Nicosia 18 Nov R 1
Missing Persons Committee on Future Meetings R 2
Czechoslovak Parliamentarians Arrive 18 Nov R 3
Meet With Ladhas R 3

GREECE

Military Jet Crashes in Aegean; Pilot Missing S 1
Spokesman Comments on Haig Visit Postponement S 1
New Libyan Statement on Greek-Israeli Relations [MESIMVRINI 17 Nov] S 1
Government Response [NEWS 18 Nov] S 1
I KATHIMERINI on PRAVDA Position on U.S. Bases [18 Nov] S 2
New Democracy Cites PASOK Misuse of TV, Radio S 2
PASOK Response S 3
KKE Justifies Blank Ballot in Chamber Vote S 3
Mavros Registers as Independent Center Deputy S 3

TURKEY

Libya's Al-Qadhdhafi Remarks on Bilateral Ties T 1
Turkmen Meets EEC, Council of Europe Officials T 1
Addresses Meeting T 1
UN Representative Speaks on Afghan Situation T 2
Iranian Health Minister Arrives on Official Visit T 2
Military Courts Condemn 13 Terrorists to Death T 2
Briefs: Economic Agreement With Austria T 2

KREISKY FIRM ON DEFENSE BUDGET; NO INTERCEPTORS

AU181139 Vienna WIENER ZEITUNG in German 18 Nov 81 p 1

[Summary] Chancellor Kreisky has taken a clear stand on the question of interceptors for the Austrian army: In a letter to National Defense Committee Chairman Josseck, the chancellor declared that despite his basically positive attitude toward the army's wish, he could not take the responsibility for burdening future government budgets by ordering such interceptors at this time. In a press conference following yesterday's cabinet meeting he elucidated his position. "He said the National Defense Council had never been left in any doubt about the fact that the purchase of interceptors was a budgetary question. Thus, Kreisky added, this decision applies only to the foreseeable future. The investments in the 'Goldhaube' [Golden Bonnet] air control system were nevertheless not wasted.

"Kreisky added that it was also necessary to look for alternatives. Thus one might purchase used 'Phantom' fighters -- Austria did not necessarily have to buy the most expensive equipment. But of course such an alternative could only be an interim solution. In reply to a newsman's question whether one should not buy missiles, the chancellor resolutely declared that this was prohibited by the state treaty. By making such an attempt one would 'merely arouse an opinion that should not be aroused in times such as these.' Kreisky emphatically repeated that he did regard the purchase of interceptors as expedient. He recalled the violations of Austrian airspace by U.S. planes during the Lebanon crisis and Soviet airspace violations during the CSSR crisis."

Committee Reviews Defense Budget

AU181355 Vienna WIENER ZEITUNG in German 18 Nov 81 p 2

[Summary] The Nationalrat's budget committee yesterday discussed the 1982 national defense budget providing for total expenditures of 13.4 billion schillings, 1.2 billion schillings more than in 1981, and 309.1 million schillings of revenues. The special investment budget attached to the regular budget provides for an additional 1 billion schillings that will be available if necessary. Defense Minister Roesch declared in the committee debate that he continued to favor the purchase of interceptors but that the Finance Minister at present regards this project as unworkable. He announced an increase in the soldiers' daily basic pay from 30 to 40 schillings.

People's Party speakers in the debate criticized the increase in allotments for national defense as merely compensation for inflation without actually providing any additional funds. Freedom Party spokesman Josseck announced his party's support for this budget chapter in view of its growth rate of nearly 10 percent and its provisions for better equipment issued to soldiers. Socialist Party defense spokesman Mondl stressed that the 1982 budget allotments would ensure the continuation of the army's investment program with the same priorities as in the past, as well as the further development of the militia system and the continuing implementation of the territorial defense concept.

PROGRAM OF KREISKY VISIT TO HUNGARY 18-20 Nov

AU161140 Vienna WIENER ZEITUNG in German 14 Nov 81 p 2

[Summary] According to a chancellery announcement, Chancellor Kreisky will pay an official visit to the Hungarian People's Republic at the invitation of the Hungarian Government. The program of Kreisky's visit provides, among other things, for talks with Pal Losonczi, chairman of the Presidential Council of the Hungarian People's Republic, with Janos Kadar, first secretary of the MSZMP Central Committee, and with Gyorgy Lazar, Council of Ministers chairman of the Hungarian People's Republic. Moreover, the Austrian delegation will inspect industrial enterprises and new hotel buildings in Budapest.

TV COMMENTATOR PRAISES REAGAN ARMS PROPOSALS

AU190841 Vienna Domestic Television Service in German 1830 GMT 18 Nov 81

[Hugo Portisch commentary]

[Text] Ladies and gentlemen, the hard core of President Reagan's proposal was the offer that NATO will renounce its deployment of missiles in Europe, but on the condition that the Soviet Union withdraw the already deployed missiles on its territory. That, ladies and gentlemen, is precisely what the peace movements in Europe have in mind, that would be wonderful, no missiles on both sides. That is also what the West European Governments would like best -- it would solve the dilemma, on the one hand, of having to carry out the complementary armament as faithful allies of NATO and, on the other, of being exposed to the pressure of the peace movements which say: no deployment of missiles in Europe.

That is also precisely what the Soviet Union will probably not accept: The Soviet Union has never voluntarily given up, or given up at all, a missile system that it has built up, built up at a cost of billions of rubles and with great technological efforts, but in all past negotiations it has always seen to it that a settlement is reached on the basis of parity but that the existing systems are retained. Hence there is basically little hope that this proposal by Reagan -- NATO renounces the deployment in exchange for the Soviet Union's withdrawal -- can actually be implemented. Moreover, the Soviet Union is of the opinion that this missile system, which it has on its territory and which is directed against West Europe, is counterbalanced by other weapons of NATO -- medium-range bombers that can carry nuclear bombs, submarine-based missiles and so forth. Well, that is a field where the Soviet argument is no longer very strong. The Soviet Union itself has medium-range bombers and, as the Soviet submarine which was stranded in Sweden has shown, it probably also has nuclear weapons on its submarines.

But the Soviet Union is highly likely to argue that France has nuclear weapons, that Great Britain has nuclear missiles, and these two countries could also attack the Soviet Union with their nuclear weapons. To make a long story short, the negotiations will be long-winded. Things will not work out as quickly, as smoothly as they would under the formula: we renounce, you withdraw. The negotiations will be long, and at the end of these negotiations, which will begin on 30 November, the result will most likely be an agreement based on parity, on the lowest possible level, that is with the lowest possible number of missiles.

Ladies and gentlemen: Is everything we hear now, Brezhnev's proposals, Reagan's proposals, only a propaganda battle, an exchange of blows? Is it intended at least to take the anti-American wind out of the sails of the peace movement? Is it intended not to leave the peace initiative alone to Brezhnev who will come to Bonn this coming weekend? Will the American side also become active in this respect? Yes, all this certainly enters into it. But it should not be overlooked that these proposals submitted by Reagan today contain a comprehensive offer for negotiations. And let us not forget: when the Soviets invaded Afghanistan, U.S. President Carter declared that there would be no basis for talks with the Soviet Union as long as Soviet troops were in Afghanistan. The policy of peaceful coexistence, detente, had been denounced until today. And that is exactly what Reagan is actually taking back with this extensive offer today. He suggests to Brezhnev to continue where they left off before the Soviet Union invaded Afghanistan -- to make the policy of detente again the basis of talks.

And that, ladies and gentlemen, is precisely what the Europeans have been demanding from the Americans lately. Afghanistan -- of course, the withdrawal of the Soviets should be demanded -- but to restore the basis for talking with the Soviet Union, and precisely in this field, in the field of disarmament, of arms limitation. And here Reagan has thus gone a very long way today to meet the European demands.

NETHERLANDS

CDA, LABOR PARTIES REACT TO REAGAN PROPOSAL

LD182230 Hilversum Domestic Service in Dutch 1508 GMT 18 Nov 81

[Current affairs program with unidentified moderator; Mr Faber, defense specialist for the Labor Party, Joep de Boer; defense specialist for the Christian Democratic Appeal; and Karel Roskamp, Netherlands Radio commentator -- in progress]

[Excerpts] [Moderator] Were these peace-loving arguments or not?

[Faber] I understood it was a wonderful address but the proposals that were made do not thrill me all that much. I consider them absolutely not negotiable, a splendid example of how to conduct propaganda by using the word "zero." But if you know that what you are advocating is absolutely unacceptable to the Soviet Union -- and that has been known since 1979 -- then I consider this to be bamboozling the people.

[Moderator] No reason for you to alter your position?

[Faber] No. I believe that what is needed more than ever is to proceed along the path taken by the peace movement, a road which we will mark in Amsterdam on 21 November. Now we are being engulfed with propaganda. Now one is pretending that decisive breakthroughs will be forced in the arms race, while everything said by the Soviet side about armament efforts, namely, by the United States, also as far as the "European theatre" is concerned, is simply being disregarded.

The Soviets will have to dismantle everything they have deployed. As for the old missiles which have now been replaced by the undoubtedly very modern SS-20 missiles, for 20 years we have not been harping on that. Now we ourselves have started a new round of cruise and Pershing II missiles -- that really is something new. Now we are suddenly bringing this up. Now we are prepared not to go ahead with that provided the Soviets are prepared to pull everything down. No this is not negotiable.

[Moderator] You are saying that this seems to be a peaceloving gesture by the old cowboy, but look out for his hidden shooting hand.

[Faber] Yes. If you examine his entire program -- short-range systems, seaborne cruise missiles, the very long-range weapons -- you see it is quite extensive. That is not to say that the Russians are doing any better. They are also at it in the same fashion, but the way these two meet each other halfway in so-called talk, they are almost bursting with distrust. What they are after is to force their opponent to his knees. The opponent does not care at all for such treatment. It seems that we will wait for years on end. My biggest concern, for that matter, is that the Netherlands Government -- as we are still discussing the general guidelines of the government program -- will respond positively to this initiative and will await the outcome of these negotiations while the arms race proceeds.

[Moderator] I want to ask Mr Joep de Boer, defence specialist for the Christian Democratic Appeal, whether that risk exists. Is Mr Reagan's address so reassuring to you or your party that this will influence your stance regarding whether or not the missiles should be deployed?

[De Boer] Yes, I think that the address was reassuring. As to whether or not this will influence our stance regarding the deployment of missiles, at this moment there is no reason to make any decision about that.

I think the address was reassuring because the supreme American authority has clearly come around to the Europeans' very high priority of negotiations with the Soviet Unions and has presented a total picture of how, in his view, the arms control effort should function in order to make the armament efforts superfluous while maintaining a justified equilibrium.

[Roskamp] I believe Mr Faber is right when he uses the words "propaganda" and "bamboozling of the people." The crucial point is not that the American President says: We wish to give up these new weapons, but that he requires the Russians to give up their defense system against the American, British and French submarine-based missiles which have been in existence for such a long time. If you take into account that two of these submarines are already capable of destroying the Soviet Union -- there are 30 of these deployed around the Soviet Union -- then you understand that the Soviet Union simply cannot take up that offer.

[De Boer] This is a typical example of a negative attitude. Brezhnev's moratorium proposal also required NATO not to do a number of things. I also requested that one should not immediately react to this in a negative fashion.

[Roskamp] A moratorium is quite different from dismantling.

[Faber] Reagan's offer of dismantling everything is weighty. The threshold has been raised incredibly high. The Russians will be engulfed in disgrace. We have proposed "zero" and they won't have any of it. One gets the impression that this offer is in effect designed to get these 572 missiles deployed here.

DE VOLKSKRANT HITS U.S. POLICY 'CONFUSION'

PM111507 Amsterdam DE VOLKSKRANT in Dutch 7 Nov 81 p 3

[Editorial: "Floundering"]

[Text] Anybody who thinks that Moscow has a monopoly on dialectical political argument is mistaken. They are experienced in it in Washington too.

Haig's thesis is that in the case of a conventional attack on West Europe by the Warsaw Pact, NATO has emergency plans which include, among other things, the firing of a nuclear warning shot. Weinberger's antithesis is that that is not true, that no such plan exists. The White House's synthesis is that both ministers are right: Haig rightly pointed out that NATO wields the strategy of "flexible response," which leaves a potential enemy in the dark over the nature of the response to an armed attack, and that in that context the firing of a nuclear warning shot is always considered a policy option; Weinberger rightly explained that such an option has never resulted in a specific military plan.

What sorry floundering over nothing. It may be that the firing of a nuclear warning shot is not part of NATO's military scenario. When such a proposal was put forward in the late sixties the objections were more of a military than of a political nature: The Soviet Union could well have taken a nuclear warning shot as a sign of weakness. But there is also undoubtedly the possibility that there is a place in the NATO defense scenario for the use of (tactical) nuclear weapons where there is a real lack of adequate conventional defense means. Therefore America in particular has always opposed an official statement renouncing first use of nuclear weapons.

The fact that NATO has resorted -- and intends to continue to resort -- to nuclear means to such an extent is enough in itself and is rightly opposed as a principal cause of the increasing tension between East and West. Rash and conflicting explanations in Washington about NATO's nuclear strategy, in which an armed conflict berween East and West is portrayed as a real threat, can only poison the international political climate even more. This is happening under a government which was to abolish the inconsistencies of the Carter period for good. Instead Washington has for the past year been the scene of foreign policy confusion, culiminating recently in Haig's audacious complaint about a conspirator in the White House. Is it not high time that the West European Governments fired a political warning shot at Washington? Preferably one with a powerful charge.

SCHMIDT MEETS THATCHER, PREVIEWS BREZHNEV TALKS

LD181140 Hamburg DPA in German 1037 GMT 18 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 18 Nov (DPA) -- Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher have briefed British government leaders, headed by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, in Bonn today on the topics the Federal Government plans to discuss during the forthcoming visit to Bonn by Soviet state and party leader Leonid Brezhnev.

At the start of the 1-day German-British Government consultations in Bonn, Schmidt had a 1-hour private meeting with Mrs Thatcher, who arrived in Bonn with six members of her cabinet. Parallel to this, Genscher had a meeting with his opposite number, Lord Carrington.

The heads of government and foreign ministers then continued their discussions jointly. In addition to Brezhnev's visit, the approaching U.S.-Soviet arms limitation talks on medium-range weapons as well as EEC budget problems are likely to have been in the foreground of the consultations.

Federal Chancellor Schmidt stressed at a luncheon the good state of German-British relations in many areas and paid tribute to the contribution of the Rhine Army, stationed in the Federal Republic, to joint security. With regard to Brezhnev's visit, Schmidt said that he would conduct his talks in closest consultation with the Western allies. "During our talks, we want to convey the certainty that we and our Western friends will continue the policy of cooperation," the chancellor said.

"We shall also state clearly, however, that the end of 1983 will see the beginning of the deployment of U.S. medium-range missiles in West Europe if negotiations have not led to mutually agreed reductions and maximum numbers. We will press strongly for a zero solution." According to Schmidt, the Federal Government interprets Brezhnev's visit "as an expression of the fact that the Soviet Union has also realized and recognizes the need for a security partnership between East and West, in other words a partnership for preserving and consolidating peace."

Statement Issued on Talks

LD181344 Hamburg DPA in German 1312 GMT 18 Nov 81

[Excerpt] Bonn, 18 Nov (DPA) -- Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher spoke out in Bonn today in favor of strengthening German-British relations and constantly coordinating their positions, also in the interests of European unity and joint security in the NATO alliance.

In a joint press statement at the conclusion of the 10th German-British consultations, the two heads of government also stressed their countries' contribution to joint defense and emphasized the alliance's demands for military balance between East and West at the lowest possible level. Federal Chancellor Schmidt paid tribute to the "indispensible role" of the British forces stationed in the Federal Republic.

The chancellor and prime minister spoke out in favor of expanding the diverse relations between the two countries in all fields. The extent and intensity of the contacts was greater today than at any previous time in the two countries' history, the heads of government noted.

Welcome Reagan's Arms Initiative

LD181742 Hamburg DPA in German 1655 GMT 18 Nov 81

[Excerpts] Bonn, 18 Nov (DPA) -- Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher expressly welcomed in Bonn on Wednesday U.S. President Ronald Reagan's disarmament initiative.

Speaking to journalists at the end of the 1-day German-British consultations, Schmidt described the American peace strategy as "an expression of what we Germans were bound to want and did want." The chancellor particularly emphasized that the American President, in his proposals dealt especially carefully with the strategic, political and psychological situation in Europe. Reagan had also responded to the fears of people on arms stockpiling, Schmidt said. For this he is particularly grateful.

Prime Minister Thatcher called Reagan's initiative "extremely important and to be welcomed." She expressed the hope of a positive response from Moscow and stressed above all that the American President has not only proposed a limitation, but a clear reduction, of arms. There is a long way from such talks to a positive result, but she hopes for a realization of the disarmament wishes.

Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher have expressly supported U.S. President Ronald Reagan's initiative for comprehensive disarmament talks with Moscow in Bonn on Wednesday.

Margaret Thatcher said that the European Community has to concentrate on three fundamental problems in order to overcome its difficulties: the form of the social and regional funds, the agricultural policy and the budget problems of the EC. Parallel progress will have to be achieved in all three spheres, for which the coming EC summit should set guidelines. Decisions will have to be made in 1982 as regards the question of EC contributions.

Earlier Finance Minister Hans Matthoefer told British Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Geoffrey Howe that in the negotiations on EC contributions for next year Bonn will no longer be prepared, as it was in the past, to be the only high net payer without the setting of an upper limit. Apart from this the rise in agricultural expenditure will have to be reduced in order to release funds for other tasks.

Both heads of government also advocated close international cooperation and consultation in the fight against global economic problems and unemployment. Schmidt appealed to all states to create the prerequisites as quickly as possible for a lowering of interest rates.

In answer to a journalist, who asked how she regards the initiative by Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher to extend the community into a European (political) union, Mrs Thatcher said that her government has expressed no reservations as yet. London has not yet studied the proposals in detail and is waiting for further details at the EC summit meeting. Schmidt added that the initiative for a European union is a joint effort of the German and Italian Governments and not a personal idea of Genscher, who nevertheless deserves the "credit" for it.

SCHMIDT EXPRESSES CONCERN OVER SS-22 MISSILES

NC181445 Paris AFP in English 1433 GMT 18 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 18 Nov (AFP) -- West Germany is seriously worried by the new Soviet SS-22 missiles, which have a reported range of 1,000 km (625 miles). Chancellor Helmut Schmidt made this clear at a meeting of the Social Democratic Party Central Committee, when he said the SS-22's should be put on the agenda of the U.S.-Soviet arms talks opening in Geneva on November 30. Prior to Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev's visit to West Germany starting on Sunday, experts here say the SS-22's are a threat to West Germany and North Atlantic Treaty Organisation (NATO) installations.

They say that even if an agreement is reached in Geneva to dismantle the Soviet SS-20 missiles, which have a reported 2,500 km (about 2,800 miles) range, the SS-22's would be a means of getting around the agreement, because they could still target West Germany. "It is therefore essential," a top West German official told AGENCE FRANCE-PRESSE, "that these new weapons should be taken into account in the negotiations." West German officials are worried in particular by the reported precision of the new generation of Soviet missiles. This, they say makes them ideal weapons for a "limited" nuclear war in Europe. Official circles here insist that deployment of the new missiles runs counter to the May 1978 joint West German-Soviet declaration issued at the end of President Brezhnev's visit to Bonn then.

The statement said that both sides considered it important that no-one should seek military superiority. Equality and approximate parity were enough for defence. But since that statement, officials say here, Moscow had launched its program of deploying SS-20's, SS-21's, SS-22's, and SS-23's, all said to have no equivalent in NATO. (NATO has 180 Pershing I's with a reported 700 km (75 miles) range, and 26 batteries of Honest John missiles, which have a 60 km (about 38 miles) range. All these systems are old ones.)

Military observers here say that by stressing the SS-22 threat, Chancellor Schmidt wanted to point out that the Geneva talks should take into account the "overall Eurostrategic threat," not just the question of SS-20 missiles.

CDU SPOKESMAN PRAISES REAGAN DECISION

LD181642 Hamburg DPA in German 1558 GMT 18 Nov 81

[Excerpt] Bonn, 18 Nov (DPA) -- In the opinion of the opposition, American President Ronald Reagan refuted the "stupid and irresponsible accusation" that America does not really want disarmament but is aiming for military superiority. This was emphasized by the foreign affairs spokesman of the CDU/CSU parliamentary party, Alois Mertes, on Wednesday in Bonn.

In Mertes' view, Reagan's support for a global zero option in land-based medium-range missiles shows especially which of the nuclear superpowers really wants a halt to the arms race and disarmament in practice and not only in word. It is only hoped that the Soviet Union will respond to the "serious and progressive" disarmament proposal by the United States in the same way. Moscow would thus fulfill the conditions of the Nuclear Nonproliberation Treaty equally with Washington.

PRESS REACTS TO REAGAN ARMS NEGOTIATIONS PROPOSAL

Reagan Reacted Late

DW191029 Munich SUEDDEUTSCHE ZEITUNG in German 19 Nov 81 p 4

[Article signed A: "Reagan Wants To Turn Tables"]

[Text] President Reagan got through the first 10 months of his tenure without ever having made a coherent statement on his foreign policy ideas and goals. As he said himself, up until now he considered this to be superfluous and therefore not very sensible. Meanwhile the development of the various West European peace movements which Washington did not take seriously for a long time has opened the President's eyes. His speech before the National Press Club in Washington is an attempt to regain at least part of the European public opinion which he had lost due to this thoughtlessness.

For the first time the President has publicly endorsed the so-called zero solution in West Europe's nuclear counterarmament — the renunciation by both sides of the deployment of medium-range nuclear missiles, which would mean, however that the Russians would have to dismantle the weapons they have already deployed. Washington continues to be convinced that Moscow will not accept such a deal. But Reagan has finally realized that his refusal to publicly support the zero solution at least as a goal was constant grist for the mills of Russian propaganda. This comes late, but America has nevertheless now turned the tables. The skeptics in Europe are to be shown that nuclear disarmament on the continent is being hindered by the Kremlin and not by the White House.

Whether Reagan's disclosure of the U.S. negotiating position was a wise gesture is open to debate. In 1977 Jimmy Carter did not have good experiences when he revealed the U.S. SALT concepts. If Reagan had given less shrill signals in the beginning, he would have been spared his late appearance at the Washington press club.

'Tables Turned'

DW191129 Bonn DIE WELT in German 19 Nov 81 p 1

[Wilfried Hertz-Eichenrode commentary: "Tables Turned"]

[Text] Zero solution -- until a short time ago that was still a delusive light, a glimmer of hope and a demagogic slogan. This non-word was a delusive light in the heads of those who believed that we only needed to demand the scrapping of all nuclear medium-range missiles in Europe loudly enough to turn it into reality. Willy Brandt brought the "zero solution" as a glimmer of hope from Moscow and hoped thus to have found a unification formula for the hopelessly quarrelling SPD. Unscrupulous "peace movement" agitators used the term as a demagogic slogan against the United States. This zero game with all its variants was directed more against Washington than against Moscow.

This is over now because Ronald Reagan has turned the tables. He took ahold of the zero phantom and stripped it of its character of an unrealistic goal. He cast the term like molten iron into a concrete form of negotiation diplomacy -- zero solution now means that NATO will not counterarm if the Soviet Union withdraws all its medium-range missiles targeted on West Europe.

Several things have thus been achieved:

All of a sudden the issue of forthcoming negotiations between the United States and the USSR as well as the unbounded general peace discussion have been reduced to their core, namely, the armament lead of the Soviets with land-based medium-range missiles in Europe. Reagan has taken the distrustful Europeans, particularly the Germans, at their word, thus creating unanimity among the NATO partners regarding the opening phase of missile negotiations; and immediately before Brezhnev's visit to Bonn, Reagan has established close ties with the German chancellor regarding the most explosive of world political problems.

These are undeniable advantages. However, this does not say anything about the usefulness of the zero solution as a subject of negotiations. Brezhnev will counter with his major thesis that the deployment of SS-20's has changed nothing in the approximate balance allegedly already existing in Europe. The first severe test will occur when the Soviet leader comes to Bonn. Schmidt, one of the creators of the formula announced by Reagan, may not sway or yield when Brezhnev presents him with the completely different Soviet version of the "zero solution."

Unattainable Standard Set

DW191135 Frankfurt FRANKFURTER ALLGEMEINE in German 19 Nov 81 p 1

[Article signed G-N.: "The Zero Solution"]

[Text] A few days prior to the beginning of the federal chancellor's talks with Brezhnev in Bonn, the U.S. President has explained the goals of negotiations with the Soviet Union. If the Soviet Union dismantles the medium-range weapons threatening Europe, the West will renounce the deployment of corresponding U.S. weapons in West Europe. This is to be based on numerical equality and even go as low as "zero" for both sides. By Reagan's statement the so-called "zero solution" has become an operational part of the West's negotiating plan.

West Europe, in particular Bonn, is greatly relieved over this. It may be assumed that in this expansion of the U.S. negotiating line, Schmidt and Genscher see above all the success of their efforts. Now it has been proven publicly that the U.S. Government really wants to achieve disarmament in Geneva. But who ever doubted that? Since December 1979 NATO communiques have said that all Western allies, including the American leading power, want to remove the Soviet medium-range weapons through negotiations and to this end decided to barter a smaller number of their own medium-range weapons which would be deployed after 3 years.

From the outset the American desire for negotiations was no less than that of the Germans. But the chances of success were seen as being smaller by Washington than by the Bonn SPD. This caused the SPD to doubt Washington's willingness. It was the SPD leaders who created doubts about Washington's policy and now they believe they have improved it.

Have they possibly worsened it by improving it? The "zero solution" is the most radical solution of all. From 20 years of arms control negotiations we know that so far the Soviet Union has only agreed to marginal limitations of its armament and that radical limitations are therefore quite unlikely. However, by propagating the "zero solution", which Brandt urged upon the Federal Government, unattainable standards have been set. The SPD leadership is harboring the wrong expectations and thus harms a better understanding of the West's security policy. But this lack of understanding will benefit Soviet propaganda in West Europe time and again. The Western proposal is based on the assumption that Moscow cannot accept it. A serious negotiating position has been changed propagandistically.

Further Press Comment

DW191303 Cologne Deutschlandfunk Network in German to East and West Germany 0605 GMT 19 Nov 81

[Press review]

[Excerpts] HESSICHE NIEDERSACHSISCHE ALLGEMEINE of Kassel notes: This peace offensive comes late, but not too late. It may be considered a blemish that the President is reacting to the fears and worries which his administration's sabre rattling has caused for months in Europe. But it would be unjust to question the frankness and honesty of American intentions just because of an obvious tactical move. The policy of deterrence propagated loudly or with contestable arguments by Reagan and his secretaries was at no time aimed at provoking war; it was much rather supposed to help prevent it. It is, therefore, important and historically significant that the President now complements the concept of strength with an offer to safeguard peace in all spheres of military armament.

WIESBADENER KURIER points out: It seems that Washington has understood the signals coming from the other side of the Atlantic. It is not by chance that the White House chief has announced a change of course just a few days prior to Brezhnev's visit to Bonn. Chancellor Schmidt now has — to use a comparison — the ammunition he needs to make the Soviets listen although they are hard of hearing. The disarmament negotiations for which the NATO partners, headed by Bonn, have been pressing so hard will begin next Monday in Bonn, although not under that name. Schmidt, who strictly rejects being an interpreter or even a mediator, has the function of a transformer. Maybe he will be successful in reducing the high tension if his thesis is right that neither Brezhnev nor Reagan are anxious for war. If he can convince both world power representatives of this, there should be a way to make peace more stable.

BRAUNSCHWEIGER ZEITUNG stresses: Reagan's proposals point to a situation which has been considered only little in Europe -- after nuclear disarmament the enormous Soviet superiority in the field of conventional weapons would be fully felt. It is not only logical but also necessary to create a balance there.

MITTERRAND LAUDS FAHD PLAN AS SPIRIT OF CAMP DAVID

AU181812 Rome ANSA in English 1523 GMT 18 Nov 81

[Text] Milan, 17 Nov (ANSA) -- French President Francois Mitterrand lauded Saudi Arabia's Middle East peace proposals as "effectively" offering "the beginning of a settlement, an approach to negotiations" in an interview published in the Italian IL CORRIERE DELLA SERA daily today.

"Compared with the Camp David agreements," the French president commented, "the Fahd plan has the advantage of setting the premises for a settlement that opens the path to negotiations."

The multilateral peace-keeping force in the Sinai, according to Mitterrand, is part of "the spirit of Camp David," although those accords have "already finished their function." Mitterrand nonetheless gave the Camp David agreements credit for having reconciled Israel and Egypt which, he added, "was no small thing."

On other issues, the French leader said his government "has truly gotten cooperation from the European Economic Community for its efforts to promote peace and independence in Africa." The Lome Convention, which governs special trade ties between the European ten and a number of Third World countries in Africa, the Caribbean and the Pacific, was hailed by Mitterrand as "a model" for relations between industrialized and developing nations even though there was still room for improvement in the pact.

REAGAN 'ADROITLY' HITS BALL BACK TO SOVIETS

LD181818 Paris Domestic Service in French 1700 GMT 18 Nov 81

[(Jean-Luc Hess) Washington dispatch]

[Text] Speaking to the National Press Club, Ronald Reagan essentially addressed himself to the Europeans: first to show them that Washington does not intend to promote a new sort of Cold War, and then to restate clearly the stakes, that is, peace or war for the nations of the old continent. It is obviously a reply to the big pacifist and anti-American demonstrations which have taken place in Bonn, London, Brussels and Rome -- demonstrations which are worrying America.

With great lyricism Ronald Reagan recalled that during his life he has seen Europe ravaged twice by war, and that twice he has seen young Americans give their lives to come to the aid of their allies. Can one then speak of American imperialism, he asked. But he issued a warning to the younger generations, which doubtless today do not understand the need for a nuclear balance between East and West. These young generations, Reagan said, must understand that thanks to NATO Europe is now living though its longest period of peace in this century.

In a word, today America hit the ball back to the Soviet side. Ronald Reagan did so with infinitely more adroitness than when he mentioned a month ago the possibility of a nuclear conflict with the USSR limited to the European battlefield. Reagan wanted to reassure Europe, while knowing full well that in fact there is very little chance that Moscow will agree to these proposals for disarmament and force reductions.

'ORLY GROUP' PUTS RAIL STATION ON BOMB ALERT

NC181156 Paris AFP in English 1142 GMT 18 Nov 81

[Text] Paris, 18 Nov (AFP) -- Police were today searching for a bomb at the Gare du Nord railway terminus after a warning had been received about noon.

A bomb placed in a luggage locker exploded in the nearby Gare de l'Est railway terminus on Monday night, wounding two people. Responsibility for it was claimed by the Beirut-based "Orly Group" of Armenian extremists who attacked six French targets in the Lebanon over the weekend. Five Armenian extremists are being held by French police, and the "Orly Group" has threatened to blow up an Air France airliner if one of them, Dimitriu Georgio, was not released immediately.

Threat Closes Orly Airport

NC191428 Paris AFP in English 1415 GMT 19 Nov 81

[Excerpt] Paris, 19 Nov (AFP) -- Orly Airport south of here was closed to all traffic today following terrorist threats, police sources said. The aircraft control tower was cleared of all personnel. (Earlier this week the Orly organisation, an Armenian group threatened to blow up an Air France plane. The organisation is seeking the release of "Comrade Dimitriu Giorgiu," arrested by French authorities at Orly Airport last week and charged with using a fake passport.

Group Doubts 'Orly Group' Armenian

NC181039 Paris AFP in English 1025 GMT 18 Nov 81

[Text] Paris, 18 Nov (AFP) -- Dimitriu Georgiu, a suspected Armenian militant arrested last Wednesday for entering France on a fake passport, is probably not himself an Armenian. The powerful Armenian revolutionary federation "Dashnag" said in a statement to AFP today: "Documents in our possession lead us to be 80 percent certain that Georgiu is not Armenian." It also claimed that it doubted whether the Beirut-based organisation calling itself "Orly", which has carried out six bomb attacks in Lebanon to protest the arrest of Mr Georgiu is in fact Armenian as it claims.

"We are not going to allow militant groups, who do not represent many people, pretend to be acting on behalf of the Armenian community here," the federation said. "Dashnag" claims to represent 60 percent of the 300,000 Armenians living in France.

JOINT COMMUNIQUE ON PS-FLN TALKS ISSUED

PM171133 Algiers EL MOUDJAHID in French 9 Nov 81 p 14

[APS report: "Stepping Up Exchanges"]

[Text] Paris -- At the end of their meeting the FLN and the French Socialist Party [PS] issued the following communique:

At the PS' invitation an FLN delegation led by Slimane Hoffman, member of the Central Committee and chairman of the External Relations Committee, made an official visit to France 6 and 7 November 1981.

The two delegations expressed the parties' desire to develop economic, scientific and cultural cooperation between the two countries and to give it a practical content by in particular setting up the appropriate structures. In this respect the two delegations consider that the new spirit which now prevails in French-Algerian relations should make it possible to settle questions of common interest in an overall framework and to open new long-term prospects leading to practical action for development.

The two delegations agree that a better mutual knowledge by the two peoples is a decisive factor in bringing the two countries closer. In this context they pledged to step up exchanges at all levels.

The two delegations also made a detailed examination of the international situation, whose grave nature is a serious threat to peace and security in the world.

The two parties express their acute anxiety at the rise of tension, the repeated attacks on democracy and on the peoples' right to freely determine their future.

They recall their complete support for the principle of self-determination for the peoples, respect for their sovereignty and their free political choices and support for the struggle to eliminate all forms of domination and dependence.

The two parties, which are convinced of the indivisible nature of peace and security in the world -- and more especially in Europe and the Mediterranean -- stress the danger to peace posed by the existence of hotbeds of tension and express the urgent need for action to create a climate detente.

Recalling their previous pledges to work together to make the Mediterranean basin a sea of peace and an example of cooperation among peoples, the two delegations reaffirm their desire to help build a harmonious Mediterranean entity freed from any relationship of domination and exploitation and based on economic complementarity for the balanced overall development of the region's countries.

Examining the situation in the Near and Middle East, the two delegations exchanged their respective viewpoints. They express their acute concern at the aggravation of tension in the region and the two parties' intention to pursue their efforts to find a just and lasting peace.

The two delegations reiterate their solidarity with the Lebanese people and their progressive forces in safeguarding Lebanon's territorial integrity, national unity and sovereignty.

Turning to the situation in northwest Africa, the two parties recall that the West Sahara question is one of decolonization. The two delegations reiterate their support for the principles spelled out by the United Nations and the OAU for a settlement of this problem.

In keeping with the OAU's relevant reslutions and especially those of the Nairobi summit, the two delegations demand the prompt holding of a just, free and general referendum for the West Saharan people's self-determination. They call for negotiations to be opened between Morocco and the Polisario Front.

With regard to the development of the situation in southern Africa, the two parties once again condemn the attempts made in Namibia to impose neocolonial solutions to a liberation struggle, reaffirming their indestructible solidarity with the struggle of the Namibian people under the leadership of SWAPO, their representative, just as they condemn the South African racist regime's armed attacks on the frontline countries and, more especially, on Angola.

The two delegations once again express their active support for the South African people in their struggle against apartheid and for the ANC, their progressive movement.

The two parties, examining the political outlook, stress the importance of the Nonaligned Movement and its role as an autonomous and dynamic political force in international relations.

As regards the situation in Latin America, the two parties condemn external interference and interventions in the peoples' struggles for independence, justice and freedom. The two delegations express their solidarity with the peoples of that region and hail the Salvadoran people's exemplary struggle.

The two delegations welcome the democratic forces' political and social victories in Europe the possibilities for change which they open up with a view to autonomous development in Europe, the establishment of fruitful and balanced cooperation with the developing countries and the strengthening of solidarity with the Third World's progressive forces.

The two parties express their determination to struggle against the existing relations of domination and exploitation which govern international economic relations. They insist on the right of the peoples to full sovereignty over their national resources and to the free choice of their model of economic and social development.

The two parties pledge to do all they can to ensure that there is practical action on the conclusions of the Cancun summit; notably in reviving the "global negotiations" with a view to a new international economic order based on the Third World countries' legitimate demands, the interdependence of peoples' interests, the democratization of international institutions and the reshaping of the international monetary system.

The FLN and the PS are convinced that the definition and establishment of a new type of relationship between North and South is one of the essential conditions for the building of peace and security in the world. They are determined to act to ensure that Algerian-French relations are exemplary in this sphere.

The two parties agreed to develop their relations, to strengthen their ties of cooperation in all spheres and to give greater consideration to problems of common interest. To this end a draft cooperation agreement was drawn up.

The FLN delegation warmly thanked the PS for the warm welcome it had been given and invited a PS delegation to visit Algeria in 1952. That invitation was accepted with pleasure.

CHEYSSON: CHAD EMBASSY TO BE REOPENED SOON

AB181651 Paris AFP in English 1417 GMT 18 Nov 81

[Text] Paris, Nov 18 (AFP) -- France is to send an ambassador to its former colony of Chad, Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson said after today's cabinet meeting. Mr Cheysson said that France was only awaiting the approval of the Chadian authorities. French interests in Chad are currently handled during periodic visits by diplomats from neighbouring Cameroon. The last French ambassador in Ndjamena, Marcel Beaux, left the country along with French civilians and the remaining French troops based in Chad in May last year, two months after fighting broke out in the capital between government forces and rebel troops under former defence minister Hissene Habre.

The French Embassy is only a few hundred metres (yards) from the scenes of the heaviest fighting. France retained a consulate in southern Chad at Moundou, and Charge d'Affaires Pierre Ricard set up an office in Cameroon across the river Chari from Ndjamena. No date had been set for reopening the embassy, a Foreign Ministry spokesman said, as the building had been badly damaged during the civil war.

Mr Cheysson also today denied a report in the left-wing Paris daily newspaper LIBERATION that France was to send military advisers to Chad. The Foreign Ministry spokesman said later that such a move was not envisaged, and French policy towards Chad had not changed.

French President Francois Mitterrand said at the beginning of November that there had never been any question of sending French troops to help Chadian President Goukouni Oueddei. France would, however, give technical and financial aid towards reconstructing both a Chadian national army and the city of Ndjamena, Mr Mitterrand said. France gave logistical support to President Goukouni last month, supplying some 24 tons of light arms and ammunition. But sources here said there was no decision yet on the possibility of having French instructors train Chadian officers in a third country like Cameroon or Zaire. France has also offered logistical aid to the separate contingents making up the six-nation African peace-keeping force for Chad, to be negotiated individually with each country which requested it.

GOVERNMENT RESPONSE 'POSITIVE' TO REAGAN SPEECH

LD181904 Rome Domestic Service in Italian 1800 GMT 18 Nov 81

[Text] The first comment by Prime Minister Spadolini and the Foreign Ministry on Reagan's speech is positive. It is appreciated that the U.S. Government is fully associating itself with the theses expressed by the European allies, and especially Italy, on the "zero option," that is, that the hypothesis of reducing to zero the deployment of medium-range missiles by both sides should be the objective of the Soviet-American negotiations which begin in Geneva toward the end of the month.

More on Response

LD182252 Rome Domestic Service in Italian 2130 GMT 18 Nov 81

[Excerpt] In reaction to today's speech by U.S. President Ronald Reagan, Prime Minister Spadolini emphasized that on the eve of the Geneva negotiations the U.S. proposal means that the viewpoints of the European governments, as well as their anxiety and uncertainty, have been accepted by the Washington administration. He expressed his belief that the Geneva negotiations as well as Brezhnev's visit to Bonn would be encouraged by this relevant stance.

Foreign Minister Colombo has said that Reagan's speech proved the U.S. willingness to proceed -- with determination and consistency -- with negotiations which involve all aspects of nuclear and conventional arms, as urged by the Europeans and especially by Italy. With regard to the Geneva negotiations, Colombo said: I wish to express great pleasure about the precise reference made by the president that the zero level of missiles by both sides is the objective of these negotiations, as well as the serious commitment for the success of this initiative.

LIBYAN REPRESENTATIVE COMMENTS ON RELATIONS

AU181050 Roma ANSA in English 0821 GMT 18 Nov 81

[Text] Palermo, 18 Nov (ANSA) -- Italy and Libya have not been able to find a common meeting ground in political and human relations because there is no "foundation of trust, of comprehension and of friendship" between the two countries, Libyan representative to Italy ('Ammar Tagazi) revealed in an interview with the Sicilian newspaper, "L'ORA". The interview, which appeared in the Palermo daily on Tuesday at the conclusion of an eight day visit by the Libyan official to the island region, included remarks by (Tagazi) to the effect that "our trade relations with Italy have reached a volume of exchange higher than with any other European country or with America." The Tripoli government representative put the figure for trade exchange between his country and Italy at ten million dollars, but added that "with Italy, it is as if we were plowing on the sea." (Tagazi) noted that "we have economic relations for millions of dollars, while political, human and cultural relations instead remain at zero." (Tagazi) however described the results of his visit as "positive" in the interview and said that he "reached an agreement with the regional President Mario d'Acquisto, to institute a mixed commission to define the possibilities and the sectors of exchange between Sicily and the Libyan Jamahiriyah."

Asked during the interview to comment on Libyan leader Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi's threats against Sicily because of its designation as the site for NATO cruise missiles, (Tagazi) replied that "we hope that both sides of the Mediterranean remain without missiles of medium or short range." "If we leave one side loaded and the other not" he continued, "the possibilities for aggression are always present."

SUAREZ SAID 'UNHAPPY,' CONSIDERS LEAVING UCD

NC191116 Paris AFP in English 1105 GMT 19 Nov 81

[Text] Madrid, 19 Nov (AFP) -- Former Prime Minister Adolfo Suarez is about to quit the ruling Democratic Centre party, which he founded in 1977 and led in two successful elections, that year and in 1979, he announced today. Mr Suarez told newsmen that he was unhappy that his advice had not been heeded during a recent party crisis, adding: "Unfortunately I am no longer at ease in the party and have no choice but to quit." Spain's first prime minister under the constitutional monarch said that he would continue to fight for the values of the centre, in which he still firmly believed. Mr Suarez had been heavily criticized by certain Spanish newspapers over recent weeks, with allegations that he had deliberately made the party crisis more complicated. Several deputies have quit the ruling party in the same period, distrubed at what they view as a shift to the right under Prime Minister Leopoldo Calvo-Sotelo, and have founded the Democratic Action Party.

PCE CENTRAL COMMITTEE GIVES REASONS FOR EXPULSIONS

PM181515 Barcelona LA VANGUARDIA in Spanish 13 Nov 81 pp 3-4

[Excerpt] Madrid, 12 November -- After 0400 the PCE Central Committee decided to expel the six members who signed the document of support for the talk which Roberto Lertxundi gave in Madrid 5 November. The result of the Central Committee vote was 67 votes in favor of expulsion, 24 against and 8 blank votes. As LA VANGUARDIA reported in yesterday's edition, the six people concerned (Brabo, Arroyo, Zaldivar, Segura, Azcarate and Sartorius) drafted at 2130 on Wednesday a document in which, in short, they accepted the 10th congress resolutions and the party's rules and discipline; added that they deemed an atmosphere of dialogue and debate to be necessary so that disagreement would not be an offense but a factor enriching the party; acknowledged that the calling of the meeting in Madrid was contrary to the rules, but explained that they have never attempted to run counter to the current leadership; and, last, maintained that the policy of penalties was not the most appropriate and should be replaced by other formulas, although they did not specify which.

Executive Committee Meeting

Next this document was examined by the party's Executive Committee at a meeting which lasted almost 3 hours, until after 0200. At about 0230, the Central Committee Plenum, which studied and approved a resolution submitted by the Executive Committee, resumed. This resolution stated, verbatim:

"1 -- The Central Committee believes that the statement submitted by comrades Julio Segura, Manuel Azcarate, Pilar Arroyo, Pilar Brabo, Carlos Alonso Zaldivar and Jaime Sartorius is not essentially a correction of their stance but, as it states at its conclusion, the summary of some of the individual stances which they have maintained in their speeches before the plenum.

"2 -- The Central Committee believes that a correction should necessarily include: (A) Acknowledgement that the calling of the meeting attended by Lertxundi and Onaindia in Madrid is an action contrary to the rules and objectively an adoption of a stance against the party leadership, as well as a political mistake. (B) Their pledge to respect henceforth the 10th congress decisions and the rules approved at it, as well as the decisions of the party's leadership bodies. (C) Since the party rules guarantee for all members the right to uphold freely their opinions and to exercise freely the right to criticism in the party's regular organizations -- a right which has been denied to no party member -- the above-mentioned comrades pledge not to take to the news media stances contrary to the decisions of the congress and of the party's leadership bodies.

"On the basis of acceptance of these three points, the Central Committee confines its penalties to a severe warning to the six Central Committee members who have erred. Otherwise, the Executive Committee's alternative proposal of expulsion from the Central Committee of the above-mentioned comrades who do not accept this proposition would be put to the vote."

Those Concerned Do Not Accept

When this proposal was put to the vote, the Central Committee endorsed it by 81 votes in favor, 11 against and 3 abstentions. Nevertheless, the 6 people concerned refused to accept the Executive Committee's proposition, and so the alternative proposal of expulsion — which secured, as has been said, 76 votes in favor, 24 against and 8 abstentions — was approved. Therefore the six people concerned were removed from their posts as Central Committee members.

"There Will Be no Witch Hunt"

At the conclusion of the meeting Santiago Carrillo told journalists that "The Central Committee has declared itself in favor of a coherent policy and of ending the spectacle of the PCE as a kind of Union of the Democratic Center of the left. The vast majority of our members are demanding that there be a sense of responsibility and order internally and that this spectacle end. We have sought to achieve that through an effort of conviction and through [words apparently dropped in newspaper] in which the political line and the fact that work as an organized tendency was not possible were made clear." Carrillo added that this has not been respected, and we have had to end up adopting measures. But even today, we made a final effort and called on them to correct themselves; instead they submitted to us a document which is a confirmation, and that is why it was necessary to adopt measures, which does not mean that a witch hunt is going to begin the PCE. "The whole drama," he said, "boils down to the fact that we have regularized a situation and that we are determined that that regularization be carried out. Nothing will happen." He stated that it had grieved him to have to make this decision, but, "If once, when I had to choose between my father and the party, I chose the party, when it is a matter of choosing between my friends and the party, I choose my party." He stressed that "I believe that essentially the crisis ends here, although there will be vestiges."

"No Repercussions on Election"

In Carrillo's opinion, this decision will have no consequences for the PCE in the general election. "If a drop in votes occurs, it will be not because of this but because of the spectacle which we have been presenting for months and months. But if we present an image of responsibility and cohesion and of having order, I am certain that we will move up, and I am awaiting a test which is imminent — the Andalusian elections."

Azcarate: "False Reasons"

For his part, Manuel Azcarate, one of the expellees, said that "they have expelled us by putting forward false reasons." Clearly upset, he stated that he could recall no precedents such as the current precedent in the party's history, saying that the process was conducted hastily over a document which was signed only 1 week ago. He added that "I will remain communist, but the way in which this was done, the arguments which were put forward, in my opinion, were false. We are not a faction. We are a group of communists who, I believe, have contributed and will continue to contribute to the party. I am quite upset about the whole procedure and the way in which we were ousted." For his part, Zaldivar said that "The way in which we were expelled is a great mess."

The Central Committee's decision has provoked various reactions. Thus, for instance, while the Communist Party of Huelva regards the expulsions as "necessary," the Communist Party of Galicia Secretary General Gonzalez Montoto expressed his "unpleasant surprise at the decision made." From Paris, [former PCE Executive Committee member] Jorge Semprun stated that "There are two PCEs" and that the measure which has been approved entails the danger of losing one-third of the PCE's members.

FINLAND

POLITICAL PARTIES NOMINATE PRESIDENTIAL CANDIDATES

SFP Nominates Jansson

PM180955 Helsinki HUFVUDSTADSBLADET in Swedish 15 Nov 81 p 11

[Excerpt] The Swedish People's Party's extraordinary party congress in Tampere yesterday unanimously nominated Chief Editor Jan-Magnus Jansson, 59, as the party's candidate in the forthcoming presidential election. The nomination took place in an atmosphere of great confidence in Jansson's chances as one of the election's main candidates and to the accompaniment of calls that Jansson be promoted more convincingly in Swedish-speaking areas in particular.

The party congress also gave its unanimous approval to the party executive's proposal of freedom of action in the election -- a line which gives the party's electors a free hand in the event that Jansson is out of the running when the decisive final note is to be made. The congress debate on the proposal resulted in a somewhat greater emphasis on the freedom of action which the party's electors will be allowed.

Coalition Party Nominates Holkeri

PM181103 Helsinki HUFVUDSTADSBLADET in Swedish 16 Nov 81 p 1

[Text] Bank of Finland director Harri Holkeri, 44, was yesterday nominated as the National Coalition Party's presidential candidate by an extraordinary party congress, which showed great faith in its candidate's chances of a victorious path to the post of president, as well as great unanimity.

Party Chairman Ilkka Suominen stressed how fitting it would be for the presidency to fall to the largest nonsocialist party, and he also announced that the National Coalition Party is not contemplating haggling over the presidency, if even such bargaining were to include promises of participation in the government.

The objective of victory in the election is so dominant that it completely blocked a debate on the National Coalition Party's possible "second string alternatives" in the final rounds of voting in the Electoral College.

The question was not mentioned at all during the long party congress debate yesterday. Only in a few cases did congress delegates express vague doubts about the chances of bearing Holkeri to victory. Holkeri himself said that he was intent on doing his utmost to try to win the presidency. And he said that he intended to run his campaign so that he would win support from the other nonsocialist parties.

DEFENSE CHIEF QUESTIONS LIMITED NUCLEAR WAR THEORY

LD160946 Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 0800 GMT 16 Nov 81

[Text] In the view of the commander of the defense forces, Lauri Sutela, the attemps to develop theories about a limited nuclear war can lead to disastrous consequences. A nuclear missile launched as a warning can lead to a rapidly spreading conflict, Sutela pointed out at the opening of a national defense course in Helsinki today. According to General Sutela, the concern over nuclear weapons should not, however, lead to the neglect of conventional means of defense. According to the commander of the defense forces, the idea of a nuclear-free north is now more topical than ever. Although we do not regard ourselves as a side involved in a possible nuclear war, Finland will have to be prepared for the direct effects of nuclear weapons, General Sutela pointed out. Opinions minimizing the importance of civil defense cannot be accepted, Sutela said.

BRIEFS

AGREEMENT WITH BRAZIL -- Finland and Brazil have signed an agreement for economic and industrial cooperation between the two countries. According to the agreement, a joint commission will be set up to develop cooperation. Together with Argentina, Mexico and Venezuela, Brazil has long been Finland's most important export market in Latin America. Last year trade between Finland and Brazil totaled 550 million markkaa. The economic-industrial cooperation agreement was signed for Finland by Ambassador Martti Lintulahti and for Brazil by Foreign Minister Ramiro Saraiva Guerreiro. [Text] [Helsinki HUFVUDSTADSBLADET in Swedish 9 Nov 81 p 8 PM]

POLISH LOAN -- Because of its economic difficulties Poland proposes that Finland grant a loan of $40 million or about 180 million Finnish Marks. With the help of this loan Poland could pay for goods exported from Finland, such as products of the paper, drugs, construction and metal industries. The suggestion concerning the loan came up at the meeting in Warsaw of the mixed commission between the countries which ended yesterday. Last year trade between Poland and Finland increased by 8.5 percent over the previous year, whereas in the first 9 months of this year imports from Poland dropped by 13 percent and exports to Poland dropped by as much as 64 percent compared with the previous year. [Text] [Helsinki Domestic Service in Finnish 0600 GMT 13 Nov 81 LD]

SWEDEN

U.S. FAILS TO EXPLOIT SUBMARINE PROPAGANDA COUP

PM171115 Stockholm SVENSKA DAGBLADET in Swedish 12 Nov 81 p 2

[Editorial: "Happy Families"]

[Text] When U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig gave evidence last week to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee he spoke of how the United States and its European allies have had their fates inextricably linked for more than 30 years. He also said how "absolutely necessary" it was to modernize Europe's nuclear arms delivery systems to fill the holes which have appeared in the deterrence strategy since the Soviet Union refined and reinforced its arsenal.

The common destiny remains, but it is becoming even more of a burden for the European NATO members with every contradictory strategic declaration coming out of Washington. There are almost daily reports that, 10 months after Reagan became President, there is still no coherent foreign policy. One day one member of the administration says one thing, the second day a second says something else and on the third day the reports are denied.

President Reagan can hardly count on being believed when he gives assurances that the advisers he has gathered around him comprise a single happy family.

But what is most trouble some for the Europeans is the indefensible ignorance of European thinking and European concern prevalent in Washington.

At the very moment when the European defense debate finds itself in a very sensitive phase, Washington makes public its decision to implement former plans for a neutron bomb; and when, subsequently, the emotional protests against NATO's defense program are growing ever stronger in European countries, the President talks loosely of how nuclear arms could be used by both sides. He does so in a way which has made many Europeans see before them the terrible vision of how the two superpowers could wage a nuclear war in Europe without either of them pressing the buttons which would mean mutual total destruction for themselves.

This is unpsychological and artless. The lack of diplomatic finesse has been demonstrated in the last few days. At the very time when the Soviet Union has shown its true face by sailing a nuclear-armed submarine around the Swedish archipelago, Haig talks about firing nuclear "warning shots." In a new statement President Reagan heightens the fears of a European nuclear war and gives further impetus to the anti-NATO protests.

This is a situation which Moscow is quick to exploit. The Soviet communists may be laughably clumsy in their mendacious explanations of why their submarine runs aground in a sensitive Swedish defense area, but they know how to play on the feelings of uneasiness in Europe.

Communist dialectics have never been troubled by the axiom that a lie does not become any truer for being repeated. It has always been a fundamental principle of Soviet propaganda to hammer away at the lie in an endeavor to transform it into the truth.

Therefore it is not grotesque from the Moscow perspective that the state-directed news agency TASS is now semiofficially accusing Sweden of espionage, or that it claims that "NATO specialists" found traces of radioactive radiation from the grounded submarine.

This is embarrassingly unsubtle propaganda.

But since when have mass movements made any distinction between official explanations and propaganda?

When submarine 137 ran aground it set off echoes which resounded far beyond the borders of Sweden, and it is bound to have made many of those protesting against a strong Western defense think again. But the effect of the Soviet blunder would have been greater if Reagan had not simultaneously frightened Europe with his warlike attitude toward the Soviet Union and with his less clumsy, but not very sophisticated, propaganda.

STOCKHOLM DAILY SCORES USSR NOTE TO SWEDES

LD161605 Stockholm SVENSKA DAGBLADET in Swedish 13 Nov 81 p 2

[Editorial: "The Russians' Mail"]

[Text] Moscow makes no definite promises. Not even to refrain in the future from gross violations of Swedish territory.

According to the Soviet Union, demands -- like those made by Sweden -- for such a promise run counter to commonsense. For, as the Soviet reply to the Swedish protest note said, it is impossible to rule out the possibility of technical failure situations arising at sea.

Indeed, accidents do happen so very easily. And the world would be a safer place if the Soviet navy, now that it is sufficiently aware that it is not infallible, stopped allowing defective submarines loaded with nuclear arms to skulk around under the surface of the "sea of peace."

The statement from the Soviet Government which was delivered to the Swedish Government Wednesday [11 November] is a good example of how a superpower which has been very clumsy and has revealed its master-race mentality hurries to behave like an outraged innocent.

The most interesting thing about the Soviet statement is what it does not say; the fact that it does not confirm or deny the Swedish protests that there were nuclear warheads on board the grounded submarine.

The Swedish disclosure that radiation had been measured coming from the submarine is presumably part of the "distortion of facts" in which, according to the Soviet Union, the Swedish Government has been indulging.

But this too could have been the subject of an "objective evaluation" if the Soviet naval officers' political instructors had not prevented the Swedish technical commission from thoroughly inspecting the submarine.

The hectic radio traffic between the submarine and its base, printed verbatim in this week's number of the news magazine 8 DAGAR, shows how desperately worried they were lest any Swedes gain access to the torpedo chambers.

And how shaken Moscow is over the fact that the bottom was ripped out of a false peace offensive when the submarine ran aground is shown by the clumsy explanations and the accusations of spying which have recently been directed at Sweden with the aim of recouping some of the propaganda losses. And those who have been ordered to throw suspicion on the Swedes must be tearing their hair out in despair if they cannot find fresher points of attack than information which came to light during the Swedish IB affair almost 10 years ago.

PAPER ASSESSES USSR REACTION TO SUB INCIDENT

PM171025 Stockholm DAGENS NYHETER in Swedish 13 Nov 81 p 2

[Olof Santesson editorial: "Soviet Prevarication"]

[Text] The Soviet touch is easily recognized. On those occasions when Sweden has had reason to protest to Moscow over espionage, the reaction has always been the same -- wounded surprise, evasions, disguised countercharges, accusations of provocation.

This is not something that Sweden alone experiences. In such unpleasant dealings with the great, other small countries have had the same experience as ourselves. It can perhaps be said that this is how superpowers always behave when they are accused of anything. But what is important for us today is how the Soviet Union is behaving.

Its worst and most unbridled actions are the individually attributed reports from Soviet sources. TASS cites reports in the peace journal PAX that "Sweden has long been engaged in electronic espionage against the Soviet Union."

One commentator, Leonid Ponomarev, considers that the whole submarine affair has been directed by U.S. Vice President George Bush. The intention is purportedly to cast doubts on the notion of a nuclear-free zone in northern Europe and to silence the protests of NATO's plans to deploy new nuclear arms in Europe.

There can be no doubt that many circles in the United States and within NATO have such general objectives. The submarine affair is incredibly embarrassing for the Russians and constitutes a setback to their peace propaganda. But the appearance of Bush in the accusations is something of an exception confirming that so far governments and commentators have at least refrained from beginning anything resembling a campaign.

Unfortunately, for the world at large the submarine is nevertheless a local concern. This could still have the advantage that Sweden might avoid being drawn into a propaganda war between the superpower camps. Nor will the following new testimony please the Soviet Union.

The author of the PAX article has stated that he based his article on old information. He considers that the TASS quotation indicates that "the Soviet Union simply has no new arguments to use in the subarine affair."

Of course, in principle the most important official statement was that delivered by the Soviet Union Wednesday [11 November] evening.

It contains a number of strikingly tough formulations. In its strong criticism of the submarine's behavior the Swedish Government is said to have taken the "path of distortion of facts" -- that is, lying! It considers that "no sober-minded person...could assert that the submarine was engaging in forbidden activities." In other words, Swedish Government members, officers and researchers are not wholly reliable. The demand that the Soviet Union prevent a repetition of submarine 137's gross violation of Sweden and of the fundamental principles of international law is said to run contrary to commonsense. Thus -- we do not know what we are doing.

After all this is no surprise that the Soviet Union dismisses last week's Swedish protest "as being without all legal and factual foundations."

The Soviet union itself produces a mouthful of international legal principles whereby naval ships are said to enjoy total immunity and a coastal state may only expel foreign naval ships which break its regulations. One wonders how the Soviet Union would apply these legal ideals in a situation corresponding to that in which Sweden recently found itself.

It is of course noteworthy that in its official statement the Soviet Union did not touch on the question of nuclear weapons. This despite the fact that Sweden had already said that it was forced to interpret the Soviet Union's behavior as an indication that "the Soviet Government has not considered itself able to deny the presence of nuclear arms on board the submarine."

This is an incredibly sore point for the Soviet Union. In our part of the world at least, the discussion about disarmament and a possible future nuclear-free zone will now focus on the Soviet Union's own nuclear arms installations. Many people are bound to conclude that the Soviet Union has infested the Baltic with nuclear charges. What and who can be relied on in the future in questions which call for at least a minimum of honesty and mutual understanding if there are to be any results?

Sweden has not been quick to level accusations at the Soviet superpower. A small country with a certain amount of international esteem does not behave like that. The government has adhered to the line that submarine 137 intentionally violated Swedish territory because all our expert knowledge points in that direction. Now we have the assertions that Soviet crewmembers could have falsified the log. But it is not really a good thing if new facts continue to come to light. Some sort of official report might be needed. However, it does not seem particularly meaningful to reply to the Soviet note at the present time. The Soviet Union has demonstrated its lack of interest in heeding Swedish views.

However, the Soviet Government statement begins and ends with soft formulations in line with the demands of good-neighborly relations. This fact is worth noting, even if no one really knows what value it has.

BRIEFS

FORTHCOMING MILITARY APPOINTMENTS -- The commander in chief of the Swedish army, Nils Skoeld, will have his appointment extended by 1 and 1/2 years until April 1984, when he will retire on pension. The government is expected to announce a decision to this effect shortly. The new commander in chief of the air force, to succeed Dick Stenberg, will be Lt Gen Sven Olof Olson, who is the commander of the southern military district at present. Dick Stenberg will retire on pension on 1 October 1982. [Text] [Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 1700 GMT 16 Nov 81 LD]

FOREIGN SUB OBSERVED -- Late yesterday evening Swedish defense forces discovered a foreign submarine east of Valdemarsvik. A hydrophone was lowered into the water from a helicopter to monitor the submarine. The helicopter was about to start surveillance of the submarine when the hydrophone became jammed. The helicopter managed to rise a few meters, but was then pulled downward again. However, the hydrophone was pried loose with a strong pull. The incident took place in international waters where foreign submarines have the right to operate. The Swedish Defense Ministry suspects that the submarine was observing the Swedish coastal fleet's autumn exercise. [Text] [Stockholm Domestic Service in Swedish 1130 GMT 18 Nov 81 LD]

MINISTERS RESTATE STANCE ON SINAI PEACE FORCE

LD181836 London PRESS ASSOCIATION in English 1747 GMT 18 Nov 81

[By PA diplomatic correspondent Tom McMullan]

[Excerpt] British ministers and officials today stonewalled all questions on whether progress has been made towards the creation of a peace-keeping force in Sinai next year.

The Foreign Office said consultations were still continuing and an announcement would be made "as soon as possible". Two weeks ago Lord Carrington promised an announcement "soon." Foreign Office minister of state, Mr Douglas Hurd, who is responsible for the Middle East, is due to fly to Washington next week. Aides said today that final arrangements have still to be completed, but he is expected to be away from Monday to Thursday. This visit was cancelled last week because a revolt by government backbenchers meant he was needed in the division lobbies.

In the Commons today Tory backbencher Mr Julian Amery (Brighton Pavilion) urged the government not to impose conditions which would sabotage the creation of a peace-keeping force. Deputy foreign secretary, Mr Humphrey Atkins said it was not a question of imposing conditions. Britain had stated her position on the Middle East under the Venice Declaration of 1980, and was not departing from it. Mr Atkins gave no indication that anything had changed since Israeli Premier Mr Menachem Begin said a week ago that no country should link its decision to send troops to the Venice Declaration, which advocated that the Palestine Liberation Organization should be involved in the Middle East peace process.

DAILY TELEGRAPH: BOLD CHALLENGE TO BREZHNEV

PM191115 London THE DAILY TELEGRAPH in English 19 Nov 81 p 20

[Editorial: "Reagan Steals the Thunder"]

[Excerpt] President Reagan's disarmament proposals for medium-range missiles in the European region are a bold challenge to Mr Brezhnev to match the words of his "peace" propaganda with deeds on the missile sites. If Russia will dismantle her 250-000 three-warhead modern SS20s, together with some 350 older but heavier SS4s and 5s, NATO will cancel the 464 cruises and 108 Pershing 2s which it is pledged to deploy during 1984-1988 in response. This, as an opening bid, will please European Governments, which are under mounting political pressure to achieve, in the Soviet-American negotiations starting at the end of the month, an outcome which will make the cruise-Pershing deployment unnecessary. But is it realistic? What are the prospects of Russian acceptance, or of a tolerable negotiated compromise? Reasonable, by any objective standards, it certainly is -- unless, that is, Europe is to fall irredeemably into an acceptance that Russia must be appeased by one-sided concessions, either because of its present military superiority, or its totalitarian intransigence, or out of fear of its "peace" propaganda campaign. On purely military grounds NATO might well have insisted that it still needed a sizeable array of medium-range land-based missiles to offset Russia's huge conventional superiority, her shorter-range SS21, 22 and 23s now being deployed, and her 3-1 advantage in nuclear-capable aircraft. The cruise-Pershing deployment would only partially correct an imbalance resulting, as so often in the past, from a NATO exercise in well-meaning but naive unilateral restraint of which Russia, far from reciprocating, took advantage.

INTERCOMMUNAL TALKS RESUME IN NICOSIA 18 NOV

NC182114 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1730 GMT 18 Nov 81

[From the "Echo of Events" program]

[Text] A new meeting within the framework of the intercommunal talks was held at 1600 today at the Ledra Palace Hotel. Speaking to the press, the UN secretary's special envoy in Cyprus, Gobbi, mentioned: [Begin recording; statement in English fading into Greek translation] The main purpose of this effort is to offer both sides a method for discussion and, as a result, to have a more constructive dialogue. Today we will submit the UN secretary general's evaluation. [end recording]

Answering a question, Gobbi said that the evaluation would not be accompanied by any other document. Submission of the evaluation, he said, is very easy because the text is already in the hands of both sides.

Answering a question on whether the evaluation is within the framework of the UN resolutions on Cyprus, Gobbi replied: Yes, I imagine so. On being asked to clarify whether by saying that the evaluation is within the framework of the UN resolutions he meant that the evaluation provides for the return of all refugees to their homes and the withdrawal of foreign troops from the island, Gobbi stated: I prefer to rest on my first answer. I believe that the evaluation is based on the purposes of the relevant resolutions.

Replying to another question, Gobbi mentioned that during today's meeting he would expect the first impressions, the first rapprochement and evaluation of the two interlocutors on the situation, and, perhaps, certain comments on this effort.

Answering a question on what would be the future of this evaluation if, on the one hand, the two sides submitted reservations and, on the other hand, counterproposals, Gobbi replied: As I have mentioned to you, this evaluation is only aimed at establishing a method for negotiation so that the period of monologues may end and a constructive dialogue may commence. This, naturally, is a great effort of the United Nations. Now the ball is in the court of the two sides. Whether this method is useful or not is a different problem. In any event, right from the start the future of the negotiations was in the hands of the two sides. Now the United Nations has made an effort. We have now become the protagonist and we have become the target for some criticism. We are, however, prepared to face this danger if we can help toward the progress of the negotiations. The two sides will decide whether this effort is useful or not. Gobbi then mentioned that this method will provide both sides with the opportunity to define their positions on vital issues.

Answering a question whether he personally hopes that the new method will achieve progress, he replied he hopes so. We have, he added, undertaken a great effort. If an agreement is reached then we will have hopes.

Answering a question on whether this has to do only with hopes or whether there is something more specific at the present stage, Gobbi replied that philosophically he is a positivist. I believe, he concluded, that experience will show whether this method is useful or not.

Speaking to the press, the representative of the Greek Cypriot side at the intercommunal talks, Ioannidhis, said: [Begin recording; statement in English fading into Greek translation] I am certain that Dr Gobbi spoke to you about today's meeting. He plans to submit the evaluation of Dr Waldheim. Our side today intends to present its views, reservations and observations. [end recording]

Answering a question on whether the Waldheim evaluation falls within the framework of the UN resolutions, Ioannidhis replied he would express his views at the negotiations table.

On being called upon to comment on press reports that the Waldheim ideas lead to partition, Ioannidhis replied: I do not agree with this. As you know, the negotiations are being conducted in accordance with the relevant resolutions of the United Nations within the framework of the good offices of the UN secretary general. In this way the UN secretary general and we, the interlocutors, try to find a solution for an independent Cyprus, naturally in a federal republic. Thus, we must expect that confederation or partition are excluded by Dr Waldheim. Naturally they are rejected by us.

Ioannidhis was then asked: Gobbi will submit Waldheim's evaluation on the negotiations. You will submit your reservations and I imagine that Onan will do the same. On what basis will the discussion then be conducted; on the basis of the Waldheim evaluation or on the reservations of the two sides?

As you know, Ioannidhis replied, the discussion is being conducted in accordance with the daily agenda. Dr Waldheim's evaluation is an aid which is supposed to help in the continuation of the negotiations and lead them to a constructive dialogue.

On being asked whether he considers the evaluation a basis for negotiation, Ioannidhis stated the basis of the negotiations has already been agreed upon. This basis consists of the UN resolutions and the summit agreements. The evaluation is an aid to the negotiations.

The representative of the Turkish Cypriot side, Onan, stated on his arrival that he expected the submission of the Waldheim ideas. He added that his side would submit no document. He said: [Begin recording; statement in English fading into Greek translation] It is possible that I will make certain observations. [end recording]

Answering a question on how he evaluates the Waldheim document, Onan said this document could become a framework for negotiations. It could become acceptable as a basis for negotiation.

Answering another question, the Turkish Cypriot interlocutor said he could comment on the Waldheim document, he could submit and explain his views, and during the negotiations he could further expand on them in an effort to achieve an agreement.

Answering a question on whether the Waldheim document improves the prospects for a solution, Onan said: I would say that the views of the two sides, wherever they coincide, they converge; and where they differ, they have, to a great extent, been clarified. There is a great possibility for them to become more positive if there is good will.

A UN statement mentions that during the meeting the UN secretary's special envoy in Cyprus, Gobbi, submitted for study a document, copies of which were handed over unofficially last month, to the representatives of the two communities. The document, the statement adds, includes an evaluation by the UN secretary general on the intercommunal talks to date.

The UN statement further adds that the two sides explained their own views with their own comments on the document. The two interlocutors, the statement adds, thanked the UN secretary and his special envoy for their continued efforts within the framework of their good services mission entrusted to them by the Security Council to contribute toward the search for a just and permanent solution to the Cypriot problem. The next meeting within the intercommunal negotiations will be held on Wednesday, 2 December, at 1600.

MISSING PERSONS COMMITTEE ON FUTURE MEETINGS

NC182359 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1730 GMT 18 Nov 81

[Text] At the meetings held yesterday and today at the Foreign Ministry on the missing persons issue, it was decided that the Greek Cypriot side's representative to the investigatory committee for missing persons be present at the 20 November session, Friday.

This was suggested by the UN secretary general's representative. An official announcement states that the presence of the Greek side's representative takes place in a final effort to achieve an agreement on the existing procedural difficulties, so that the fixed time limit for starting substantive work in tracing the fate of the missing persons by the investigatory committee may become possible. The announcement stresses the Greek side's spirit of cooperation and expresses the wish that the other side will show the same stand. The announcement further states that in view of the Turkish side's tactic thus far of filibustering, our side can only take the necessary measures to promote the whole missing persons issue before international organizations in the event that is no substantive outcome within the framework of the work of the investiga committee.

A UN representative in Nicosia has stated that Mr Claude Pillioud, the UN representative in the investigatory committee on the issue of the missing persons, has postponed his return to Cyprus until next week because of an illness. The representative added that the the meeting of the investigatory committee's members that was fixed for the day after tomorrow, Friday, will be held next Thursday, 26 November.

The Foreign Ministry has announced that tomorrow, Foreign Minister Rolandhis will meet Gobbi, the UN secretary general's special representative in Cyprus, to study the situation that was created by Mr Pillioud's inability to be present at the planned 20 November session of the investigatory committee for the missing persons.

CZECHOSLOVAK PARLIAMENTARIANS ARRIVE 18 NOV

NC181211 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 1130 GMT 18 Nov 81

[Text] A six-member parliamentary delegation, headed by Federal Assembly Chairman Alois Indra, arrived in Cyprus for a 3-day official visit following an invitation from the House of Representatives. The Czechoslovak officials were met at Larnaca airport by House President Ladhas, house members, Czechoslovak Ambassador Hejo and a Foreign Ministry representative.

In an airport statement, Mr Indra expressed pleasure for the visit of the delegation which, he said, conveys his country's support for the Cypriot people, as well as Czechoslovakia's support for a united and independent Cyprus. The Czechoslovak official added that during their stay here the members of the delegation will discuss with their Cypriot counterparts bilateral relations as well as political, cultural and technical questions, and will give their views on current international affairs. In conclusion, Mr Indra expressed the wish for the solution of all the problems occupying Cyprus, as well as happiness and prosperity for all the Cypriot people.

Welcoming the delegation, House President Ladhas expressed gratitude for the fact that in all international organizations and at all international platforms, Czechoslovakia has always stood by the side of Cyprus. Mr Ladhas also expressed certainty that this support will continue in the future as well.

Meet With Ladhas

NC182302 Nicosia Domestic Service in Greek 2000 GMT 18 Nov 81

[Text] This evening, the six-member Czechoslovak parliamentary delegation, headed by Federal Assembly Chairman Alois Indra, had a meeting with House President Ladhas during which they discussed bilateral relations as well as political, cultural and technical issues. Views were also exchanged on international events. Later, Mr Ladhas presented the leaders or representatives of parties participating in the house to the Czechoslovak delegation. Then a meeting followed where all those present participated.

MILITARY JET CRASHES IN AEGEAN; PILOT MISSING

NC182229 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1930 GMT 18 Nov 81

[Text] The Greek Air Force General Staff has announced that this morning a Greek Air Force jet crashed in the central Aegean Sea while on a training flight. Captain Ioannis Andonopoulos, the pilot, is missing.

SPOKESMAN COMMENTS ON HAIG VISIT POSTPONEMENT

NC181135 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1100 GMT 18 Nov 81

[Text] In answering a question on a report in one of today's morning newspapers that U.S. Secretary of State Haig will visit Greece, the government spokesman said: Haig, in fact, did express the desire to visit Greece. Due to Prime Minister Papandreou's other obligations, however, this visit has been postponed.

NEW LIBYAN STATEMENT ON GREEK-ISRAELI RELATIONS

NC181208 Athens MESIMVRINI In Greek 17 Nov 81 p 1

[Text] "Explanations" -- for the purpose of eradicating "every possible misunderstanding or misinterpretation" — were supplied yesterday by the Libyan People's Bureau (Embassy) in Athens in reference to the controversial press interview given last Friday by Libyan representative (Al-Qammudi). This statement of the Jamahiriyah, naturally, denies any intent of Libyan intervention in Greek domestic affairs, but it simultaneously:

-- Underlines that (Al-Qammudi) said that (Libyan "expectations" from the "new Greek socialist Government") were "a reaffirmation of the goals declared by the government which in any event, stem from the national interests of Greece and the choice made by the Greek people in the last election." This has to do with the Libyan demand for our country's "full neutrality" with the immediate eviction of U.S. bases!

-- Demands — as in his original statement -- expulsion from Greece of the Israeli diplomatic mission, "stemming from the ideological and fellow-combatant relations between the Jamahiriya" and PASOK. "These relations," he stated, "are primarily based upon fighting the aggressor and upon adoption of every tangible means until all traces and consequences of injustice are wiped out and until the one treated unjustly is vindicated."

Government Response

NC181644 Athens NEWS in English 18 Nov 81 p 4

[Text] Replying to the chief of the Libyan diplomatic mission in Greece, who requested the closure of the Israeli diplomatic mission here on the grounds that it is a center of espionage and terroristic activities, a Greek Government spokesman said it was unacceptable for third parties to dictate Greece's foreign policy.

This was the subject of a report in yesterday's issue of the Washington POST, which added that Israeli diplomatic circles described the Libyan representative's charges as "nonsense" and pointed out that Greece is the only EEC member state that has granted de facto but not be jure recognition to Israel.

I KATHIMERINI ON PRAVDA POSITION ON U.S. BASES

NC181926 Athens I KATHIMERINI in Greek 18 Nov 81 p 5

[Editorial: "The Bases and the Elections"]

[Excerpts] PRAVDA, the official newspaper of the Soviet Communist Party, surprisingly concluded that the new Greek prime minister, Andreas Papandreou, does not appear prepared to fully implement his preelection promises about the abolition of the U.S. bases, "at a time," the Russian newspaper adds, "when the election result means that the Greeks do not consider the U.S. bases as a means for their protection but rather as an imperialist weapon against peace and detente."

The Soviet "Hellenologists" (in parallel to the Greek Sovietologists") are completely free to give any interpretation they may wish to the outcome of the recent parliamentary election. The problem, however, of whether the U.S. bases will or will not remain in Greece, as well as in the other European countries, will not be solved by any elections. This is because the establishment of these bases was not the result of some election mandate presented to any one of the European governments. Their necessity was inspired by the cold war, and so long as this cold war continues -- in one form or another or intensity -- then the bases will remain.

Today it is the belief of even the most intransigent anti-U.S. elements that the U.S. presence in Europe and, as a result, the military forces which represent this presence, are an unpleasant but necessary counter to the Soviet threat against Europe. In the last 35 years since the end of the World War II, Soviet policy did much more than its opponents ever hoped it would do to destroy the USSR's "historic recognition" as a defender of detente and peace, which it enjoyed -- correctly or wrongly -- up to the end of the war. The imperialist character of its intentions is no longer an unproved allegation made from Beijing. It has become the firm belief of hundreds of millions of Europeans, both in the East and the West, after experiencing Soviet international behavior.

If the Russian leadership sincerely wants to support and encourage the peace movement that is today shaking Europe — provided that peace and detente are its own sincere goals — then it must be the first to proceed with the removal of every Soviet installation of nuclear weapons aimed toward Europe. So long as it refuses to do so, so long as it dictates to its dogmatic puppets to undermine and denounce as "provocatory" every peace movement which is not exclusively directed against U.S. installations but which also attacks Soviet weapons, then this Soviet leadership must cease insisting that U.S. bases must be withdrawn from Europe.

When the people move against the installation of U.S. nuclear weapons in Europe — after Soviet weapons are withdrawn — then it will be very difficult to find any European government which will be prepared to ract in a negative way, because then the meaning of the people's "mandate" will not be just any interpretation of some election result, but it will be the mandate for war against war itself.

NEW DEMOCRACY CITES PASOK MISUSE OF TV, RADIO

NC182330 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 2200 GMT 18 Nov 81

[Text] A New Democracy statement has been issued which, among other things, stressed that PASOK, in its government policy statement, had promised the people objective information through the radio and television. Unfortunately, so far the government's policy has been to the contrary. The television and radio are being used as a means of one-sided briefing, portraying half of the truth and twisting the country's history. The peak of these tactics was yesterday's 17 November television and radio programs on the Polytechnic uprising anniversary.

The statement added: The Greeks know that a great number of New Democracy officials struggled very hard in Greece against the dictatorship. They also know that New Democracy consolidated democracy after the political change and created the prerequisites for the normal course of democratic life in the country.

In the past few days in particular, the Greeks had the impression that they were listening to a radio station that did not belong to the state but to PASOK and the KKE. The same statement concluded: This tactic is unacceptable in a democratic state and the government must become aware of its responsibilities in preserving freedom of thought to the Greeks.

PASOK Response

NC182335 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 2200 GMT 18 Nov 81

[Text] Regarding the New Democracy statement [on abuse of the mass media], the deputy minister to the prime minister in charge of press affairs, Mr Maroudhas, stated the following: It is a joke for New Democracy to speak about objective information. The people know better than anyone else the one-sided policy that New Democracy was exercising in the mass media. They also know that in very few cases was the voice of the other parties heard during the 7 years the country was governed by New Democracy. In contrast, from the day that the government of change was sworn in, the official opposition party as well as other parties have had a continuous presence in the state information media. The possibility was also given to publish and distribute their statements at the general secretariat of the press.

The deputy minister concluded: The government of change will continue this multivoiced presence in the state information media because this responds to the popular sentiment and to the rule of their democratic operation.

KKE JUSTIFIES BLANK BALLOT IN CHAMBER VOTE

NC172132 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 1930 GMT 17 Nov 81

[Text] Clarifying his party's position in the voting for the Chamber of Deputies president during which he cast a blank ballot, KKE parliamentary spokesman Kaloudhis said that this decision was made because PASOK does not agree to the election of a KKE candidate as a member of the presidency within the framework of a multiparty presidency. As was noted, it is known that the Chamber's regulations do not provide for this explicitly but, on the other hand, it is a fact that it does not rule it out.

MAVROS REGISTERS AS INDEPENDENT CENTER DEPUTY

NC162232 Athens Domestic Service in Greek 2200 GMT 16 Nov 81

[Text] Yeoryios Mavros has requested to be registered in the new Chamber of Deputies as an independent center deputy. At noon, Mavros had a working luncheon with Prime Minister Papandreou at Kastri. During the lunch, they exchanged views and questions on foreign and domestic policy. In the meantime, the Center Front [Parataxis Kendrou] has announced that the party is continuing to function. It said that it simply curtailed its activities before the election by not taking part in the election, but that it supported PASOK in order to bring about change.

LIBYA'S AL-QADHDHAFI REMARKS ON BILATERAL TIES

TA181658 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 18 Nov 81

[Text] The chief of state of the Socialist People's Libyan Arab Jamahiriyah, Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, has said that he expects the friendship between Turkey and Libya to develop further and to be an exemplary brotherhood relationship within the Islamic world.

Minister of State and Deputy Prime Minister Turgut Ozal, who is in Libya to attend the Turkish-Libyan joint economic committee meetings, met with Al-Qadhdhafi in Tripoli. In a statement at the meeting, Al-Qadhdhafi said that Libya attaches great importance to relations with Turkey and that the necessary efforts will be exerted to promote these relations.

The seventh round of the joint economic committee meetings is continuing in Tripoli. A protocol in connection with the meetings will be signed tomorrow.

TURKMEN MEETS EEC, COUNCIL OF EUROPE OFFICIALS

TA181703 Anakara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 18 Nov 81

[Text] Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen, who went to Strasbourg to participate in the Council of Europe Ministerial Committee, has held contacts with members of the EEC Parliament and the Council of Europe Consultative Assembly. Yesterday evening, Turkmen met with the head of the consultative assembly Political Committee, who called on Turkmen at the representation, with the committee rapporteur and with two members of the judicial committee. Turkmen this morning met with the head of the EEC Commission, Gaston Thorn, with the various leaders of the EEC parliamentary groups and with members of the Parliament.

Turkmen later addressed a meeting attended by the foreign ministers of Council of Europe member countries and by the members of the Council's Consultative Assembly, and briefed them on the recent developments in Turkey.

Addresses Meeting

TA182028 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 2000 GMT 18 Nov 81

[Text] Foreign Minister Ilter Turkmen has said that the administration in Turkey is determined to build real democracy in the country. Turkmen, who is in Strasbourg to attend the meetings of the Council of Europe Ministerial Committee, explained the recent political developments in Turkey at a meeting attended by the foreign ministers of the 21 member countries of the Council of Europe and by the members of the Council's Consultative Assembly. Turkmen said that significant steps have been taken on the road to democracy in Turkey and that the activities of [Turkey's] Consultative Assembly are one of the most important of these steps. Turkmen added that no one should doubt that the Consultative Assembly will base the new constitution on international democratic principles. Turkmen continued: We are in a period of transition. Our European friends should understand this fact. Had it not been for this period of transition, democracy in Turkey would have led the way to a totalitarian administration and Turkey would be faced with civil war. Discussion in Europe concerning this period of transition will not last long because this period will end and a pluralistic parliamentary democracy will be reestablished.

Turkmen concluded by saying that Turkey does not want a weakening or breaking of its relations with the Council of Europe and the EEC due to various misunderstandings.

UN REPRESENTATIVE SPEAKS ON AFGHAN SITUATION

TA181725 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 18 Nov 81

[Text] The permanent Turkish representative to the United Nations, Ambassador Coskun Kirca, has said that the gravity of the Afghan issue remains in all its aspects and that the passage of time has not been beneficial for the solution of the problem. Kirca addressed the UN General Assembly during the discussion of the Afghan problem. Kirca said that Turkey, which has traditional ties of brotherhood with the Afghan people, is closely observing the developments in connection with the outside interference in Afghanistan's domestic affairs, which is a violation of the UN Charter. Kirca added that the situation in Afghanistan endangers regional stability and world peace and that it is a serious blow to the East-West detente process. Noting that a political solution to be reached through negotiations between the sides is the best way to solve the Afghan problem, Kirca added that such a solution should harmonize the legal interests of all parties concerned. He noted that steps taken toward the solution of the Afghan issue are noteworthy and that especially the EEC proposals are constructive.

IRANIAN HEALTH MINISTER ARRIVES ON OFFICIAL VISIT

TA181714 Ankara Domestic Service in Turkish 1600 GMT 18 Nov 81

[Text] Iranian Minister of Health, Hadi Manafi, who arrived on an official visit to Turkey this afternoon, has said that Iran wishes to procure a large part of its medicine needs from Turkey. Manafi visited a medicine factory belonging to the private sector in Istanbul. In a statement at the factory, Manafi said that Iran is considering employing Turkish technicians in various health installations in Iran which are not operational at the moment. In a statement at Yesilkoy airport, Manafi said that possibilities for cooperation between the two countries in the field of health will be discussed at the talks he will hold in Turkey. Manafi will leave Istanbul for Ankara tomorrow where he will begin his official contacts. He will also visit various health installations and medical schools in several cities. Manafi will leave Turkey on 23 November.

MILITARY COURTS CONDEMN 13 TERRORISTS TO DEATH

TA181546 Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1525 GMT 18 Nov 81

[Text] Erzurum, 18 NOv (AA) -- Military courts in eastern regions sentenced 13 people to death and 242 people to prison terms ranging between 1 to 36 years, for ideological offences committed before September 12, 1980.

Among those condemned to death are 9 rightists who are charged for killing 11 people and setting homes and workshops on fire in Sivas on September 3-4, 1981. Three are members of the outlawed terrorist group "Turkish people's liberation army front" for trying to change the established constitutional order by force [word indistinct] overthrow (?the) elected National Assembly, and one for premeditated murder of three people in Kars.

BRIEFS

ECONOMIC AGREEMENT WITH AUSTRIA -- Ankara, Nov 18 (AA) -- The council of ministers has approved a financial and economic cooperation agreement concluded last July between Turkish and Austrian finance ministers. The agreement postpones guaranteed trade arrears due to July 25, 1979 and July 23, 1980. Details will be worked out between the Turkish Central Bank and Oesterereichische Kontrolbank. [Text] [Ankara ANATOLIA in English 1505 GMT 18 Nov 81 TA]

FBIS DAILY REPORT CONTENTS

Western Europe

Vol VII No 224 20 November 1981

AUSTRIA

Reagan's Appeal Seen as 'Right' but 'Late' [DIE PRESSE 19 Nov] E 1

BENELUX

NETHERLANDS

Van Agt Against Review of NATO Dual Decision [DE VOLKSKRANT 17 Nov] F 1
Parties Divided on NATO Dual Decision Resolution [DE VOLKSKRANT 18 Nov] F 2

FEDERAL REPUBLIC OF GERMANY

Schmidt on Prospects for USSR-U.S. Disarmament J 1
Consultations With Reagan To Be Held J 1
FRG Role Seen as 'Intermediary' J 2
Genscher Urges USSR Examine Proposals Carefully J 2
Bahr Says Zero Option Will 'Bear Fruit' [LE MATIN 12 Nov] J 3
Comments on Reagan Proposal J 3
Saarland SPD Chairman Critical of Reagan Proposal J 4
CDU Leaders on Brezhnev Visit, Reagan Speech J 4
Kohl Comments J 4
Borm Voices Reservations J 5
Horn Sees 'Positive Aspects' J 5
Agenda for Brezhnev Visit to Bonn Announced J 6
FDP Deputy Urges U.S. To Hold Talks With Libya J 7
Strauss Informed on PRC Relations With USSR J 7
Meets With PRC Leaders J 7
Paper: Reagan Speech Stirs Hopes in Bonn [FRANKFURTER RUNDSCHAU 19 Nov] J 8
Briefs: Schmidt-Reagan Meeting J 9

FRANCE

Cheysson Approves of Reagan Missile Proposal K 1
Italian Prime Minister Meets Mauroy, Mitterrand K 1
Rumors Spread on Mitterrand's State of Health K 1
LE MONDE: Reagan Steals Limelight From Brezhnev [20 Nov] K 2
Briefs: Agreement on Siberian Gas K 2

ITALY & THE VATICAN

Press Reactions to Reagan Foreign Policy Speech L 1
Benefits of Spadolini Paris Talks Summarized L 2
Craxi Hits 'One-Sided' Antimissile Protests [AVANTI 14 Nov] L 2
More AVANTI Coverage of Craxi's Visit to Romania L 3
Meetings, Press Conference [12 Nov] L 3
Craxi-Ceausescu Accord Noted [14 Nov] L 3
PCI Denies Alleged Directives on Ties With PSI L 4

NORDIC AFFAIRS

FINLAND

Visiting Swedish Prime Minister on Area Security P 1
Briefs: USSR Oil Agreement P 1

NORWAY

Minister Raps Soviet Attitude on Arms Proposals P 1

SWEDEN

Press Gives Views on Reagan Disarmament Stand P 2
Defense Committee Backs Disbanding of Regiments [DAGENS NYHETER 13 Nov] P 2
Briefs: Senior Military Assignments P 2

UNITED KINGDOM

Thatcher, Foot Welcome Reagan Arms Proposal Q 1
CND Warns Reagan on Nuclear Missile Offer [MORNING STAR 19 Nov] Q 1

CYPRUS

President Kiprianou's Itinerary for Visits Abroad R 1
Czechoslovak Tourists Seek Political Asylum [I SIMERINI 18 Nov] R 1
Paper on Government Reply to Waldheim Document [O KIRIKAS 19 Nov] R 1
Rolandhis, Gobbi Meet on Missing Persons Issue R 2
North's Atakol Criticizes Papandreou Statement [Bayrak Radio] R 2
Opposition Parties in North Form Coalition [SOZ 19 Nov] R 3
Joint Statement Issued [Bayrak Radio] R 3
Briefs: Mexican Envoy Accredited R 3

GREECE

Turkey To Release Two Detained Fishing Boats S 1
Boats Freed S 1
Officials Review Economic Ties With Romania S 1
Talks With Iraqis Promote Economic Projects S 1

TURKEY

Turkmen Asks End to Visa Requirement on Turks T 1
Evaluates Council Session T 1
Visiting Iranian Health Minister Begins Talks T 2
Meets With Ulusu T 2
Government Names Head of 'Cyprus Secretariat' [HURRIYET 17 Nov] T 2
Ecevit Trial To Be Held Before Civilian Court [CUMHURIYET 17 Nov] T 3
Court Gives Death Sentence to Eight Leftists T 3
Government Lifts Passport of CUMHURIYET Columnist T 3
VOTCP Report T 3
Our Radio Criticizes U.S. Middle East Exercises T 4

OTHER COUNTRIES

PORTUGAL

Government Supports Reagan Statement on Arms U 1
Briefs: Eanes To Visit Africa U 1

SPAIN

Reagan Proposal Called 'Important and Sound' U 1
PSOE Sees Cause for Optimism U 1
Foreign Affairs Committee Approves NATO Entry U 1
Government To Strengthen Canary Islands Defense U 1

REAGAN'S APPEAL SEEN AS 'RIGHT' BUT 'LATE'

AU191633 Vienna DIE PRESSE in German 19 Nov 81 p 1

[Andreas Unterberger commentary: "Reagan's Learning Process"]

[Text] U.S. Presidents are very good as regards understanding interconnections in world politics. Only, unfortunately they always use the first months or even years of their 4-year period of office to learn this. In Ronald Reagan's case, it was no different.

Yesterday's speech by the U.S. President has indeed shown the successes of this thought process. Gradually it has become clear even to Washington that with a "hurrah America" attitude, with saber rattling, one might perhaps be able to win U.S. elections but that it horrifies Europe. Much of what has swept the old continent in the past few months as a peace movement, as anti-Americanism as it had not been known since Vietnam, would never have happened had Reagan spoken so movingly about peace half a year ago. He and his administration, however, simply did not succeed, indeed did not even seriously try, to present the American policy as a mere reaction to the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, to the massive rearmament of the communist superpower. Throughout the year of 1981 they permitted the impression to develop that rabid warmongers had come to power in America.

Although Ronald Reagan's coming around to the so-called zero option was necessary, it is questionable whether this one offer will be enough to set things right again, and it is inexplicable why it has taken Washington so long to include the cheapest, most peaceful and most just solution into its negotiation vocabulary; namely, the complete renunciation of NATO complementary armament if Moscow in turn scraps its missiles aimed at West European targets. It is equally right, but equally late, if Reagan now again draws more attention to the conventional superiority of the Soviets (that is, regarding nonnuclear weapons); if he urges an equilibrium for all, and not just some, types of weapons as the only guarantee of safety; and if he makes proposals that do not merely sound attractive but also are important, such as that for a conference to prevent surprise attacks. True, such a conference has been under discussion for a long time at the Madrid security debate, but it was obstructed there by the Americans. It is equally right to call for new strategic negotiations -- that is at least much shrewder than to spectacularly abstain from ratifying SALT II although its provisions are being observed anyhow. At any rate Ronald Reagan has now made the Soviets an appropriate, an acceptable offer, which Moscow's propaganda will not find so easy to deal with as his past policy.

However, no one should indulge in too much hope that Moscow would really be ready to scrap its hundreds of medium-range missiles. According to analyses of Soviet statements, more than a withdrawal to the Chinese border does not seem to be intended. However, from there the saurian-like vehicles can be taken back to central Europe in a matter of days or weeks.

At best one could induce the Soviets to destroy these weapons -- after all, they would sacrifice expensive investments in exchange for a mere threat by the West -- if it were at least credible that otherwise the complementary armament would be implemented. But is this threat still credible? To anyone who looks around in Europe this seems more than doubtful. The internal political resistance seems hardly surmountable any more for all Western governments. And Reagan's late offer has probably lessened this resistance only marginally.

If the SS-20 is not scrapped, then it is precisely those who in the past few months -- out of genuine concern for peace, out of genuine fear of nuclear weapons -- put the Western governments under pressure, who are to blame for West Europe's being faced with the threat, undreamed of only a few years ago, of nuclear weapons directly trained at them. Honesty and personal engagement thus should often be accompanied by prudence and knowledge of the interconnection in the world. But how can that be expected from an average European if even U.S. Presidents have difficulties with that for such a long time?

NETHERLANDS

VAN AGT AGAINST REVIEW OF NATO DUAL DECISION

PM200937 Amsterdam DE VOLKSKRANT in Dutch 17 Nov 81 p 11

[Unnamed "Own Correspondent" report on second chanber reading of government declaration: "Restoring the Economy Calls For Firm Program of Action"]

[Excerpts] The Hague -- Prime Minister van Agt began his speech in the second chamber with a word of thanks to the previous cabinet. Then he defended the course of the 109-day cabinet formation process and the way in which the financial problems have been solved. On the nature of the cabinet the prime minister said: "I see this as a parliamentary cabinet. The cabinet is based on an accord, to which the leaders of the parliamentary groups, have given their approval. Further, members of the parliamentary groups have accepted seats in the cabinet -- including the parliamentary group leaders themselves. The whole thing could not be more parliamentary," the prime minister said at the beginning of the government declaration, from which the following passages are taken.

"In December 1979 the Netherlands Government told the NATO Council of Ministers that in December 1981 it would reach a decision on the deployment of cruise missiles on Netherlands territory in the light of continuous assessment of the measure of success in reaching suitable balanced limitations on medium-range nuclear arms on both sides. Since then there have scarcely been any negotiations on arms imitations. Real negotiations will only begin 30 November. For this reason a Netherlands decision is not possible in 1981. This will be announced to our allies. As far as the timing of and method of reaching a future decision are concerned the government accord will be used as a guideline, and here I quote from it verbatim:

"On the question of nuclear weapons, both the question of medium-range weapons and that of the substantial reduction of Netherlands forces, the cabinet will hold consultations with our allies. On the basis of its own judgement the cabinet will decide the timing and content of any decision. End of quotation.

"To this I would add that the results of the negotiations on medium-range nuclear arms will play a major role when the cabinet comes to consider the timing and contents of a decision. As far as the NATO dual decision is concerned the cabinet is aware that there are divergent views on this point in the various political parties. The differences of opinion primarily surround the question of whether this is the correct military and political response to the modernization and buildup of the number of medium-range nuclear weapons in the Soviet union.

"The decision has been made, it exists and forms NATO's point of departure for the negotiations between the United States and the Soviet Union. We are of the opinion that given the present situation, pressure within NATO for a reasessment of the decision would harm the chances of a successful conclusion to the negotiations.

"The cabinet will be energetic in promoting examination within the alliance of how defense can be responsibly maintained with fewer nuclear weapons. In this connection the reductions in the Netherlands' nuclear forces will be discussed.

"The cabinet wholly supports the motion, adopted in February of this year by this chamber, rejecting the introduction of the so-called neutron weapon."

PARTIES DIVIDED ON NATO DUAL DECISION RESOLUTION

PM200949 Amsterdam DE VOLKSKRANT in Dutch 18 Nov 81 p 9

[Text] The Hague -- Yesterday the Christian Democratic Appeal [CDA], Labor Party [PVDA] and Democrats '66 [D'66] tabled a joint motion on medium-range nuclear arms limitations within the framework of the U.S.-Soviet SALT agreements. Then the PVDA tabled a separate motion rejecting the deployment of cruise missiles on Netherlands territory and calling for "reassessment" of the December 1979 NATO modernization decision.

A Pacifist Socialist Party motion yesterday called for Netherlands rejection of the NATO decision and the application of pressure on the NATO partners to retract the decision. Finally a Political Party of Radicals motion advocated that the Netherlands be made nuclear-free and that efforts be made to strive for a nuclear-free zone in Europe embracing "the nonuclear powers of NATO and the Warsaw Pact and the nonaligned nations in Europe."

It has been agreed within the cabinet that the government parties do not agree on the question of the modernization of medium-range nuclear arms and of the possible future deployment of these in the Netherlands. Yesterday's motions have caused some confusion over the standpoint of the PVDA in particular, which (together with D'66) signed the Lubbers motion and also put forward one of its own.

The Lubbers [CDA parliamentary group leader] motion aims at a mutual zero option in East and West (no new nuclear arms in West Europe, such as the cruise and Pershing II missiles, and the "dismantling of relevant Soviet arms systems, in particular the SS-20") and at the arrival at "a military balance at a much lower level of armaments" through negotiation.

The Lubbers motion also states that the NATO dual decision of December 1979 (nuclear arms modernization and negotiations with the Warsaw Pact over medium-range weapons) "forms the NATO point of departure in the negotiations between the United States and the Soviet Union" on these weapons.

For the PVDA the section of the dual decision covering negotiations is acceptable (hence the support for the Lubbers motion) but the section of the decision dealing with modernization needs to be "reconsidered." "Our own motion expresses the position of the CDA 2 years ago," PVDA circles were saying yesterday evening. However, in the meantime the CDA seems to have moved in the direction of bilateral medium-range nuclear arms reductions and has now come to see the dual decision -- with both its components -- as the basis for the negotiations between the United States and the Soviet Union which begin in Geneva on 30 November.

D'66 does not think that reconsideration of the dual decision, which the party considers regrettable in itself, is desirable at this time because the negotiating position of the U.S. in Geneva could be weakened by such action.

SCHMIDT ON PROSPECTS FOR USSR-U.S. DISARMAMENT

DW191429 Hamburg ARD Television Network in German 2130 GMT 17 Nov 81

[Reporter Reinhardt interview with Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt; date and place not given--recorded]

[Excerpt] [Question] Mr Federal Chancellor, you complained this week in a newspaper interview about different statements coming from America. Now there seems to be a new concept, a definite concept, for the negotiations. What does it look like?

[Answer] You are right, there is a definite concept for the negotiations on medium-range weapons which are to begin next week, on Monday -- negotiations in which we Germans are extremely interested and to whose existence we have contributed considerably with regard to Moscow as well as Washington. The Federal Government represented the view that the land-based medium-range missiles should be reduced to zero in East Europe as well as in West Europe. There should be none on both sides. The Americans have adopted this negotiation position after long talks with us. We are most grateful for this. I must commend in this connection particularly Defense Minister Apel and Foreign Minister Genscher.

[Question] The zero solution you mentioned is considered by many people as utopian. You yourself were rather skeptical in the beginning. Is it a realistic starting point now?

[Answer] It is a realistic starting point. The Soviets certainly also have their own conceptions. There was a long explanation by the Soviet top leadership in this connection recently in the Hamburg weekly DER SPIEGEL. There is certainly a difference in some fields between the concepts of the Russians and the Americans, but I believe that both will agree with the German view which we will explain once again next week to General Secretary Brezhnev. This view is that the first phase of these negotiations should concentrate on medium-range weapons in Europe, particularly on land-based medium-range weapons. If a zero result were to be achieved on both sides, it would mean that it would then not be necessary to deploy such weapons on German territory. I want to add one more sentence: As of today there is about 2 years time for these negotiations to achieve that result. Otherwise American weapons will be deployed in late 1983 in West Europe including on German territory. The Soviets do not want that -- I can understand this very well -- so the time must also be used in their interest. We do not want their existing missiles to threaten us, so an agreement must be reached in these 2 years to reduce the threat toward us to zero.

[Question] A final question, Mr Federal Chancellor: How did the contents of the American concept come about?

[Answer] At present the Americans are discussing this with other European NATO members and governments. But you can well imagine that not only publicly known negotiations, such as those by Mr Genscher and myself 1 and 1/4 years ago in Moscow, have played a great role, as well as those of Mr Apel and Mr Genscher in the ministerial councils of the North Atlantic alliance. There have also been additional very direct contacts, talks, statements and exchanges of letters. For me this is a sign of the serious desire of the United States to achieve a really effective arms limitation agreement which could remove a great part of the justified fear from us Europeans.

Consultations With Reagan To Be Held

LD191402 Hamburg DPA in German 1252 GMT 19 Nov 81

[Excerpt] Bonn, 19 Nov (DPA) -- Immediately prior to his talks with Soviet party and state head Leonid Brezhnev next week in Bonn, Chancellor Helmut Schmidt obviously intends to obtain further explanations of President Reagan's disarmament initiative.

According to Bonn government circles today, the chancellor will therefore have a telephone talk with Reagan before Sunday evening when Brezhnev is scheduled to arrive. Schmidt and Reagan had exchanged letters last week before the President's initiative. Government sources say that Schmidt regards Reagan's proposals as an equally important basis for his talks with Brezhnev as the disarmament aims recently put forward by the Soviet general secretary. The Federal Government regards Reagan's and Brezhnev's ideas as being the meximum positions of the two sides, with Schmidt obviously seeing possibilities for compromise in the interests of disarmament steps.

Schmidt intends to stress to Brezhnev that the negotiations which begin at the end of this month must not be burdened by the inclusion of further weapons systems. Otherwise, there is a danger that no tangible result would be achieved by the end of 1983 with the consequence that deployment of the U.S. nuclear missiles planned by NATO would begin. Schmidt, government sources say, is interested mainly in brisk negotiations about the Soviet SS-20 missiles which are the chief cause of the imbalance and the resulting political tension.

FRG Role Seen As 'Intermediary'

LD192144 Hamburg DPA in German 2036 GMT 19 Nov 81

[Excerpt] Hamburg, 19 Nov (DPA) -- According to Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt, the Federal Government wants to act as a sort of intermediary between the superpowers of the United States and the USSR, including at the coming Geneva negotiations on reducing the medium-range missile potential.

Speaking at a discussion at the German Trade Union Federation on Thursday evening, Schmidt said: "We will have to exert a lot of influence during the negotiations so that something reasonable emerges from them."

The FRG, as a nonnuclear state, wants to reduce to zero the Soviet missile potential aimed at Europe. If, on the other hand, the Soviet Union adheres to its medium-range missile potential, then the West will have to build up a counterweight.

Schmidt said that he will be able to tell Soviet party leader Leonid Brezhnev during his visit to Bonn that he is convinced of the willingness to negotiate of the United States after the speech by U.S. President Ronald Reagan. On the other hand, he is of the opinion that Brezhnev does not want a war with the West. In this situation the Federal Government, with whose prompting the talks between the blocs resumed again after they were broken off due to the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, has to explain as "interpreter" the situation of the West properly and has to create a readiness on each side to listen to the other.

GENSCHER URGES USSR EXAMINE PROPOSALS CAREFULLY

LD201038 Hamburg DPA in German 0957 GMT 20 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 20 Nov (DPA) -- Federal Foreign Minister Genscher has urged Moscow not to reject President Reagan's disarmament initiative with a "quick-fire reaction." Commenting on the first, negative Soviet reaction to Reagan's message, in an interview with Saarland Radio, Genscher said that decisions on proposals were made at the conference table. "The Soviet leadership should consider very seriously whether it really wants to respond to four important proposals on disarmament and arms control with a quick-fire reaction," the minister said. "A careful examination is needed. It will become clear by the end of this month what attitude the Soviet side is adopting toward the proposal that West and East forego medium-range missiles, a proposal which has our unqualified support."

At the same time Genscher renewed his demand that the EEC states should jointly define and represent to the outside world their own security interests. This would benefit the dialogue with the U.S. and help the Atlantic alliance to fulfill its task for peace and security also in future.

BAHR SAYS ZERO OPTION WILL 'BEAR FRUIT'

PM191013 Paris LE MATIN in French 12 Nov 81 p 8

[Joelle Kuntz interview in Paris "a few days ago" with Egon Bahr, SPD expert on security problems: "Ronald Reagan Is Honest"]

[Excerpts] LE MATIN: It has seemed for several years that the Germans are unhappy with their role today, 35 years after the war. The two parts of Germany -- the kingpins of two opposing blocs -- seem uncomfortable....

Egon Bahr: But what French people do not see clearly enough is that the primary result of the ostpolitik has been to place peace above everything else. Peace for us is the paramount priority. It is way ahead of the national question, which takes only second place.

LE MATIN: Yet it is in the FRG that the peace movement is most active.

Bahr: We worked for a long time to get the United States and the Soviet Union to come to the negotiating table to discuss medium-range missiles in Europe. I am sure that these negotiations will begin in Geneva in November and that they will be serious negotiations. The Americans have an interest in their success, for if they do not tackle them with good will, if the talks fail and the Americans are held responsible for the failure, the whole NATO strategy -- modernization of the Western nuclear arsenal with view to negotiations with the USSR -- will be called into question. As for the Soviets, they will do all they can to ensure the success of the discussions, because they are really afraid of the deployment of Pershing II and cruise missiles in Europe. For the first time, after months of efforts with both sides, we have gotten what we wanted.

LE MATIN: This is not what the pacifists think.

Bahr: The pacifist movement has the same aim as the SPD. Both are in favor of the "zero option," that is, no more nuclear missiles in Europe. But there is a conflict over methods between them. The peace movement says: No to the NATO dual decision (rearmament-negotiation). The SPD asserts on the contrary that we will only achieve the zero option via the NATO dual decision. Anyhow, this conflict over methods will soon be resolved, in my opinion, because we will see that the NATO dual decision is going to bear fruit.

LE MATIN: So you do not attach any major importance to the present divisions within the SPD?

Bahr: There is a natural tension between the party and the government. The party has to define objectives which the government cannot attain. That is its role. The party has to look beyond a single term of office, the government has to undertake, during a single term of office, the most general will, and to do that it must always know how to negotiate. Having said that, I find the concerns of the activists in the pacifist movement just, useful and credible, through certainly I do not share them.

Comments on Reagan Proposal

LD191434 Hamburg DPA in German 1324 GMT 19 Nov 81

[Excerpt] Bonn, 19 Nov (DPA) -- SPD disarmament expert Egon Bahr believes that with his disarmament proposal for medium-range missiles in Europe President Reagan has, like the Soviet side, set out a "starting position." It would not be surprising, therefore, "if positions are described in both the American and the Soviet concepts which cannot be maintained at the negotiating table," Bahr said in Bonn today.

This applied, for example, to Reagan's position in which the U.S. forward based systems had not been mentioned, and to Brezhnev's position, which added modern missile systems and old aircraft systems together. The important thing, however, was the will to negotiate shown by both sides, Bahr said.

SAARLAND SPD CHAIRMAN CRITICAL OF REAGAN PROPOSAL

LD191728 Hamburg DPA in German 1544 GMT 19 Nov 81

[Excerpt] Bonn, 19 Nov (DPA) -- Oskar Lafontaine, chairman of the Saarland SPD, expressed the view in Saarbrucken today that U.S. President Ronald Reagan's proposals on the reduction of medium-range missiles in Europe were hardly suitable for achieving a result [in talks with the Soviet Union]. He justified his view by saying that one superpower could not dictate what a zero-solution should consist of. "The Soviet Union is a land-based power: the United States, as everyone knows, is a sea-based power. It is therefore not possible to only compare land-based systems," Lafontaine stressed.

The SPD politician also emphasized that the Reagan proposals also ignored what had been agreed so far between the superpowers in the SALT negotiations. If a zero solution was to be achieved, then land-based as well as sea-based cruise missiles would have to be banned. The Soviet Union should reduce its medium-range missile potential to the level of 1978.

CDU LEADERS ON BREZHNEV VISIT, REAGAN SPEECH

Kohl Comments

LD191336 Hamburg DPA in German 1201 GMT 19 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 19 Nov (DPA) -- The CDU/CSU has appealed to the Soviet Union not to drag out the forthcoming disarmament negotiations with the Americans. On the day after President Reagan's speech with its proposals for extensive disarmament in Europe, opposition leader Helmut Kohl stated in Bonn today that if Moscow dismissed this as a propaganda maneuver it would be ignoring the desire for peace among its own people and harming its own interests. Kohl welcomed in particular the fact that Reagan had not restricted himself to general declarations of intent but had submitted specific and substantive proposals for all arms spheres, thus the "U.S. will negotiate and its negotiating position's are now clear to everyone."

Kohl said that on the Soviet side this was so far matched only by continued arming, the continuation of the war in Afghanistan and non-binding peace slogans. Addressing the Federal Government, Kohl said that the opposition would also measure Chancellor Helmut Schmidt against the yardstick of whether he could gain acceptance in his own party, too, for the stated policy towards the United States. Schmidt must prevent leading forces in the SPD from further weakening the negotiating position of the United States and the Atlantic alliance.

Looking at the forthcoming visit by Soviet party and state head Leonid Brezhnev, the deputy chairman of the CDU/CSU parliamentary group, Manfred Woerner, said in Bonn today that the opposition wanted the talks to be successful and wished there to be specific progress in East-West relations. It expected results mainly on questions of disarmament, family reunions and the reduction of political tension in Europe and the Third World. Woerner appealed to all partners in the talks with Brezhnev to support Reagan's proposed zero option. Woerner said that relations between the two German states must also not be excluded during the visit. "We must expect the Soviets to use their incluence to pursuade the GDR to act in conformity with treaties and detente."

Borm Voices Reservations

DW191527 Cologne Westdeutscher Rundfunk Network in German 0545 GMT 19 Nov 81

["Excerpts" from reporter Marx interview with William Borm, member of the FDP Federal Executive Board: date and place not given -- recorded]

[Text] [Question] How did you react to the Reagan speech?

[Answer] My main principle is that the European threat emanating from Soviet missiles must be eliminated. That is an intolerable situation. The important thing, however, is how that should be done. I have naturally tried to view most carefully the announced statements of the American President. I consider this an attempt to calm down the European public with great efforts, even more words and in a psychologically most skillful way. But I found nothing factually new in the statement of Mr Reagan. Second, I consider it an attempt to assist the European NATO governments vis-a-vis the people. Third, it can contain preparations for blaming the Soviet Union later on if negotiations should fail, which I do not hope for.

I was particularly interested by the fact that the prohibitive conditions -- prohibitive conditions is said intentionally -- the President has set, can hardly be fulfilled, namely that the Soviet Union should not only remove but scrap its SS-4, SS-5 and SS-20 missiles. It is not only supposed to just scrap them, but to do that under thorough American control. These seem to me to be demands with a prohibitive effect.

Just imagine the mutuality. One cannot prescribe to a world power in which way it should make the eliminations. The concession in return, made by the West and particularly by the Americans, would be no deployment of Pershing II and cruise missiles in Europe. The NATO submarines and NATO planes will remain -- there is no mention of any change. These are means to destroy the USSR which are called "forward based systems." I do not think that this is a basis on which world powers can negotiate with each other.

I repeat: This offer has not increased security for us Europeans, because under these circumstances I consider a failure of negotiations as being programmed in advance.

[Question] How do you explain the euphoric reaction in the Western camp in view of your reservations?

[Answer] That was the aim of it. I consider it an attempt to continue the calming down of the populace with proper means. That is a most natural thing. I do not want to directly say that this is a prearranged affair, but the contents of the speech as well as the fact that this speech was given at all, indicate that it has been certainly discussed by the involved governments. One must know very little about politics to believe that the statements of the American President and the fact that he has spoken at all have not been thoroughly discussed before.

Horn Sees 'Positive Aspects'

DW191607 Saarbruecken Saarlaendischer Rundfunk Network in German 0720 GMT 19 Nov 81

["Excerpts" from reporter Klein interview with Erwin Horn, deputy chairman of the Bundestag Defense Committee — recorded]

[Text] [Question] Now the offers are on the table. In the Federal Republic they have not been taken only positively. William Borm, FDP Presidium member, for instance, thinks that the disarmament proposals made by the U.S. President have preprogrammed a failure of the negotiations. There was nothing new in the matter and these proposals did not offer a basis for negotiations of the world powers. What is your opinion?

[Answer] I see it quite differently. It is a matter of course for the world powers to state maximum positions and demands, as the reaction from Moscow has shown.

Nonetheless one should see the positive aspects. First, an evidently positive development has become manifest here. I am thinking of the preservation of detente policy after Afghanistan, despite the scepticism and opposition above all toward the German federal chancellor who substantially prevailed with this course. Second, the Brezhnev visit which is a signal after all that he wants to continue to keep the detente policy and also wants to incorporate it completely in the military sphere and then the Geneva negotiations will begin on 30 November. This initiative by the U.S. President is another step which shows that the United States, too, embarks on this road and takes into account what European governments and certainly also the peace movements have said. I hold the view that these positive aspects should not be talked to pieces from the start.

[Question] Mr Borm said verbatim that this speech by Reagan had reassured the Europeans with much expense and clever psychology.

[Answer] That is by no means the case. I know such statements and I almost foresaw them. The point is not a psychological reassurement of the Europeans but serious negotiations. The point also is not to start counting and mutually comparing data but to negotiate according to new models and new structures. These new structures must contain as the first demand the question of what is parity in the East and West here in Europe in the sphere of medium-range systems. It is only by answering this question and the consequences to be drawn from it that a sensible negotiation result can be expected.

[Question] How do you assess this negotiation result, how do you assess the chances of success?

[Answer] I assess the chances of success at fifty-fifty. I am not too optimistic in this respect, but on the other hand, I do not want to indulge in pessimism. The two world powers, which have their own interests, also increasingly consider the interests of their alliance partners. The European alliance partners of the two world powers -- be it in the East bloc or in NATO -- have certain own interests, although they are aware of their dependencies and their conduct in security matters toward the two world powers. They have been able at least psychologically but also politically to get the two world powers to the negotiating table.

AGENDA FOR BREZHNEV VISIT TO BONN ANNOUNCED

LD191550 Hamburg DPA in German 1354 GMT 19 Nov 81

[Excerpt] Bonn, 19 Nov (DPA) -- During Leonid Brezhnev's visit to Bonn, which comes under the protocol heading of a "working visit," only an approximately 2-hour talk with the chancellor is planned for the time being. Schmidt will also meet Brezhnev on two other occasions -- at talks between the delegations and at a dinner. There will also be an opportunity to talk when Schmidt collects his guest from the airport on Sunday [22 November] evening and accompanies him to Brezhnev's residence at Gymnich Castle, near Bonn, and when he sees him off at noon on Wednesday [25 November].

According to Bonn government circles, it is possible that during the visit the natural gas pipeline deal -- about which the United States in particular has expressed strong reservations -- could be signed. Government sources describe the deal, which involves supplying approximately 40 billion cubic meters of natural gas from Siberia annually to West Europe, as an important sphere of economic cooperation which also serves to stabilize political relations. The Soviet Union will use the gas, of which approximately 12 billion cubic meters will be supplied annually to the Federal Republic, as payment for the supplies of pipes from Europe.

Brezhnev, whose program includes extensive rest periods because of his state of health, will be officially received with military honors at the federal chancellor's office on Monday. Parallel to his private talks with Schmidt in the late afternoon there will be a meeting between Foreign Ministers Hans-Dietrich Genscher and Andrey Gromyko.

On Tuesday morning Brezhnev will receive, for half an hour each, the chairmen of the four parties represented in the Bundestag: Genscher (FDP), Helmut Kohl (CDU), Franz Josef Strauss (CSU) and Willy Brandt (SPD). A meeting with Federal President Karl Carstens is planned for Tuesday afternoon.

Brezhnev, who was in Bonn in 1973 and 1978, will be accompanied by an official delegation of 14 people. The highest-ranking members of the delegation are, in addition to Gromyko, First Deputy Premier Ivan Arkhipov; Brezhnev advisers Aleksandrov and Blatov, and the head of the Central Committee's International Information Department, Leonid Zamyatin.

FDP DEPUTY URGES U.S. TO HOLD TALKS WITH LIBYA

LD191636 Hamburg DPA in German 1508 GMT 19 Nov 81

[Text] Bonn, 19 Nov (DPA) -- According to FDP Bundestag Deputy Juergen Moellemann, there is a great danger that the Soviet Union will gain a foothold in Libya if the United States does not soon take up the Tripoli government's offer of talks. After having had a 2-hour talk with Col Mu'ammar al-Qadhdhafi, the chairman of the foreign and security policy working group of the FDP Bundestag group told newsmen in Bonn today that it is necessary for the Federal Government to exercise influence on the American administration in this respect. If the nonaligned stance of the Arab states is to remain, then a change in American policy is urgently needed.

Moellemann, who during his 4-day Middle East trip also had talks with the Libyan Government and with leading PLO representatives, called for the convening of an international Middle East peace conference. He said that the United States, the Soviet Union and the PLO must participate in such a meeting. He said that his Arab partners in the talks, and thus also Al-Qadhdhafi, had assessed positively the eight point peace plan put forward by Saudi deputy premier, Crown Prince Fahd. He described the favorable assessment of the new Egyptian Government of Husni Mubarak by the official representative of Lebanon and Libyans striking.

Moellemann said that Faruq Qaddumi, the leading PLO official responsible for foreign relations, had expressed his organization's interest in the establishment of official contacts with the Federal Government. Moellemann endorsed this wish, noting that all the governments friendly to the Federal Republic maintained contacts with the PLO.

STRAUSS INFORMED ON PRC RELATIONS WITH USSR

LD191718 Hamburg DPA in German 1449 GMT 19 Nov 81

[Excerpt] Beijing, 19 Nov (DPA) -- The Beijing leaders have rejected speculations about a change in China's position in the conflict with the Soviet Union. In a 1-hour talk with Bavarian Premier and CSU Chairman Franz-Josef Strauss in Beijing today, the president of the Chinese People's Institute of Foreign Affairs, Hao Deqing, stressed that basically nothing will change in China's relations with Moscow. He said that negotiations between the two states at the level of experts were a routine matter and should not to be wrongly interpreted.

Strauss, who has been in Beijing since Wednesday, said at a dinner given for him later by Hao Deqing: "We would like to see a China that is politically and militarily strong and flourishing economically." He said he is convinced that China does not have aggressive intentions "against anyone." Like the Federal Republic, China wants to preserve peace.

Meets With PRC Leaders

LD201104 Hamburg DPA in German 0925 GMT 20 Nov 81

[Text] Beijing, 20 Nov (DPA) -- On the second day of his talks in Beijing CSU Chairman and Premier of Bavaria Franz-Josef Strauss had a meeting with Deputy Foreign Minister Zhang Wenjin.

According to some of those present, the 90-minute talk was marked by a comprehensive exchange of views about the situation in Europe, Brezhnev's forthcoming visit to Bonn and the relations between Moscow and Beijing.

Zhang Wenjin is reported to have warned strongly against empty promises by Moscow concerning arms limitation in Europe. Moreover, the minister had stressed once again that there was no change in China's position towards the USSR. Speculations about an improvement in the climate between Beijing and Moscow were also rejected by another leading Beijing official yesterday.

After his meeting with Zhang Wenjin Strauss had a talk with Defense Minister Geng Biao. His program for tomorrow includes meetings with Deputy Party Chief Deng Xiaoping and Premier Zhao Ziyang.

PAPER: REAGAN SPEECH STIRS HOPES IN BONN

DW191343 Frankfurt FRANKFURTER RUNDSCHAU in German 19 Nov 81 p 3

[Werner Holzer article: "Washington and Bonn's Hopes"]

[Text] In Bonn a feeling of relief has been spreading. Ever since Washington let the Federal Government know -- in time before Brezhnev's visit -- that Ronald Reagan is prepared to yield to the Euorpean desire for a more far-reaching willingness to negotiate, there has been "critical hope" in the SPD leadership. The U.S.-Soviet negotiations beginning in Geneva at the end of the month are now being viewed less skeptically.

These budding hopes are caused by Ronald Reagan's readiness to adopt the magic term "zero option" for the American negotiation package. Zero option means that NATO will renounce its counterarmament and thus new medium-range missiles if the Soviet Union is willing to do the same. Thus Moscow would have to agree to dismantling its own medium-range missiles.

The federal chancellor sees in this U.S. offer -- which came as a surprise at this point -- to the other world power a response of the U.S. President to European and, above all, German desires. Even before Reagan made his speech, Helmut Schmidt used the opportunity of a television interview to thank the Americans for this concession.

It can be assumed that the Reagan government meanwhile became so worried about differences of opinion between the United States and Europe that it no longer enjoys only its own loud speeches. The efforts made in the American capital to ensure that the President's speech would be shown in the evening newscasts of European television stations was unusual even by the standards of the American media.

Without underestimating the chancellor's efforts, we may say that the worries of official America were not caused just by the insistence of European governments on more "good will" by the United States at the Geneva negotiations. The unusually rapid growth of peace movements in the West European countries had at least as much impact on causing America to reconsier its policy. Ever since they realized that threatening speeches and ever increasing arms expenditures were seen by a growing number of people on the other side of the Atlantic as not serving the preservation of peace but rather as enhancing dangerous insecurity, concern in the United States over the cohesion of the alliance has been growing.

Of course it would be wrong to indulge in euphoria. The readiness of the two world powers to discuss the possibility of a zero option in their negotiations does not mean that results will be achieved. In Geneva the tough bargaining will begin over what one side will demand of the other. The federal chancellor seems to believe that an approach in stages is conceivable -- the renunciation by both sides of extended-range missiles, for instance.

But the decisive problem in Geneva will be how to get both sides to agree on the conditions which constitute that "approximate balance" which Washington as well as Moscow claim would be acceptable. Egon Bahr, whom nobody considers to be an advocate of massive armament, rightly said over the weekend that he could imagine that the level of the balance depended essentially on the Soviet attitude. If Moscow must have 200 of the most modern medium-range missiles, the West's answer could not be zero. But Erhard Eppler, SPD Presidium member and the most articulate spokesman of the peace movement here, said that so far the negotiation offers made by the West could not be the last word. In his view the East has been asked to give more than we would be willing to offer.

In Geneva the mutual counting of data will mark the beginning. The Soviets will talk about the West's missiles based on submarines and aircraft and the United States will inquire about similar Soviet weapons and also about the reason why since 1978 Moscow has been massively increasing its medium-range arsenal, even though at the time Brezhnev talked about the existence of an approximate balance. But in the end, the decisive question will be whether the two world powers can succeed in reducing their deep distrust of each other's intentions to such an extent that the danger of a nuclear conflict will be tangibly reduced.

BRIEFS

SCHMIDT-REAGAN MEETING -- Washington, 19 Nov (DPA) -- U.S. President Ronald Reagan and Federal Chancellor Helmut Schmidt will meet in the White House for talks on 5 January. This was announced in Washington on Thursday. The meeting will take place on the sidelines [amrande] of a vacation by the chancellor in the United States. The last time Schmidt spoke to the American President was at the summit conference in Ottawa. The meeting in January will be the second meeting of both politicians at the White House, where Schmidt last visited in May of this year. [Text] [Hamburg DPA in German 1735 GMT 19 Nov 81 LD]

CHEYSSON APPROVES OF REAGAN MISSILE PROPOSAL

LD191947 Paris Domestic Service in French 1800 GMT 19 Nov 81

[Text] The Quai d'Orsay is broadly [globalement] in agreement with the White House. Yesterday afternoon the American President Reagan caused a sensation by proposing to the Russians a program of strategic disarmament in Europe. You withdraw your SS-20 missiles and we shall take away NATO missiles, Reagan had suggested. Today there is the French Government's reaction through Minister of External Relations Claude Cheysson. You shall hear it yourselves. Cheysson approves of Reagan:

[Begin Cheysson recording] The zero option solution is clearly the desirable one. It is what we, the French Government, have stated on many occasions. I remember a debate in the Senate not long ago where I found the expression used [words indistinct] "neither SS-20 nor Pershing missiles" a good one. Indeed, we believe that the introduction of SS-20 missiles had brought about a certain element of nuclear imbalance in Europe. If there were no more SS-20 missiles this element of imbalance would disappear and the necessary threat of the Pershing missiles -- necessary while there are SS-20's -- then loses its purpose. [end recording]

ITALIAN PRIME MINISTER MEETS MAUROY, MITTERRAND

NC191820 Paris AFP in English 1804 GMT 19 Nov 81

[Text] Paris, 19 Nov (AFP) -- Visiting Italian Prime Minister Giovanni Spadolini met here today with Prime Minister Pierre Mauroy, with whom he discussed terrorism and European cooperation, Mr Spadolini told reporters afterward. Asked whether they had discussed the case of Armenian Dimitriu Giorgiu, arrested recently in Paris and suspected of involvement in a terrorist attack against a Turkish diplomat in Rome, Mr Spadolini replied: "Only a word."

Mr Spadolini also met today with President Francois Mitterrand, and said afterward that France and Italy had reacted very favorably to President Ronald Reagan's "zero option" proposals on European disarmament.

RUMORS SPREAD ON MITTERRAND'S STATE OF HEALTH

NC201148 Paris AFP in English 1139 GMT 20 Nov 81

[Text] Paris, 20 Nov (AFP) -- A report that President Francois Mitterrand spent the day of November 7 at a military hospital outside Paris has revived uneasy memories in France of how President Georges Pompidou died in 1974 of a cancer carefully concealed from his countrymen. The suspicions were awakened by an article in Paris MATCH magazine, reporting that a "man as yellow as a lemon and dragging a leg" had been examined under the false name of "Mr Blot".

The president's office has explained that the visit was a routine check-up, ordered for the second bulletin on the president's health, to be published next month. President Mitterrand inaugurated this scheme after his election, releasing a report that he was in "fully satisfactory health" in May.

The French press has generally played down the rumours this week, while noting that the head of state has been given a far more thorough going over than the average citizen. But some have insinuated that the rumour of a mysterious illness had been deliberately engineered to cast doubt on the 65-year-old Mr Mitterrand's assurances that he has seven years, the full presidential term, to carry out his Socialist programme.

But some newspapers fear that even a clean bill of health published next month will fail to halt the rumours, commenting that this sort of rumour tends to fuel itself, with no need of actual fact.

The "affair" has also raised doubts on medical secrecy in France, where military establishments would appear not to come up to the strict standards of civilian hospitals. Meanwhile Mr Mitterrand perhaps gave the best answer to the rumours back in 1977, commenting: "The best reply is to go on living."

LE MONDE: REAGAN STEALS LIMELIGHT FROM BREZHNEV

PM201155 Paris LE MONDE in French 20 Nov 81 p 1

[Editorial: "An Expected Gesture"]

[Text] In deciding to make a spectacular presentation of the so-called "zero option" plan in the sphere of nuclear missiles, which will serve as a basis for the American positions in the negotiations with the Soviets scheduled for 30 November, Mr Reagan's main intention was to satisfy his allies. By indulging in this exercise Mr Reagan has scored a point in the open propaganda war in Europe on the subject of armaments and has stolen the limelight from Mr Brezhnev on the eve of the latter's visit to Bonn. But this gesture could have been made sooner. For weeks American officials have exasperated their allies by making confused and inconsistent remarks on the dangerous subject of "limited war," hesitating to clearly formulate this "zero option," the seed of which was nonetheless contained in the decision made by NATO in December 1979. It would probably be preferable to have no nuclear missiles in Europe, Washington was saying, but only in "ideal conditions," the completely hypothetical nature of which they did not conceal.

Moscow's reaction confirms that we are a long way from the ideal situation in question. But this reaction is also rather limited. Try as it may, it is difficult for the Kremlin to convince public opinion that the decision made in the seventies, while detente was still in full swing, to deploy the SS-20, a highly "anti-European" missile -- much more credible than its predecessors -- is a harmless gesture which should not prompt any response from the Western side.

The Soviets can no doubt complain about the American "forward-based systems," in other words the network of bases, aircraft carriers and tactical nuclear weapons with which they have been surrounded in the postwar period. Moreover, they cannot disregard the French and British nuclear forces, the only ones which have been increased over the past 20 years whereas the American means, on the other hand, have tended to diminish.

But this cannot conceal the fact that, aside from the medium-range land-based missiles -- the only ones involved in Mr Reagan's "zero option" -- the USSR has a series of other weapons targeted on Europe and corresponding to the American "forward-based system." The Soviets also have airbases which, over the past few years, have been equipped with the Backfire bomber, medium-range missile submarines deployed in the Baltic, and, finally, shorter-range missiles whose modernization is being continued (SS-21, SS-22 and SS-23) and which could cause all sorts of damage in Europe.

The "zero option" is, therefore, all the more negotiable in that arrangements [amerage-ments] are possible: Mr Reagan has included in it the old SS-4 and SS-5 missiles, which are not very credible and have not aroused much emotion over the past 20 years. This may be a starting position since the Americans seem prepared to allow Moscow a "bonus" corresponding to the French and British forces. Finally, on the NATO side a distinction could one day be drawn between the Pershing II, a more threatening missile because it allows the adversary minimum warning, and the cruise missile, which is a second-strike weapon par excellence. But if the preliminary negotiations are to have any chance of success, Moscow must abandon its present inflexible attitude.

BRIEFS

AGREEMENT ON SIBERIAN GAS -- An agreement has been signed between France and the USSR on the price of Siberian gas. The Russians are reported to have agreed to lower their prices and sell their gas at approximately $5.70 instead of the over $6 [words indistinct]. [Text] [Paris Domestic Service in French 1900 GMT 19 Nov 81 LD]

PRESS REACTIONS TO REAGAN FOREIGN POLICY SPEECH

AU191607 Rome ANSA in English 1537 GMT 19 Nov 81

[Text] Rome, 19 Nov (ANSA) -- United States President Ronald Reagan's proposal to the Soviet Union to slash nuclear missile installations in Europe was greeted by Italian newspapers today as, among other things, a gesture to Western Europe's increasingly fidgety public opinion.

"A Proposal That Embarrasses Brezhnev" was how the Italian Socialist Party's (PSI) newspaper, AVANTI, entitled its editorial about Reagan's offer to cancel plans to deploy 572 new cruise and Pershing II missiles in Europe if the Soviets dismantled their SS-20, SS-4 and SS-5 intermediate-range missiles deployed in East Europe.

Reagan's move appeared to be "a spectacular diplomatic operation", the PSI mouthpiece said, while it also "responded to the understandable anxiety and fear that Europeans have of seeing their countries turn into the battle-field of a Soviet-American nuclear showdown."

The fact that "Reagan was heeding to European opinion" was emphasized in Turin's LA STAMPA daily today too, in a commentary which described his speech in Washington Wednesday as "clear, strong and skillful." What emerged from the speech, according to LA STAMPA, was a new "Reagan doctrine" on East-West relations, "a doctrine which synthesizes the joint, mediated and responsible position of the entire NATO alliance."

Rome's LA REPUBBLICA went so far as to label the U.S. President's move "a victory for Europe." According to the Rome daily, the American leadership "realized the danger of leaving the issue of peace up to the Soviets and losing the confidence of its allies along the way." The paper summed up how it thought the Soviets would respond to the proposal this way: "The objections to the proposal will have to be persuasive and any future counter-proposals cannot be evasive."

The Italian Communist Party (PCI) conceded the "importance" of the development in an editorial in its daily newspaper, L'UNITA, entitled "There Are Still a Lot of Points to Clear Up."

"It is important because the American President, up to now, has given very little attention to the concrete issues of foreign policy in his public speeches. In the second place, it was the first time he specifically dealt with the issue of arms reduction, giving some proposals in this area."

Like other Italian dailies, L'UNITA pointed out Reagan's desire to get his message across strong, broadcasting the speech by satellite to Europe as well as to American television viewers at home.

For the Christian Democratic Party (DC) daily, IL POPOLO, Reagan's speech was so well put that "it will force the Soviet Union out of its propagandistic trappings.... to deal with the issue (of European missile installations) in a concrete fashion." The DC organ gave American diplomacy credit for giving a "notable show" of "initiative and speed, setting the entire framework of the East-West debate back into motion."

"We can only hope," the daily concluded, "that Brezhnev's reaction will fall in the same direction and the same spirit."

In a story datelined New York, Milan's IL CORRIERE DELLA SERA stressed the switch in Reagan's tone from the "cold war" style of his early months in office to a new accent on a "determination to negotiate for the sake of maintaining peace." The speech marks, according to IL CORRIERE, a shift in American foreign policy "from an early phase of toughness to a phase of pragmatic flexibility."

Rome's IL TEMPO daily said Reagan was not really talking to Brezhnev, but to the man on the street in Western Europe and, more specifically, the European younger generation, "which keeps asking itself why nuclear weapons are necessary for deterring war and assuring peaceful development."

BENEFITS OF SPADOLINI PARIS TALKS SUMMARIZED

LD192010 Rome Domestic Service in Italian 1800 GMT 19 Nov 81

[Text] The talks between Prime Minister Spadolini and the French leaders have ended. There is a great coverage of views on international, European and bilateral themes. Michele Lubrano reports from Paris:

[Begin recording] As of next year, relations between Italy and France will be intensified by an exchange of delegations, some of which will be led by ministers -- especially economic ministers -- and empowered to discuss all outstanding problems between the two countries. A similar scheme exists for French-German relations. To start with, President Pertini will visit France and soon afterwards French President Mitterrand will pay his first official visit to our country.

Prime Minister Spadolini was accompanied by Foreign Minister Colombo, who this morning outlined in Strasbourg the Italian-German document containing proposals for reinvigorating European unity, a document which was very much appreciated by President Mitterrand. As regards Europe, the two sides noted a profound identity of views on all the main problems. Violating the rules of protocol, Mitterrand accompanied Spadolini to the entrance of the Elysee Palace at the end of the talks in order to emphasize the cordiality of relations existing between the two countries. The Italians and the French are in agreement as regards common action to make political and economic cooperation in Europe proceed simultaneously. Prime Minister Spadolini concluded his working visit with a meeting with Premier Pierre Mauroy. They discussed bilateral relations, which are on the whole satisfactory, taking also into account that the wine war is (?on the wane). [end recording]

CRAXI HITS 'ONE-SIDED' ANTIMISSILE PROTESTS

PM191123 Rome AVANTI in Italian 14 Nov 81 pp 1, 6

[ANSA report: "Craxi's Bucharest Press Conference"]

[Text] Bucharest, 13 November -- Craxi's visit to Bucharest ended yesterday. On Wednesday, Craxi and the Socialist delegation had a lengthy and cordial meeting with President Ceausescu and met yesterday with representatives of the Romanian Communist Party [RCP] -- Virgil Cazacu, secretary of the Central Committee Foreign Relations Section; Nicolae Constantin, member of the Central Committee Political Executive Committee and minister state secretary; and Dumitru Popescu, rector of the RCP academy -- with whom they examined the situation concerning relations between the parties.

Next, Craxi met with Deputy Prime Minister and Foreign Trade Minister Cornel Burtica and with Foreign Minister Stefan Andrei. With Foreign Minister Stefan Andrei, Craxi reviewed the principal international political issues, comparing with him Romania's positions in this regard with those adopted by the PSI in Italian foreign policy.

After the meeting Craxi gave a press conference at which he expressed his satisfaction with the visit to Romania and the meetings with Ceausescu and other RCP leaders. With regard to the current peace demonstations in various European capitals, Craxi said, among other things, that "it is necessary to be very cautious in assessing peace marches," pointing out the precedents of the similar demonstations by "champions of peace" in the fifties. "We later discovered that the champions of peace were the champions of the USSR.

Even Nenni received the Stalin peace prize and returned it following the Soviet invasion of Hungary in 1956...." "We do not want to take part," he said, "in unidirectional marches.... in opposition to the NATO missiles and the neutron bomb, against the U.S. and Italian Governments, when the cause of the present crisis are the missiles produced, deployed and still being produced by the USSR...."

"There is a point," Craxi continued, "in holding a march for the abolition of missiles on both sides.... We are in favor of the pacifist movements that concern themselves with seeking the conditions for organizing peace, which must be based on the balance of forces." This is the significance of the demonstrations organized for next Sunday by the PSI in all Italian cities, "not against the USSR or the United States, but to make it clear to everyone that the path is the path of negotiation, the balance of forces and recognized and guaranteed security for all...." "Nobody must live in fear of being invaded, and nobody must invade," Craxi said.

The PSI's involvement in the pacifist movements' action, he added, will therefore be to help them clearly define the political outcome of their action. This action must aim "to support negotiations designed to achieve positive -- or still better, optimal -- solutions and to seek a conclusion before 1983, in good time to take decisions concerning the new missiles which it has been decided to produce, in the hope that the negotiations can prevent their deployment." "This is the Socialist International's position too," Bettino Craxi concluded.

MORE AVANTI COVERAGE OF CRAXI'S VISIT TO ROMANIA

Meetings, Press Conference

PM181657 Rome AVANTI in Italian 12 Nov 81 pp 1, 11

